Do Polar expeditions justify the enormous expenditure of human energy and the wealth consumed? Such was the subject under discussion at the Policy Club at St. Hilda's College last evening. Miss Irmgard Westerman of U.C. set forth the advantages derived from these expeditions, whereby the human race was apprised of the vast resources of the Northland.

The North and South Poles were described as the two steam boilers of the earth, whose generated power, were it to suddenly cease, would put an end to all activity on the earth. Speaking of the Polar Basin fish life, Miss Westerman declared that if the Polar expedition had brought no other result than a scientific study of the animal and vegetable life therein, the expedition would have been worth while.

Steffanson, the explorer, was quoted as having estimated that the Polar regions would be the probable home of the world's meat supply of the future, due to the discovery of the vast grazing ground on which herds of domesticated reindeers could be bred.

The years have shown the possibilities of America; the future alone will tell to what use Polar ice cakes may be turned.

Council Disapproves

Meeting yesterday to consider the recent raid on a downtown theatre by men in the first and second years of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering, the Men's Students' Administrative Council passed a motion disapproving of the action of the students concerned and censuring them therefor. Included in the motion was the decision to tender apologies to the management of the theatre affected. This, it is understood, has already been done by the executives of the respective years.

The session was attended by an unusually large number of student representatives and for over an hour the matter was discussed by those from the Faculty of Science and other colleges and faculties with considerable frankness.

REJECTS AUTHORITY OF THE BIBLE

Writings of Jesus Uncertain and Church Ineffective
Due to Disunity

SUPERIOR MINDS TO-DAY

"It seems to me that the most certain way of finding our authority in religion is by the exercise of our reason," said Professor S. A. B. Mercer, speaking before an audience in the Lecture Room, Hart House, on the subject, "Where is our authority in Religion?"

"Of course reason must be cumulative and not individual," said the speaker. "But I think that the time may come when a living group of men may again give formal expression to their reason as was done in the Bible. I do not believe any creed can be eternal."

Prof. Mercer explained the need of authority in religion, rejecting the authority of the Bible, the Church, or the Person and Teaching of Jesus as being insufficient. The Bible, while being to a certain extent authoritative, yet was written 1,800 years ago and since that time we believe that much advance has taken place. "Why should we accept the reasoning of 1800 years ago when we have superior reasons and minds of our own?" asked he.

The Church, because of its very disunity, was ineffective, while as to the Person and Teaching of Jesus, who so little since Jesus did not write himself and those who did were so unsure of themselves. Also we cannot even be sure that we have the original words as written.

"The source of all authority in human affairs is knowledge," declared Prof. Mercer. "We arrive at knowledge through reason, so why do not we also find our authority in religion in the same way?"

Hart House

Sunday, 25th November, being the last Sunday of the month, will be Visitors' Day in Hart House, when members may introduce visitors, including ladies, into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. Members will be asked to show their membership cards at the door.

The whole building will be open for inspection.

Ten at 25c per person will be served in the Graduate Dining Room between 3 and 4.30 p.m.

371 class of University College held a highly successful year party at the Women's Union last night. The patronesses were Mrs. Wallace, Mrs. Kirkwood and Mrs. Cochrane.

Scott Malcolm will be the artist at the first women's musicale, which will be held at the Women's Union Sunday 4 p.m.

CO-ED INTEREST IN W.U.A. IS LACKING

Awkward Hours, a Scarcity of Personal Interest Rather Than Indifference Are Causes

ST. HILDA'S WELL ATTENDED

Is the co-eds' college spirit unequal to anything more than dances or the effusions of Laura Louise? In U.C. the signs of the times are depressing. The W.U.A. has twice tried unsuccessfully to obtain a quorum for the discussion of plans for the building fund. "The Varsity" asked several U.C. women if they had attended the meeting on Tuesday. "What meeting?" and "I never heard of it" was the gist of the replies. All declared that their absence was not caused by lack of interest. They felt that the hour was awkward. All the Queen's Hall women are excluded by the present custom of holding meetings at 1.30, as their lunch hour is 1.15. Several asked why the meetings were not held in East or West Halls, which are more convenient than the Union.

Miss Eleanor Barton, president of the W.U.A., said that the executive was worried by the lack of interest. She thought that the individual perhaps felt she was not wanted, whereas everyone is an asset. The fact that the college is large should be its strength, not its weakness.

Victoria W.U.A. also has difficulty in securing a quorum except when radical changes are afoot. There were enthusiastic meetings last spring when it was decided that no woman can hold more than one office in societies governed by the W.U.A. St. Hilda's reports intense interest, but freshman attendance at meetings is compulsory, while other women who miss three times in succession are fined. Loretto reports no lack of support, at least among women in residence.

Noctem Cuckoo Will Be a Gala Affair

Noctem Cuckoo, the dental night of nights, will be held in Hart House on Friday, Nov. 23. The original spirit of the function still prevails and the Dents may be assured that the seventh annual Noctem Cuckoo will keep up the standard as set by former years.

The activities of the evening are under the supervision of Mr. C. M. Finlay and his committee. A snappy programme with a steady stream of events is planned. The final play-off for the inter-year basketball championship starts at 8 p.m., when the fourth and fifth year teams will battle for supremacy. Team competition for the Gaston Brule Cup will start at 8.45, when each year will present a skit. This is the main event of the evening, and for weeks the year representatives have been preparing their stunts for presentation.

A lively aquatic programme will start at 9.15 and the Dents will see something new and original here. An inter-year swimming relay is also on the list of events, together with exhibitions in how not to dive.

FIRST YEAR S.P.S. IS RESPONSIBLE FOR STOLEN GOODS

President of Second Year States That Bill is Exorbitant

SOME ARTICLES RETURNED

Matter Will Not Come Under Jurisdiction of Engineering Society Now

"Of course first year is responsible," stated D. H. Traynor, president of 2nd year S.P.S., when interviewed regarding the bill sent by the Carls-Rite Hotel to S.P.S. However, he continued, we are all co-operating with first year and they have been unusually successful in recovering the missing articles. Mr. Traynor further stated that the bill was exorbitant and that the articles removed were not worth nearly what the bill stated. Finally he said that the matter did not come under the jurisdiction of the Engineering Society but was entirely up to first year.

"I have nothing to say yet," Mr. W. H. Bowes, president of first year, told "The Varsity." "I realize that it is up to us in first year, but as yet nothing has been decided. He stated that there had been no conference with the Carls-Rite concerning the matter but he intimated that some steps would be taken in the matter in a few days. He admitted that some of the articles had been returned but did not know how many. When asked if he thought the bill was exorbitant, Mr. Bowes refused to give any opinion.

J. Wright, president of the Engineering Society, on being asked what about the bill, took the stand that it was the business of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering and of no interest to the rest of the University. He firmly refused to say anything about the bill.

YOUNG URGINS COME TO BE "ANTOXICATED"

Settlement Is Sponsoring School for Mothers Under
Dr. Blatz's Dept.

"I've come to get antoxicated," announced a young urchin, presenting himself at the University Settlement free school clinic on Tuesday afternoon. Similar incidents occur every week when babies of various sizes and description smiling or squawling are brought by mothers for medical advice and examination. Over their cups of tea, the mothers discuss the training of children, and a group for child study has been started under Dr. Blatz's department at the University.

Anyone visiting the Settlement is immediately aware of music. Over one hundred pupils taught by Toronto Conservatory teachers weekly take their lessons and practise at the Settlement House. The majority are ivory ticklers, but the violin is running a close second. A long-dreamed-of orchestra is now a reality; and the desire of every child is to join before its initial appearance at the Christmas concert.

In the Library story hour on Saturday morning a row of faces of every conceivable colour is seen in harmonizing manner of white, yellow, brown and black. Eyes alight, they were all interested in the same story. Such a group is the beginning of a true League of Nations.

MOTION BROUGHT UP IN VIC. PARLIAMENT RE WOMEN SMOKING

Opposition Resigns When Bill is Introduced to Have Leader Elected

MOTION LOST HOWEVER

Other Bills Passed Lowering Quorum, and Raising Price for Scarlet and Gold

"That this House disapproves of the editorial policy of 'The Varsity' in connection with women's residences" was the notice of motion made last night at the meeting of the Victoria College Students' Parliament by Mr. Joe Binning, and seconded by Mr. Carson. This motion will be discussed and passed on next week.

Attendance at the open meetings of the Parliament also came into prominence when Mr. Reinke introduced a bill enacting that a quorum consist of 25 members, instead of 35, in view of the few present last evening. Pointing out that 45 or 50 out of 300 was a poor attendance for last night, one member suggested that the meetings should even be made closed, and after some discussion the motion was carried.

The first bill, introduced by the Government, with Mr. Robinson as Leader, dealt with the Scarlet and Gold dance. As limitation of numbers was deemed a necessity, it was suggested that the price be raised twenty-five cents to $1.25, and the couples be limited to 80. This was to finance the Victoria At-Home more adequately, as even with tickets for the latter event at $3.25, a debt had been incurred last year which had to be met by a Parliamentary grant. The motion was carried unanimously.

In the private bills brought in by Mr. Reinke, the leader of the opposition was largely concerned. It was moved first that the Leader be elected by the members, not appointed by the President, as is now the case. At this suggestion the whole of the opposition, led by W. E. F. DeRoche, promptly resigned and took their places on the floor of the House, but after some discussion the motion was put and lost.

The second bill, which was eventually quashed, enacted that the Leader of the Opposition be a fourth year man, not from either of the senior years, as there was plenty of room for those in their junior years in the several other executive positions, but some latitude was thought necessary.

WHITE-COLLAR ALLEGATION DENIED BY U.C. REGISTRAR

Rate of Intelligence of Whole Country Depends on Many Horizons "Opened"

"I feel that the more people come here and have their horizons opened the higher the rate of intelligence through the whole country," was the statement of Professor W. J. McAndrew, registrar of U.C., when questioned concerning the "white-collar allegation" discussed by Premier Ferguson at a meeting of the MacDonald-Carter Club and reported in yesterday's "Varsity." The Registrar went on to say that in his opinion no one could say just how much any one person benefited by the time he or she spent at the university. "I don't think too many people are going to college. There are some cases no doubt where students might be better employed elsewhere, but we have no way of telling. On the other hand, I really don't believe that it is anyone's business but that of the person who is taking the course."

ONE AT A TIME

Sooner or later the editorial column of a college newspaper carries a line of advice for the men and women of the first year. As a matter of fact the supposedly fresh and green are no more in need of advice than those of the upper years, with certain unfortunate exceptions which we need not repeat here. The most objectionable people of all, in our opinion, are certain types of sophomore, so that before reaching that lamentable stage our young friends might do well to listen to some well-meant didactics:

Do not attempt to be versatile. It is far better to miss many interesting things around the university than to try to keep up with more things than you can work in with your daily programme. It will take you some time to appreciate the academic duties and privileges in your course. And to go from one outside activity to another means that you will gain very little in the process.

If you begin one or two activities in your first year you will then be able to continue with the one you like in your second year. If you are fortunate enough to be able to carry two activities you can then add one or two additional ones.

Games speedily weed out those who have not their whole heart in the undertaking. But other student activities and societies are clogged with a throng of people whose interest is merely transitory and who are wasting their time attending meetings devoted to purposes for which they feel no real sympathy. If a student is not vitally interested in an organization he can spend his time to better advantage in study.

The men and women in first year, we believe, will find that they will be well repaid if they restrict stringently their non-academic activity and if they make a thorough hobby out of one or two things, instead of dabbling fruitlessly in several.

The Table Round

TRINITY COLLEGE REVIEW

The first issue of this magazine for the present scholastic year has just appeared. R. T. Hallock is the Editor. The One That Died by F. E. Lund is a short short-story, centring around the internal struggle of a certain Haimovitch from the time of this person's death sentence until the executioner's "clean blade bit through" and the victim's "head rolled a few feet." The writer pictures a most gruesome climax but the story, at least, is interesting.

Recent events in China and their significance is the timely topic of W. S. B. Wong.

Under "Books," which is, by the way, a new department, the Editor offers short, pithy reviews of seven novels. Included among them are Willa Cather's Death Comes For Archibishop, Warwick Deeping's Kitty and Thornton Wilden's The Bridge of San Luis Rey.

If you are not interested in articles, fiction, reviews, etc., you must be a poet. Several poems, one in Latin, verify, round out the issue.

The Varsity Reporter's May Report—

That literary products be published indiscriminately was the keynote of the speech delivered by John Milton in the Areopagitica some time ago. A large audience was on hand.

Referring to a book as a man's "intellectual offspring," the speaker launched a lively attack on that group of men who, in censoring a book, would commit the grave offense of murder. "No book should be brought before a jury to undergo judgment," said Mr. Milton.

The first person questioned by the "Varsity" was Mr. F. B. Johnson. He declared that, while he had little criticism to offer, there was, however, one preponderant point for consideration.

"Mr. Milton took too big a breath for most of his sentences, filling them to profusion with metaphors and classical allusions, the former often too far-fetched, the latter often beyond the capacity of those present, with the result that the note of sincerity which was underlying his appeal was either greatly minimized or entirely lost."

Mr. Quince declined to offer an opinion but an ardent defender was found in Miss Soule.

"It was a darling speech," she said. "I just loathe censors."

Art, Music and Drama

Loretto Dramatics

Last evening the Loretto College players gave a very interesting presentation of Edmond Rostand's "The Princess Faraway." This play has lost little of the charm of the old French in which it was originally written and none of its mediæval spirit. The theme is that of the troubadour, Joffroy Rudel, who has spent his life in search of the Faraway Princess. He is at the point of death when he finally reaches her country and he sends his friend Bertrand of Allamon to beg the princess to come to him as he can go no further. The beautiful princess, who is held prisoner in a palace of oriental splendor, awaits the arrival of Joffroy her knight. Upon the arrival of the handsome young Bertrand she mistakes him for the promised rescuer. When she discovers he is only the messenger of the real Joffroy, who lies dying on his ship, she is so chagrined that she refuses to go with him. She has fallen in love with Bertrand and he with her, and the dramatic interest of the play centres around the conflict between their passion and their loyalty to Joffroy, who is Bertrand's friend and Melissinde's ideal. The final scene is the triumph of Melissinde's ideal love.

Miss Joan Hopkins made a fragile beautiful Princess. She acted a long and difficult role with sustained excellence.

Miss Muriel Smith as Bertrand of Allamon filled her masculine role with grace and spirit.

The acting of all the principles was characterized by an evenness of performance that showed skilful coaching. But Miss Mae Rouelle as Joffroy Rudel might be singled out for special mention. Miss Rouelle has a voice of outstanding quality and from the nature of her role it was on this rather than on actions that she depended for her effect.

Miss Irene de la Framere as the "Genoese" merchant, and Miss Emma Poupore as the maid of honour also deserve commendation.

The play lent itself to acting by an entirely female caste, and though the difficulty of casting girls in masculine parts was apparent, particularly in the voices of the piratical sailors, the costumes and settings were picturesque and effective.

H.C. Players' Guild

"Boccaccio's Untold Tale" by H. H. Kemp, which was presented by Mr. Earl Fauman at yesterday's meeting of the U.C. Players' Guild, was perhaps the most ambitious play ever produced at an afternoon meeting and certainly the most exacting in its demands on the actors. These demands were very well met, particularly by Miss Isobel Godfrey, who played the beautiful, tragic Lady Violente (whose name was in perfect accord with her nature) in a dress and manner reminiscent of her Queen Elizabeth of last year. Florio, who blinded himself rather than make the discovery that his love could not survive the loss of the loved one's beauty, was magnificently portrayed by Mr. Fauman. Two newcomers to the Guild, Misses Violet Maw and Ruth Lavine, played different roles very acceptably.

It is unfortunate that such excellent acting should be marred by poor enunciation, and, in one case at least, by very glaring make-up. A more careful study of diction and close attention to Mr. Stone's remarks next Tuesday may help future players to avoid these defects.

Enjoyment of the play was entirely spoiled for many of the audience by the noisy entrances of late-comers. Lateness may be unavoidable,—noise is not, and we are sure that, after having created a disturbance on entering, it is quite unnecessary to prolong it by eating chocolate-bars!

Exotic incense—more than this Dream-fruit of the Hesperides
Could not be half so rare as these.

Answer

Editor, "The Varsity."

I would like to comment on K. F. Tupper's letter in yesterday's issue.

Mr. Tupper is one of a large number of undergraduates who are very willing to advise "The Varsity" by scathing, destructive criticism, but are unwilling to offer more practical help by joining the staff.

The statement that "The Varsity" is "not an undergraduate paper" is unfair and incorrect. Through the S.A.C. every undergraduate contributes financially towards the paper. This claim of Mr. Tupper's is based on the fact that there are no School men on the staff. Surely it reflects no credit on the third largest faculty that not one of its students is connected with this important University activity.

At least three faculties lack representatives on either senior rugby team, yet no one challenges the right of these teams to represent the University.

Both the rugby teams and "The Varsity" call for candidates from the whole student body, but the teams and the staff are chosen only from those who offer their services.

Regarding the question of "misrepresentation in so-called news items," the writer can speak with authority on at least one of the criticized stories. Mr. Tupper—a North House member—objected to the article on hazing in the residences. Every statement made in that article was the result of information obtained from reputable residence men.

Having no connection with "The Varsity" I feel free to defend it through its correspondence column.

In closing, I would like to point out that, despite the statement that "forty is not three and a quarter dozen," mathematics show that forty is more than three and a quarter dozen.

Very truly yours,

J. H. ROSS.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The time for the "Exodus" draws nigh. Within two days' short space "Ye Royal and Ancient Rooters' Club" led by the valiant Moses of the megaphone and the agile Aaron of the acrobats will rally forth to the promised land under the shadow of the Mountain. Therein will take place the great spectacle of the encounter of "Lost Legion" with the mighty Tigers for the supremacy of the Eastern gridirons.

All Hamilton football attendance records should be shattered Saturday. With the large Toronto contingent and others from near-by points to swell the throng the old S.R.O. sign should be up before game time.

Besides the battle between the Orphans and Tigers on the field a very interesting struggle should be waged in the stands. Head-lining the bill is Sammy Manson's Camels' Club vs. Jack Marshall's Rooters' Club. At the stadium here last year the Camels were out in full force to see their darlings maul the Beaches. But in addition to the weather, "Red" Moore, "Yip" Foster and the other Balmi worthies put a considerable damper on their afternoon. If the Orphans get a day similar to last year's they may spill the beans also.

The Regina Roughriders will be in town to-morrow and are scheduled to work out at the stadium here before leaving for Hamilton, where they will witness the Varsity-Tiger mix-up. Regina has the right idea. Seeing that they'll probably be playing the Orphans here next week, it's a good idea to look over Varsity Stadium beforehand.

S.P.S. will be custodians of the Mulock Cup this winter. At the stadium yesterday Senior School clipped the wings of the flying Irishmen from St. Mike's and sent them away on the short end of a 2-0 score. School is generally prominent in this series and this year's team proved no exception. How about a little celebration at the Carls Rite?

Junior Assault to be Held December 12-13

The Junior Interfaculty Assault, which is open to any undergraduate of the University who has never won a Senior Interfaculty bout, takes place on December 12-13. The different faculty nights are in the preceding week, December 3-4-5-6. There are not many open dates left for these nights and the faculty representatives are advised to get in touch with Mr. Martin at once.

KNOX SOCCERITES WIN SEMI-FINALS

Effective Attack Used by Knox to Break Aggie Line

SCORE FOR KNOX 5-1

Knox College soccer team won the first game of the semi-finals for the soccer trophy yesterday afternoon at Guelph when they took O.A.C. into camp by the count of 5 to 1. The game was a very exciting fixture and was played on a field crusted with snow.

The Knox squad played fine combination through the game and were very effective on the attack. The Aggie squad pressed the play to a great extent but were weak when they were within scoring distance.

For the winners Doug Davidson tallied three goals, Skelton and McCullough one each. For the losers Pritchett, Watt and Bett showed up very effectively.

With their four goal lead Knox will entertain the Aggies at the Varsity grounds later this week. Aggies: Goal, Chesnut; full backs, Pritchett and A. Watt; halves, Story, H. Watt, Crowe; forwards, F. Pettie, Garnett, T. Bett, Brank and F. Bett. Knox: Goal, Irving; full backs, H. Davidson and W. Jack; halves, McCullough, Rowland and D. Jack; forwards, Milroy, D. Davidson, Skelton, Miller and MacDonald.

Referee: T. Atkinson, of Guelph.

BASKETBALL LINE-UP TO TOUR U.S.A. AT WMAS

Unique Collection of Stars Compose Probable Squad of Intercolligates

Varsity Intercolligate hockey team will likely be composed of the following players. On the forward line will be Capt. "Mo" Mitchell, George O'Leary and Ray Becton. The centres are Gord. Johnston and Will. Newman. Roy Curry, Johnny Murray, Sammy Hurwitz and Ben Sakier are the defence stalwarts. While these permanent positions make a very formidable line-up, shifts can be made without weakening the team. Newman can go to forward, Murray to centre, and O'Leary to centre or defence while Sakier could easily be made into a forward. This looks to be the most versatile team that has represented the Blue and White in many years.

The Intercolligates are a starry clan. "Mo" Mitchell was the high scorer in last year's championship games. O'Leary is an experienced performer, having played for Windsor Grads and West End "Y" Seniors. Murray was also a member of last year's provincial champs, the Windsor Grads. The squad has gradually rounded into condition for the Christmas tour of several large American universities, and it is expected that their invasion of the States will be successful.

Correction

In the issue of Monday, Nov. 19, the Women's Baseball Schedule was published under the heading "Women's Basketball." On Tuesday, Nov. 20, in the first baseball game of the women's series, played at O.C.E., St. Mike's against O.C.E., it was stated that St. Mike's won. The correct result was 19-5 in favour of O.C.E.

St. Mike's Win with Score 5-3 Over Ragged Toronto Victorias

St. Michael's College took the measure of Toronto Victorias to the tune of 5-3 in a S.P.A. Junior fixture at the Arena Gardens last night.

The play was rather ragged in the first two periods, but lived up in the last session. Keogh, Vallequette and Smith scored one apiece for St. Mike's, while Primeau tallied two. White and Barton netted the counters for the losers.

Neither team appeared to have struck their stride as the shooting and combination was, on the whole, weak. Victorias: Goal, O'Leahy; defence, Moore, Barrett; centre, Stephens; right wing, Miller; left wing, Tabbie; subs, Burton, White, Millard, Boyd, Plumb, Love.

Vic. Women Defeat O.C.E. in Peppy Baseball Game

Victoria College staged another win last night against Ontario College of Education in the second game of the women's interfaculty baseball. The final score, 14-13, ended a close peppy game—both teams having put up a splendid fight. Daisy Quance, pitcher for Vic, was at her best, and Alice Tilley, catcher, rarely missed a ball. Kay Ferguson and Frankie Service starred for O.C.E. Vic got a good lead in the first innings, and O.C.E. despite their strenuous efforts, were unable to quite catch up. Alice Tilley was given a rather bad knock when an O.C.E. player knocked her down in a mad rush to reach the home plate; she recovered quickly though and finished out the game.

The line-up: Victoria: Daisy Quance, Alice Tilley, Molly Jarrett, Maude Lindsay, Evelyn Crow, Aura Graham, Annie Chorolsky, Florence Wright and Chris Dobbins. M. Rodgers sub. O.C.E.: Kay Ferguson, Frankie Service, Ida Jones, Lou Bates, Win Young, Peg Graham, Eleanor McCubbin and Marion Hayes.

CORRESPONDENCE

A Hot One

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir, I read with great interest your editorials of Nov 19 and Nov. 21 and also a letter from Mr. K. F. Tupper and I wish to make a few comments on them.

In your editorial of Nov. 21 you say, "This is similar to certain other communications we have received—in that there is a good deal of indignation and very little fact behind it." Does the Editor deny that he accused the men's residences of hazing and the women's residences of abusing their honour system? If so his own regard for the truth is not very great. Further, you state that an examination of the masthead above your editorial will show that the art editor of "The Varsity" is an engineer. Personally, I have been unable to find the art editor listed in the masthead. However, a perusal of it shows that of the twenty-six persons named there, three are graduates, one is from the

ORPHANS ALL SET TO DEMOLISH TIGERS

Inspired By Win Over Beaches Blue Team is Keen to Meet Bengals

MORALE EXCELLENT

Yesterday evening saw the Orphans ease up a little in their priming for Saturday's big game. A light signal practice was held, although some of the squad took a day off.

The Blue team appear to be in perfect shape for their biggest game of the season. And that means perfect both physically and mentally. The boys are as hard as nails and full of the old fight and pep. But what is perhaps just as important is that the team morale is very fine. Although Jimmy Douglas' boys will be up against a team which is hailed as the coming champions and which does not seem to have a weak spot, this does not bother them one bit. Balmi Beach had a big reputation and the Orphans just stepped into them and threw them back with a bang which resounded through the entire Canadian football world. The Orphans are figuring to hand out the same dose to the Bengals and every man will be in there giving all he has and perhaps more.

Since their victory over the Beaches the Blue have been playing like a team inspired. With a steady half-line, a good kicker, strong outside and a dashing fighting line, Jimmy Douglas' fighters are not soft pickings for any team.

If the field is soft with the going heavy it will keep Tigers mighty busy to turn the trick, and no matter what condition they are like it appears certain they are in for a most interesting afternoon.

Faculty of Applied Science, twenty-two are from the Faculty of Arts, and the Faculties of Medicine, Dentistry, Forestry, Household Science and Music are totally unrepresented. This proves as Mr. Tupper stated, that "The Varsity" is not representative of the whole student body.

I also wish to state that I think the editorial note at the foot of Mr. Bickersteth's letter published in the issue of Nov. 19 was the worst piece of impertinence of which I have heard. It is evident that you consider the loss of these valuable bags as of the same importance of the trifling incident you have mentioned. You seem to be pointing out that Mr. Bickersteth has overlooked a matter of equal consequence. Nothing could be farther from the truth. This is quite the most uncalled for and out of place comment you could have made. If you must act smartly, why not do it through your column devoted to humour instead of scoffing at a most serious letter by one of the University's most respected men.

This is on a parallel with the recent article on the honour system at Queen's Hall which should certainly never have been published.

Articles such as the above produce as bad an impression downtown as any "rowdy acts outside" and do not seem to indicate that the Editor has the best interests of the University at heart.

In the issue of Nov. 21 there is published a bill from the Hotel Carls Rite to the first year S.P.S. This bill was the sole concern of the parties involved and was not for publication. Also why was not the whole bill published instead of only those parts which represent the students unfavourably? Was it necessary to publish the unofficial additions?

In closing I wish to condemn the editor for his policy of publishing confidential information which serves to discredit our University. A few less startling headlines and more space to genuine news articles would create a much better impression in all quarters.

W. F. Hachnel,

Editorial Note: "The Varsity" has never "accused" men's or women's residences of anything. Our stories were based on speeches and interviews, by and with people in those residences. The writer of the above is incapable of refuting one scintilla of the facts in our stories concerning his residence. If he were not so dense we would invite him to join the staff. Only one-third of the staff appears in the masthead. The faculties named above are not totally unrepresented and are covered adequately. Wherein have we failed to produce "genuine news articles" when given cooperation by the faculty executives concerned?

"Disgusted"

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In the Nov. 21 issue of your paper there appeared an article regarding the School escapade at the Carls Rite Hotel. A copy of the bill was printed including the additions made by some witty Engineers, and it is to these additions that I wish to take exception. (Continued on page 4)

Aunt Mary's Genial Disposition Comes Rushing To The Rescue

Aunt Mary solicits interrogative, sensitive toes of the Engineers. It seems that this is a part of the acquaintance of every good School man and, except for the odd line or phrase, is a carefully guarded secret. The first line of the epic runs—
"In 1492 Columbus he set sail-o" and rhymes with "halo."

That's all we know, but we will offer a year's subscription to the Varsity to any other lover of poetry who can help you out.

Dear Aunt Mary,—
Is there any truth in the rumour that several Forestry men on location, so to speak, bet another Forestry man $10 that he was afraid to enter the instructor's tent and kiss him good-night?

Sincerely,
Curious.

Ans. Yes, verily, there is much truth in the rumour. The goat, as it were, entered the tent, explained his mission and offered to split the proceeds. The instructor thought five smacks for one pretty good odds. The goat kissed the instructor good-night, the wise guys kissed their money good-bye, and a good time was had by all.

My Darling Aunt Mary,—
I've just received the most exciting invitation to a big dance from Paul Underwood. I'd just love to go; but I have heard some awful rumours about him. What shall I do??
Your loving niece,
Laura Louise.

Ans. I too have heard about that dreadful Underwood person. Listen to your old Aunt and stay at home: he's said to be 22% faster!

Although "The Varsity" has been the object of much criticism in the past few weeks for its alleged "Yellow Journalism" I feel that here I never before it has overstepped the bounds of propriety in the interests of truth. Several of these items are "Risqué" but one is particularly vulgar. Whether or not the reader is looking for something smutty it glares at him as soon as his eyes pass down the column, for it is not even ambiguous. "The Varsity" in my opinion deserves to be severely censured for printing this, and I believe that it ought to apologise to the reading public for so doing.

Yours truly,
Disgusted.

Women's Debates
Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
In a news article in Tuesday's "Varsity" the following opinion was advanced by an undergraduate: "I had the impression that ladies' sports, like their debates, were exclusively for their sex." As the publicity manager of the Women's Debating Union, I would like to correct this statement in part. The intercollegiate debates are exclusively for co-eds but the inter-collegiate are not. A team from McGill debates with the Toronto women on Monday evening in Trinity College and every male undergraduate is assured of a hearty welcome.

The attendance at intercollegiate debates is always much smaller at the U. of T. than at McGill or Queen's, and for this reason the debating union is eager to change impressions into definite knowledge.

Sincerely,
Mary E. Coleman.

U.C. Women's Spirit
Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
Having read "279's" letter in "The Varsity" yesterday, I feel obliged to correct one statement. Instead of "exactly six rooters at the last basketball game" there were actually only two.

It is apparently quite unfashionable to have any college spirit or to attend any college event other than rugby games.

Is this deplorable lack of interest and college spirit going to invade the university or are we of University College going to "pull together soon and mighty"?

Orphans Have Spirit

(By Lou Golden)
(Sporting Editor)

Can the Orphans win to-morrow? They have been called to end up at the foot of the heap yet strange to say they are in the Eastern Canada finals. They have been called to not win a game and yet they won the Ontario Rugby Union championship. They have been rated as the weakest team in the O.R.F.U. and yet some of Canada's finest football machines have been their victims. They have been neglected and forgotten by the football populace and yet the biggest crowd to ever witness a game in Hamilton are turning out to see them play the Tigers. Can the Orphans win?

Stranger things have happened than what may happen Saturday.

At the start of the season the Jimmie Douglas-Ralph McIntosh outfit went wrong with a loss to the combined Kitchener-Waterloo twelve and the critics said they were through. The next week they journeyed down to Sarnia and were well beaten there, and then with expectations that they were out of the running, men were drafted to the Intercollegiate team and supposed weeklings were sent down to Jimmie Douglas to use. With only an outside chance of getting into the play-offs, the Lost Legion met Sarnia Imperials in Toronto. They were putting up a great fight, but were down three points with only seconds to go, when Charlie Baillie, their brilliant captain, sent across a drop from 35 yards out to tie the score and force the battle into overtime. They defeated Sarnia. Then came Kitchener again. A win for the K's would have

Protest

MULOCK COMMITTEE MEETS

A protest has been lodged by the management of the Saint Michael's College Interfaculty football team alleging that the officials in charge of Wednesday's Mulock Cup final between Senior School and Saint Michael's were incompetent.

One of the members of the Saint Michael's team has issued a statement to "The Varsity" in which he takes to task one of the officials under the following heads. First that on at least one occasion the official advised the School halves to play deeper on a Saint Michael's punt. Secondly, that the same official conceded one of the S.P.S. wing men advising him to play wider on a Saint Michael's formation. In addition to the above several other alleged objectionable actions on the part of the same official have been cited.

The protest will be considered by the Committee of Management of the Mulock Cup series at a special meeting to be held at the Athletic Office, Hart House, at 1.30 to-day.

Correction

The story in yesterday's issue regarding the Victoria College Students' Parliament was incorrect in reporting notice of motion "Resolved that this house disapproves of the editorial policy of 'The Varsity' in connection with Women's Residences." This should have read "in connection with smoking rooms in Women's Residences."

FAMOUS FORD A FEATURE

Let's go gang! Let's get the jitney out and join the big parade! To where? Why, the Bengals' lair, of course. We're all going, and how! By train, by bus, by automobile, on bicycles, tricycles, kiddie cars, any old thing at all, Blue and White supporters hit the trail to the village under the mountain to-morrow. Yes, we mean the place where camels have humps on both hips, and boys, do they do a wicked walk!

The Orphans themselves will lead the pilgrims on their way to-morrow. At the hour when most men are hurriedly scraping a determined chin in a haphazard manner Jimmie Douglas and his squad will be entraining for Tigertown. A few supporters follow by rail at noon, and at that hour also two buses will bear Varsity students on their way to the Eastern Canada final.

Some thirty-five hundred tickets were disposed of at the Athletic Office; how then will the other odd thirty-four hundred journey? In luxurious sedans, snappy coupes, squealing roadsters and rattling Fords, Varsity routers will crowd the highways to-morrow. In beautiful fur coats and in begrimed blue and white sweaters, students rich and poor join in an invasion of the Ambitious City.

Quite an interesting history is connected with at least one vehicle journeying from here to-morrow morning. It even has a name, one that it is quite proud of, and it is quite fondly regarded by the syndicate of six who are its owners. "Castor Eight," as the car was named, was bought by six students in one of the college residences, that they might journey to the Varsity-Queen's game

HOLD IMPOSING RECORD

As Victors or as Vanquished
the Orphans Are Worthy of High Esteem

By M. J. Rodden
(Coach of the Hamilton Tigers)

Congratulations to University of Toronto Orfans. As these lines are written the game between the O.R.F.U. champions and Hamilton Tigers for the supremacy of football in Eastern Canada is a thing of the future. The Blue and White may win the game. They may be beaten. But irrespective of the outcome of this one contest the Orfans have won a place high on the 1928 football honour roll.

Unheralded at the commencement of the season, the men coached by Jimmie Douglas have plunged and run and battered their way to recognition. Their successive victories over Balmy Beach, the powerful Dominion champions of last year, and Sarnia, O.R.F.U. finalists, stamped them as worthy foemen for any team.

The true spirit of amateurism—the spirit that battles on in the face of odds and without too much encouragement—has placed University of Toronto's so-called second team in the position they occupy to-day. "The game for the game's sake" has been an ever-present if unspoken part of the Orfans' game, and it is a spirit that has done its part in winning the O.R.F.U. championship for them.

Finance is the order of the day. Just when the student is congratulating himself on having settled his tuition fees and having successfully disposed of all the class fees and club dues that are demanded of him, when he has paid for his graduation picture and laboriously saved enough money to buy his Christmas gifts, in short just when the financial path is beginning to look fairly smooth for another year, up crop all sorts of new obstacles in the shape of finance campaigns.

The University seems to have become an ardent partisan of the money-raising methods of many large philanthropic concerns. If any organization needs funds for a new undertaking or just for maintenance expenses, the fashion now is to arraign a finance campaign, or better still, a tag day. By either of these means, with no great financial outlay on the part of the persons immediately concerned, the student body as a whole can usually be induced to provide the dollars needed by the organization.

There is something rather doubtful about both these ways of collecting money, though perhaps the tag day is the lesser evil. It at least usually leaves its victims in a comfortable state of ignorance concerning the future of their perfunctory donations, and poorer by only a few cents. The promoters of a tag day may feel tempted at times to use some more dignified method of raising money, but they would be wise to adhere to the former way. By it, even if no one knows why or what it is, they are almost sure of collecting a large sum. Everyone buys tags,—it's the thing to do.

The finance campaign, on the other hand, though it may not carry its activities so far afield, involves a much greater expenditure of time and money on the part of its supporters. This is as it should be if the campaign is confined to those who are known to be interested in its object, but such is unfortunately not often the case at this University. Every organization needing funds considers students of the whole college its legitimate prey, and canvasses them all assiduously with no regard for their interest (or lack of it) and taking no notice of their connection with other equally important concerns.

Even this sort of thing, bad as it is, is not the worst of the ways taken by students to persuade their fellows to part with their treasured shillings, for one may always dare the wrath of the canvasser and refuse to contribute. There are actually those among us, who instead of cajoling or educating us to the point of signing on the dotted line, are determined to force us into supporting their enterprises. One case in point is the recently announced plan of the University College W.U.A. by which all the women in that college are to be divided into groups, each group being expected to raise a certain sum of money for the Women's Building. This apparently is a very ingenious way to make all the women in the college contribute four or five times to the Fund. It is obvious that there will be a good deal of overlapping,—each group will be expected to support the activities of all the others and as a result of all this "busyness" the women of the college "will be enabled to make a generous donation towards the cost of the new Building."

This plan has been tried before in one of the sister colleges, and there it caused a good deal of unpleasantness. It was felt by many that the object was not worth the effort expended, and that the sum of money to be raised was too great. The leaders among the women of U.C. have the very laudable ambition of having their new Building free of mortgage, but it would seem obvious from the action of the women as a whole that they do not care whether or not there is a Building, let alone whether it is mortgaged.

Why cannot students refrain from forcing their enthusiasms upon others, and especially from making those others pay for the realization of their dreams? In any case, however praiseworthy those dreams may be, most people attend the University at a considerable financial sacrifice to themselves or their parents, and it is time that this series of demands upon their purses was stopped.

And it occurs to us that according to popular conception each faculty might elect a typical representative who might be christened Mr. Trinity or Mr. University College and presented with a copy of the University Calendar and given a free ride to Major Basher's Select School for Boys by the Don.

C-C

Frezeample, it occurs that Mr. Trinity would be tastefully attired in an Eton collar and a black nightie, carrying a quart bottle of gin in his watch pocket and wearing a volume of John Bourinot suspended by a daisy chain about his neck. On his lapel is a cameo of the Colossus of Rhodes.

Again, we might use a more modern method of characterization and revert to the 25c table at the Great Hall.

Victoria Dramatics

Following its new idea of small plays à la the Players' Guild, the Victoria Dramatic Club staged "It's Time Something Happened," last evening. It was done, to their considerable credit, by freshmen.

The play was one of those witty impersonal things about a love triangle and a poet, a playwright, an actress and other such queer people who gave free advice on the problem: should a poor wife resort to murder, divorce or free-love? The conversation was like a dim shade of Michael Arlen.

It was a very difficult play to act as it lacked substance, but the freshmen managed it quite well. There is promise of real talent. But among them, perhaps, were Miss Gwen Phipps and Miss Ada Anderson. B.D.B.

The Alumnae Association Dramatic Club will produce Somerset Maugham's play "Caesar's Wife" twice on Saturday at Hart House. They are also producing it on Friday evening, but the house is sold to the University Women's Club.

SOPHOMORES AND SENIORS OF TRINITY HOUSE GO DUMPING BEDS

Scene of Confusion Ensues But Some Profit by Upset

CASE OF BITTERS BITTEN

Second Year Men Invade Dance Held by Frosh After Banquet

Mattresses were piled high in the bath rooms, beds had been taken apart and were scattered in odd corners, on different floors of the building, and chairs had been stacked in the corridors and in fact sophomores had left nothing undone in the wrecking of the rooms of the Trinity House freshmen while they were all out enjoying their annual banquet at the Carls Rite Hotel.

"Well, they gave me a better pair of chairs than I had before," said one freshman who had succeeded in assembling his room by midnight last night. Many not so fortunate were still at work. "Here, the best mattresses are at the bottom.

"Yes," has a tea spoon and — has a napkin," they admitted cheerfully when questioned as to the success of their banquet. "The icy tub for them," was the cry, but no one moved to carry out the order. They were all too busy trying to fit beds together and fix a place to sleep. It looked as if some would have to sleep on the floor.

The freshmen's only consolation was that the sophomores' rooms were as badly wrecked as their own.

After doing their best job on the first year rooms the sophs went down in a body to "crash the gate" on the dance that the freshmen were enjoying after their banquet at the college with the ladies of Saint Hilda's, and in their absence they were paid in their own coin when many of the second year rooms were even more artistically handled by the more experienced Seniors.

BOXING AND WRESTLING TEAMS NOW WORKING OUT

Intensive Training Beginning with Many New Men on Duty

The Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Club have settled down to intensive training this week to hold the Inter-collegiate championship that they won last year. Graduation and exams took a heavy toll, but new men are coming up this year who will give Varsity a strong team. The boxing team under Chris Newton have been working for a couple of weeks now and the prospects are particularly bright in this division. The wrestlers, who are ably looked after by Mr. Martin and Mr. Durnam, have Kicken, Ferber and Hillard left from last year's team. There will also be some new men this year. Genner and Armstrong look particularly good. Messrs. Walters and Moore are again in charge of the fencing. Mr. Walters is the dean of Canadian fencers, having been the champion for the past ten years and more. Of last year's team, only Keffer has graduated. Both Diamond and Dunlop are again eligible.

DEAN HOWE TO SPEAK

Woodsmen's attire will be the official garb at the Forestry Club's Annual Stunt Night to be held this evening in the Forestry Building. Everyone is supposed to come in this strictly informal dress, according to A. B. Wheatley, chairman of the Stunt Committee.

A stunt presented by members of the first year will be a feature of the evening's entertainment, and it is expected that the dean will speak. Mr. Wheatley said that a good orchestra had been obtained for the dance following. The usual novelties will form a part of the programme.

SCHOOL SOPHOMORES SEVERELY CENSURED AT S.A.C. MEETING

Letter of Apology Written to Theatre Manager by President

COPY OF MOTION ATTACHED

No Penalty Will Be Imposed Since Damage and Panic Were Averted

A motion strongly censuring 1st and 2nd year students at S.P.S. was passed by the S.A.C. last Wednesday. A copy of this motion, together with a letter of apology, has been forwarded to Shea's Theatre.

The letter is as follows:

November 22, 1928
Mr. J. Shea,
Manager, Shea's Hippodrome, 440 Bay Street,
Toronto 2, Ont.
Dear Sir,—

On behalf of the Students of the University of Toronto, the Students' Administrative Council wish to convey to you our deepest apology for the action of certain students at your Theatre on the night of Thursday, November 15th. May we also say that the gracious manner in which you have treated the incident, is greatly appreciated.

Yours very sincerely,
(Signed) G. A. McGillivray,
President of the Students' Administrative Council,
University of Toronto.

Attached to the letter is a copy of the motion passed by the S.A.C., which is printed below.

This Council strongly disapproves of the conduct of certain members of the First and Second years of the School of Practical Science, in unlawfully forming a parade and marching through the downtown city streets; taking possession of red lanterns which had been placed at certain excavations as danger signals, and entering a downtown Theatre without admission and in a disorderly fashion. The Council realizes the serious nature of these breaches of discipline, but in the present case by the greatest good fortune, no damage or panic occurred. Such being the case, this Council is not prepared in this instance to impose on the offenders the severest penalty in its power. It strongly censures, however, the action of all concerned in this affair and points out to the Students of the University that all such actions are strictly unauthorized and will be most severely dealt with in future.

(Signed) G. A. McGillivray,
President of the Students' Administrative Council,
University of Toronto.

He had numerous love affairs, and a friend once pointedly informed him

CROWDED NIGHT PROMISED FOR INTERFACULTY MEET

Many Teams Are Competing Water Polo Also Attraction Dance in Big Gym

A very large entry list has been handed in for the annual Interfaculty Swimming Meet, Saturday at the House House plunge. Activities start prompt at 8 o'clock and competitors are advised to be on time. The events are the 50, 100, 200 and 440 yard free style races, a 100 yard swim on the back and another with the breast stroke. An exciting relay is promised with four men to a team. U.C. and S.P.S. have entered two teams, while Meds, Dents and Trinity have one each.

Competition in all the events is keen, and it is impossible to predict the winners, although Goss is favoured to win the 50 yard sprint and the quarter mile event.

An added attraction will be the water polo game between a team of Varsity graduates and an all-star collection of undergrads. This will be a real game and looks like the feature of the evening. After the meet there will be dancing from ten to twelve in the big gymnasium.

PENNY STATIONS FOR INK FILLING NOW PROPOSED

Need of Inkwells Stressed Officials State Idea Has Its Points

LIBRARY SYSTEM GOOD ONE

Ink Seekers Crowd Office Anti-spill Device Needed

"The students come into the office in great numbers in search of ink, and it often causes congestion when we are busy. If there were ink filling stations it would be much easier for the students, but should the University be obliged to furnish the students with ink?" This was the opinion of Mr. McAndrew, registrar of U.C., who questioned by "The Varsity" concerning the use of the ink-wells in college offices for purposes of replenishing students' pens, and the advisability of installing ink filling stations, at strategic points, to do away with the inconvenience to students and staff alike.

The librarians of the University library did not think that such a step was necessary. "The system in vogue here is quite satisfactory. The students fill their pens from the bottle on the desk without interfering with anyone, and deposit a copper in the box marked 'Put in a cent and fill your pen,' thus helping along the Women's Building Fund."

Dr. Barber, librarian of Vic. College library, said: "Theoretically I think that ink filling stations are a good idea, but the point is to work it out. A mechanical device of some kind would be necessary to guard against spilling the ink or upsetting the bottle entirely. Then we must consider the cost, because if such a system were installed, it would have to harmonize with our buildings and would certainly prove expensive."

Mr. Le Pan, superintendent of buildings, said: "I have not thought about it at all, but it sounds like a good idea, and if the students think it advisable we might install some device for a penny a shot, as it were."

him as to a collic-dog."

His engravings were permeated with the signs of the times. The force of the Renaissance was being felt. Formerly, the features of the Madonnas expressed the purity of their lives. They were portrayed with the high forehead, long glossy hair and the small mouth with no suggestion of the sensual.

JUSTICE RIDDELL AT SCHOOL DINNER

Has Distinguished Career as Engineer and Lecturer and is Noted Jurist

HOLDS HONORARY DEGREES

The Hon. Mr. Justice W. R. Riddell, LL.D., D.C.L., is to be the guest of honour at the thirty-ninth annual School Dinner to be held in Hart House on Tuesday evening, November 27. He is the oldest living engineering graduate in Ontario, and one of the oldest in Canada.

Justice Riddell enjoys the distinction of having obtained his B.A. in 1874, and his B.Sc. in 1876. In addition, he has since been granted eleven honorary degrees from various universities and colleges in the United States, England and Canada.

Justice Riddell has been general counsel in Canada for one of the large United States railway systems. He is an honorary Colonel in the Canadian Militia and is a member of the Senate of the University of Toronto. In addition to being an eminent jurist, he is well known as a lecturer and writer and as such has dealt with many questions of an international and historical character.

NOTICE

There will be an important meeting of the Committee of Management in charge of the Interfaculty football, in the Athletic Office, Hart House, at 1.30 to-day. The following are asked to attend: McMahon, Rapsey, Carroll, McCullum, Symons, McFadyen, Hudson, Catto, Belton.

needed to be a puzzle expert in order to follow its ramblings.

The editorial note placed at the end of this letter was probably one of the most childish efforts that any editor could make. Certainly I think that the man who edits our University paper should know better than to place it in such a position.

The explanation of the location of the letter was probably one, but nothing has been said of the so-called editorial note, which, it seems to me, more important than the placing of the letter.

In my opinion, some apology for this palpable error of judgment should be made to Mr. Bickersteth.

Awaiting an honest and sincere reply.

I remain, yours truly,

W. A. Rooke.

Editorial Note: This is the last letter we shall publish on this subject. It is significant that all the letters have come from School men, who do not wish to attempt refutation of articles which constitute the real source of their annoyance. Again, ignorant toadies on committees are apparently incapable of realizing either the significance of space position or of editorial comment.

Letters of Lovely Laura Louise

(By D. Kende)

In bed,

Nov. 23rd

Dear Betty:

I've got an awful cold. I get it last Friday night, or rather Saturday morning, waking home from the Masquerade. You see I live so close to Hart House that it really wasn't worth while to get a taxi, so Gid and I walked. Our costumes didn't show for we had our overcoats on.

Just a minute till I find my handkerchief. I think I'll soon be all blown away.

The fastest a cold can drag you down is something awful. But just the same there are worse places to be. For instance I don't have to go to lectures. That's such a relief. I missed one exam and am getting rested up to do some real extensive work on my recovery. I get an awful bunch of roses and things from lots of people. They were all so sympathetic and understandable about my misfortune. One of the boys tried to get up to pay me a visit. That is terribly off-side. You should have heard the nurse typhoon him out of the house. She's rather a good sport, and she certainly isn't a gargoyle, that girl isn't. She holds my hands, and reads to me and tells me the most intimate and interesting things. I think I would make a wonderful nurse. I'd look awfully cute in a uniform wouldn't I? One of those with a cap on, I mean. The gargoyle is part of the cold I don't like. I go up the scales and down again on the same mountain. They say that great singers do that. It strengthens the epiglottis and the larynx.

Just a minute till I get another handkerchief and yodel for a glass of water. Maybe I wouldn't have been feeling as I am feeling if I hadn't gone out on Wednesday night. I was feeling so shut up that I wanted some fresh air so I went to a show. It was a romance. I must of got so hot that I had to catch my cold again.

The man I was with was so dish-pashionate. He had black curly hair and was tremendously handsome. I told him between sneezes that I simply loved dark men. I think he didn't like me, because he told me that I could have a wonderful time then in Africa. That wasn't nice.

Its time for my medicine now.

Your best friend,

Laura Louise.

P.S. Ask my mother to send me some more handkerchiefs. Please.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock Mr. W. A. Davidson, analyst in charge of the Food and Drug Laboratories of the Department of Health, will address the University Chemical Club in the small lecture room of the Chemical Building.

SCHOOL DINNER

The 36th Annual School Dinner is to be held in the Great Hall, Hart House, at 7 p.m. Tuesday, Nov. 27. The guest of honour of the evening will be the Hon. Mr. Justice W. R. Riddell, LL.D., D.C.L., of the Supreme Court of Canada, a noted jurist, writer and lecturer. His lordship will speak on a subject of common interest to every Engineering and Architectural student. This is to be a real School Dinner and every Schoolman is urged to support it. Tickets may be obtained from the executives and in the Engineering Society. See seating plan in Eng. Soc. Office.

Orphans Conceded Chance

meant elimination of the Orphans. They sent the "callers" home gnashing their teeth.

Balm Beach then were supposed to have a light workout at the expense of the Douglasses, and the result was the biggest upset in Canadian rugby for many years back. According to the "know alls" it was a flash in the pan, but they could not pass the strong Sarnia representatives. The Orphans brought the O.R.F.U. title to Varsity for the first time since they have been in the series, and now they are going to be beaten by the Mike Rodden's Tigers by 20 points. At least they are being called to do that.

Can the Orphans win? They are in the finest fettle for the fray of the season, with every man on his toes for the battle that is supposed to be a walk-away. The same team that has played the last two games will start on Saturday, and if fight and down-right pluck means anything, there may be some classic tail-twisting. The Bengals are well prepared for the Orphans, so are the Orphans well prepared for the Roddenites. Can the Orphans win? Stranger things have happened. The Rough Riders may yet be seen in action at the Varsity Stadium.

STUDENTS BEGAN COMMERCE CLUB EIGHT YEARS AGO

Purpose of Club to Promote Wider Interest on Part of Undergraduates

MANY MEMBERS THIS YEAR

Various Social Functions Will Be Held During Year

Organized by a small group of undergraduates, the Commerce Club of the University of Toronto had its beginning in 1920, before the present course in Commerce and Finance was begun.

The first president was J. P. Crysdale, who delivered an address to the Club recently. At that time there were very few undergraduates in Commerce, which was then an honour course in Arts, so that membership in the Club was necessarily limited in numbers. The purposes of the Club were to promote a wider interest on the part of undergraduates in their work, to bring undergraduates into closer connection with graduates in the course, and to serve as the official spokesman of that course. It was also hoped that the Club would assist in working out some of the problems in connection with the course. There was some uncertainty at that time as to just what form the course would take.

At the present moment the Club is at a very interesting stage of development. There are over 130 students in the first year of what formerly was a course very small in numbers, and new problems are constantly arising with this increase. Also the number of graduates is increasing. Mr. D. N. Currie is president of the Club this year.

Regular meetings are held throughout the term. It is the policy of the Commerce Club executive to have graduates address meetings of the Club as much as possible, as well as various men prominent in the business and commercial world. Smokers, dances and various social functions are held during the year.

CANADIAN ENVOY TO TOKIO STOPS HERE EN ROUTE

Students Hear Noted Diplomat at Baldwin and Hart House
To-day

Major George Washington Stephens, who has recently accepted the appointment as Canadian Minister to Tokio, is visiting the University while en route to Japan, and this morning at eleven o'clock will speak to the students in room 3 at Baldwin House.

Major Stephens was chairman of the Montreal Harbour Board. For the past fourteen years he has resided in Paris during a part of which time he presided as chairman of the Governing Commission of the Sarr Valley under the Treaty of Versailles. He is a man of great wealth and influence, a good linguist and admirably qualified to represent Canada as the first Canadian Minister to Tokio, which post corresponds to that occupied by the Honorable Vincent Massey at Washington.

This evening, Major Stephens will address the Foreign Affairs Club in the Music Room of Hart House at 8:30 p.m. The students of the University are cordially invited to both of the above meetings, and are most fortunate in this opportunity of hearing so eminent a Canadian statesman as Major G. W. Stephens.

FORESTRY MEN STRONGLY OPPOSED TO 'SOUP AND FISH'

Fated Man Forcibly Ejected
From Forestry Portals

SKIT FEATURES EVENING

Dance Enlivens
in Waning Hours

It is rumored that Forestry have no use for the soup and fish attire which some people are wont to affect at formal functions. One luckless man, it is alleged, was forcibly ejected from the Forestry building on Stunt Night because he appeared in a dinner-jacket. However, this did not dampen the spirits of the gathering.

A bench in Queen's Park was the setting of the very humorous skit put on by first year.

The characters were a discontented shop-girl from Yonge St. and a supposedly English society man. The girl, tired of looking poor, had taken one of the snapper models from the window of her employers and repaired to Queen's Park, where she met the Englishman. After a humorous conversation, with the girl trying hard to keep up her end of it, the denouement arrives when her employer appears on the scene and orders her to "get back to work." The girl then explains that she was "only a shop-girl sick of poverty," but she had had fifteen glorious minutes "just pretending." Having shot her bolt, the girl was preparing to depart when two rough-clad lads walked in and, hailing the Englishman familiarly, told him in his turn that the boss was looking for him. Then it appeared that this "swell" was only "an assistant fitter and a rotten one" at Tip Top Tailors. The man is much chagrined for a moment, but finally confesses that he too was "sick of poverty" and dressed up for the occasion. The play then ended happily with "an engagement for lunch to-morrow" and "I'll meet you here at this bench."

The characters of the girl and Englishman were very well portrayed by N. C. Mallory and H. W. Beall respectively. (Continued on page 3)

SENIOR MEDICAL AT-HOME
RETURNS TO HART HOUSE

After having been held, of recent years, in a downtown hotel, the Senior Medical At-Home is returning to Hart House, where it was staged in former years. The sub-committee of the Medical Society, which, under the leadership of S. J. Hawkins, president of sixth year, was appointed to take charge of the At-Home, reported that continuance of the function downtown is an economic impossibility, and consequently the decision to return to Hart House was made. The date of the affair this year will be Feb. 1.

HAMILTON HARASSED BY ROARING ROOTERS

Varsity Minions Try Break-up of Famed Camel Club Demonstration

PIGSKIN PETERS PUNISHED

Special to "The Varsity"
Hamilton, Ont.—Those Varsity undergraduates who made the trip to the Ambitious City Saturday are said to have had an interesting time. Though outnumbered five to one by hostile Tiger supporters they refused to take a back seat. At half-time a few courageous souls attempted to break up the demonstration of the Camel Club but were speedily subdued. However in the confusion "The Varsity" saw Pigskin Peters wiping turf from his eye. It is alleged that someone even hit him with a tomato after omitting to remove it from the can.

When the crowds were leaving, a Blue supporter sitting in a bus reached out and snatched the yellow and black from a cheering Hamiltonian. Indignant the latter smote at his tormentor, but being ignorant of the fact that the window was down he smashed the glass. He was then set upon by three enraged bus-drivers and only the arrival of the police saved him from rough handling. (Continued on page 4)

TWO TOUCHES DISPUTED

Varsity's Points

By LOU GOLDEN

Bruised, bleeding and hysterical, the University of Toronto Orphans dragged their pain-wracked, exhausted bodies off the field of battle after being submerged by the Hamilton Tigers twenty-eight to five in the Eastern Canada final. The Blue lads gave one of the finest displays of courage seen in many years. Outweighed by twenty pounds per man, outnumbered and inexperienced, they matched sheer grit and fight against the finest football machine in Canada and came through "second best." The Jimmie Douglas clan was victorious in defeat. Going into the fight with all against them, they held the "Terrible Tigers" until half time and then, driving on against breaks that would have torn the heart out of any group of men, they were submerged under touchdown after touchdown.

The Mike Rodden twelve were the better team without a doubt, but they had nothing to match the pure, unadulterated courage of the "forgotten ones." The lads, giving their all for a cause that seemed lost, gained the admiration of every man on the champions' team. At no time did they stop fighting. At no time did they cry "quits." Instead they tore on and on senseless to punches, senseless to cheers, but still flinging themselves at their monstrous opponents trying to overcome a lost cause.

They were defeated by twenty-three points, but the Roddenites were not that much the better team. Two touches were gained by the Tigers as a result of questionable decisions that in one case caused a near riot, but despite the fact that the battle will go down in history as a twenty-three point difference one, they will stand out through the years for the old-timers to talk about how Art Snider, though worn with battering, threw himself at the powerful Hamilton. SHORT ENGAGEMENTS HEARTILY ENDORSED BY TRINITY COLLEGE

Both Engaged Persons Are Useless to State

MARRIAGE CALLED TRAGEDY

Contract of Opposite Sexes
To Live Together
For Life

Short engagements should be encouraged. So decided the Trinity College Literary Institute at its meeting Friday evening, when by a vote of 23 to 17 the government was upheld on its motion as presented to the house, "Resolved that this house approves of short engagements."

Mr. G. Graham, introducer of the motion, emphasized the seriousness of the question and defined an engagement as being a contract between two persons of opposite sex to live together for the duration of their natural lives.

"Marry in haste, repent at leisure" was the maxim brought forth by Mr. G. Belton, leader of the opposition forces, when he stated that people today are obsessed with the idea to do everything hurriedly, only stopping to think when their actions are completed.

A heated discussion from both sides of the house followed during the remainder of the debate in which many private opinions were given, and embryonic "Websters" gave their definitions to the term. Some members would have marriage over quickly as it is an irrational act. Others claimed short engagement periods were harmful to the working class, while one man gave the appellation of "tragedy" to marriage. Professor Fay advised a short engagement from the standpoint of society, as during the time of the engagement both parties are useless to the state.

The subject for next Friday will be, "Resolved that this house would welcome the election of a Labor government in England."

Skits and stunts, bands and basketball, parades and polo, racing and racket, swimming and supper, diving and dancing, combined on Friday evening to send the Seventh Annual Dental Noctem Cuckoo into the history of the past.

The programme opened with the inter-year basketball final, in which fifth year upheld their reputation for proficiency in athletics by defeating the fourth year boys by a score of 22-17. The skit competition for the Gaston Brule Cup then commanded the attention of most of those present. The second year band, composed of tuba, trombone, trumpet, bugle and washbub, paraded the halls advertising their midway, with all the horns playing a different tune. Meanwhile the first year men were demonstrating modern methods of Weiner manufacture, and were also holding a side-show, where interested parties might learn their fortunes and misfortunes with Koran "telling 'em off."

Fifth year was showing the latest thing in "talkies" at Chayes Theatre, featuring Hoopla and Whoopie with the same admission to all, S.P.S. students $1.00 extra. The fourth year men offered Bull Fighting and Shooting, while in the third year skit, Hoover and Smith endeavoured to sway the electors at Mud Creek, with Al. offering more beer and bigger bottles, and an annual vacation for the working man. The cup was won by fifth year.

In the swimming pool the capacity audience witnessed a variety of aquatic achievements. An exhibition of diving by Alfie Phillips, Canadian Olympic star, elicited a good deal of applause, and a water polo match with a large squash taking the place of the ball was played. The "Scandinavian Sack Trick," in which a man bound hand and foot and tied in a sack stayed under water for an unusually long (Continued on page 4)

Lantern Slides to be Used

of Address

Medical students of the University of Toronto will have an opportunity to learn of eastern diseases this afternoon at five o'clock, when Dr. C. W. Service, returned medical missionary from China, addresses an open meeting of the Medical Society in Room 111 of the Anatomy building. Dr. Service has spent over twenty years combating the diseases of the east in China, and he will speak with the knowledge of one who has seen Chinese conditions at their worst and at their best.

In the course of his remarks Dr. Service will describe conditions as well as diseases, treatment as well as diagnosis. Numerous lantern slides will be used in illustrating features of the address.

Dr. Service is at present pursuing post graduate studies in surgery at this University, after which he proposes to return to China.

This afternoon's meeting will be the first open meeting the Medical Society has held this year.

WHEN ORPHANS LOST TO TIGERS

The above action pictures show two stirring moments in the game. The upper one depicts Ray Bowdway tearing around the end with Snider just about to tackle him. The lower photo shows the same Tiger being stopped with a tackle around the neck. Can you guess the name of the player with his arm around Bowdway's neck?

ARE PROFESSORS UNDERPAID?

There are a number of statements which people accept without any amount of critical examination. One of these, which is assumed by the people of a certain class, is that professors are underpaid.

They are not. If we compare their remuneration to that received by men of equal or less capacity in other lines, we must admit, of course, that the academic experts get decidedly the worse end of the deal. But leaving out the stock arguments as to compensation, such as the long holidays and social amenities enjoyed by professors, we believe that we can adduce at least one reason why they should be contented with their lot.

Professors are possessed of a prestige, among the students within their own institutions at least, which is equal to that of a big business executive. They not only receive the respect and attention in the class-room which is their due but they are revered for their pronouncements, both in conversation with students and in the discussions at clubs.

In these discussion clubs particularly, they are in their glory. This statement applies particularly to young professors who see their chance when the meeting is "thrown open" to receive the opinions of the undergraduates. And the wretched undergraduates sit in silence while they are sat upon by somebody who has just lately been sat upon by his academic senior in some conference of weightier import. However, if the discussion club is of the proper kind it will be composed of students who are the sons of families the intelligence of which has shot its bolt with the first generation. These ninnyes are generally incapable of expressing an opinion or anything else.

And then the mystery which surrounds the comings and goings of the scholarly ones is highly effective. All sorts of highly important missions are credited to their masters by gaping neophytes. Governments, businesses, churches, all topple, stagger and gasp at one time or another, for expert assistance and rare indeed is the campus which has not supplied props for many an institution. If a professor goes on a fishing trip we immediately conclude that he has been called in to rewrite a budget or fumigate a cabinet or set things to rights generally.

Thus the esteem in which we rightly hold our instructors repays them for their weary labour and monetary sacrifice.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Poor School

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

Whatho! The men from the "little red school house" having been "severely censured" we presume everything is hotsy tosy now? We expect to see several "wraw wred wrists" where they have been slapped? We're sure no "toike oik" will resound through the stilly night for months to come? We will be able to tell a School man by his hang-dog look!

Personally, we respect the S.A.C. We also have a respect and liking for the "scholarly schoolers," but we cannot quite honestly cheer or condone such thoughtless pranking as has been brought to our notice for the past few days' period. Not that it matters what we think, but it gives us pleasure to support "The Varsity" to this extent, that we do think the W.K. (and how!) daily has the right to publish the doings of undergraduates off campus, when gathered together as such. It is more than interesting to read to what lengths of abstraction certain practical gentlemen will descend.

But, more seriously, in regard to the Shea's episode—although be it far from us to fear sleep because most people die in their beds—we should like to enquire what would have been the actual results of a panic. Had the lights been out, and a greater number of non-English speaking people present, the stage would have been set for a first-class catastrophe. Having been in several mob panics of the finest water, we can assure you it is neither pleasant nor profitable.

Boys will be boys, and they must have their fun is all very well for boys—then let them be treated as such—but since the rest of the undergraduate body has to bear the adverse public sentiment created by such escapades, have they nothing to do with the matter? School's opinion seems to be "we don't give a dam—" et, according to boys and their wacky.

If this spirit burst into overt action infrequently it might be understood but it seems rather too much in evidence. Because School have a reputation for being tough they apparently think that the public must not be disappointed.

We are not reformers seeking to redress the ills of outraged society—hence we offer no plan of retribution—but our hope is that in the future such pranks will be of a nature less than this one was. Or if they do occur, let them be more severely dealt with by the S.A.C.

Yours,

"Fed-up-with-Schooling."

A.C. Women's Musicales

"The musicale has been an unexpected success," declared Miss Eleanor Barton, president of the W.U.A., at the Women's Union yesterday. "We will certainly continue to hold such entertainments during the winter."

Mr. Scott Malcolm, the artist of the afternoon, showed his exceptional mastery of the intricacies of technique in a group of selections from Mozart, in which the thoughtful moods of the composer were most evident. The final number of this group—the Turkish March—exhibited a striking contrast to the others. Chopin's exquisitely lyrical themes were well represented by a group varying from a delicate nocturne to a spirited scherzo.

Debussy's transition from an arabesque in the classic style to his sketch in modern dissonances, "L'Isle Joyeuse," was well brought to the fore. The celebrated Blue Danube Waltz was followed by an extra number, the extremely popular "Golliwog Cake-walk."

All through this hour of music the artist's striking contrasts of limpid runs and staccato fortissimos displayed his talent, technique and possession of a depth of feeling, and it is to be hoped that he will appear again before a University audience some time in the future.

Gentle Readers, about the worst we can work up after Saturday is that something must be Rodden in Hamilton.

C-C

In case anybody wants any advice, we suggest that at the next game (if and when) just as Defeat seems to be staring our Team in the Muck, as it were, somebody hire George Lewis or Richard Dix to cauter out and score a couple touches. It seems to work pretty well in the movies.

C-C

Gosh, how we hate to fall back like this and use a sentence with the word 'fillabuster.' It seems that any party who wanted to on Saturday could fillabuster and get to Hamilton.

Friday Afternoon Recital

Miss Dorothy Wilkes rendered a fine programme at the Friday evening recital last week; it was perhaps one of the best programmes of the term. A Bach-Busoni Toccata was the opening number and this was followed by a rather lengthy group of Chopin, but Chopin does not seem to suit these afternoon recitals so admirably, and Miss Wilkes played her group in a most sympathetic manner. Perhaps the études seemed a trifle blurred by a rather injudicious use of the pedal but the lighter numbers were given real delicacy and charm in Miss Wilkes' interpretation. In the programme were two of the artist's own compositions. Such numbers are always of interest to an audience, who welcome these pleasant diversions from the regular fare of concert programmes. TIGERS OVERWHELM PLUCKY ORPHANS IN EASTERN CANADA FINAL

Sidelights On The Big Game Local Colour From Tiger Town

By LARRY DAWSON

Fashionable colours at Hamilton. Tigers—yellow and black. Varsity—black and blue.

Sock 'em in the beezers.
Poke 'em in the jaw,
Watch the little Tiger cats
Fighting tooth and claw.

Hope you had better luck than the Four Horsemen. Confiding in their trusty Ramona (raffle, 55c) these worthies left Hart House for Jungle Town. But Ramona did them dirt and somewhere west of the Humber she called it a day. The boys made Hamilton sometime around 6 p.m. loudly lamenting the four gallons of gas left in Ramona's innards.

If you want to make a hit with Al McCulloch, the Varsity snap, ask him if he likes a certain cigarette named after King George's official hang-out.

Hamilton's 400, otherwise known as the Camels' Club, had a good time. With Pig-Skin Peters doing the honours, assisted by A Orphan, a little colour was injected into the proceedings.

'Twas a glorious day in Hamilton,
All the Orphans were there
To beard the potent Tigers
And slay them in their lair.
But the mighty voice of the umpire
Went booming round the walls,
Shall I give 'em another touchdown, boys?
The Orphans answered Applause.

After the game most of the Orphans followed the old custom of exchanging sweaters with their opponents. They should have exchanged their socks before the game. The Tigers could have given theirs away and not have missed them, for they handed out plenty of them while the battle was on. You'll remember the old saying—"A sock on the foot is worth two on the jaw."

SCHOOL SWIMMERS COP FITZGERALD CUP

John Goss Stars for S.P.S.
as U.C. is Deposed in Tank

GRADS TAKE WATER POLO

S.P.S. won the FitzGerald trophy at the Annual Interfaculty Swimming Meet in the Hart House Plunge Saturday night. The School collected the grand total of 30 points, with U.C. its closest rival with 19. The other swimming teams were in the following order: Dents 14, Meds 8, Vic. 6, and Trinity 3.

John Goss was the big noise for S.P.S., equalling the record for the 50 yards free style in 26 1-5 secs. and capturing the quarter mile event in the fast time of 5:54 1-5 secs.

The S.P.S. "A" team took the 200 yards relay race. It was an exciting struggle, U.C. "B" team being a close second. The last feature on the programme was a water polo game between the Varsity Grads and an all-star selection from the University. The Grads won 4 to 2. Those who attended the meet remained to dance till midnight.

The events:—
50 Yards Free Style—Goss, S.P.S.; Pierdon, S.P.S.; Sinclair, Dents. Time 26 1-5 secs.

200 Yards Free Style—Boddy, U.C.; Glass, Vic.; Graham, U.C. Time 2:32 3-5 secs.

Fancy Diving—Gundy, Meds; Gunn, Meds; Nevitt, S.P.S.

100 Yards Back Stroke—Nimmo, S.P.S.; Boddy, U.C.; Irvine, U.C. Time 1:17 2-5.

100 Yards Free Style—Marsh, Dents; Glass, Vic.; Burchell, S.P.S. Time 1:3 3-5 secs.

100 Yards Breast Stroke—Sinclair, Dents; St. Balfour, Trinity; Thwaites, S.P.S. Time 1:20 3-5 secs.

440 Yards Free Style—Goss, S.P.S.; Marsh, Dents; Armstrong, U.C. Time 5:54 1-5 secs.

KNOX REACH SOCCER FINAL THROUGH WIN OVER AGGIES

Fast Game on Slippery Field
Knox on Defensive Throughout

Although Knox soccer team dropped the return game of the semi-finals to O.A.C. here Saturday morning by the score of 2 to 0, they reached the finals by virtue of a 5 to 1 victory on the Aggies' grounds and a score of 5 to 3 on the road.

The contest was a fast one, with Knox playing a defensive game throughout the fixture. W. Jack Rowland and McCulloch played well for Knox as did the rest of the team. Irving, the Knox goalie, played a remarkable game on the slippery field. The Aggies' goals were scored by Tommy Bett and Story, while Pritchett and A. Watt were a tower of strength in the visitors' rearguard.

By virtue of their win against the Aggies, Knox meet School in the final fixture of the league on the front campus this afternoon.

The line-up:
Aggies: Goal; Chipensnik; full backs, Pritchett and A. Watt; halves, Storey, H. Watt and Cowie; forwards, Petty, Garnet, Tommy Bett, T. Brank and F. Bett.

Knox: Goal, Irving; full backs, W. Jack and H. Davidson; halves, McCulloch, Rowland and D. Jack; forwards, Milroy, D. Davidson, Skelton, Miller and Macdonald.

Ilton plungers time after time, how Doug, MacFadyen took punishment without end and still came up ready for more, how Jerry Wood's face was blood-clotted but determined, how Al McCulloch took all that the veteran Tiger snap had but refused to back down, how every man gave his last ounce of strength to show that they could not be cowed.

Varsity counted a single in the first period and a rouge and drop kick in the second, and that ended the scoring for them, while the Tigers counted two rouges in the first, a rouge and try in the second, to have Varsity down only three points at half time. The Tigers went on from there and scored a drop, three touches and two singles to out-score the Jimmie Douglas clan in the second half. But it was in the second half, when the Tigers were tearing up the Blue line in thrust after thrust, that the losers courage showed up in its full power. When the chances seemed to be gone there was the most fight in the Orphans, and even up to the final whistle they went on trying, not content to let affairs slide. Cartwright and Knowles went on tackling with all they had, Bill Adams and Murray Scott still threw themselves at the opposing line, Bob Galloway still attempted to make holes in a brick wall, while Charlie Rudell kept seeking flaws in the perfect Tiger machine.

No one gave up. They fought tooth and nail until the final whistle tooted. In one other thing Varsity had it over the Hamiltonians. Jack Sinclair outthrewed Huck Welch. The famed Tiger kicker had to bow to the superior boot of the Blue flashy back-fielder. Jack accounted for every one of Varsity's points, and took many of the kicks on the dead run, and time and again tore through the opposing tacklers for big gains.

Teams:—
University of Toronto: Flying wing, Carrick; halves, Sinclair, MacFadyen, Elford; quarter, Rudell; snap, McCulloch; insides, Galloway, Jerry Wood; middles, Scott, Adams; outsides, Knowles, Cartwright; subs, Dou Wood, Furber, Wright, Gray, Stringer, Johnston.

Hamilton Tigers: Flying wing, Small; halves, Welch, Gibb, Bowdway; quarter, Walker; snap, Cox; insides, Denman, Elford; middles, Timmis, Baker; outsides, Fear, Simpson; subs, Leadley, Wright, Murphy, Veale.

CANADIAN PRESS DISTORTS IMPRESSION OF MEXICO

Mexico Consul-General Says Democracy There Reaching Masses

"Information concerning Mexico in the press in Canada is distorted, and gives the people a wrong impression of conditions in that country," said Mr. Fernandez, Consul-General for Mexico to Canada, who spoke last evening at Hart House to the members of the International Students' Association, on the subject of "Education in Mexico." Mr. Fernandez pointed out that under the dictator ship which lasted for thirty years up till the revolution of 1910, the masses of the people were socially and politically suppressed, and consequently, ignorant and illiterate. But now Mexico is democratic by conviction, having first been made a free people. After discussing the progress of education in Mexico upon this basis of democracy, showing how it is gradually reaching all the lower classes, Mr. Fernandez consented to answer questions concerning the subject. The meeting, which was well attended, was thrown open to discussion, and all the members confessed of the benefit they had received from the address.

ANATOLE FRANCE DEPICTED PEOPLE SAYS SPEAKER

English people were apt to regard Anatole France only as a sarcastic writer with a cynical outlook on life, said Professor Lassere, in an address to the Victoria College French Club at Wymwood last evening. To illustrate his other side and show him in a different light, the speaker told France's story of Grignollette, the street vendor of the Rue Montmartre. In this story the writer's intense sympathy for the people was shown—he displayed a marvellous intuition in his portrayal of their feelings, while still criticizing society.

This, the second regular meeting of the Victoria College French Club, was conducted entirely in French. It opened with the singing of "O Canada" in French. After the reading of the minutes of the last meeting and the treasurer's report, all in French, the President, Don Cormack, gave a short address which showed that a large number of English words had been adapted unchanged into the French language.

After Professor Lassere's talk, Miss Cook led some French Canadian folk songs and games. Refreshments were then served and the meeting closed with the singing of the "Marschallaise."

SONG NATURAL OUTCOME OF UNITED OCCUPATION

Sea Chants and Cowboy Songs Subject of Prof. Robin's at Victoria

"The unity of occupation in segregated localities was reflected in a natural development of song which broke the monotony of the hard life," said Prof. J. D. Robins in his lecture on "Cowboy Songs and Sea Chants," in Alumnus Hall, Victoria College. These songs, he explained, were the spontaneous expression of the synchronized sympathies in isolated communities.

The American cowboy era reached its height after the civil war. Restless spirits, criminals, negroes and younger sons contributed the defiant, adventurous elements that produced the rollicking "Lone Star Trail" and dogie song.

Sea songs are of an older origin, belonging to the age of sailing ships. Machinery had destroyed the need for concerted action of large numbers of men whose efforts are unified by the swing of rhythmic chants.

These are divided into two groups. The first are those sung when off duty and consist of solo and chorus parts and deal chiefly with adventure.

The second type of the chants is the capstan chants, sung while at work. A chantie leader was an economic necessity to lead the sailors in the long swinging rhythms suitable for pumping, raising the sails and hauling up the anchor. The most ancient of these, "Haul on the bowline," date back to Henry VIII. Often they deal with the girl back home, ill-treatment, grub and oar pay. The chorus was the only stable part and the leader was encouraged to improvise.

While the literary value of these genres of folk songs is negligible, they do reflect the vital qualities of primitive life and form the natural outlet of uncultured self-expression.

The recent announcement of the Flonzaley Quartet that its Twenty-fifth Anniversary this season would mark the termination of its career as a chamber-music organization was received with surprise, regret and even consternation by the music-lovers of America, who for the past twenty-four years have depended upon the Flonzaleys for unalloyed enjoyment of this highest form of musical art. Its disappearance will leave a void in the musical world in both America and Europe.

The decision of the Flonzaleys to terminate the career of the Quartet at the very zenith of its maturity and success is due to the excessive and arduous travel necessary to play an average of one hundred concerts every season, the strain of which is so great as to threaten the physical strength of the members sooner or later.

The history of the Flonzaley Quartet is closely interwoven with the history of chamber-music in this country. To-day this highest and purest form of music is more deeply appreciated in America than anywhere in Europe. This development, of which one of the great factors has been the Flonzaley Quartet, has taken place largely during the last twenty-four years.

The Varsity rooters vented their disappointment by despoiling the shop fronts and posts of the Tiger colours. They persistently draped the statue of Queen Victoria with the Blue and White, but as often as they did so the Bengal enthusiasts pulled them off. "The Varsity" saw a Toronto man accosted by a stalwart clad in a striped sweater. The latter demanded his colours as a souvenir and was answered by a right to the jaw. This seems to have been an error in judgment, for we are told that he smote an amateur boxer who felled him in the dust of King Street. By 8.30 the excitement had somewhat subsided, as most all had sought the theatres or their cars. It flared up again at the Alexandria, the local dance palace. Sundry other encounters too numerous to mention are reported, which go to show that higher education does not always have a devalorizing influence on its subjects.

After the play the Foresters and their fair friends danced in the lower rooms to the tune of a five-piece orchestra. The decorations smacked of the forests and local colour was provided by the fact that the men all wore woodsmen's attire. A very good supper was provided half-way through the programme. Pet Monkey Lunches at Head Table Makes Big Hit With Celebrities

When our pet monkey, John Millington Singe, entered the course in Commerce and Finance we made him a promise. We told him that if he did his economics well every afternoon and did not go to too many shows we would some day take him to the Head Table. And the other day John Millington reminded me of my bargain.

So up we went to the Head Table. Introductions were delayed for a moment by the storm of a heated discussion among the aristocracy. It appeared that they were disputing as to which custom had the nobler tradition behind it, heating the bounds at Balliol, or cutting classes at Corpus Christi. The learned group were being guided in their deliberations by a fearfully remarkable man, Sir Tootley Bang, an Hon. Visitor.

Sir Tootley, it may be remarked here, took a double first and then flew to India, where he made an apple pie for the Viceroy, painted his khaki-manger green and ended a gloriously versatile career by standing on his head on Mt. Ararat and dictating a five volume history of the Russian Empire. At this point the government intervened and pensioned him off and Sir Tootley, returning home, married Lady Bolmoodeley. He afterwards attracted the attention of all by throwing a water bag at Emperor Cook during a heated debate on the dole. Finally the shouting died and the troops returned to review our guest. "May I present John Millington Singe, formerly of Monkeyland (pronounce Moglin) College," I began. "Oh Syngie," cried the Warden, correcting us, "Syngie." At this hint John Millington began to warble "O Perfect Love," in the Simian tongue, casting his eyes upon the waitress. The smoothies were horrified but we smoothed the situation over. We translated the song as follows:

Yes, Yes, Yesir please
Tell me when to bend my knees.
Shouts of "Yes!" greeted the hymn and Mr. Syngie nodded his head while the Committee Men rendered the formula of Thomas Carlyle: The Everlasting Yea. "What an intelligent young man," said one official to another. "He nods beautifully," was the reply. "Where has he been all these years?" Mr. Singe further increased his popularity by writing us an abusive note in Simian in which he said that we were a bum and a nogood.

So at the price of our friendship John Millington has obtained the support of a small and select group who are going to support him for the House Committee at the next elections. Then he will get himself a couple of duckets for the Maquerade which is more than some poor monkeys get during their career here.

Suffocated

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
I am suffocated and it is not the suffocation of a moment but one that has been gathering force throughout my underground life. Day by day I used to sit in lecture rooms in University College, the light streaming over our right shoulder, but no air streamed with the light. Gradually I decided that the mental befuddlement resulting from fifty minutes packed in an air-tight room, more than counteracted the benefit derived from the lecture, so I no longer attend my lectures in U.C. But I can't avoid the library, and there, with the approach of winter, air so stuffy that it is sliceable again weighs weary heads down to the very tables. On Thursday afternoon as I entered the women's reading room I was more than conscious of the air which, to fulfil its function more desirably, should be an unfelt presence. From my chair at one end of the room I counted sixty co-eds and stopped. In the upper wall and ceiling there are six small black apertures which may or may not be part of an effective ventilation system. In that whole room there was one window open and that about two inches. The fault does not rest entirely with the occupants as it is impossible, to open many of the windows, and the lower ones when open often create an unpleasant draught. The library does own a pole wherewith the upper ones may be lowered, but just where or how it may be procured is a question.

We come to University to learn to open the windows of our minds, but how can we be in a condition to do this if the windows of the library won't open?

Yours if you Gimme Air.

One finds occasion to remark under the caption of "Disgusted," about the items added to bill of the Carls Rite. Is it not generally understood that the reader's interpretation, quite often, is directly a result of his own frame of thought? Did it ever dawn on the worthy contributor that the management does not keep their money in cigar boxes? People in tin houses should not throw can-opener. Shakespeare affords great scope for minds in quest of the doubtful side of morals and on the contrary inspiration to the greatest and loftiest men of the past and present age.

It is also to be regretted that any of your readers should link up the stolen coats of arms with a student fully clothed, relaxing in the tank. If you, as editor, could do as all your critics demand and suggest, I am sure you would not be wasting your time on an undergraduate paper.

In closing may I say that if only a few of the above writers had aided Meighan in his Blue Ruin Policy, perhaps we wouldn't be guided by a Liberal government at Ottawa to-day. Unfortunately too many provide their own order for Yellow Journalism.

VARSLITY GIRLS LOSE DECISION IN DEBATE WITH QUEEN'S TEAM

Same Topic of Debate Used

DANGER OF THE OPEN DOOR

Toronto Women Very Clever
But Not Convincing Enough

Special to "The Varsity"
Kingston, Nov. 26th.—Debating the question, "Resolved that an open-door policy of immigration is conducive to the most desirable development of a new country," Queen's, for the affirmative, was victorious over the Varsity team in Convocation Hall this evening.

The speakers for Queen's were Helen MacGregor and Katherine MacKinnon, who supported the motion, while Eleanor Clark and Mary Winspear upheld the negative for the University of Toronto.

The Queen's captain, Helen MacGregor, opened the debate. In vivid pictorial speech she stressed the glorious destiny of Canada as a young nation and the need for immigration in her several fields of potential development.

Eleanor Clark, for the negative, maintained that Canada must consider herself first and not become a convenient home for war-torn Europe; while Mary Winspear cleverly and convincingly advanced similar views. Katherine MacKinnon dwelt on the needs of a new country for a large population to share in the task of nation-building. Immigrants provide fresh stimulating blood, and this Canada needs, she said. The Varsity representatives were especially brilliant, but it was the clear convincing arguments of Queen's that brought the victory. The judges voted separately.

The same proposition was debated negatively and simultaneously in Toronto between a University of Toronto women's team and a team from McGill University, Montreal. In this case the decision went to the visitors by a vote of 63-20. This three-cornered debate is an annual fixture in the women's debating between McGill, Toronto and Queen's.

HUNDREDS OF "VARSITIES" FALL PREY TO FLAMES IN SOLEMN SCHOOL RITUAL

Emerging from the portals of "The Little Red School House" like a band of blatant and particularly bellicose bees, about two hundred School men rallied to the ennobling cry of "Toke Oike" at noon yesterday and publicly burned "The Varsity" on the front campus. The scene reminded one of a certain lurid painting, depicting heathen savages gloating over the sizzling body of some unfortunate pioneer who had aroused their neolithic ire. As the sulphurous flames arose from the pile of flaming papers, the Engineers (their identity had been reluctantly divulged, coupled with the information as to their ability to drink...) held their noses and uttered intermittent cries of "Yellow," "Rotten," "Putrid." Each vied with each to "burn a Varsity" for dear old School.

Trying to look as little like a member of the Staff as possible, "The Varsity" reporter assumed a hang dog look, but thus successfully mingled with the crowd as "one of the boys." Accosting one man who was gleefully poking the now glowing mass with a

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn.—Deadlocked by conflicting sentiment among representatives, the inter-fraternity council suspended action on the "C" average requirement ruling for rushees awaiting a report of a special committee. After a battle lasting an hour and a half, the council adjourned until Monday, Nov. 26, without a decision on the question. In the meantime, signed statements will be requested from each Greek letter house represented in the council.

Opposition to the "C" standard as being too strict for an initial measure, developed while representatives pleaded for a less stringent rule and against putting it into effect until after the winter quarter rushing.

No actual vote was taken on the measure although several speakers expressed the opinions of their chapters both for and against it.

Maintaining that 65 per cent of freshmen were below a "C" average, one representative deduced the figure that if the ruling were put through the freshman class would be eligible for rushing the winter quarter.

E. E. Nicholson refused to make any definite statement, but expressed the opinion that there was no foundation for this figure, and that it was very likely much too high.

Charges that a fraternity on the campus had solicited opinion among other groups with the intent of changing sentiment to opposition to the measure were expressed at the meeting. The charges were not taken up further, but were not challenged.

Opposition to the publicity given in this case the decision went to the visitors by a vote of 63-20. This three-cornered debate is an annual fixture in the women's debating between McGill, Toronto and Queen's.

AND DO WOMEN TURN OUT TO ROOT AT GAMES?

To what extent are the complaints that we are continually hearing of the absence of rooters at women's games well founded? Certainly the men evince no interest in women's sports, but the general opinion seems to be that the women lend a little support as the men. The lack of adequate space for rooters deters many women from attending the games.

Beryl Goettler, in speaking to "The Varsity," said: "I think the women rooters are diminishing in U.C., but heaps turn out from Vic. and Trinity, but hardly any men. The basketball is better supported than baseball because after Christmas it becomes intercollegiate."

Dot Kerr, IV Vic, said, however: "Vic. didn't support their team at the last game, but Trinity did."

Gertrude O'Malley, III St. Mike's: "There have never been heavy rooters from St. Mike's, but the support this year is as strong as usual for all the noticeable lack of men. Baseball is essentially an outdoor sport, and therefore loses much of its interest when played indoors."

Phyllis Howard, IV U.C.: "Very few women turn out, and I think it shows a lack of College spirit. In small colleges affairs are so arranged that they do not conflict. In U.C. many events are arranged for the same day and consequently sports are shoved aside."

Dot Langley, III Trinity: "The Trinity women turn out in great numbers and I am well satisfied with their support. The men turn out in 'gobs'."

"The meddles never turn out because the girls are so busy, but I don't think there are any less than other years," said Mary Jackson, III Meds.

Mabel McNeill, I Occupational Therapy: "Our teams are well supported."

In speaking for the men, D. R. Gunn, IV Meds, said there had been as yet no intercollegiate basketball and baseball games.

THE POPULAR VOTE 63-20

Supported by the unanimous decision of the judges, and by a vote of 63-20, the two visiting debaters from McGill showed last night that the open-door policy of immigration was not conducive to the most desirable development of a new country.

This debate was the annual Intercollegiate event in which teams from each of McGill, Queen's and Toronto met to discuss the same subject on the same night. Another team from Toronto upheld the negative of the motion in Kingston last night.

The speakers for the affirmative were Miss Louise McMillan and Miss Clara Gray, while Misses Isabel Alexander and Ida Greaves opposed the motion.

The first part of the debate was conducted in formal style, each speaker being given twenty minutes, and the leader of the affirmative having five minutes for rebuttal. After the judges, Miss J. Dykes, Mr. Hugh Eayrs and Professor K. W. Taylor, had retired, the house was thrown open and five undergraduates availed themselves of the opportunity to speak from the floor.

The tellers were: Misses Evelyn Crow, Anne Farwell, Helen Grant and Marjorie Winspear. Miss Margaret Spuce acted as Speaker and Miss Helen Spence was Clerk of the House.

A New Concert Hall Announced for University Settlement

The combination effect of forty none-too-gentle bowlers in one room, a violin squeaking in another, five would-be pianists laboring at as many pianos, a Child Study Group meeting for discussion, girls dancing in the club room, and the Dramatic Society attempting to practice Dunsany's "Night at an Inn"—all of which comprise an evening's activity at the University Settlement—greeted the announcement of the new Concert Hall.

Excavations have been made and the building started. The plan is to use the basement for bowling and billiards, and the ground floor for concerts, plays and clubs. The Dramatic Society, following the example of the U.C. Players' Guild, intend to present Lady Gregory's "Spreading the News" and Dunsany's play at the initial performance in the hall.

MAJOR STEPHENS OF SAAR

No National Frontiers Exist

of Value

"I was a stranger in a strange land," remarked Major G. W. Stephens, in opening his address on the Saar Governing Commission before the Foreign Affairs Club last evening. Before a capacity audience, the late member of the Saar Governing Commission and recently appointed first Canadian Minister to Japan, told in the most vivid manner of his experiences in the Saar.

"The Saar was born a child of the Treaty of Versailles and taken in ward by the League of Nations. Its government consists of a governing commission of members nominated by the League. I was appointed to represent the British Empire," said the Major. During the short expanse of his term of office, which was terminated by resignation solely, he held the offices of Minister of Finance, Minister of Food, Minister of Forests, Minister of the Interior, President of the Government and Minister of Foreign Affairs. He was forced to retire due to the pressure of overwork.

Major Stephens' advice to undergraduates was given in a most interesting manner: "If I had to live my student years over again, I would lay great emphasis on two things, the cultivation of a good memory and the power of being able to think on one's feet. The qualities in any man or any woman that make for success are gold coins in any country under the sun. There is no international frontier that separates true value in man or woman from any country."

One of many engrossing stories related by the speaker had reference to the time when he was President of the Saar Government. He wished to get into contact with the German populace which constituted by far the

International Students
Unite in Toronto

This is one of a series of articles on the history of undergraduate organizations in the University of Toronto.

The International Students' Association, the University organization for the promotion of international understanding and a broader outlook in international affairs, was founded in 1918 as Toronto became better known in distant countries and foreign students in greater numbers began to frequent her halls.

To the Canadian or resident foreign student interested the following paragraph from the Constitution of the Association will be pertinent: "The purpose of the Association is to promote friendly relationship among the students from other countries in the University of Toronto and to create mutual understanding between Canadian students and those of other countries, to study Canada from the standpoint of her political, social, economic and industrial institutions and to compare these institutions with those of the countries represented in the Association."

Such an organization as the International Students' Association is a usual feature of every university of any importance in Europe, England and the United States; an interested group of students coming together from different countries in order to learn more about each other's countries and peoples so that after graduation they may return to their respective homes with a broader outlook in world affairs and more capable of viewing and dealing with national, as well as international problems more intelligently. One of the results of the activity of these bodies is an increased goodwill and understanding among the countries represented.

Women Debaters Discuss Turnip Cooking and Racial Suicide

(By L. G.)

Material ranging from the skill in cooking turnips to the pros and cons of race suicide with relation to the domestic help problem were brought to light in the debate last evening on "open door" immigration. The subject itself was slightly mature for everyone but the last of the speakers, Miss McMillan, the first speaker for Toronto, became seriously involved with the idea that "no matter whether a man be a beer drinking blonde or a wine drinking brunette, he will make a good citizen if he wants to come to Canada!" She seemed to have lost sight of the tetratolols.

Pretty pictures and magicians' tricks followed. "Canada's tangled wilderness will be turned to fruitful gardens, minerals will come from her rugged mountains, and statesmen from her querulous immigrants." The pictures were a trifle past.

Miss Clara Gray assisted her colleague in swinging the ethnological rope of race ancestry to trip their McGill opponents on the top speed swing of Nordic, Celtic, Danish and Anglo-Saxon immigration. Miss Gray also hung out the white flag for co-education. "The education of women produces under-sized, feeble-bodied office workers, who are of little economic value, and must eventually be supported." The art of being a successful domestic is evidently preferable to an educationally-enlightened existence.

Miss Isabel Alexander, first speaker for McGill, traced most of the existent social evils to the hearty hand-shaking process of unrestricted immigration. Decrease in the birth rate, communistic propaganda, loss of intelligent control of children by alien parents, and the making of Canada into an asylum for the fanatical, illiterate, persecuted and forlorn of other lands were her main points.

Miss Ida Greaves, also of McGill, showed a comprehensive knowledge of the revolution, as well as a basis of applicable statistical facts. Size is sometimes cumbersome—e.g. G. K. Chesterton—"I do not know whether a giraffe would prove a more playful companion than a kitten, or a whale on toast more appetizing than a sardine."

The speaking from the floor was fitful and when the fit did occur it was weak. The returns were obviously drawn from uncertain data, and added nothing to the general ignorance of the audience on the policy of immigration.

MY COLLEGE 'TIS OF THEE

The students of University College have been much in the limelight recently. The men have been accused of lack of interest in the Literary and Athletic Society, their official organization, and they have to some extent admitted the truth of the accusation and have suggested ways of removing the defects of the Lit. and thus making it more worthy of their interest. The women have been accused of lack of interest in any college activity and the accusation has been able to arouse no denial and but one confirmation.

Apparently, then, U.C. women are quite uninterested in their college and its works, for if there were even a glimmer of interest among them, they would not remain passive and unmoved while the criticism passed over their heads.

The few who deplore this situation and who are anxious for a re-awakening of the college spirit of University College women, feel that now is the time for that revival to take place, for now the women of the college can unite and work together for one purpose,—that of erecting a Women's Building. We are inclined to doubt, however, that even the desire to see a new building on the corner of Hoskin Ave. and St. George St. can unite the conflicting elements in our largest college.

The students of University College are divided racially into two groups, and the larger of these groups is divided again. There are then, to all intents and purposes, three groups in the college,—the Jewish, the fraternity and the non-fraternity students. Though these groups may attend the same lectures, they cannot possibly be unified, nor can their interests be identified; the very nature of their differences must make for distinctions, which the fact that they spend a few hours each day between the same walls cannot possibly nullify.

The difficulty of unifying University College students is further aggravated by the fact that so few of them live in residence, and that the out of residence students live at such great distances from the college. Even the residence students are not assembled together but are scattered at the extreme ends of the campus. A small denominational, residential college does not have to face these problems nor do student leaders of University College seem to realize that these are at the foundation of most of their troubles.

No doubt college spirit is a very fine thing and the smaller colleges are fortunate in being so placed as to be able to enjoy it, but for University College, as the oldest,—and originally the University itself, only the larger loyalties are possible. While other colleges may rejoice in their insularity, may support their local teams, and may raise money for residence extension, we fear that the Red and White will always be eclipsed by the Blue and White, and that U.C. will always forget its own interests in those of the University.

EDITORIAL NOTE

With regard to the letter in to-day's issue, we should like to point out that there were not one hundred members at the "open meeting" but sixty-one, and that a good many of them were persuaded to come,—not because of any particular interest in proceedings but to make up a quorum. Perhaps "no pressure is to be exerted on the unwilling," but the suggestions that women students are to be asked to raise money and that the enterprise "should be sponsored by every woman" sound amazingly like some form of coercion.

The editor reminds his readers that their letters should be written on one side of the paper only. As long as that is done, letters will be printed even if the communications have incendiary results.

A series of scholarships at the Ontario Agricultural College has been made available for twenty-four first year students. These scholarships are of the value of fifty dollars each, and one has been granted to each county which will add a further fifty dollars. The funds for these scholarships have been withdrawn from the Massey estate, the income of which was twelve hundred dollars more than expected. The counties that have agreed to co-operate and add the fifty dollars required are: Carleton, Durham, Elgin, Essex, Frontenac, Haldimand, Huron, Kent, Lennox and Addington, Middlesex, Norfolk, Northumberland, Ontario, Peterborough, Prescott, Russell, Simcoe North and South, Victoria and Welland.

CHAMPUS

Some of the boys got kind of petulant yesterday and made bonfires out on the front campus; a sort of thing that the average intellect gets over at the age of eight. We would have to think that everyone in the faculty was up to that kind of business: we know for a fact, and are convinced, that there are men registered in School with a proper sense of what is fitting, just as a politician must feel from time to time an irresistible impulse to read a book. But the fact remains that by such puerile katechisming the boys are just living up to what is expected of a college man, and around here of a S.P.S. student: namely, conduct half-way between that of a Zulu impi and a Borneo baboon. The very fact that such a squirming and hollering is offered only shows that some of the accusations are itching fearfully. The gang had better play safe and stick to their own tools.

Building Drive

Editor, "The Varsity"

Dear Sir:

Please find enclosed a correct statement of the suggestion put forth at the W.U.A. mass meeting concerning the building fund drive of U.C. women. It was as follows, that individually, or in groups of their own choosing, the women should raise various sums by means of small bridges or other more original methods, not necessarily to be carried on in the college. The grouping is not to be organized and no pressure is to be exerted upon the unwilling, however, as the plan was not inaugurated by the W.U.A. executive, but approved in an open meeting of one hundred members, it should have ample support.

The editorial of Friday's issue further inferred that enthusiasm and financial obligation were, wrongly, being forced upon those not interested. The prospective buildings and their influence upon the social and athletic life of the College are not in the same class with specific organizations which can interest only a percentage of the students. They must necessarily benefit the women of U.C. and therefore should be sponsored by every woman.

I take this opportunity of asking the women of U.C. to support that which has been passed in an open meeting of their governing body.

One interested in University College.

EMPIRE: QUEEN VICTORIA

A History text alive: seven snappy scenes from the many of Queen Victoria. This is a biography play. It lacks the continuity of plot and of many characters and can only be made great by the supreme acting of the leading character. Miss Carew was capable, and she thoroughly understood her role, but she hadn't the brightness to make a memorable presentation. This Queen Victoria was not that woman who gave her name to a epoch in human history.

The character sketches as such were good. Palmerston pulled some fast ones, Gladstone was pompous, Disraeli was astute and Prince Albert was handsome and dumb. The scenery (Continued on page 4)

From out the stress of soph-frosh nights
And resolutions humbly passed
I do insist on staging fights
And getting sore before I'm asked.

KNOX DEFEATS S.P.S. 2-1 IN THE INTERFACULTY SOCCER FINALS

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Saturday's Orphan-Tigers game put the finishing touches to one of the most interesting football seasons that the Blue and White have ever had. In the Intercollegiate series Varsity made a very creditable showing, but the crowning achievement was the unexpected and overwhelming success of the Orphans in winning the laurels in the O.R.F.U. and their gallant stand against the strongest football machine in Canadian football in the Eastern finals.

If the annual examinations do not reap a harvest there will be a wealth of good material for next year's teams. The Intercollegiate had the best line in their league this season, but were beset with backfield difficulties. In 1929 it should be a different story. Graduation will claim only a few players from the two senior squads, and from those who return should be built an Intercollegiate team of championship calibre together with another victor in the Ontario Union.

Places on the 1929 Intercollegiate team should be wide open with great rivalry for every position. This year's men will have a terrific battle on their hands to hold down the same jobs. With most of the 1928 Eastern Canada finalists and newcomers strutting their stuff, Varsity will be able to field a team strong enough to overthrow McGill and Queen's.

The protest entered by St. Michael's College concerning the Mulock Cup final with S.P.S. has been disallowed by the Committee of Management of this series. The Committee passed a motion expressing itself as having every confidence in the competency and fairness of both officials. St. Michael's failed to prove their charges of incompetency on the part of both officials and partisanship on the part of the umpire. Such charges are most unusual at the University and it is well that they were not substantiated. May we point out, however, that the motion passed was seconded by the manager of the S.P.S. team as one of the committee. It might have been better if an entirely neutral member of the Committee had done so.

Scarlet and Gold Defeats St. Michael's in Baseball

Victoria College women won a decided victory from St. Michael's in baseball last night. The final score was 53-4 for the Scarlet and Gold. Daisy Quance in the pitcher's box managed to fan the Saints in a spectacular manner. Vic. has been winning every game this year, and her supporters feel confident that she will keep the cup which she won from U.C. last year.

Victoria: A. Tilley, D. Quance, M. Jarrett, M. Lindsay, E. Craw, A. Graham, A. Chorlosky, F. Wright, C. Dobbins.

FORWARDS THRILL CROWD

St. Hilda's defeated University College Seniors 18-10 in women's basketball last night at U.T.S. The on-lookers were treated to some thrills by the fast shots from the Saints' forwards. Poor combination and many penalties slowed up the game in spots. The players tightened up on their checks in the last period and lived up to the play. S. Ballard and B. Symons did some good shooting for the Saints, and M. Henderson and H. Tell did some effective guarding for U.C.

BASKETBALL TEAMS COMMENCE GRIND

Seniors Will Come Against Strong Riverdale Team To-morrow

TO-DAY CENTRAL SECONDS

Practice games have been arranged for the Varsity basketball teams. The Riverdale Grads will be the guests of the Seniors at Hart House Wednesday at 6.15. Although the Varsity squad is not fully prepared for forty minutes of strenuous play, the game will give the followers of the cage game and the management a chance to see this year's hopefuls in action. It is probable that Coach McCutcheon will use about fourteen men. Hee Craighton has gathered together a gala collection of stars under the Riverdale banner and an interesting game is promised. The fans are urged to attend.

Tuesday at 6.15 p.m. the Intermediates invade Central "Y" for a set-to with the Seconds. This year's squad will be picked from the fourteen or fifteen men who turn out for this game. Manager Spooner of the Juniors is also arranging a practice match for some time this week. These games will be the acid test and it will be a case of "the survival of the fittest."

KNOX DEFEATS S.P.S. IN FIRST OF FINALS FOR SOCCER CUP

School Forces First Half But Cannot Hold Pace Against Aroused Knox

HARD FOUGHT GAME
Score of 2 to 1 Gives Knox One Goal Lead on Round

Knox took the first game of the finals for the Soccer Cup yesterday afternoon in a hard-fought battle with S.P.S., the score being 2 to 1. This gives the Knox team a one goal lead on the round, the final game of which will be played on Thursday afternoon on the front campus.

Loyally supported on each side by a hundred or so rooters, both teams put up a game struggle on a hard and fast field. Considerable opposition was manifest on the side-lines, each "Toke Oike" being answered by a "Knox Tidabar."

School forced the play in the first half, and the period was nearly ended before the boys in the Purple and White came to life, inspired by a goal scored on them by Downing, the School centre forward. School led the attack in the beginning of the second half, with Knox playing a good defensive game. Then Knox opened up and carried the ball into the Science territory, where Davidson kicked an easy goal on a penalty shot.

From then on the battle was any-

BOXING FUTURE ROSE FOR VARSITY TEAMS

Unusual Interest Evincing Beginners Eager to Box

FENCING ALSO POPULAR

An unusual interest is being shown in boxing by beginners and the prospects seem very bright for future Varsity teams. In former years the teams have made two or three trips, Guelph and West Point being the important ones. This year, however, an effort is being made to fix dates with Rochester, Annapolis, Columbia University and the New York Athletic Club.

In the boxing there are half a dozen classes ranging from about 115 pounds to 175 pounds and the heavyweight classes G. Macdonald and McCatty, 118 and 127 pounds respectively, are in the lighter class, and "Rusty" Magee, who won the 127 pound class last year and is now entered in the 135, will have Earl Steel as an opponent. At 147 pounds Murray Wilton of Upper Canada College and McLennan will meet in what should be an interesting bout.

Bloody Kirkland seems to be almost alone in the 160 pound class, while the heavyweight ranks are vacant, making a great opportunity for some "big fighter." There is lots of competition in wrestling, which is being taken care of by Mr. Martin, the instructor. The two most prominent men are Shute at 160 pounds and De-prose at 147. This team always has lots of opposition at Guelph, where wrestling is a habit.

The class in fencing is very large, Jack Dymond being one of the best and usually taking a prominent place when the team goes to West Point.

largest section of the 750,000 people. So he announced his first German luncheon to which he invited thirty-two representative people of the Saar. Forty-eight hours before the date of the luncheon, no replies had yet been received to the invitations. The President then summoned several of the guests to his office demanding of them the reason for their tardiness. Upon receiving an unfavourable reply, he rose and declared: "When the President of the Saar Government invites you to his table, it is a command." Thirty-two guests were present at the luncheon, which broke up in the finest spirit that could be desired.

Thus did this Canadian acquire the admiration and respect of the people of the Saar, and when he announced his retirement, his famous "bowler hat" was exhibited in the shop windows as the "Crown of the Saar Valley."

Insufficient Music in Soul of George Fox, the Quaker

"It there had been more music in his soul, his doctrine might have been a more popular one," was the state-ment of Professor Knapp at the S.C.M. lecture on George Fox, whose life was the inspiration for the founding of the Society of Friends. His doctrine was a belief in a God who still inspired or spoke to human beings, because man was the temple of God. Hence his religion was democratic.

George Fox lived from 1624-1691, and was a contemporary of Cromwell, Bunyan, and Penn. Although he lived two hundred years before the passing of the English Reform Bill, he was at that early period protesting against capital punishment, slavery and prison conditions. George Fox did not favour war and his followers to-day follow his lead implicitly. "Although they are such a small denomination, they have done an enormous amount of reconstruction work since the last war."

in abolishing fraternities from the campus was voiced, as well as the opinion that if immediate action were not taken by the council that the university administration would take steps forcing fraternities to raise their scholastic average.

Ten fraternities dropped below a "C" average last year, marking one of the lowest ratings ever recorded. Each fraternity below average is being taken up separately by Dean Nicholson.

The main opposition to the ruling was expressed in the opinion that the matter was one for each fraternity to handle for itself, and that it should not be in the power of the council to dictate what men a fraternity might or might not pledge.

STRING QUARTET SERIES
HART HOUSE THEATRE

The next concert of this series takes place in Hart House Theatre on November 29th when the Flonzeay Quartet will make their farewell appearance, playing Beethoven quartet in A major, a movement from Schubert's quartet No. 1, and Schubert quartet in G major.

It was about 1843 when the first chamber music concert took place in New York. Later, in 1880, Edward J. de Coppet, a banker of Swiss origin, was one of the first music-lovers who founded a string quartet in the United States. This quartet, the forerunner of the Flonzeay Quartet, played in his home for his family and friends. In this way, he helped to create an interest for a form of music very little known up to that time. (Adv.)

KING'S CONDITION
SHOWS NO CHANGE

London, November 26.—The condition of His Majesty, King George, was reported to be unchanged at a late hour to-night. The physicians in attendance anticipate a crisis towards the middle of the week. The King was said to be resting easily with no further spread of congestion.

COMMISSION ON SAAR UNIQUE EXPERIMENT

Major G. W. Stephens Dealt with Cock-pit of Hate and Jealousy

HE LIVED IN A SCHLOSS

"The Saar Commission is the most unique experiment in Government that history recalls," said Major G. W. Stephens, Canadian Minister designated to Japan, in his address on the Saar settlement, at Baldwin House yesterday morning. A Dane, a German, a Frenchman, a Belgian and a Canadian, he explained, formed an administration to handle the thorny problem of this "industrial cock-pit of Europe" which was dealt with in "an atmosphere of international jealousy and hatred."

Major Stephens was, during his four years and a half in the Saar, Minister of Finance, of Forestry, of Foreign Affairs and of the Interior, as well as President of the Government. Although at first the people displayed enmity toward the President, yet at the end of his term he was so universally respected and beloved from his avowed principles of truth, sincerity and courage which he carried into practice that his familiar grey bowler hat was set up in a shop window with the legend, "Crown of Saar Territory" accompanying it.

"The Ministry of Forestry was one of my most delightful experiences as a Canadian," said the speaker. "We carried on a constructional policy with reference to the forests—modelled on the German system—by co-ordinating planting and cutting. All the young trees were planted by children, so that every man and woman would in future have a personal interest in them."

As Minister of the Interior, Major Stephens lived in an old medieval Schloss, and was forced to display ostentation equal to that affected by his seven lieutenants. During this period the kitchen was entrusted to the chef of ex-King Constantine of Greece. On one occasion the Minister invited 32 representative industrial men to luncheon; but two days before it was to take place no answers had been received. The prospective guests were holding conferences to decide whether opposition, in classes where men and women are consciously separated, that they are harder to deal with because of a self-consciousness is a question which may have some bearing upon the matter. In an article by Professor Hicks of the Trinity College French Department it is quoted that "In men's colleges languages and literature are popular subjects, while in women's colleges courses are successfully given in political economy and similar subjects. When the feminine proportion of a university course approaches 50 per cent, the men rapidly disappear."

Perhaps the fact that men take a university education for granted, while women have had to struggle for the intensity with which they work.

GIRL GETS LOCK-OUT

Considerable interest was aroused at a late hour last night by a pajama-clad figure on the roof of the women's residence on the west side of Avenue Road near Bloor. It was evident to the passer-by that the young lady had in some way been persuaded to go out upon the roof, where she was promptly forced to remain due to the fact that her room-mates had shut the window.

or not they should come. Finally one of them was summoned to the Schloss. "I am the President of the Saar Government," thundered the Major. "When you receive an invitation to dine at the table of the President, it is a command!" and that's pretty good for a democrat," was the Major's amusing comment.

Major Stephens' proposal for the solving of the Saar problem, namely to govern that territory by a Commission until 1935 and then to hold a plebiscite to determine its future government, was the one finally adopted by the League of Nations. The speaker described dramatically the scene in the League Council when after a lengthy debate Sir Austen Chamberlain appeared at Dr. Stresemann to cast his vote for the measure "for the peace of the world," which the latter nobly did in face of opposition from the German delegation.

"You have opened the door to a unanimous settlement of the vicious question," was Sir Austen's commendatory message to Major Stephens on his Saar scheme.

try was excellent. But something was lacking.

This company has about nine good actors, and they are good, but its extras look just exactly like extras; and if two of them get together in a scene, it is sad. And this play is distinctly not for a stock company.

We have mentioned the good actors before. They are still good.

UPTOWN—THE MAN WHO LAUGHS

This gripping screen translation of Hugo's novel is one of the best pictures we have seen this season. The acting of Conrad Veidt (who does the laughing) is in itself enough to commend it to theatre-goers, and he is supported by an excellent cast of which Mary Philbin manages to look very beautiful and the Bacalanova very wicked. There are some unusual love scenes between the blind girl and the disguised mountebank, though they are somewhat marred by the voice of a lady singing a love-song over that regrettable instrument, the moviephone.

The crowning touch of the picture is that the blind girl does not fall down and bump her head, thus regaining her sight.

On the stage Jack Arthur has gone collegiate again and does very well with the assistance of the faired chorus of damsels we have gazed upon in many moons.

Messrs. Gimple and Squeech, very enthusiastically: Order, Order!

Mr. Blooch: C'mon, fellas, we got to get going. I remember when I was up at camp. . . .

CHAIRMAN, sternly: Order!

Messrs. Gimple and Squeech, proudly: Shhhhh!

CHAIRMAN, staccato: Will seek-kertness read minutes?

The minutes are read mechanically, like stock quotations on the radio.

CHAIRMAN, pessimistically: Nek-kertions?

Mr. Blooch: Shouldn't the word "of" come in the first part of Part V?

Mr. Blooch: Move the minutes be adopted.

VICTORIA

The offering at the Victoria this week, "That Girl Patsy," is a very good evening's entertainment, which is a great deal to say about any show. The play is the usual hokum about the little slum girl who is taken into the capitalist's home and in three short months justifies the experiment by saving his daughter from a blackmail, keeping silent to shield her, refusing his son's proposal and incidentally keeping us all amused. The comedy parts were the high lights of the play, the emotional scenes leaving us cold, but we are hard-boiled and when the heart-strings were being stirred in the good old way we heard sniffling in the crowd. Helen Kingsley as Patsy was the best, as a leading lady should be. Ernest Woodward as Warren Jr. did not have much scope for his powers, and on the night's performance was outshone by Louis Scott and Rupert MacLeod. As an undergraduate we objected to the burlesque of a professor by Jack Soanes, but don't let that keep you away.

Victoria Players in "That Girl Patsy" at the Victoria

Next Week

Another great theatrical success, "That Girl Patsy," has been chosen as the attraction of the Victoria Players for their second week's offering at the Victoria Theatre. This all-star company of stock players proved a big hit with Toronto theatre-goers last week when they presented "Naughty Cinderella" as their first production at the local playhouse.

In part of Patsy, which is the story of a girl who is the most beautiful girl in the next week in the presentation of the new comedy success, "That Girl Patsy," by Sammie Nichols, Miss Helen Kingsley, charming leading lady of the players, will be seen in one of the most delightful stage characters which has been seen here in many months. Patsy is a lovable, whimsical product of the east side of New York, a young girl in whom is all the irresistible humor, quaint logic and uncontradictable devilment of such a character. Miss Kingsley says she has literally fallen in love with the part and, in order that it may be as true to life as possible, after considerable effort has succeeded in locating her prototype in this city.

Playing opposite to Miss Kingsley is Ernest Woodward. The supporting cast consists of Jean Hartigan, Louis Scott, Edward Blaine, Vada Kow, Helen Robinson and Jack Soanes. The company will be under direction of Claude Miller. There will be matinees Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday. (Adv.)

No. 43

CHAIR FOR SPEAKER TO BE UNVEILED AT HART HOUSE

Rev. Canon Cody, D.D., Will Take Part in Most Impressive Ceremony To-night

IN MEMORY OF SON

Hon. H. C. Price to be Present and Will Speak at Club Debate

At the Hart House debate to be held in the Lecture Room to-night an impressive ceremony will occupy the first place on the programme when the new Speaker's chair will be presented to Hart House by Rev. Canon Cody, D.D., Chairman of the Board of Governors of the University, in memory of his son, the late Maurice Cody.

The Speaker on entering the house will take his seat in a chair temporarily placed before the one to be unveiled, and will give the floor of the house to the Warden for the purpose of explaining the first order of business.

Rev. Dr. Cody will then be called upon for a brief statement, after which the temporary chair will be removed and he will perform the ceremony of unveiling the new Chair. As soon as the Speaker of the House has taken his seat in the Speaker's Chair a vote of appreciation will be moved from the Conservative side of the House and seconded by a member from the opposite side. Upon the presentation of the resolution members of the House will stand to signify their approval of the motion, whereupon the Speaker will formally accept the Chair on behalf of the House.

The meeting will then proceed to discuss the question, "That this House has every confidence in His Majesty's government in Ontario," which will be moved by Mr. D. D. Guna of Trinity College.

The Hon. H. C. Price, Attorney General of Ontario, will be present as an honorary visitor to take part in the debate. The tellers for the Ayes will be Mr. C. L. M. Douglas of Trinity and Mr. B. D. Beamish of University College, and for the Nays Mr. A. H. Arrell of Victoria and Mr. R. B. Rochester of S.P.S.

OPINIONS ON TOPIC OF 'COLLEGE SPIRIT'

Many Think that in University College No Artificial Barriers

SAY LEADER IS WANTED

"No, I do not agree with the editorial in to-day's paper," was the statement of one non-fraternity junior when questioned by "The Varsity" yesterday. "If we keep on saying that University College has no spirit we will never get anywhere. If everybody finds safety in numbers and keeps on saying University College is so big that it lacks spirit, we will never buck up. If you talk to any of the girls, you will find that they will have the right idea. All they need is someone to lead them."

One co-ed when expressing her opinion, stated: "I do not approve of sororities, especially in a democratic country. We are all supposed to be a unit, and why should we have little secret groups that hold themselves distinct and aloof from all University groups? I think it's directly against University spirit, which should stand

DECLARES CANADIANS ARE NOT UNDERSTOOD BY AMERICAN PEOPLE

Hon. Mr. Justice W. R. Riddell
Was Speaker at Engineers' Annual Dinner

CANADA'S RELATIONS

Speaker Declares That Canada and Empire Both Have Need for Each Other

"You can't get an American to understand Canada or Canadians. They can't do it; they are constitutionally incapable of it." Such was the declaration of the Hon. Mr. Justice W. R. Riddell, speaking at the Annual School Dinner at Hart House last night.

Asserting that an engineer was a man whose duty it is to find out the fact that he must define what "is" as against what "seems," Mr. Justice Riddell declared: "There is more rubbish talked in public affairs than anything else you can think of. We English-speaking people don't care a tuppence about a theory. Your Frenchman will fight five duels before breakfast for one. But what the Englishman asks is, 'Does it work well?'"

Mr. Justice Riddell outlined the history of Canada's international and international relations, speaking of the "silver cord, more binding than an iron chain," which held the British Empire together. "Canada," he said, "cannot stand without the Empire; the Empire would not be what it is without Canada."

"Englishmen are not fools, although they may pretend to be sometimes. We hear much of England's 'muddling through.' When did England ever muddle through? Self-government had not been 'wring' from the Mother Country, he asserted.

He exhorted the Schoolmen, as they went into the world, to shoulder the political responsibility which was theirs as engineers and trained minds. People had often tried to insult him by saying he had been a politician. "I am a politician," he declared, "and proud of it. No man is fit to call himself a Canadian, a free man, a British subject, unless he is willing to shoulder his responsibility."

The Annual Banquet was the thirtieth in the history of the Faculty of Applied Science and Engineering. In introducing the speaker of the evening, the chairman, Mr. J. D. Wright, claimed him as one of Canada's first engineers, since he had gained his B.Sc. in 1876.

Numerous references were made throughout the evening to "recent trying situations" and "gross exaggerations" by down-town papers and even by our own newspaper. Mr. R. B. Rochester stated: "My friends in the Engineering Society know that that which we abhor, we burn."

D. G. W. McRae proposed the toast to the University, saying that the "was the day of brain, not of brawn." Sir Robert Falconer declared that, just as a University was known by its product, so was a faculty. He spoke of the startling change in Toronto in the past few years, claiming future tasks for architect and engineer.

N. D. Adams proposed the toast to the faculty, which was answered by Dean Mitchell in a practical experiment in aeronautics, demonstrating

"The Varsity" is Again Confined To Flames

"The Varsity" again yesterday provided the material for a bonfire, lit by a small group of S.P.S. students. The burning took place on the east steps of S.P.S. at noon yesterday.

To-Day's Tag Day

The tag day is in aid of the University Settlement. This is a social service institution founded in 1910 by Sir Robert Falconer and an interested group from the University of Toronto.

Situated on Grange Place, the Settlement endeavours to give to the children of a crowded neighbourhood instruction in literature, music, sewing, art and games. A clinic is run for the mothers of the district in co-operation with the Board of Health, and the Library for the children is administered by a Public Library official.

The Settlement is supported by the Federated Charities and by University clubs, but to-day's tag day is expected to pay for a new hall which is being built. The addition is necessitated by the lack of floor space in the present house. According to the supervisor, Miss Ziegler, five hundred children belong to the various clubs provided by the Settlement, and those using the Library and other services total five thousand monthly.

WHITMAN'S POETRY SUBJECT OF PAPER BY MISS CHAPMAN

Was Only Poet Who Felt and Gave Expression to Expansion of American Nationality

WAS MISUNDERSTOOD

Wrote for Masses Who Did Not Accept Him—Works
Have Peculiar Grandeur

"There are few writers who have caused as much controversy as Walt Whitman," stated Miss Agatha Chapman in her paper on this poet, before the U.C. Women's Literary Society last night.

Miss Chapman showed that Whitman's poetry was reminiscent of Wordsworth, though she felt that he could not be fitted into the mould of the Old World.

Whitman's philosophy dominated his work, both prose and poetry. His great sense of democracy and his ardent belief in America are outstanding features. No poet felt like Whitman the expanding American nationality, nor expressed it. He had a keen sense of the oneness of man and of nature and the fact that the universe is one great unity, though he does not try to explain it. He realizes the futility of attempting to explain God. It is enough for him to know.

The pitiful thing about Whitman is that the masses for whom he wrote did not accept him, and the scholars for whom he had no thought, did. It was not until after the Civil War that his best work appeared, and from an early age Walt Whitman was a seer at war. The mass of his work is not beautiful but has its own grandeur. He has claims to greatness for two reasons: he is a spokesman of democracy and few of his poems are perfect.

A discussion on Whitman and free verse ended an interesting meeting.

VARSITY REPORTERS' STAFF HOLD SUCCESSFUL DANCE

At their annual Fall Staff Dance held last night, the reporters, feature writers and editors of "The Varsity" for a brief space escaped from the remonstrances of faculties suffering from alleged libel and persecution.

Monkeys and beer bottles for novelties, an original lucky number dance, a Paul Jones that really worked, college yells from all faculties from S.P.S. to Household Science, and an orchestra that seemed to enjoy itself as much as the dancers, all increased the hilarity of the evening.

As on all such occasions the affair was a "Dutch Date," and strictly informal. The committee in charge consisted of Miss H. Allen, Miss Grace Burnill, J. K. Harris and F. J. MacNamara.

HART HOUSE ARTIST GAVE DEMONSTRATION OF MAKE-UP SECRETS

Mr. Edgar Stone Entertained
U.C. Players' Guild Yesterday Afternoon

CLEVER EFFECTS PRODUCED

Amateurs Shown How Work is Done with as Little Make-up as Possible

The U.C. Players' Guild was greatly favoured yesterday afternoon by Edgar Stone, the well-known Hart House actor and artist, in make-up. Mr. Stone gave a most remarkable explanation and demonstration of the art of metamorphosing Mr. Smith of Toronto, finally, into an Eastern tyrant.

"It will be remembered that Lyndon Smith's splendid make-up as Cyrano de Bergerac was the work of Mr. Stone. This character, said Mr. Stone in the course of his remarks, was one who became constantly and visibly older during the course of the play, demanding a constant addition to his make-up. He explained how the semblance of age is given first by stroking in the natural wrinkles with a soft lead-pencil, by drawing inverted triangles beneath the eyes, and for greater age by drawing in the lines of the cheeks, not in black as most amateurs do, but in red.

As the character becomes still older and the cheeks are hollowed the effect is gained by rubbing a little mixed red and grey in the centre of the cheeks and gradually spreading it outwards, and by bluing or graying the eyelids more heavily. Regarding eyebrows, said Mr. Stone, women should be given a clear sweep, a fairly straight line, regardless of their natural shape, while men should be given their own eyebrows as nearly as possible.

Mr. Stone demonstrated a juvenile make-up on male and female subjects, and gradually increased the age, showing in a startling fashion what change may be effected by little skillful touches.

One of the most interesting make-ups of the afternoon was that of Kira, a character in the forthcoming Japanese production of the Guild, "The Faithful." Mr. Stone took the actor who is to play that part and by a few cunning manoeuvres transformed him into an Oriental, into a Japanese, into a Japanese gentleman, into a cruel Japanese gentleman, and finally into an eighteenth century Japanese tyrant, at which stage it is doubtful if any of his own family would have recognized him.

point which Mr. Stone emphasized strongly was that amateurs are inclined to use too heavy a make-up, striving to gain their effect by quantity of paint rather than by quality of workmanship. "Use as little make-up as possible," urged Mr. Stone, and

KNOX COLLEGE MEN UPHOLD THE PRESENT GOVERNMENT SYSTEM

Last Night's Undergraduates' Association Meeting Was Liveliest Held in Years

MANY DISCUSSED QUESTION

Bill to be Introduced at Next Meeting to Change the Constitution

By a vote of 2 to 1 the Knox College Undergraduates' Association resolved that the parliamentary form of government which is now used by the Association was for the best interest of the college. Last night's meeting took the form of an open debate and was the liveliest meeting held in several years.

J. L. W. McLean, B.A., one of the honourable members of opposition benches, introduced the subject into the House, namely, "Be it resolved that this meeting go on record as opposing the continuation of Parliamentary procedure in meetings of the Knox College Undergraduates' Association, since this form of procedure is not in the best interests of the Association." Mr. McLean pointed out that there were certain defects in the procedure by which the House was governed. In enumerating these defects the speaker stated that the method of procedure slows up the business of the Association when a great many members of the House speak on every question that it broaches. Furthermore, Mr. McLean stated we are so called a mock parliament, we make feeble efforts as parliamentarians, in fact we haven't a leader of the government, a leader of the opposition, we haven't a speaker, nor have we a parliament. We have some one hundred and twenty men in residence and only a small proportion of these attend the meetings of the K.C.U.A., continued the speaker. The interest in the meetings is dwindling.

In conclusion, Mr. McLean summed up his address in his very natural witty manner by stating, "It is time this dead carcass was drawn away and buried."

W. A. D. Barclay, Minister of Finance, opposed Mr. McLean and maintained that the constitution had been drawn up so that the members of the House might take part in governing the undergraduate activities, and also give expression to their opinions regarding the various questions which might arise before the undergraduate association. Mr. Barclay referred to the fact that each year at the nomination meeting a great many men refused to stand for offices in the Association, but chose rather to attend the meetings and advanced destructive criticism instead of attempting to offer constructive suggestions. Concluding his remarks, the speaker stated, "I believe that the mother of parliament has always exercised much thought and deliberation before reaching any conclusion, thus eliminating a great wastage of energy often evidenced where such a system is not in existence."

Following the addresses of the two main speakers of the night the various members of the House expressed their opinions pro and con on the subject.

One of the members of the opposition referred to the fact that he had passed through Eton, Cambridge and

MOTION IS DEFEATED BEFORE U.C. CLUB AFTER LONG DEBATE

Claim That Participation in Outside Activities Serves to Develop Students

EXAMPLES CITED

Premier Ferguson and Canon
Cody Pointed to as Men Who Followed This Course

"I do not believe that the executive or journalistic experience gained by partaking in outside activities is worth the time they take, from the work we come here to do," stated Mr. Frank Burton in support of the motion, "Resolved that there are too many outside activities in the University for the general good of the undergraduates," which was put before the U.C. Parliamentary Club by the Speaker, Mr. Millar. "I came here with the intention of learning Greek and Latin, not of obtaining friendships and culture which can be obtained in other places," he said.

Pointing out that Premier Ferguson, Canon Cody and others have benefited by participation in outside activities, Wally Billbrough, speaking on the negative, contended that interest in these activities was essential to broadmindedness and a better appreciation of life.

Owen Lewis, the third speaker, pointed out that, although the fair sex admire those "he" men who are rugby players, rugby and other sports take up too much of the student's time. Fraternities, party parties and dances, especially the Hart House Masquerade, are in the same class, he maintained.

"I think there should be just as many or more outside activities," said Woodburn Thomson, "because the idea of having a variety of activities is to give each person an opportunity to develop his own interests in a special line."

"It is up to the student himself," he continued, "to judge which ones he will partake in and to see that he does not take part in too many."

A lengthy discussion from the floor followed, after which a vote was taken by which the motion was defeated 6-3.

SAY SUPERVISION IS BIG NECESSITY

Many Voice Sentiments in Regard to Women's Proposed Building Drive

SMALL GROUPS PREFERRED

Are the women of U.C. as a whole in favour of the building drive planned at the W.U.A. mass meeting? About half of those questioned by "The Varsity" as to their opinion of the letter in yesterday's issue had not read it; of the rest, a few did not wish to give their opinions, and the others are quoted below.

Helen Spencer, IV Arts: "I understood the final plan to be quite different from that described in the letter. I thought it was to be a two weeks' drive, with the girls definitely organized into groups. It would be compulsory to the same degree as the initiation stunts which are divided into groups. I think it was probably the best plan put forward."

Betty Laing, I Arts: "The fact that in the meeting the women immediately squashed the suggestion that certain sums be pledged in favour of making as much as they could proves their

THE OPEN DOOR

Unrestricted immigration was the proposal for debate at the meetings of the Women's Intercollegiate Debating Union here and at Kingston on Monday night and the proposal appears to have met with some support since a decisive defeat at Toronto was offset somewhat by a victory for the motion at Queen's.

The issue was confused somewhat, as might have been expected. It is of course impossible to demand absolutely unrestricted immigration and the champions of the motion were forced to claim further qualifications besides that granted to them by the framers of the resolution by which they were allowed to leave out of consideration the complications of Oriental immigration. But even with those concessions in their favour the speakers representing our university here do not seem to have been successful in their appeal in favour of bringing out the Central Europeans on a large scale.

Their argument was that a new country such as Canada required men to do the rough work in farm and factory. These could not be obtained in large numbers under a system which discriminated against certain of the European peoples and assisted immigrants from the British Isles who would not do the work required. The ablest speech of the evening was the one given by a McGill debater who is herself an Old Country woman and who showed considerable skill in argument of the doctrinaire type against the proposal.

Undoubtedly the sharp point of the discussion here was the clash of opinion as to whether the labour unions had the right to force restrictions of the incoming population. The McGill women upheld the right of the workers to preserve their standards of living and derided the antiquity of the laissez faire doctrines begun by Adam Smith. The surprising thing about the decision is that they were upheld by an audience in Toronto where bankers and industrialists frequently appeal for more and more immigrants. The appeal of the bankers and industrialists meets the same fate as that of their fair representatives because people refuse to consider the possibility of a large inflow apart from their fear of too large a proportion of "furriners" in the state.

The opinion has been advanced that we should not worry if we are unable to attract British immigration, to the point of rushing ahead the importation of alien peoples. The men holding this view consider that we are doing nicely as it is and that we would be paying too high a price if we purchased industrial expansion at the cost of having our national tradition (the existence of which is assumed) swamped by the sudden aggression of folk ignorant of and perhaps hostile to our culture. This view is in contradiction to that of the believers of the logical expansion of industrialism who insist that we must provide a constant impetus to the system and that new customers and workers and taxpayers are always welcome in a new country. These believers are not experts in advanced economics but men who like dividends and the taking of shortcuts to obtain the same.

This melting pot idea is well exposed in its full horror in Upton Sinclair's "The Jungle." But men and women have never been unwilling to profit on the misery of others. The great line of English prophets of nineteenth century literature did not sound the call of tradition until after so much misery had disfigured the period. The problem seems to be that most people want to accumulate "Tradition" until they have accumulated the wherewithal.

Fire Away

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:—I was permitted to express my impressions of the colourful spectacle which we witnessed on the campus on Monday morning, namely, the cremation of our student paper (a few of them) by some irate School men. It was with great amusement that I saw the bonfire started by some playful "school children" who had been given a few minutes recess by their teacher. As a child, I certainly showed their capabilities. For once they did act their age.

Their methods also showed a marked reversion to the actions of primitive men. One could hardly watch their antics without recalling mythical stories of primitive barbarians or Indians, well filled with "fire-water," who used to dance and shout and perform their antics around a crackling fire in the heart of some primeval forest. They did this at times to get rid of unkind spirits whom they thought they cremated in the flames.

Art, Music and Drama

Newman Club Players

The Newman Club Players have scored another triumph in their latest presentation, "A Pair of Sixes," now being played at St. Peter's Hall.

The scene of the play, which is full of action, rollicking humour and funny situations, is laid in New York City. The opening curtain discloses a scene in the office of the Barke Digestive Pill Co., Jerry Beaudoin ably portraying the part of George Neutlton and Al Kennedy as T. Boggy Johns are partners. As a result of a card-draw in which he draws a pair of sixes, Neutlton becomes sole owner of the corporation and Johns, his valet. Miss Helen Dolan as Florence Cole delights the audience with her attempts to relieve Johns' embarrassing situation and all are pleased when happiness reigns supreme in the end.

Too much praise cannot be given to Jack Corbett, the director, and Al Kennedy, who plays his double role well. Miss Helen Dolan, Miss Elsie Irvine, Jerry Beaudoin and Gord Watson also merit commendation.

W.O.K.

THE WROMANCE OF WRIGHTEOUS WRONALD

"I am fed up with this asylum," said Ronald disgustedly, as he dropped into a chair opposite one of the older lunatics, who was playing solitaire with a deck of soda biscuits. The other looked up. "You must have patience, my boy. Here you have shelter, three meals a day and protection from the mad world. Take my case for instance. In my student days I was the editor of the undergraduate newspaper at my university. I was assisted by a brilliant staff of men gathered from all the faculties but that of engineering. The latter, who were too lazy and illiterate to work for us, began to find fault with the paper. I might not have minded that, but these vulgar people began pointing me out to their friends at lunch, and I could hear them criticizing my soup guzzling technique in loud whispers. This so played on my nerves that my hand became unsteady and I found myself spilling soup on my vest. Now I liked soup, but I hated to spoil my clothes, so I went for a while without my vest. But it was no use. The hot liquid went through my shirt and singed me. One day, in a fit of anger and resentment, I poured a bowl of soup down the head waitress' neck and then bit the leg off the table. So here I am in this so-called lunatic asylum, at peace with the world. Take my advice, boy, and stay here."

"No," said Ronald. "I have a quest. I must find the girl who hit me on the neck with a steak."

"Hit you with a stake?—a very brutal young woman. When you catch her, give her a good jab with a darning needle. But you will come back, boy, you will come back. By the way, if you want to get out climb the tree and drop over the wall into the street." Ronald began to do so.

"Good-bye, playmate," waved the nut.

"Good-bye," cried Ronald, dropping over the wall and into the arms of a policeman.

"Here, what have you been doing?" laughed the minion of the law.

"Ham-stringing canaries," replied our hero shrewdly.

"Tell it to the nurse-maid," said the cop. And away he went, dragging Ronald with him to the children's aid society.

will lecture on.

"The Law of the Octave"

in

Olivet Congregational Church
(corner Hazelton and Scollard)

November 29th and 30th

at 8.00 p.m.

With the above as a title a unique lecture will be delivered in two parts by Dr. E. J. Pace at the Olivet Congregational Church, cor. Hazelton Ave. and Scollard St., Thursday and Friday evenings of this week.

The lecture has attracted wide attention in many parts of Canada and the United States, being of special interest to students and lovers of music and art.

The purpose of the lecture is to illustrate certain well known facts discovered in the physics of light and sound, underlying the harmonies of color and of music, to which is added the Periodic Law of the Chemical Elements. The complementary relations of colors and musical chords are found to be dominated by a simple law of structure, that, strangely enough, dominates the structure of multitudes of passages of scripture. Who would have supposed that the first Chapter of Genesis, containing the account of a world's reordering, is built upon the same law of structure that obtains in the relations of complementary colors, and chords of music. But not only in Genesis one but in numerous other passages both of the Old and the New Testaments there is clearly discernible the presence of this Law of the Octave. The lecture is profusely illustrated throughout by means of stereoscopic slides.

Dr. Biederwolf, head of Lake Winona Bible Conference, said of it: "It took Winona by storm." Dr. James W. Gray of Chicago said of the lecture: "Whoever hears it for the first time will mark an epoch in his religious experience."

BASKETEERS PLAY RIVERDALE GRADS AT HART HOUSE TO-DAY

U.C. WOMEN DISPLAY CLASS IN DEFEATING O.C.E. TEAM

Brilliant Rally Overcomes Early Lead of Opponents Dale Victor's Star

The snappiest baseball game of the season was staged last night in U.T.S. gym, when University College women defeated College of Education by a score of 12-11.

O.C.E. kept the lead right up till the seventh inning, but in the crucial last half of that inning U.C. made a brilliant rally and tied the score, bringing in four runs. The game was extended an extra inning, in which O.C.E. brought in another run and broke the tie again, but U.C. forged ahead with two runs and ended the struggle.

The teams were very evenly matched, but at the last U.C. made a final spurt and outclassed their exhausted opponents. Brilliant pitching on both sides kept the game interesting right to the end. The pitchers were well supported by their teams, but Frances Dale's catching for the winners was especially notable. In spite of the extreme tension, due to the uncertainty of the game, excellent spirit was exhibited throughout.

Line-up:
U.C.: Dale, Blackwell, Elmsie, Hazlett, Hichie, Budreo, Batchelor, Howard, Hogg.

Vic.: Ferguson, Service, Bates, Jones, Keffer, McCubbin, Hays, Allan, Graham.

VARSITY SENIORS TO MEET RIVERDALE GRADS TO-NIGHT

The Varsity Senior cagers will have their first real work-out of the season in the Big Gym in Hart House to-night when they play the Riverdale Grads at 6:15 sharp.

Both Coach McCutcheon and Coach Craighton will be testing the men who are trying out for their teams. About fourteen Varsity men will be given a try-out, and as quite a number of stars are turning out for the Riverdale Grads it should be a game worth seeing. No admission fee will be charged.

St. Michael's Go Down Before O.C.E. Girls by 30-14 Score

O.C.E. girls defeated St. Mike's by a 30-14 score in the basketball game last night. The amazing feature of the game was the unheard-of turn-out of male St. Mike's rooters, who, unfortunately, seemed to be struck dumb by their own action. O.C.E. passing was positively spectacular. Jean Bateman and Helen McKim, on the forward line, did excellent work. Alice Quinlin scored the baskets for St. Mike's.

O.C.E.: Forwards, H. McKim, J. Bateman; centres, K. Runnels, K. Scoles; defence, Mary Watson, Grace Keffer; sub, M. Wallace.

St. Mike's: Forwards, A. Quinlin, O. Macklin; centres, M. Gardiner, V. Quinlan; defence, P. Bondy, E. Harrison; subs, K. Gleeson, L. McGarry.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

(By Lou Golden)

The fact that the Mulock Cup committee had to deal with a protest as a result of the Senior School of Practical Science-St. Michael's College final was most unfortunate. Still more unfortunate is it that St. Michael's College found it necessary to submit a protest.

The record of St. Michael's College has been one in sport that is far above reproach. Their reputation has been clean of the cry of "win through the committee if you cannot win on the field." Never in the history of that institution has there been a single protest in any manner of sport and they have been taking a very active part in athletics since the College's inception. What then causes them to enter a protest after competing in the Mulock Cup series since 1894?

There must be something seriously wrong. Something very much out of the ordinary must have happened to make them take a step that is so much against their regular policy.

They made an allegation against the officials, which the protest committee found was insufficient on which to order a replay. No one can find fault with an official's error, whether in judgment or interpretation. Everybody makes mistakes. The typewriter otherwise would have no use for a back spacer. But what should be impressed is the fact that the umpire in that game was partisan according to St. Michael's. Men do not go around swearing that an official coached the opposing team without good cause. And, further, there must have been something deep behind it all if the St. Michael's College officials permitted their manager to register a protest.

A bigoted official has no place at the University. He has no place on the umpire's board. If the Mulock Cup committee permits men who are bigoted to handle games in the Interfaculty series, men who are bigoted against a certain class of people, they are defeating the purposes of the entire series. When Sir William Mulock presented the trophy for competition it was meant to develop a feeling amongst the men of the different faculties akin to the feeling developed by Hart House, a brotherhood between men of different tastes and connections. Then if there be even the shadow of bigotry on the part of any one connected with the series, the purposes of the trophy have been lost.

The merits of the teams do not come into question. Although the writer thinks that School was the better team, that does not alter the case. To say that S.P.S. would have won anyway is beyond the question. But the important thing is that the foul head of bigotry is said to have raised its rotted countenance in a place where it has never existed and where there is no place for it.

Morgan Will Captain Intercollegiate Rugby

George Morgan was elected to the position of captain of the Senior Intercollegiate football team yesterday at Hart House. He will captain the team in its campaign in the 1929 season. George has played senior football for Varsity for four years and is the one remaining member of the "Four Horsemen of 1926." Before coming to Varsity he played under Jimmie Loftus at U.T.S. He has had experience at the snap back position at inside and at outside. George is in his fourth year in Dentistry.

Victoria Seniors Win Over Medical Women by 42-4

Victoria Seniors defeated Medical women decisively at basketball last night. They ran up a score of 42-4, which does not give any indication of the hard playing.

Victoria: Centre, Dut Kerr; forwards, Muriel Lauder, Reth More, Helen Hilliard; side centre, Helen Beal; defence, Norma Bateman, Jean Malcolm, Alice Muckle; subs, Helen Wickert, Doris Doyle, Anne Wengfield.

Meds: Forwards, Mary Jackson, Vera Peters; defence, Marguerite Brown, Essie Winchester; centre, Miriam Brick; side centre, Vi Henry; sub, Christine Fraser, Bliss MacQuarrie, Marian Ross, Agnes Jamieson.

FINAL SOCCER CUP GAME BETWEEN KNOX AND S.P.S.

The final game for the Interfaculty Soccer Cup will be played on the front campus to-morrow afternoon between Knox and S.P.S. The cup will be awarded on points scored on the round. Knox is now leading by one point, having taken the first game last Tuesday afternoon by a score of 2 to 1.

With such a close margin between the teams the game to-morrow should be well worth seeing. School needs but 1 point to tie or 2 to win the cup, and should put up a hard battle. Knox has no need to be over-confident, for although they have dropped only one game this season they were forced to work hard for their points against School. Both teams encountered very little opposition in their groups and are just beginning to play real football.

As far as can be learned the same line-ups will be used in to-morrow's game. S.P.S. showed up well on the defensive on Tuesday, depending on individual work on the attack. The forward line of the Knox eleven plays good combination, and it is on this that Knox depends on for a victory Thursday.

GYM SQUAD SHOWING MUCH SNAP AND PEP

Big Turn-out of New Material Necessitates Engagement of Extra Instructor

GOOD MEETS PROMISED

The gym squad is much larger than usual this year and the quality of the new men is excellent.

So large is the attendance that Mr. Barton found it advisable to engage Nat. Keefe, the English gymnast, as an assistant instructor. Classes are held twice a week and will be increased to three a week after Christmas. The freshmen are showing a lively interest and many of them give evidences of distinct ability.

The various gymnastic meets will take place after the New Year, the first one being the Interfaculty Meet on the 22nd of January. Because of unexpected reinforcements to the faculties this should be keenly contested. S.P.S., the winners of last year, have retained their team unchanged.

There is good reason to believe that Varsity will win the Intercollegiate Meet in February, but because of the new system whereby the captain chooses the team only a few weeks before the competition, it is impossible to say just what will happen.

In addition to taking part in the meets the squad will give several demonstrations. The two main displays will be at the Ontario championship and the Intercollegiate meets. These exhibitions are very useful in giving the novices practices in performing before an audience.

JR. U.C. MEET SR. SCHOOL IN WATER POLO FINAL

Finalists in the Interfaculty water polo series were declared last night at a meeting of the managers of the teams. Senior School cannot be beaten in their group and the rest of the games have been cancelled.

In the Junior group, Jr. U.C. might have been tied by Junior Meds, but have been conceded the leadership by the managers concerned.

Does Specialized Education Spell Extinction of Clinging Vine Type?

(By Dorothy Fleming)

With one question in mind, "Why is the clinging vine type of girl disappearing?" we began an investigation. And we submit that this is because of specialization in education. Wherefore we humbly offer the chronicle of our campaign, asking you to give an honest to-goodness opinion as to whether any helpless Henrietta of the nineties could endure same without a complete nervous breakdown.

Monday. Went to a show with a Meds man. A bleached blonde in the chorus sprained her ankle and Bob walked all over our best shoes trying to get there first. Waited an hour for him then took the street car home.

Tuesday. Had lunch with a Dent. He told us that soft foods are ruining the health of the nation, and made us eat rye bread and chew every mouthful thirty-two times. Deserted us to render first aid to a horse suffering from an infected wisdom tooth.

Wednesday. Teased with Ted—he's in C. & F. He can prove that two cant live as cheaply as one, and says he'll be in the stock exchange some day. Don't like farm life anyway.

Thursday. Went for a ride with an Engineer. Five little miles from town the car succumbed violently and relapsed into a coma. Got a lift to town in a milk-wagon, and left Bill seated in the middle of the road building a short-wave receiver out of the surplus parts of the engine.

Friday. Went for a walk with Freddy, first year Forestry. He kept running off and climbing trees. He called it phenologizing, or something, but we called it reversion to ancestral type. He became impaled on the top of a pine, and it required three fire-departments to rescue him.

Enough of the harrowing details. We spare you the accounts of our further experiences. Suffice it to say that we no longer marvel that the clinging vine is becoming obsolete. The great question in our mind is—would the Dutch date help solve the problem?

It so, soon may she flourish!

'SOLUTION OF PROBLEM NOT IN DANCE AND BRIDGE'

Such is Statement of Professor Alexander in Address Given Yesterday

An answer to the article in Tuesday's "Varsity" on the general spirit in University College was unexpectedly found in an address by Professor Alexander at Mrs. Kirkwood's tea yesterday afternoon.

The Professor Emeritus spoke for about twenty-five minutes on the subject of social intercourse, particularly in U.C. He remarked upon the misconception of the term "social activity" in College. He claims that the so-called "social" side of College, the dances and bridge parties, while very pleasant, do not solve the problem. They rather increase the tendency to "sort" people than to bring them together. He also claimed that the most genuine social life in the University consists in the smaller gatherings where students meet on an intellectual basis, and therefore as equals.

STRING QUARTET SERIES HART HOUSE THEATRE

The next concert of this series takes place in Hart House Theatre on November 29th when the Flonzaley Quartet will make their farewell appearance, playing Beethoven quartet in A major, a movement from Schubert's quartet No. 1, and Schubert quartet in G major.

The word "Flonzaley," a combination of Italian and old French, means "brooklet." It was decided to adopt this name for the Quartet, in honour of its founder and of the place where the organization originated, and to which it has returned faithfully every year.

The original personnel of the Quartet has remained unchanged, with the exception of Ugo Ara, who offered his services to his country during the war, and later was forced to give up his work with the Quartet through illness. His place is now filled by Nicolas Moldovan.

In 1905, the Quartet inaugurated its public career in a series of three New York and three Boston concerts and appearances in other cities, under the management of Loudon Charlton, whose connection has been unbroken throughout these many years.—(Adv.)

for unity of all members.

"If you mean by 'college spirit' love and interest in the Alma Mater, most of us feel it. But if you mean the student going out to support and take an active interest in the games, we lack it—not many of us root at all our games."

Miss Enid Walker, on being asked regarding the lack of spirit, replied, "Such utter rot! How can anyone talk about divisions of U.C. women? Is there any more democratic spot on the campus? Surely anyone who has ever lived at Queen's Hall will testify that there are no artificial barriers between sorority and non-sorority women. The spirit at U.C. is genuine to the core—not merely traditional as is that of the smaller, more residential colleges." Miss Walker cited cases of girls who have that spirit which emanates from the inside instead of from the outside.

"I agree with yesterday's editorial in that it said the college is so large that its interests become identified with those of the University at large," was the opinion of Miss G. Oille, fourth year. "Do you think that the fraternities split up the University into groups?" was the question asked. "No, I don't think they do in University affairs."

"Do you think that it accounts for the lack of enthusiasm in the drive for the Women's Building Fund?" "No, I don't," was the reply.

"Do you think nationality splits up the University spirit?" "I don't think it should and I don't think it does."

KNOX COLLEGE MEN UPHOLD THE SYSTEM

Oxford and in all his experiences he had never come in contact with such a hopeless attempt to practice parliamentary procedure as that which existed at Knox. It would be superfluous to state that the speaker was promptly squelched.

A vote of the members resulted in a 2 to 1 defeat for the motion.

At the next regular meeting of the society a bill will be introduced by D. K. Perrie to change the constitution of the K.C.U.A. in such a manner as to provide for the abolition of parliamentary form of government.

proceeded to put his precept into practice by making a haggard old woman out of a fresh young girl, with a series of tiny thin markings rather than by the wholesale daubing which is usually employed. Another important point was that women should use a lighter base—almost white in fact—than men. Lips, said Mr. Stone, are made up in the same manner for men and women, and pointed out that the upper lip should be made darker than the lower, to avoid a protruding jawed effect.

A very clever scheme for giving the hooded-eye effect of an Oriental was demonstrated: white crepe hair, previously steamed into straightness, was gummed on the eyelids, so that unless forced open they gave exactly the moustache, using about a tenth as much hair as he ordinarily used in a stage moustache, and emphasized the desirability of steaming the crinkliness out of the crepe hair before using it.

Mr. Stone strongly recommended the use of Lechner's grease-paints, explaining that almost no light could "kill" them, while Stein's, the vaudeville make-up, designed for bright white lights, were frequently rendered grotesque by coloured lights.

The finishing touches on the Japanese make-up concluded probably the most interesting and instructive afternoon in the history of the Players' Guild.

SMOKING DELINQUENT CONVICTED BY COURT AT KNOX COLLEGE

Full Fine Imposed on Guilty Member Because One Puff Makes a Smoke

USE OF DICTIONARY

Defendant's Proficiency in Art of Smoking Subject of Discussion

How many puffs constitute a smoke? This was the burning question before the court of the Anti-Smokers' League at Knox College at its last session. The sitting was called when one of the members was charged with breaking the constitution of the league.

Members of this league had sworn that they would totally abstain from smoking in all its forms on penalty of paying fifty cents cash to each of the other members of the league and thereby be reinstated.

The offender pleaded guilty to taking a single puff only from a pipe, but the prosecuting attorney charged that this constituted a smoke and that the man of one puff was liable to a fine. This point was argued at some length by the counsel for the defence, who maintained that since one drink doesn't make a man drunk, neither does one puff make a smoke. The league's counsel thought that his learned friend of the defence was getting away from the subject, pointing out that although one drink does not cause inebriation, it nevertheless would put the consumer in the drinker's category.

At this juncture the magistrate brought forth a dictionary which defined smoking as "inhaling and exhaling." The defence counsel promptly stated that his client did not in-

TAG DAY YIELDS SHEKELS FOR SETTLEMENT FUND

Generosity of Undergraduates Ensures Equipment for Dramatic Club

No one need worry regarding the generosity of Toronto students if the response to the University Settlement Tag Day is an indication. Taggers were unanimously enthusiastic, not one reporting refusals. The fact that the Settlement is a University institution seemed the motivating factor. The Settlement Dramatic Club may now continue their work with the assurance of a well-equipped stage, and students will be sure of a chair to sit on when visiting the new hall. The sum of $417.44 was raised.

ANNESLEY MARKS QUARTER OF CENTURY

Silver Anniversary Occasion for Reunion of Graduates

NOTED GUESTS PRESENT

Mrs. Harold Tovell, daughter of Mrs. Walter Massey, cut the birthday cake at Annesley Hall silver anniversary celebration yesterday afternoon in Annesley Hall, where Miss Addison, president of Victoria Women's Association, with the four vice-presidents, received many noted guests of the college.

The occasion appeared to resolve itself into a delightful reunion party, to which graduates of various years, members of the faculty, and undergraduates, all gathered to do honour to Annesley's 25th birthday.

Tea was served in the dining room by members of the senior year and representatives of the women's executives.

THE HOLIEST, NOT THE BRAINIEST ARE THE MOST RELIGIOUS

Professor L. H. Marshall Gave Talk in Hart House Yesterday

CHRIST NEVER DESPOTIC

Jesus Christ's Authority Differs From That of Darwin in Degree

"Jesus Christ is the authority in religion because he is the greatest expert in the realm of the spiritual." Thus declared Prof. L. H. Marshall in Hart House yesterday afternoon.

In the first place we must distinguish between two altogether different connotations of "authority." There is despotic authority which says that a thing is true "because I say so." There is a reasonable authority which can present its credentials on demand.

"Different people maintain that either the church, the Bible or Jesus Christ are our authorities, simply because they are authoritative. This pseudophilosophy destroys both religion and morality. Jesus Christ was never despotic and never did impose Himself or His views on anyone. Faith standing on arbitrary authority is not faith."

"Our only true authority is that of experience. Does this mean one person's views are as good as another's? One person's views in science are not always as good as another's. Does it descend to sheer individualism? Every scientist may have his own individual theories in some matters but he is always under an inextinguishable debt to all his predecessors. Does it contradict the dogmatic assertion that Jesus Christ is our authority because he is the Son of God? Jesus Christ's authority is the same in kind as that of Darwin but it is infinitely greater in degree. Does it mean that our authority is nebulous? Our authority must scientifically convince men, not coerce them."

"A statement is not true because Jesus Christ says it. Jesus Christ says it because it is true," continued the speaker.

"Not the brainiest are the most religious, but the holiest. Live the life of Jesus Christ and your religious difficulties are solved."

ST. HILDA'S BOOSTS COLLEGE SPIRIT

Early Training and Habit Turn Trinity Freshettes' Interest to Debates and Sport

MEETINGS COMPULSORY

"It is certainly untrue that it is compulsory for St. Hilda's freshettes to attend interfaculty games, debates, etc.," declared Miss Gwen Carter, IV Trinity, yesterday. "However, it is compulsory to attend all college meetings."

All women of Trinity are members of some society, automatically or otherwise. Hence no difficulty exists in raising a quorum, since at one fair co-ed expresses it—"When there's a meeting we all go along in a mob, and that's all there is to it." The element of individual interest enters here, in that everybody knows everyone else and hence is interested in their activities. The advantage of the small college is shown again on this point.

At last we have arrived at the secret of St. Hilda's famous college spirit—force of habit and early training.

OVER-INDULGENCE OF DELIGHTS OF PALATE NOT A SIN OF CO-ED

Residence Meals Sacrificed on the Altar of the Slim Silhouette

DIETERS COME TO GRIEF

"Orange and Glass of Milk" as Daily Diet Does Not Tempt Many

Whatever the faults of the present generation of co-eds, over-indulgence in the delights of the palate would not seem to be one of them. The modern flapper says she "eats to live, not lives to eat."

Do many girls in residence sacrifice meals on the altar of the slim silhouette? The inquisitive reporter ascertained the fact that a surprisingly large number do. One plaintive freshette protested: "I've gained fifteen pounds since I came down here, and if I don't do something, dear knows where it'll end. I try to miss one meal every day, sometimes two. I lost three pounds the first week I tried it. Now I'm not getting any thinner, but I'm afraid to stop for fear I'll start gaining again. Some people just naturally get fat no matter what they eat, and I guess I'm one of them."

Although apparently as slim as the heart could desire, one maiden replied: "I try to miss meals, but I can't. No, I don't think I'm too fat, but just in case I should get any fatter. Any time I miss one by accident, I feel comforted to think that's so much to the good."

In some cases would-be sylphs have gone about the business of reducing too energetically and come to grief.

Two votaries of the "orange and glass of milk" as a daily diet, reported that they got sick the first week and had to give it up. On the other hand, quite a number of peppy and fair-haired co-eds replied that they were much more likely to average four meals a day than two, and that the only time they missed a meal in residence was to go some place where they'd get a better one.

Counting calories was evidently a pastime confined mostly to those initiated into the mysteries of Household Science.

LOCKERS REVEAL DUSTY WEALTH OF LAST DECADE

Unburnt 'Varsities' and Defunct U.C. Magazine 'Patches' Reminiscent of the Past

Musty and black with the accumulation of a decade, old text books, notes, and executive reports were brought to light in the process of renovating the men's lockers in the basement of University College.

Hidden away in stuffy corners were piles of "Varsities" of pre-war and post-war vintage, reminiscent of the days when the paper was a tri-weekly, and each faculty had a representative on the staff, including two from School of Science. Old financial statements were unearthed as well as reports of executive meetings and social gatherings and of gay class-leighing parties. Grimy text-books and long-forgotten notes were found in profusion; even a November 1922 issue of "Palace," the now defunct University College magazine.

RUMOUR OF EVASIONS IN P.T. REFUTED

Only Medical Certificate Can Exempt Women Students Says Miss Coventry

DELINQUENTS DEALT WITH

"You can't get away with it," said Miss Coventry of the Physical Training Department when asked by "The Varsity" whether there was any truth in the rumour that several third year women students of U.C. not exempt because of physical disability were excused from the compulsory physical training.

She went on to say: "It is impossible for a girl registered in University College, Household Science, Medicine, Dentistry or Applied Science to get a degree without taking the compulsory physical training or presenting satisfactory medical certificates exempting her from it."

Those few who have reached third year without taking it are now on probation until Christmas and are allowed to attend lectures only on condition that their proficiency and attendance at P.T. is satisfactory to the registrar. Miss Coventry has to make a monthly report on them.

She pointed out that several had hoped to "beat" the authorities by registering in their first year in one of the colleges where physical training is not compulsory and then transferring to University College during the year or at the beginning of their second or third years, but unfortunately for them the scheme has never yet worked—they are always traced and compelled to take it.

The physical training department does not enforce the regulations. They merely report to the registrar on the work and attendance of the students, and the registrar deals with the delinquents. Miss Coventry said she did not know of anyone who had been able to get away with it, although a number have tried by petitioning and other means.

Hart House Scene of Lively Debate When Present Political Situation is Discussed

PRESENTATION OF CHAIR

A Memorial to Maurice Cody An Outstanding Pioneer in Hart House Debates

The motion, "That this house has every confidence in His Majesty's Government in Ontario" was sustained at the debate held in Hart House last night, by a vote of 73 to 57.

The business of the evening, the presentation of a Speaker's chair by Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Cody in memory of their son, Maurice Cody, was introduced by Mr. J. B. Bickersteth. In presenting the chair Dr. Cody spoke kindly of his son's interest and participation in the debates at Hart House and later at Osgoode Hall. After the chair was unveiled a vote of thanks was tendered by the house to Dr. and Mrs. Cody on the motion of D. J. Walker and B. J. Thompson.

Mr. D. D. Gunn, who moved the resolution, opened the question for the ayes. He recited his case on the record of the Ferguson administration. The speakers which followed him introduced the question of Bilingualism, Old Age Pensions, the recent educational proposals of Mr. Ferguson, and power export.

At the conclusion of the debate Hon. W. H. Price, Attorney-General, delivered an address in which he praised the speakers of the evening and discussed the questions they had brought up.

The undergraduate speakers from the floor were: J. R. Wilson, A. H. Arrell, W. E. Martin, J. W. Millar, W. Bilbrough, R. L. Fredenburg and L. M. Gelber.

C. L. M. Douglas, B. D. Beamish, A. H. Arrell and R. B. Rochester acted as tellers. The chair was occupied by Prof. N. A. MacKenzie, and Mr. G. L. Dunn was clerk of the house.

GANDHI SPIRITUAL LEADER WINS INDIA'S HOME RULE

Survives 27-day Fast for Sins of Nation by Great Faith in Prayer

"Why can't we take religion as seriously as Gandhi?" was remarked by Mr. Murray Brooks on speaking of "Gandhi" to the women of U.C. at the Union on Wednesday noon.

The people of India worshipped Gandhi as a god, falling on their knees when they met him on the street. His father was rajah, but Gandhi laid aside all claims as heir and devoted himself to the cause of India. He sent the British government a message saying that if Home Rule was not conceded, India would rise in rebellion. When the Viceroy failed to give a reply, Gandhi led the revolution.

Gandhi spread his idea by means of a school. Mr. Brooks suggested Gandhi's method of discipline to the teachers-to-be of the audience. Gandhi would punish himself rather than the boy who had broken the rule. If it was a minor offense, the punishment would mean fasting for only one meal, sometimes it was three days. The result was that his students would allow none of their numbers to cause their teacher to undergo suffering.

Gandhi was a very religious Hindu. He took it upon himself to suffer for the sins of his nation by fasting for a period of 27 days. During that time his life was saved by the prayers of his own and of his followers, who are natives as well as Christians.

Many Slain in Battle of Wits Adam Smith Emerges Unscathed

(By P.E.U.)

For over an hour last night the doctrines of Adam Smith held full sway, as budding economists expounded their party creeds at the Hart House debate from his authoritative pages. Both Liberal and Conservative quoted from him to support their diverse claims upon the attention of the House. The affirmative vote of the House was expressive of the typically deferential attitude shown to authority, whether in the form of the Prime Minister of Canada or a henchman of the Premier of Ontario.

The House reflected the varying moods of the speakers. It listened politely while Hon. W. H. Price, K.C., Attorney-General of the Ferguson administration, defended the various points of Conservative policy in the province. It laughed as Mr. J. R. Wilson objected to being described as a half-baked product and as Mr. R. L. Fredenburg, referring to the sausage-machine educational system demurred at being thought a weiner. It heard Mr. W. E. Martin's sermon without remonstrance, and had no objection when Mr. L. M. Gelber charged the government with "playing fast and loose with the sacred traditions of humane learning."

"This government is not a band of angels," frankly declared Mr. D. D. Gunn, leading off for the government. "The silence of the people" testified to the worth of the administration. Young men would dream dreams and old men see visions in it, he avowed.

Mr. Wilson took Adam Smith as his guide. He playfully scolded the Premier for failing to carry out an election promise in connection with window displays in Liquor Control

SPRING SONG

All good college papers are now reminding their readers: "The calendar will get you if you don't watch out!"

May is a beautiful month and April is fairly fine though fluid. It is therefore sad to think that both of these are spoiled by the annual "cramming" for examinations. To enjoy April and May we must study, from July and August onward. This is something that most of us are unable to do. But even now is not too late to lay out a regimen of work and observe it, approximately at least. We might then be able to play bridge and tennis between examinations, which one authority has called the normal thing to do.

This is something to think over between the periods of social and athletic activity.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Thanks

Editor, "The Varsity."
Dear Sir,
On behalf of the Board of Directors and Staff of the University Settlement, I should like to thank the members of the University for their generous response to our appeal for funds. The amount received was even beyond what we had hoped for, and for this we wish especially to thank the girls who gave so much of their time to the very necessary and distinctly chilly task of tagging.
We are hoping that the interest that has been aroused will continue, and that an increasing number of University men and women will visit the Settlement, and see for themselves the various activities which are carried on,—in particular the fun that the Settlement boys and girls are going to have out of the equipment provided by the tag day funds.

Sincerely yours,

Oliver I. Ziegler.

Dear Sir:

The Table Round

LADDIE

If I went blind I know you'd come to me
Across a thousand leagues of land and sea;
Within your arms you'd hold me tight—
Your love would be a candle bright
To fill my life with its sweet light
And guide me through the realms of night
To God's eternal day.

And, dear, I would not grieve to leave behind
This world of light if I went blind—
The golden glow of sunsets and of flowers,
The rosy hues of dawn, the twilight hours,
The blue birds in their green leaved bowers,
The grey mist shrouded mountain towers—
In memory still I'd see.

If I went blind and nevermore could know
Earth's beauties save in memory's afterglow,
Dear God on bended knee I'd crave of Thee
To grant me only this one plea—
Blind me, if 'tis Thy will to golden sunlight give
But give me power to see my Laddie's loveliest eyes
Till life is done!

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE MAGAZINE

The Literary Society of University College, in recent years, has fallen below its standard. The November issue of this magazine suggests a remedy under the caption, "What About the Lit.?" The remedy is briefly, that petty distasteful business be transferred from the Literary Society to the College Executive.

Vignettes of the Continent by F. N. Yeigh and The Art of Acting by Paul A. Gardner are two enlightening articles.

That future Canadian literature will assume a note of "grave, puritanical Anglo-Saxon transplanted to a new, northern land" is the prophecy that F.W.B. 30 makes in an article on Canadian Culture, thereby slipping a sly rap at Morley Callaghan. Geographical features of this country, its history and so forth offer, he says, an untold wealth of settings and themes for those who care to use them; and

Here's Mrs. Robinson's little boy again with a story he got in the refrigerator when the ice broke up last spring. But that's the wrong story. "And why don't you think he is the Prince of Wales?" whispered Ophelia, clutching the rail as the boat swayed. "Well, yesterday when the car stalled, he looked under the front seat."

"Give him way," growled Shorty, "his laig is broke." Two cherry pasties were jostling one another at the Masquerade. "Hey, who you pushin'?" queried Harry feinting with his left and crashing a right to the jaw. "I dunno. Tell me your name." This last repartee came from 'Arry who slew Harry with one blow of his scimitar which is considered illegal in some provinces.

M.C. Players' Guild

The Players' Guild, under the direction of Miss Isabel Godfrey, tried Shakespeare again and again got away with it. The performance consisted of three scenes from "As You Like It" and was done, if not perfectly, at any rate with that lightness and spontaneity which is rare even in professional productions. Miss Godfrey's production was as nearly as possible in the Elizabethan style, with very little stage setting and no use of the curtain, and somehow the actors seemed to catch that air about Shakespeare which makes us feel that his lighter work is not scholarly poetry but scintillating comedy.

We do not say the production was perfect. Lines were forgotten and some bits were stiff, some overdone and some weak. Shakespeare is not easy. But these people caught in large measure the spirit of the play, having which much may be forgiven.

KNOX MEETS S.P.S. IN FINAL GAME FOR SOCCER CUP TO-DAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Hamilton Tigers vs. Regina Roughriders game at Tiger Town this Saturday will bring to a close the senior football season. On the "dope" the Yellow and Black look like sure winners and should add the Dominion championship to their list of triumphs.

The minor football sections are still going strong and will be lucky to finish before the steel-blades are flashing up and down the open-air rinks.

All of which reminds us that hockey is ready to take a spot in the limelight. The "pro" leagues have been in operation for several weeks and the S.P.A. series is well under way. Varsity Juniors had a little hard luck, being eliminated in the opening game. That doesn't mean much, however, and there is no doubt that when the regular O.H.A. schedule commences the Blue and White youngsters will be a real good aggregation. Varsity Seniors play their first game to-night when they face the Argonauts at the Arena Gardens. This game will give the fans a fair idea of the team that will wear the Blue and White this winter. Varsity was most fortunate in securing "Red" Porter as coach. The former "Blue" captain and Olympic star has some good material to work with and should turn out a high-class sextet.

Queen's has made a provisional entry in the O.H.A. senior series. In former years the Tricolour was represented by some classy outfits in the O.H.A. and are out to repeat their successes of the past.

St. Michael's College has also entered the Senior O.H.A. and will likely add a great deal of interest. In the years just before the war St. Michael's was famous in Canadian hockey circles, winning the Allan Cup in 1910. In the last few years this college has made a very good showing in the junior ranks and should make themselves heard in senior.

SENIOR S.P.A. GAME TO-NIGHT

Varsity Plays Argonauts in First Game of the Season at Arena Gardens

Varsity LINE-UP STRONG

The Varsity Senior hockey team is playing its first game of the season to-night, encountering the Argonauts in a Senior S.P.A. fixture. The match is being played at the Arena Gardens, with the face-off at 8.30.

From present indications Varsity is going to present a strong line-up in the O.H.A. Senior series this winter. There will be an opportunity for the new men to demonstrate their ability to-night as a large squad is being taken down to the Arena and every man will have a chance to make good.

On paper, at any rate, this year's team looks strong. The goal-keeping assignment will again be well looked after by Murray Snyder. On the defence there will be Harry Whitehead; Bruce Paul, from U.T.S., who has been showing good form in practices, will likely team up with the Blue captain. This looks like one of the best defences that Varsity has had in years. Bill Stewart of last year's team will likely start at centre flanked by Mel Harley, another of last year's team, and Fred Murray, a promising newcomer, who starred for Newmarket Juniors last year. There are, in addition to these, a number of other players of ability fighting it out for places on the team. Most prominent among these are Macmillan, who has been relieving on the defence, Doug Marshall, a team mate of Murray's from Newmarket, and Statham, who played last year for London 12th Battery, Intermediate O.H.A. semi-finalists.

The Varsity team received a setback when it was learned that Jimmy McMullen, last year's clever forward, will be out of the game for the season owing to illness.

BRITISH RUGBY CLUB ELECTS NEW OFFICERS

The Blue and White, as City Champions Hope to Win Rugby Title Next Year

The annual meeting of the British Rugby Club was held on Wednesday and a large number of members were on hand. The elections for the officers of next year ensued with the following results:

Honorary President: Dr. Alex McKinnis
Honorary Vice-President: A. C. Burton
President: E. T. W. Nash.

RIVERDALE GRADS PRESTIGE LOWERED BY VARSITY SENIORS

Blue and White Basketeers Deserve the Support of the Student Body

RIVERDALE SQUAD CLASSY

"Will" Newman Outstanding Player But Not One Varsity Man Let Down His Team

The Varsity basketball Seniors exceeded the boldest expectations of the management and the fans when they vanquished the much heralded Riverdale Grads by the score 56-43 in the first practice game of the season. The game went further than the full 40 minutes, but the longer Varsity played, the more they lengthened their lead.

Give the Blue and White team credit. They defeated a strong collection of stars in the Grads and they deserve the support of the student body in the coming season. "Will" Newman stood out for Varsity, but every member of the team was a star and contributed in no small way to the victory.

O'Leary and Murray form a stone-wall defence, and when Sakler was substituted for either it was not in any way weakened. Capt. "Mo" Mitchell didn't hit his stride last night, but nevertheless he contributed several sparkling plays. Johnston relieved him acceptably, but it took him some time to get going. Currie also turned in a good game.

The Riverdale Grads are a classy squad, but did not show their best. Rankin, Morgan and Horton were the scoring threats and were always dangerous. But the majority of their shots came from outside the defence, while Newman continually pierced the defence of the Grads.

The teams:

Riverdale Grads: Forwards, Bacon, Morgan; centre, Morris; defence, Mitchell, Rankin; spares, McCallister, Horton, Murray, Forsythe.

Varsity: Forwards, Mitchell, O'Leary; centre, Johnston; defence, Currie, Murray; spares, Becton, Brady, McMahon, Hurwitz, Newman, Sakler.

UNIVERSITY HARRIER CLUB ELECTION OF OFFICERS

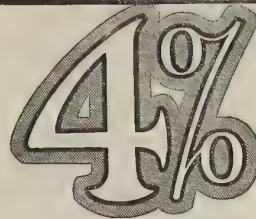

Ought O.A.C. be Eligible for Interfaculty as Well as Intercollegiate

The University Harrier Club elected the following officers for the ensuing year: Hon. Pres., J. K. Crozier, '27; Hon. Vice-Pres., R. M. Mitchell, VI Meds; Pres., J. T. Wilson, III Trin.; Vice-Pres., J. D. MacLennan, I Meds; Secy., J. A. Walters, III Trin. All of these were elected by acclamation except MacLennan.

It was the feeling of the meeting that if O.A.C. were to take part in the Intercollegiate events they should not be eligible for Interfaculty competition. During October a 30 mile relay race for the International Silver Company's Trophy was held at Exhibition Park. A team of ten men, each running three miles, represented the University. Due to the fact that the Intercollegiate meet was held on the same day, the University was represented by a B team. It was hoped that next year dates could be arranged which would allow the University team to compete in both events.

Vice-President: E. C. Knowles.
Secretary: J. N. Franklin.
Manager: H. S. C. Archibald.
Captain: R. R. Goldenbury.

The meeting was then thrown open to discussion. The progress of British rugby is marked in the University. Although the Blue and White squad lost the Intercollegiate title to McGill, they hold the championship of the city. During the season they beat the five city teams, and have a great deal of material to regain the title next year.

S.P.S. TO MEET KNOX IN SOCCER FINALS TO-DAY

Game Promises to be Exciting as Tuesday's Score 2-1 Left Knox One Up

At 3 o'clock this afternoon S.P.S. and Knox soccer teams met on the front campus in the final game for the Interfaculty Soccer Cup. Knox takes the field with a one-goal lead, having defeated the Science men last Tuesday by a score of 2 to 1.

If the Weatherman is at all consistent the soccerites will take the field under altogether different conditions from those of Tuesday. The last game was played on a frozen field, making fast going. In all probability the game to-day will be played on a heavy, wet field.

With such a close margin in the score of the first game of the round, and with the Soccer Cup at stake, both teams should put a fight that should make the game well worth witnessing.

AMEE McPHERSON DERIDED BY HALLOOING STUDENTS

Scotch University Revels in Throwing Whisky Bottles at Evangelist

Special to "The Varsity."
Glasgow, Scotland.—Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, California woman evangelist, earned a reputation for persistence here recently when she managed to make a 10 minute in the face of the most unmerciful heckling ever received by a woman preacher.

The students of Glasgow University remained unconvinced, but they paid tribute to the California evangelist. The students, waving whisky bottles, playing cards and blowing cigarette smoke at the preacher, cheered her when she finished. Union debating hall was packed with men and women students and they arranged a warm reception for the Californian. The opening anthem was, "Oh, Aimee Dear, We Love You So."

Whisky and beer bottles decorated the platform. Screaming posters extolled the virtues of whisky. "Whisky is good for your complexion," said one. "Have you brought your chewing gum?" asked another, making fun of the great American habit.

"Ladies may smoke," another poster read, and co-eds, sitting in the front row, blew smoke from their cigarettes into the evangelist's face. When she coughed, students came forward offering beer to clear her throat.

The noise was deafening. Hundreds fought to get into the packed hall, battering at the doors and crawling through the windows.

Mrs. McPherson, wiping the tears from her eyes, courageously tried to make herself heard above the din, and finally achieved a brief sermon.

Varsity TIES WEST END 'Y' IN WATER POLO, SCORE 2-2

"Len" Sewell Saved "Y" from Severe Defeat at Hands of Varsity

Varsity "A" team tied West End "Y" in water polo last night with the score 2-2. The game, which was scheduled for 9 o'clock, was played at the Dovercourt Y.M.C.A. and on account of local events was delayed until 10. Varsity played a better game on the whole, and had it not been for "Len" Sewell, the "Y's" brilliant little goalkeeper, would have scored half a dozen more points. Plenty of animosity was shown on both sides, players continually coming to the surface swinging their arms with alarming accuracy. Grant scored both goals for the University, while Millar scored for the "Y."

Sophs and Seniors Hold a Peppy Dance at Queen's Hall

The sophs and seniors of Queen's Hall held a very peppy dance last night. Pennants and cushions lavishly used by the freshies in decorating gave a glamorous air to the common-rooms. A gay evening ended with rousing Varsity cheers.

The tank was rather small and very shallow at one end, thus giving that goal quite an advantage.

The line-ups:

Varsity: Goal, Bullen; defence, Graham, Sinclair; rover, Grant; forwards, Dybbale, Glass, Thwaites.

West End "Y": Goal, Sewell; defence, Longworth, Macdonald; rover, Ide; forwards, Coy, Macmillan, Millar.

Dorothy Finds Thrilling Football Games Conducive to Sentimentality

(By G. L. Ellick)

Dear Sister Helen:

I simply can't wait any longer to tell you about the perfectly marvelous thing that happened to me at the game last Saturday. I went with Reginald. You remember him? The game itself was terribly exciting. People were always getting tripped and hurt and the two teams were drawn up facing one another and they kicked the ball around a lot. Towards the end the game got even more thrilling and there was a boy in front of me who kept jumping up and down and cheering for Hamilton, but I liked him awfully well even if he was cheering for the wrong side. But while I was doing this Reginald kept looking into my face in the strangest way. I felt that he had something he wanted to say and I looked back at him to try and read what it was, but of course Reginald has the kind of face that is so hard to read even when you look right into it.

Later he tried to say something but there was such a noise I couldn't hear him. I think it had something to do with the football game. All of a sudden Reginald took my hand and put it in his and said that there was nobody in the world who meant to him what I did and that ever since he had known me he cared for nothing except me and that when he graduated from a pass Arts course at McMaster in the spring there were several firms downtown who would pay him $4,000 a year to start and that if I wouldn't marry him he would stop University now and take the first boat to Africa . . . or somewhere.

And I said I didn't know what father would say and Reginald said he didn't care a whoop what father would say (Reginald is so manly in the way he talks) and he offered to break father's neck for me if I wished.

So I said I hadn't even meant to get married but to be some sort of a sister to him, but that if he liked I would get married this time for his sake. And just then the caretaker came to tell us that the game was over and the people had gone and they wanted to sweep up the seats.

When we looked around we saw all the crowd making their way out the gates. So we hurried over to find out the final score and then we joined in cheering for the Orphans too.

So you have no idea, Helen, how thrilling it was. I think football is a perfectly wonderful game.

our loving sister, Dorothy.

EXAMINATIONS PRODUCE NOCTURNAL MARATHON

Shortly after midnight last night, the rapid pounding of running feet came from far in the darkness of the back campus. Out of the night appeared a runner in white ducks and blue sweater, a biggish built man with curly red hair, circling the field.

"Halt! Who goes there!" challenged "The Varsity," scenting a scandal. "I can't," he gasped. The going was heavy. "In training?" "Yeah," from down the field.

"What ya training for?" resumed the interview, as he pounded out of the night on the next lap. "Examinations," came the ready retort as he took the side-walk for home, forestalling further interviews.

with the growth of a national mentality, there is bound to be a definite trend in this field.

With the last, most will heartily agree, but is it not an overzealous presumption to expect that the note eventually struck will be the one which has been heard across the sea? We are, inevitably, a neighbour of the United States. Whether or not we think its literature is permanent mushrooms when compared to the stately oaks of Britain, does not alter the case. The fact remains that there is, and is likely to be, definite influences. Moving pictures, magazines, press dispatches and so forth must all play an important part in the development of that national mentality. Even our "lovely" slang is borrowed from United States and not England.

On the other hand, it would be extremely rash to conclude that our literature will become definitely Americanized. In many respects, it is well that it should not. We can, however, learn from it. F.W.B. says it is quite possible to have a Canadian literature with two languages. We would add it is equally possible to have a Canadian Literature that may be a Continental Literature without throwing off the cloak of its Canadian identity. W.M.F.

RULES ARRANGED FOR U.C. FOLLIES BY THE COMMITTEE

Cars Approaching Hart House Must Follow Out the Arranged Routes

EXACT FARES FOR TAXIS

Skits by Each of Years Presented in Contest for New Shield

Final arrangements and rules for the U.C. Follies have been announced by the committee in charge as follows.

Skits by each of the four years begin at 8.00 p.m. This year, for the first time, the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society is presenting a shield to the year with the best year show as an encouragement to better skits. Members of the committee state that competition for the shield is increasing interest in the skits on the part of each year.

Routes have been arranged for all cars approaching and leaving Hart House. Taxis will enter from Queen's Park and proceed west, leaving their passengers at the south-west door of Hart House and then proceed south to College Street. After the dance, taxis calling for guests will line up on the road around the lawn in front of the House, and will be called by number as wanted. Each taxi will drive to the south-west door from east to get its passengers and will then turn north, leaving via the Tower and Hoskin Avenue.

Parking space may be had around the front campus, on both sides of Devonshire Place and on one side of Hoskin Avenue. A limited number of cars may be parked north of the Tower to Hoskin Avenue.

Guests are requested to have the exact fare to pay taxis. On account of the congestion which will result from the large numbers, it is hoped that guests will walk to their cars instead of waiting to be called for.

As to cloak room arrangements, ladies will use the Billiard Room and Tuck Shop Cloak Room, gentlemen using the Sketch Room and adjoining corridor.

FRENCH SOCIETY MEETS AT THE WOMEN'S UNION

M. Dusseau Delights Audience
With Two Charming
French Chansons

The U.C. French Society opened a novel meeting at the Union last night by the singing of "O Canada" à la française. M. Dusseau charmed his audience with two chansons, "Les Deux Grenadiers" and "Bonne nuit Soir." Miss Elizabeth Lowe also contributed to the musical part of the programme by a piano solo, "Arabesque."

The chief feature of the evening was a guessing contest in which each competitor was required to deduce French words from numerous placards on the walls. On the placards appeared pictures clipped from advertisements, each picture representing a syllable of the word. Many were the gray hairs reared in vain endeavours to see the connection between such diverse objects as three saws and the Prince of Wales (cigars).

FIELD OF DIETETICS OFFERS OPPORTUNITY

Dietetic Staffs Need Heads
Who Can Train, Feed and Fire Them

TRAINING MEANS SUCCESS

"The profession of dietetics offers a new field full of variety, adventure and genuine service," said Miss V. M. Ryley of Eaton's Georgian Room at the Household Science Club meeting last night. Methods are in the making and pioneering always has a mission.

Miss Ryley went on to outline factors in the work of an executive dietitian, whether she be at the head of a hospital, an institution or a commercial enterprise. The woman to succeed in such a place is the independent thinker who is not afraid of responsibility and is intensely interested in her work. Such a person can take charge most capably of all the manifold duties of her position—from training dishwashers to banqueting knights.

And these duties are manifold. That most obvious thing—the menu—is controlled by factors of nutrition, aesthetic appeal, available labour and cost. Food purchasing requires a complete system of cross-indexing as a check on purveyors and brands. Bookkeeping is an item which must be regarded by even the non-mathematical. Your staff needs caring for in an all embracing fashion, since it is for the dietitian to train, supervise, feed and sometimes fire them.

In a large institution these duties may be assigned to assistants or department heads, but in a small place they rest on the dietitian. Hence it is easy to see why success in this profession depends so largely on training and on natural ability of a broad type.

MEETING OF CHESS CLUB GIVEN LITTLE SUPPORT

Annual Faculty Versus Student
Match to be Played
Soon

The bi-monthly meeting of the University of Toronto Chess Club was held last evening at Hart House with only a handful of men turning out. The president, Mr. R. G. Maitland, III U.C., commenting on the poor attendance, said: "Interest in the Chess Club has been lagging this year, with the membership less than it was formerly. To stimulate this, checkers may be added if sufficient interest is taken in the innovation; in the meantime checkers will be purchased."

The Chess Club in the near future intends to have its annual "Faculty versus Students Match." Playing in the tournament last night were L. Warshaw against A. Goldsman. The present champion, Mr. H. Goldhamer, who came seventh in the Dominion Tournament, will meet the winner of the final game.

AMATEUR SPORT EXTOLLED

Mr. George Awrie Places His Faith on Future of Amateurs

Trinity College celebrated her athletic successes both in University and College fields at the annual dinner of the Athletic Association held in Trinity House last night. Over two hundred undergraduates, professors and visiting graduates were present and heard in series of speeches the athletic position of the college set forth, and witnessed the presentation of some two score cups, shields and medals.

"During the past three or four years Trinity has contributed more than a proportionate share to the life of the whole University," declared Provost Cosgrave. "We are in a position to foster remarkable college and university spirit. We have a small residential college with all the benefits of a famous, great and splendidly equipped university."

Continuing, the Provost declared that "Trinity has a pride in the achievements of the University second to none." Pointing to Trinity men in (Continued on page 4)

HAPPY CELEBRATIONS HELD IN HART HOUSE

Thanksgiving Day Celebrated by the St. Michael's American Club

NO FESTIVE-BIRD

The American Thanksgiving did not pass unheeded in Toronto. Last night at Hart House the American Club of St. Michael's College held an informal reception by way of celebration of the holiday. Although the "festive-bird" did not grace the table with his presence, nevertheless a more successful and happy time could not have been had.

Things started off with a "bang" in the West Common Room, where forty members of the club and their faculty guests assembled. The proteges of Reg Steeves, chairman of the entertainment committee, gave many a laugh to the audience with their antics and with Walt Welch and Earl Brady leading a songster, the boys made merry.

Numbered among the entertainers were Walt Welch, John Hallinan, Bob Burns, Fran Ryan, Mike Doherty, John Kelly, Bill Tones, "Sif" Sikorski, Lucyn Klomazowski, Ray McCabe and George Cassidy. At the close of the entertainment the National Anthem was played and the celebrants adjourned to the graduates' dining room, where delightful and appetizing refreshments were served. Father McCorkell, Superior of St. Michael's College, on being introduced to the club by Ed. Sheehan, president of the organization, complimented the American students on the interest they had shown in college and university affairs, particularly in athletics, and expressed his gratification with the large number enrolled in the college. Fr. O'Toole, founder of the American Club, and Father Muckle, American member of the staff, attended as guests. The evening ended with a hearty "Boozie Brown," "Hoikety Choikety," "Toronto" and the "Star Spangled Banner."

LITERARY INSTITUTE OF TRINITY COLLEGE HAS OLD TRADITIONS

Now Almost Ninety Years Old
It Is One of the Oldest of Our Societies

ANTEDATED ITS COLLEGE

Debating Has Assumed Greater Prominence of Late Years

Probably the most venerable student organization on the campus is the Trinity College Literary Institute. Although Bishop Strachan's institution for higher learning dates back to 1851, the Institute is said to antedate the College by ten years, since it is the direct heir of the Debating Society of the old Diocesan Theological College at Cobourg.

It would seem that the days are past when a motion such as the following could be put to the house: "Resolved that we request the Provost to allow us our beer at half-past seven on the evenings of debate, instead of at nine as before." But Trinity Lit. is still noted for virility in debate.

The debating aspect of the Institute has come to the fore as the more purely literary aspect has receded. In 1866 the first public debate took place. Subsequently the Institute joined the Inter-College Debating Union, winning the Kerr Trophy in 1920-21 and again in 1925-27, but dropped out of the Union in the latter year, alleging lack of support on the part of some (Continued on page 4)

GRADUATE STUDENTS ASSEMBLE FROM AFAR

Many Universities Are Represented by Women
Here

GREAT VARIETY OF WORK

Just what is the School of Graduate Studies and what is done by the women students there? In search of the answer to these questions, "The Varsity" discovered that over a hundred women are pursuing various studies there this year, coming from points as far removed as British Columbia and Nova Scotia, as well as from our neighbourhood to the south.

Miss Eckhart, who is taking her M.A. in Philosophy after taking her degree at De Pauw, Greencastle, Indiana, compares U. of T. with De Pauw thus: "There is a different viewpoint here. For one thing, the girls wear hats; the whole attitude is more formal. Of course that is probably because it is so much larger. The fraternities there are much more emphatic there too. I'm enjoying it here very much."

From Dalhousie comes Miss Atherton, who is taking post-graduate work in English which she hopes to finish this year. In an article which won the Willis' Prose Prize, she says concerning co-education: "While I do believe that co-education is a very good system and that it is likely to remain because it is characteristic of the friendly and intimate relations of the two sexes on this continent, I do not consider it to be the only system."

Miss Berkeley comes from British Columbia, who took her B.A. there and her M.A. at Toronto, and who is now doing work in Biology. Even India has its representative in Miss Eipe, who is pursuing studies preparatory to returning there to teach. Others, some of whom have graduated here, are taking such varied courses as history, chemistry and dietetics.

Dr. Stanley Jones, religious writer and Indian missionary, is speaking this afternoon in Convocation Hall. He is the author of "Christ of the Indian Road" and "Christ at the Round Table." Dr. Jones is closely connected with Indian religious life. Tickets have been issued for this meeting. A few are still available for students and faculty members. The interest shown in Dr. Jones' visit is attributed to his contribution to Christianity in India.

LUMBERJACKS' SONGS VARY IN SENTIMENT

Professor Robins Discusses Their Ballads at Meeting in Alumni Hall

LUMBERJACKS USE FISTS

"The Irishman is a great songwriter and his songs vary from the sentimental to the obscene with equal gusto," stated Professor Robins in his five o'clock lecture on "The Songs of the Lumberjacks" at Alumni Hall.

"They are most sentimental when alone, and most obscene when gathered together in their bunk-house," he continued.

The glamour and romance centred around the lumberjack only gave rise in the latter half of the nineteenth century. The chief centres were Michigan and Georgian Bay, older in tradition and years.

These sturdy shanty boys scorn the pistol and bowie-knife, the weapons of the western cow-puncher. Their disputes are settled by the fist, and their test of bravery, the raftsmen who will dare to break a lumber jam. The deeds of prowess related in the early English Ballad are no more valiant than those of the Canadian jam-breaker, giving his life to break up a fatal lumber jam. Nor are there more touching love lyrics than those sung by melancholy miners, mourning the loss of a faithless sweetheart, while they are trying to make a fortune.

For years Drummond's "Wreck of the Julie Plant" has been sung, although its authorship is quite unknown. To their collection these jolly woodsmen began adding mining songs, gleaned from wandering gold-seekers. Even those most unromantic beings, the construction gang and the railroad gang, have their songs, eulogising their mighty men and deifying the accursed invention the steam-shovel.

TRINITY MEN SERENADE CO-EDS AT MIDNIGHT

Proceed to St. Hilda's in Lock-step Without Any Opposition

Traditional Trinity College spirit was evident last night when on the stroke of 12.00 over a hundred men from the college lock-stepped silently up St. George Street until in front of St. Hilda's College, where a serenade was held for the benefit of those within.

After the recital the lock-step was resumed until Trinity House was again reached. There some form of mystical ceremony is said to have been performed, and the crowd separated for the night. No opposition was encountered and the whole affair passed off quietly.

WYCLIFFE COLLEGE LITERARY SOCIETY HAS OPEN MEETING

Professor Fay Speaks on Economic Conditions in Western Canada

SITUATION IMPROVED

Farmers of the West Are Now on a Level with Big Businesses

Wycliffe College Literary Society was indeed privileged to have as the speaker last night Professor Fay. After the reading of the minutes, piano solos were played by Mr. J. Tite and a violin solo given by Mr. Otdley of Wycliffe College. Mr. A. J. Jackson, M.A., then introduced Professor Fay of the Economics department of the University of Toronto, who gave a brief account of his late tour through the West. Professor Fay said he was amazed at the change which had taken place in the economic problems there since his previous visit some years ago. "There has grown up," he said, "a great organization of farmers, and not only the men, but women and young people, are taking a vital interest and co-operating as a body. Some five years ago the farmers of the West petitioned the government to give them a pool, but they were unable at the time to obtain it. Forming themselves into a great organization, they started a pool for themselves, and it has stood its ground wonderfully. They have joined education with their economic problems, and five years of work, serious thought and co-operation have produced one of the greatest organizations in the world."

Professor Fay stated that no less than one billion one hundred million dollars was handled by the farmers' pool. The pool, he claimed, was based on social love, and it goes to show that big business can be successfully run without speculative competition. The newcomers entering the West soon become at home and feel like old-timers because they have become linked up with this great organization. The farmers of the West are now on a level with the big businesses of the world, not at the expense of their fellows, but along with them. They have bound themselves together and united they stand.

In concluding, Professor Fay stated that we may have no fear for the success of the West when it is in the hands of such an organization as this Farmers' Union.

Even the loud applause from the Wycliffe Lit. hardly expressed their gratitude to Professor Fay for his instructive address. A vote of thanks was offered by Mr. J. J. Hurley and seconded by Mr. H. R. Perkins. The evening's entertainment was then brought to a close by the serving of light refreshments.

SCOTTISH REEL IS STAGED AT THE WOMEN'S UNION

Demonstrations to Take Place Regularly Every Week
From Now On

Unusual interest was aroused amongst the students in the Common Room of the U.C. Women's Union after dinner last evening. A vivacious Scotch reel was staged by haughty girls as well as sprightly freshies, who responded with vigorous hop and step to the zealous instruction of Miss Hamilton, assistant director in the Department of Service. Miss Hamilton is a graduate of St. Andrew's University of Scotland, where it was the regular custom to have Scotch reels at their Variety dances. From now on the demonstrations will take place every Thursday evening from 7 to 8.

THE SMALL COLLEGE SYSTEM

The University of Toronto prides itself upon the federation of Arts colleges, based to a large extent on the English model. An article setting forth the benefits of the federation was carried by Current History during the centenary year. A recent editorial in the Minnesota Daily made a plea for the introduction into American colleges of the English general method of university education. It is therefore interesting to read the following editorial paragraph in The Nation on a particular aspect of the English system, namely the division into small colleges.

The paragraph is worth quoting in full and needs no comment except on two points. The first is that the segregation of freshmen from the upper years is in decided contradiction to the policy which Woodrow Wilson attempted to introduce at Princeton, namely the companionship of senior and freshman. The second is that press comment indicates a reaction from the centralized and standardized plan of college education:

"Harvard University announces a gift of $3,000,000 which it has accepted for the purpose of splitting Harvard up into small colleges of three hundred men each, somewhat after the manner of the colleges at Oxford and Cambridge, with proper adaptation to American conditions. This is an extension of recent developments under which freshmen live by themselves and upper classes are more and more put on their own, freed from lectures and brought into closer touch with individual instructors appointed to supervise their reading. Decades ago President Eliot hoped for something of the kind. When the effort was made to tie the Institute of Technology to Harvard through the McKay bequest, it was his hope that Tufts College and other nearby institutions would move to Cambridge to be under the wing of the university without losing their identities as separate colleges. It is impossible to comment at length upon this radical departure until an official statement lies before us; we shall refer to it again in an early issue. Meanwhile, it is an interesting example of the way one rich man, by a huge gift, made at the instigation, doubtless, of the university officials, can alter the whole structure of an historic institution; at first glance we feel that the experiment ought to be of enormous benefit to the entire university world."

Dramatic Review

Editor, "The Varsity."

I should like to criticize B.D.B.'s review of "Queen Victoria." It seems to me that B.D.B. scarcely did justice to the play itself. Most episodic plays are most undramatic and can only be classed as entertainments. "Queen Victoria," however, in spite of its episodic nature, freely admitted by the authors, is so well-knit, the episodes dovetailed so well, that had it a decent final scene I should consider it a play. I cannot suggest a good final scene. Perhaps the present idea was satisfactory, but the scene should not have been so terribly abrupt.

As to the acting of Miss Carew, B.D.B. says she had not the bigness, by which I take it he means greatness, to make it memorable. Here he is wrong, for Queen Victoria was not great—not in any way. In fact, she was pathetic in her natural and unconquerable pettiness, and as being so she became a fit subject for a pathetic comedy; had she been great, a tragedy might have been written about her.

This week has been very exciting from all accounts. To-morrow the Cat will officially hibernate and not get up until Monday in time for a 10 o'clock.

C-C

This is also the time of year when one of their many activities should be dropped in view of the sudden realization that there are just so many days until Christmas and that the year is about one third over.

C-C

But a good many also manage to stifle the realization until April.

C-C

Well, how long is it going to be until they flood the rinks? And how many B.V.D.'s are under the bed in the old steamer-trunk? And how many red flannels are now keeping out the w.k. Boreal Blasts?

C-C

Now! And then we submit: "I believe this college is haunted?" "Why?" "They're always talking about college spirit!"

A Freshie.

Art, Music and Drama

The Private Secretary

This evening and to-morrow evening the Victoria Dramatic Society are going to present that old-time classic of the amateur stage, Hawtrey's "The Private Secretary." You must once have seen this, though it may not click at first. It's the one about the funny curate who was always counting his goods and chattels, the irate uncle from Calcutta and the nouveau-riche tailor.

The characters are about the oddest collection of creatures ever assembled in one spot, and as it is usually played, they are made to look like imitations of 999. But we understand the Victoria Players are going to do it in a modern way as if the characters were real people. This will certainly be interesting and, as the play really is funny, it ought to be good.

Flonzeley Quartet

Last night Toronto bade farewell to the Flonzeley String Quartet, who are retiring from public appearance and disbanding at the close of this season. The announcement came as a great surprise to their many admirers throughout the world inasmuch as these artists are now at the zenith of their power.

The Quartet gave the third in the series of students' concerts and were particularly generous in their programme, which was entirely different from that presented in Hart House in the evening. An hour's music, which includes a Mozart quartet and three movements from a Glazounow quartet is certainly substantial fare. The refined artistry of this ensemble which has charmed audiences for the past twenty-five years is of course beyond comment. The Mozart Quartet was superbly done with the warm shading of tone of which the Flonzaleys are capable. All the deep sentiment of the well known adagio was found in their sympathetic rendering. There was nothing of dazzling brilliance either in the Mozart or the Glazounow, perhaps because both were played with a facility and fluency of expression which were truly marvellous.

The Glazounow opened meditatively in delicate nuances and hardly lost that feeling even in the intricate development which followed. The second movement opened with an insistent statement in the first violin which formed the subject for a delightful study.

In their evening concert the Quartet played Beethoven and Schubert while the Moderns were represented by Schulhoff—surely that is sufficient indication of the outstanding ability of these four geniuses of chamber music. And now their music is to end forever and we realize our loss only when we wonder who their successors will be.

BLUE SENIORS DEFEAT ARGOS 4 TO 3 IN OVERTIME STRUGGLE

VARSITY VICTORIOUS OVER THE ARGO TEAM AT ARENA YESTERDAY

Mel Harley is Outstanding in His Play and Nets
Varsity 3 Goals

VARSITY NOW IN FINALS

Overtime is Necessary to Finish a Rather Ragged Game

Varsity's Senior hockey entry started the season right by downing Argonauts 4 to 3 in ten minutes' overtime last night at the Arena Gardens. By virtue of their victory Varsity are now in the finals for the Senior S.P.A. trophy, facing Port Colborne, last year's Intermediate O.H.A. champions.

Jack Porter's boys displayed their courage and ability when entering the third period with the score 3 to 0 against them, due to two goals by Delahey and one by Cameron, they pulled up on even terms with their opponents before the session ended. Mel Harley was responsible for all three goals. He scored the first on an individual effort and notched the second on a pass from Fred Murray. With but a minute to go, Mel stick-handled in close to score the tying goal. There was no scoring in the first five minutes overtime, but when the teams changed round, "Red" Statham, late of London 12th Battery Intermediates, put the game on ice after a nice solo rush.

The brand of hockey displayed was rather ragged. Varsity, however, towards the close of the game were executing some nice combination attacks which but for the good goal-keeping of "Stuffy" Mueller in the Argo net would have made overtime unnecessary.

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Whitehead, Paul; centre, Stewart; wings, Murray, Harley; subs, Statham, Robinson, Marshall, McMillan.

Argonauts: Goal, Mueller; defence, Wright, Irvine; centre, F. Miller; wings, Delahey, Cameron; subs, Scott, Birkett, R. Miller, R. Miller.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Yesterday was Turkey Day across the border and as per usual the pig-skin chasers took a prominent share in the activities. What is probably the most sensational play of the season featured the Pittsburg-Penn State hook-up. On the initial kick-off a Pitt back took the ball on his own goal-line and ran the length of the field through the whole opposing team for a touchdown.

This play is extremely rare in Canadian football as a result of the radical difference in the Canadian and U.S. codes. Under American rules universal interference prevails and a clever, fast runner getting good protection from his team-mates has a good chance for big gains. Under the "Canuck" rules the ball-carrier once he passes the three-yard limit must depend on his own efforts. The Pitt speedster, however, must have made a marvellous effort which recalls the gridiron triumphs of "Red" Grange before "Cold Cash" Pyle and "Red" made the plunge into the "pro" game.

In former years Thanksgiving Day produced a great deal of football fixtures across the line. But several colleges felt that this day might be celebrated in other ways and a gradual decrease in the number of games scheduled for this holiday was noticed. Many of the prominent gridiron strongholds now follow this idea, and the number of elevens engaged yesterday was small compared to the past.

The lateral pass, one of the fundamental plays of the Canadian game, is coming into its own across the border. Recently introduced, the coaches were at first wary in its use, but this season it has been responsible for considerable yardage. Canadian coaches were imported to illustrate the fine points of this play, but without any astonishing achievements. Nevertheless it seems likely that it will soon be regarded as one of the essential points of a varied attack.

KNOX COLLEGE GAINS A DECISIVE VICTORY

Though Playing on Muddy Field Knox Shows Very Good Combination

IRVING STARS IN GOAL

The Arts Faculty Cup, last year in the possession of Victoria College, was won yesterday afternoon by the Knox College soccer team, who defeated S.P.S. by a score of 4 to 1, winning the round by a total of 6 to 2.

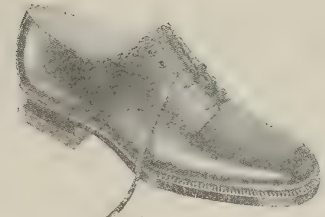

Playing fine combination on a field that was heavy with mud, the Knox forward line proved superior on the attack, and shot time and again at the School goalie. Knox played a strong defensive game in the second half, when School led the attack, and only a number of brilliant saves by Irving in the Knox net kept the score down. The Purple and White team, taking the field with a one-goal lead, pressed the attack in the first half, and toward the end of the period "Doug" Davidson scored for Knox. The School goalie was kept busy keeping the ball out in this half, and he did some good work between the posts.

In the second half Knox began the play by carrying the ball into Science territory. Helper rushed out to fall on the ball, and was accidentally injured and forced to leave the field. Skelton scored for Knox at this point. School gamely carried on with only ten players and fought like men possessed. Again and again the Knox full backs and the goalie were called to stop hard shots. Macdonald managed to slip one in the S.P.S. net, making it 3 to 1 for Knox. In the final ten minutes of play McCracken, School full back, was injured but went back into the game. Downing made a beautiful rush to score the School's lone goal. Then Davidson again tallied for Knox, making the final score 4 to 1.

At the close of the game after the champions had received congratulations from the School team, the rooters rushed forward to carry them into the college, with loud and lusty cheering.

Knox: Goal, Irving; full backs, W. Jack, H. Davidson; half backs, D. Jack, Rowland, McCullough; forwards, Milroy, D. Davidson, Skelton, Millar, Macdonald.
S.P.S.: Goal, Helper; full backs, Edmunds, McCracken; half backs, Haggart, Mackay, Franklin; forwards, Ward, Macdonald, Downing, Gregg, Riddell.

The Lovely Laura Louise Writes a Letter to Her Varsity Friends

(By D. Kendall)

The Varsity Office,
Nov. 30th.

Dear Readers:

Such a thrilling thing has happened. I am almost overcome by my emotions. I haven't felt the same way as I do now since the time I won the grand prize for speaking verses at Sunday School. There's going to be a contest and I'm it. I mean I have got it. I suppose you'd say that I am the Promoter, the Heroine and the Poor Little Match Girl, all bundled into one fur-coated Varsity co-ed.

Several of my friends (Male) say that I have an augmented personality and my inspiration to them has been something wonderful in the extreme. So I've been thinking that it isn't at all fair that I should persevere for only a mere handful of interested acquaintances. In order that my merit and beauty may be a source of inspiration to all, I am offering a wonderful PRIZE to the person who writes the best poem or limerick about me. Its an awfully easy thing to do because there are so many things that rhyme with Louise, such as tease and squeeze, but that's rather vulgar, because I don't. I'm not that specie of femininity. The prize is to be a wonderful evening at a show—with me. I do so hope that a woman wins it, because if he's at all susceptible, it will be like casting the bread upon the waters—merely an investment. If its another co-ed like myself—oh well! these things can't be helped and I suppose we can weep together over the romantic parts—I do so hope it is John Barrymore—and have a macaroon and hot chocolate together with a touch of the latest gossip afterwards.

That's all that I have time to write now, I'm so busy with doing my Christmas shopping early.

Your devoted friend

Laura Louise.
P.S. Send poems to Laura Louise, The Varsity Office, Hart House. The result will be announced next Friday. L.L.

BULLETIN BOARD

SPECIAL SERVICE

The last Convocation Hall service for this term will be held on Sunday night at 7 o'clock. The speaker will be the Very Revd. L. W. B. Broughall, Dean of Niagara. Dean Broughall is a graduate of Trinity College and an outstanding figure in church life in Hamilton. All students cordially invited.

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD

Full rehearsals of "The Faithful" will be held on Friday (3:00—6:00 p.m.) and Saturday (2:00—6:00 p.m.). All members of the cast must attend.

SUNDAY EVENING SONGSTER

On Sunday evening Mr. Campbell McInnes will conduct the Sunday Evening Songster in the Music Room at 8:45. A very interesting programme has been chosen and four negro spirituals have been included among a number of favourites.

MENORAH SOCIETY

On Sunday, Dec. 2, at 8 p.m., the University of Toronto Menorah Society will hold an open meeting at the Holy Blossom Synagogue. Mr. E. F. Singer, K.C., will speak on "Marriage and Divorce: a Contrast of Jewish and Canadian Laws." Members and friends are invited.

DR. MERCER'S LECTURES

Dr. Mercer will give the second lecture of his series on "Some Ancient Oriental Cities," on Saturday afternoon, December 1, at half-past three o'clock, in the Library of Trinity College. The subject will be "Thebes and Nineveh" and will be illustrated with lantern slides.

IMPORTANT MEETING

The University College Literary and Athletic Society will meet on Tuesday, Dec. 4th, in the Junior Common Room at 8 p.m. The future form of the open meetings is to be discussed. All members registered in U.C. are members of the Society and are requested to be present to express their opinion on this important matter.

Indeed, the life of any monarch of modern times who was really great and yet was a good sovereign, according to our modern system, would of necessity be a tragedy. A sovereign must not show greatness: he must be an attractive figurehead, a competent symbol: which is as it should be. Miss Carew was, I believe, greater than the real Queen Victoria.

To say that Prince Albert was handsome is correct, that he was "dumb" is inexcusable. True, he was overshadowed by the greatness of position of his royal spouse, but he did consider the arts and sciences above mere politics and household economy, in which he was far superior to the Queen.

I trust I have made myself clear and have succeeded in considering the play from a fresh and interesting angle.

Yours,

of the faculties. The present policy is to arrange debates with other colleges when possible.

The enforcement of the wearing of gowns, the care of the Common Room and the management of the Conversations were some of the duties evolving upon the Institute at Trinity's old home on Queen Street. The "Conversations" of former days achieved such popularity that it was necessary to run street cars to the doors of the College, bearing the crowds.

The adoption of the parliamentary form of procedure was a landmark in the history of the Lit. The consequent rise and fall of governments has given it a somewhat political hue, the consummation of this being the appointment of the Speaker, in place of the Chairman, seven years ago. Two years later came the organization of the Opposition—an instrument which, in the opinion of the majority of Trinity men, fulfils its function with rare abandon.

In 1925, at the time of Trinity's removal to the present building, considerable fear was expressed that the Institute Debates would be swallowed up by the Hart House Debates. Judging by the meetings of the past three years, however, such fears would seem to have been groundless.

Dances, open meetings, and smokers have been continued to perpetuate the social aspect of the Institute.

MATHEMATICS IS HELP IN LIFE'S PROBLEMS MR. MEIGHEN CLAIMS

History of Mathematics Sketched from Thales to La Place

STRAIGHT LINE THINKING
Progress of Other Sciences
Compared to Progress of Mathematics

"I am not an old man broken by the state, for I was trained in mathematics and life has been made easier for me than it would have been otherwise. The practical purpose of mathematics is to train one to think along a straight line—shortly and definitely to a correct conclusion," said Mr. Arthur Meighen, a graduate of this university in mathematics, when speaking before the Mathematical and Physical Society yesterday in the Physics building. After a social half-hour, the Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen was introduced to the society by the president.

After comparing the progress of other sciences, such as medicine and surgery, with the slow progress of mathematics during the period of the dark ages, Mr. Meighen pointed out that this backwardness was made up for in later years when integral and differential calculus were brought to their present degree of advancement in the period of Sir Isaac Newton. The speaker then proceeded to point out the various advantages of a training in mathematics, saying that the whole of life is a succession of problems to be solved, and the ability to best find a means of solving a problem is developed by a persistent training in mathematics. A man should be able to express himself clearly, for words are the only medium of thought. In mathematics, one is continually struggling with some problem, and thus is better able to analyse everyday situations. The intellectual process of living is the perceiving of ideas and expressing them clearly and carefully.

Mr. Meighen received a hearty vote of thanks for his excellent address.

TERRIBLE TIGERS SLAUGHTER REGINA TO GAIN DOMINION CHAMPIONSHIP

Superb Booting by Former Queen's Star Features One-sided Contest

SCORE WAS 30 TO 0

Bengals Did Not Exert Themselves as Against Varsity Orphans

(By Lou Golden)

Hamilton, Dec. 1.—The Tigers of Hamilton have gained their objective. After being on the verge of a Dominion championship last year, Balm Beach upset the reasoning and took the title. This year the Tigers made sure of it and piled up the score on the Regina Rough Riders 30 to 0 and took the title. The game was all Bengals, but that did not mean that the Westerners did not put plenty of fight into the battle. They held the Terrible Tigers until half time, but in the third quarter they were swamped under a deluge of tries that meant 19 points and put the game in the bag.

The Tigers did not hit the line with the force that they did against the Orphans last Saturday, in fact they seemed to be working at ease throughout the set-to in direct contrast to the edge they were on when Jimmie Douglas took his team down to this town for the Eastern Canada final. The Orphans would have had no trouble defeating the Western champions. Their line lacked weight and their plunges were too far back to make any effect on the Tiger line, in fact they were often stopped before they hit the Bengals' front guard.

The Tigers started the meet with a try in the first quarter when Brian Timmis crashed through the line for the first score. Huck Welch accounted.

ORIENTAL CITY OF OLD VIVIDLY PORTRAYED

Rev. Samuel Mercer Delivers Illustrated Lecture on Ancient Civilization

MODERN LIFE COMPARED

On Saturday afternoon the Rev. Samuel Mercer gave an illustrated lecture, the second of a series of three on "Some Ancient Oriental Cities." He chose for his subject this week as best expressing the spirit of the great civilizations of Egypt and Assyria.

For a little less than an hour Dr. Mercer carried his audience back thousands of years to ancient times when Egypt and Assyria reigned in turn supreme. Dr. Mercer did not merely describe these civilizations, but more than that he gave a living picture of their two greatest cities as they were at the height of their power. In imagination Dr. Mercer took his audience to the top of a high tower overlooking Thebes, the ancient capital of Egypt, and pointed out the famous old temples with all their beauty and colour, the Nile glittering with its gorgeous ships, the palaces of the ancient Pharaohs and their wonderful tombs. In talking of Thebes Dr. Mercer compared its civilization in regard to its methods of justice and education, its art and culture, not unfavourably with that of modern times.

From Thebes Dr. Mercer passed to Nineveh, the great city of the warlike Assyrians, and vividly described its power and striking grandeur. Next Saturday Dr. Mercer will give the last address of his series on "Jerusalem, Petra and Baalbek."

Varsity Gruesomely Hung By Phantom Executioner

Swaying crazily on a slender cord, suspended from the upper regions, a grotesque scarecrow, clad rather scantily in sundry articles, including several "Varsities" and bearing a huge placard on its breast "The Varsity," held the attention of four hundred dancers in the big gym for some time at the University College Follies.

"They're hanging 'The Varsity' in there," shouted one man as he made his way out.

Now, just above the people's heads, again almost entangled amongst the dancers, the object was jerked up and down by the invisible hangman.

Not until natural processes of disintegration had set in (it was of fragile frame), and parts of the multi-made figure had bitten the dust, tramped beneath the feet of hundreds of dancers was the spectacle withdrawn.

Result of Crusades is Killing of Many Turks, but Not Permanently

SUGAR ACT DISTASTEFUL

Special to "The Varsity"

Boston, Mass.—In anticipation of another year's crop of student "howlers" or queer answers written to college examination questions, a regular file for them is contemplated in the history department of College of Liberal Arts at Boston University. Here are a few collected for the file from last year's quizzes:

What countries are on the other side of the Jordan? That depends upon what side of the Jordan you are.

Enumerate three kinds of Romans. Number one, number two, number three.

What was the result of the first crusade? Many Turks were killed, but that was not permanent.

What was the chief clause in the Magna Charta? No free man should be put to death or imprisoned without his own consent.

Give an account of Martin Luther's death. He was excommunicated by a bull.

What are the duties of the minister of war? He is a clergyman who preaches to the soldiers.

What were the results of the War of 1812? The war started a competition between farming and agriculture and so raised the price of labour.

Students also stated that: "The sugar act was very distasteful." "Rome fell because she was founded upon the declining Greek power and earning."

Members of Newman Club Entertained at Tea-dance

The members of Newman Club were entertained at the last tea-dance of the season on Saturday. In spite of approaching examinations a large crowd attended, and enjoyed a splendid orchestra under the leadership of Bill Hurst. The dance was given under the auspices of the combined faculties, and those in charge were Vincent Keenan, Helen Dore, John Nash, Vincent Webb, Ormond Butler, Al Conrath and David Gaueau.

It was reported this morning that the King has passed a better night. His temperature is somewhat lower. He is expected to return to a healthy condition.

TREAD NARROW PATH BATTLING IN AFRICA IS ADVICE GIVEN AGAINST DISEASE BY STANLEY JONES DR. KLOTZ STRICKEN

Jesus Stands To-day a Single Unabating Power Who Holds Our Hearts

AGE OF TERRIFIC UPSET IS NOW CONVALESCING

Easy-going Student Inferior to Man Who is Narrowed to Stricter Regime

"My dear, this is an age of transition," exclaimed Adam to Eve as they passed out of the Garden of Eden," began Rev. Stanley Jones, speaking to a large student audience in Convocation Hall on Friday. "Every age considers itself peculiarly an age of transition, and our age is no exception. We are living in an age of terrific upset, striving to find a satisfactory philosophy of life which will enable us to live completely and fully."

Taking as his theme Jesus' saying, "I came that ye might have life, and that ye might have it more abundantly," Mr. Jones went on to describe the new method of approach used in the Round Table Conferences in the East, where five or six Christians met with a greater number of sceptics to compare respective dogmas, controversies and traditions. As in science, experiment, verification and sharing of results took place, making it necessary for the Christians to prove that Jesus was doing something for life which others were not, to prove his examples to-day a living fact.

Mr. Jones thought that Jesus would stand with youth in flinging off conventions which hamper life, yet the Jesus' way of Self-Realization was also a way of Self-Renunciation. Jesus agreed that Life was found in Liberties, but Liberties according to Law, taking as examples the athletes, the student, the musician and the painter. Mr. Jones showed the results of following both a "free" life and a narrow life. The student who drifts through classes, retires when he wants to, converses long after intelligence has departed from a conversation, demonstrates at examination time a far different type of freedom from the man who has narrowed himself down to a stricter regime. The latter, instead of running out of information in two or three lines, instead of breaking out into a cold perspiration, instead of realising his mind, is in a jumble and appearing anything but.

Part of Board Fence Kicked Down by Knox Men

On Friday the powers that be completed the erection of a high board fence enclosing the north side of the Knox College quadrangle which adjoins the grounds of Emmanuel College.

On Sunday several boards had been kicked from the fence by Knox men, who evidently are desirous of closer union with Emmanuel College. Or the breaking down of the fence may be due to the desire of Knox residence men to return home without pass keys after the ten o'clock closing of the main doors.

"Mile of Nickels" Day Explained

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

In view of the fact that the "mile of nickels" day sponsored by University College women takes place on Wednesday, I should like to explain a few points which I do not think are clear to everyone. In the first place, the scheme is more (like the University Settlement tag day) a means of publicity than a drive to obtain all the spare change possessed by the unsuspecting student. We wish to give an opportunity to those interested in the project to show their interest, and to bring before University circles our need of new units of residence to take the place of the ones which have fulfilled a need for twenty years and are now to be taken away. Any funds which are granted to us by the government in compensation will need supplementing, as the cost of building is at present so high.

It is hoped in the new building that we shall be able to include not only residence accommodation, but additional common rooms and committee rooms, to relieve the overcrowded condition of the Union. The buildings are quite as important for non-residents as for residents, as they will form, we hope, a unifying bond which our large college has not hitherto had in any adequate form. The need is an immediate one, and we are taking this opportunity to call attention to the interest already taken, and to arouse the interest of the University as a whole in a project which is of such importance to every woman of University College.

Western Enters Union

Western University is definitely a member of the Intercollegiate Football Union. At a meeting of the Intercollegiate Union at Kingston on Saturday, Western was admitted without a dissenting vote being registered and the four teams, Varsity, McGill, Queen's and Western, were empowered to draw up a schedule for the coming season.

WESTERN'S INSIGNIA IS WRONG IN DESIGN

Gray Book on Gray Field Declared an Heraldic Impossibility

NEW CREST SUBMITTED

Special to "The Varsity"

London, Ont.—The crest of the University of Western Ontario does not adhere to heraldic tradition, authorities have recently learned. The crest has been in use since 1910, when it was approved by the University Senate. Owing to the fact that it was not registered at the Royal College of Herald, the errors were not discovered till the proposal to present the university football team with a jousting flag to be flown at games, was made.

Among the anomalies are a lion and a stag facing each other; they should be regardant, points out Major Stuart Forbes, and a gray book on a gray field, an heraldic impossibility. The crest embodies neither of the university colours. It appears in many prominent places about the university grounds.

A new design, submitted by Professor Ramsay Taggart, will probably be accepted by the Senate at their next meeting. It provides for a silver book, and a golden lion and a golden stag on a purple field.

DES MOINES VARSITY ADOPTS EVANGELISM

Devil Takes Advantage of Architectural Form of Churches

DR. SHIELDS' ARTICLE

"A University On Its Knees" is the title of the leading article in a weekly paper edited by Dr. Shields of Toronto. "Can college halls be an auditor for the 'still small voice'?" asks the writer. "Can an institution of higher learning be more completely subject to the Word of God than to the blatant, raucous demands of unbelieving scholarship?"

The University of Des Moines is cited as evidence for the affirmative. The installation of a new president, Dr. Wayman, was the occasion for services of an evangelical nature. The article tells how in one meeting the students in the gallery were at first slow to respond. "Oh why will architects build galleries without any connection with the platform? What advantage the devil has often taken of that physical difficulty of getting from the gallery down to the floor of the church!" comments the writer.

"In this apostate day it is an extraordinary thing to hear the hymns of Zion sung everywhere through college halls." The article describes such incidents at Des Moines. "How unusual it was to hear in the dining-room, while they were about the table, this great company of students singing their college songs, and without irreverence, swing from such college merriment into gospel hymns."

THE WATERWAY

For some time the question as to the deepening of the Saint Lawrence has been a burning topic in the public press and in political debate. To the uninitiated the arguments advanced for and against seem equally reasonable and the arguments when read together have only the result of confusion. We know there is a sharp difference of opinion because of the way in which arguments for either side are assailed.

As in all the other questions it is the duty of citizens to formulate and support opinions on this question. It would be a splendid topic for debates between universities, faculties and years. The work of preparing the subject would undoubtedly be difficult but some few among the debaters and their audience would gain an appreciation of the technical points involved. This applies also to the correlating question of the disposal of waterpower which is covered by a resolution to be debated here by a visiting team this winter.

In this connexion we may quote as an interesting introduction the conclusion of a very able historical review, "The St. Lawrence Waterway in the Nineteenth Century" which was written for the last number of the "Queen's Quarterly" by Professor George Brown of the staff in history at the University of Toronto:

"Finally, it may be noted that the rise of hydro-electric power has introduced since the beginning of this century an entirely new and most important element among the problems touching the river. Lord Durham was justified in believing that a union of Upper and Lower Canada would eliminate from the question of improving the river the difficulty of a conflict between governments. The Confederation agreement also avoided the evils of divided control by giving to the Dominion parliament power over navigation in lakes and rivers. But electricity has revived the interest and right of provincial governments, and created a new conflict of jurisdictions. The same development has taken place, also, in the United States. The possibilities of power development have, in fact, made the question of improving the river infinitely more complex than it was in the nineteenth century for the engineer, the lawyer, the politician, and, incidentally, for the common citizen who foots the bill."

CHAMPUS CAT

We have had to throw out several contributions beginning:

"When I consider how my term is past
Ere book I opened or one lecture took
And term exams will surely put me last . . ."

Literary plagiarisms are all bad, including our own, and we expect soon to have to call in somebody to empty the basket. But we cannot resist a crack at Houseman which we aver is not too terrible.

WITH THE BELLS

They sound for early classes
The bells that call us in While I am brooding on the morrow
I drowned my room-mate Jim.

Bells went off at eight o'clock
And Jim, he heard no note,
For I had carefully throttled him
And also cut his throat.

He slept right on that morning,
The bells they rang all day,
Yet ne'er could they awaken Jim
Who's dead and gone away.

Yet ring they loud or softly

Reply to N.M.D.

Editor, "The Varsity,"
Dear Sir:

I wish to take the opportunity of congratulating N.M.D. (U.C.) on his splendid attempt, in the issue of November 28, to ridicule the "School men." To me, his efforts seem to demonstrate that he really has a slight amount of intelligence, which might even equal that, which he claims was shown by the "school children" in burning some copies of "The Varsity." I am sure that they will read and thoroughly digest the very excellent advice given by their learned brother in U.C.

In closing, Sir, I am very glad that this display of the so-called "school children" was capable of occupying the lofty mind of N.M.D., and that his view of the display was accompanied by a great deal of honest amusement. No doubt that type of thing would appear very funny to

Friday Afternoon Recital

The Friday Afternoon Recital was one of the most enjoyable that this reviewer has heard, and was given a very enthusiastic reception. Miss Margaret Brown's pianoforte technique was quite adequate for the difficult work she attempted, and devoid of any suggestion of mere display. The D'Albert suite, with which the programme opened, was delightful, and was well contrasted by the Busoni arrangement of Bach's "I call on Thee, Lord" which followed. The triumph of the programme, however, was the Bach A Minor Fugue, which was rendered with an intelligent appreciation of form and shading. It was perhaps a trifle invidious to Beethoven to follow immediately with his Turkish March, but it brought the first group to a suitable close.

The second group was given over to the moderns. The Rachmaninoff "Elegy" gave occasion for beautiful cantabile work. The Levitzky Waltz and the Grainger arrangement of the familiar "Cradle Song" of Brahms were well received. The interesting Guion "Sheep and goats walk into the pasture" was, according to the artist's explanation, suggested to the composer by the playing, or singing, of "someone at some time, somewhere in America."

In response to insistent applause the pianist played as an encore the Schubert Rosamunde Ballet, and repeated the Levitzky Waltz. We feel that Miss Brown has set a new standard in Hart House recitals which should give them an even higher artistic value and, we hope, increased popularity.

Victoria Dramatics

The presentation of "The Private Secretary" was a truly noble effort on behalf of a lost cause. Comedies date horribly, and while "The Private Secretary" was execrably funny in 1890, even in 1913, in 1928 the nap is wearing off. The stuff is there, of course; the characters are amazingly good take-offs on some of those folk who "never would be missed," the situations are neat and the lines are good, as at 1890. But the people taken off are now one with the Diplodocus and the Dodo, the situations lean on Victorian ideas and even the smartest conversation eventually gets like champagne with the cork left out. It is still funny, but not so funny.

The play was well presented, however. The level of acting was high, the directing was good and the sets would do credit to any amateur company. More than that, the whole thing was done in a modern way, and there was even a very good attempt to bring the lines up to date, which produced, among others, this: "Hal-elujah, I'm a bum. . . ." It must be from one of the oratorios.

The acting, as we mentioned, was good. Miss McCulloch as a kindly soul of a landlady and Mr. Hare as a nightmare of a divinity student were both excellent. Mr. Birge and Miss Bonwick gave new and convincing presentations of two very odd characters. In fact, every one was thoroughly capable. The Society certainly ranks well as an amateur dramatic club.

Our only criticism, then, is on the choice of the play. This sort of stuff is funny and it slides down easily.

SENIOR HOCKEY TEAM PRACTICES HARD FOR COMING S.P.A. FINAL

Coach Jack Porter Has Much Good New Material at His Disposal

SETTLE DOWN TO BUSINESS

Four of Last Year's Regulars Still Remain with Team

After their great uphill victory over Argonauts last week the Varsity Senior hockey team has settled down to business for the approaching Senior S.P.A. final with Port Colborne next Thursday. Port Colborne were last year's Intermediate O.H.A. champions and it will be a real achievement if the Blue and White can take their measure.

Although Coach Jack Porter has lost some of last year's stars, there is a lot of good new material at his disposal which, under his capable hands, ought to combine with the "old colours" to form a team which will uphold the fine record made by former Varsity teams.

Four of last year's regulars, Murray Snyder, goal-keeper, Harry Whitehead, captain and defence player, Bill Stewart at centre, and Mel Harley at right wing, still remain with the team. Of the newcomers, Bruce Paul, big defence man from U.T.S., is making the grade with lots to spare. His rushes are always dangerous and he was unlucky not to score against Argos last week. Fred Murray, the Newmarket boy, who started at left wing, played his position well and displayed a lot of nice stick-handling. "Red" Statham of London Battery is another very promising recruit and he had the honour of scoring the goal that eliminated the Argonauts from further contention. With a few more practices under their belts the Blue team is going to make any team in the country step to gain the verdict over them.

NEVADA PROFESSOR 'PINCHED' BY POLICE

Search for Crackers Ends Up Behind Iron Bars of Jail

Special to "The Varsity"

Reno, Nevada.—At the last minute before the Home-coming Day parade at the University of Nevada, the need for fire crackers became apparent. Therefore, one of the professors in the mining department dashed off to Chinatown to purchase these innocent articles. But alas! They were never bought, for fate stepped in and followed the professor in the guise of a narcotic inspector. As the frantic seeker of explosives went from store to store in Chinatown the inspector's suspicions were aroused and he proceeded to trail the man until he was quite certain that he was peddling drugs. Then he immediately arrested him and the professor soon found himself in jail minus the firecrackers, with the parade almost ready to begin. In spite of all his protests it was some time before his identity was established and he was permitted to return home as a respectable character and not as a peddler of dope. Needless to say he did not continue his search for firecrackers.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

(By Lou Golden)

The defeat of the Regina Rough Riders by the Mike Rodden Hamilton Tigers was just what was expected, but the losers put up a closer battle than the score would indicate. At half-time the score was 6 to 0, but it was in the third quarter that the Tigers made doubly sure of the game.

The Western team was not as heavy as the previous invaders have been. They were built more on the line of the Orphans, with a lack of beef their outstanding feature.

The Tigers showed none of their zip that was in evidence against the Blues last week. They lacked that powerful drive that was prominent against Varsity. They seemed to take things very easily and at no time were even in the slightest danger of losing their lead.

"Pep" Leadley is still a good football player. No foolin'. He was easily the most outstanding man on the field and used his head to great advantage. He "made" Huck Welch on the passing and end runs and tossed the ball around with the abandon of a basketballer of the "pass and break" school.

A fine gesture on the part of the Tiger team as far as rewarding Ernie Cox went astray on Saturday. It was in the last quarter of the game with Tigers in possession on the Regina one-yard line. Veal snapped the ball out to Cox and in their anxiety to let the veteran count for the first and last time in his career, someone was offside.

If the Jeff Russell memorial trophy winner had counted it would have topped a fine career on the Canadian gridiron. Cox playing at the most abused position on a football team, at snap, has gone through some of the toughest games in Canadian football and is still considered as the finest man in Canada at that position.

Ernie Cox expects to withdraw from active work in football and a try would have meant a good deal for the grand old man of the gridiron.

SENIOR S.P.S. JUNIOR U.C. WIN WATER POLO HONOURS

Will Play Two Games to Decide Final Supremacy

The Senior S.P.S. water polo team was declared the winner of Section "A" last Monday. At the same time Junior U.C. captured the "B" section honours. It was then decided that the remainder of the schedule would be cancelled.

Senior School and Junior U.C. will play off for the Eckerd trophy. Two games will decide the issue, the first one taking place at 5.15 p.m. to-day and the other at the same hour on Thursday. It looks like two exciting struggles are in store for the water polo fans. Capt. Goss is the big scoring threat for School, but U.C. is well defended in goal by Ayers. Boddy is the sharp-shooter on the forward line of U.C. and can be depended upon to keep the Arts men in the hunt.

SOPHS AT SEATTLE STOP BEARD REMOVAL

Special to "The Varsity"

Seattle, Wash.—Thronging the Avenue barber shops to get their last shaves for a month, sophomores made final preparation for the 31 day period of beard growing which commenced recently.

They are heartened in their efforts by Avenue barbers, who say that a normal beard grows one sixteenth of an inch a day, which means that a beard about one and a half inches long can be grown in 31 days. Brunettes especially have reason to rejoice and be glad, since their beards grow faster than those of blondes or redheads.

"The beauty of the beard," one Avenue barber said, "lies in its fullness. Take the Smith Brothers, for example. No beard has been grown for many years which equals theirs in length or thickness or general good looks."

Theatre Criticised

Editor, "The Varsity."

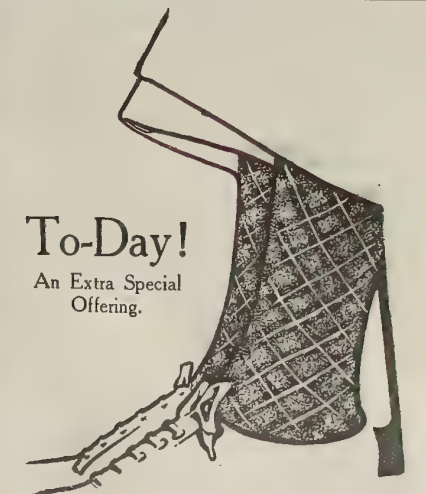

Dear Sir

Be good enough to consider the following unsolicited "review" of last week's programme at the Uptown Theatre.

I attended the Saturday night performance with a senior undergraduate (male). For three-quarters of an hour we stood in the packed lobby. At approximately 9.30 we were admitted to the auditorium. The feature picture was not yet over. Following its completion we were subjected to the rankest vaudeville that Jack Arthur has ever offered. The announced high-light of the performance was the lowest burlesque "drink" act that ever came north of Queen Street.

"Collegiate Capers," Mr. Arthur called his presentation. So his Uptown Girls appeared in grey flannels and striped blazers (Tiger colours, by the way) and went through the customary humdrum antics—or "capers." The orchestra leader then donned cap and gown and spent a boring period answering moth-eaten high school magazine riddles from his "pupils" in the orchestra. On the back wall hung a certain fraternity banner that is becoming dog-eared from over-work at the Uptown.

And then the climax—so announced by the leader! Out trooped the Uptown Girls in pseudo-athletic garb that was an utter travesty of the Varsity co-ed athletes. More gyrations. What followed was the last straw. The orchestra played "The Blue and White" while the Uptown Girls—whose strong suit is obviously dancing—flouted the audience with the most ludicrous and out-of-place rendering of the song to the accompaniment of arm-waving probably meant to be "collegiate," while from above a huge pennant of the University of Toronto was lowered to bless the performance. The spectacle did not bring the audience to its feet in the frenzy of applause possibly expected.

I need hardly record the further complaint that this blatant indelicacy thoroughly spoiled the presentation of the picturization of the Hugo masterpiece, thus relegated to the position of being "also on the bill."

We left, at midnight, and the second run of the film, hopelessly delayed by the fraternity party on the stage, rolled merrily on into the Christian Sabbath.

Yet, probably under the ether of an Uptown advertisement and a reviewer's pass, one R.H.L. (a freshman, I am told) calmly pens the following—for which I have been waiting:

"On the stage Jack Arthur has gone collegiate again and does very well with the assistance of the fairest chorus of damsels we have gazed upon in many moons."

Not a word about the very definite affront that the rendering of "The Blue and White" and alleged atmospheric accompaniment constituted. Possibly R.H.L. would not appreciate it as such, if he is a freshman. I have the satisfaction of knowing that the objections aired here have the concurrence of my companion. Our expressions "between ourselves" were stronger than the above.

"Down on your Knees to Shea's and take a slap in the face from the Uptown" in little more than a week does not indicate much cohesion or backbone in the student body.

Surely "The Varsity" as the sole newspaper of a distinct community, is in a position to "pan" an insulting performance without one eye on the advertising receipts. Theatre directors are too prone to dictate the entertainment diet of their patrons. The University of Toronto, with a publication of its own, is one sizeable section of the community that does not need to partake of pie prescription. There is sufficient entertainment, of ample variety, on the campus, that theatres need not enter into the student programme

Toronto, Ont., Nov. 30.—The tunnel from the Union Station to the new C.P.R. Royal York Hotel has just been completed under Front Street. The tunnel has been constructed so that a visitor may get rid of his baggage and find accommodation in perfect comfort before he sets out to see the city. When the passenger arrives in the lobby of the station he now encounters the entrance to the street; to the right of that there is at present a store front and a door which will later be converted into a large entrance to the tunnel. Going through the door he emerges on a landing 24 steps above the level of the tunnel. At the base of the steps the tunnel turns at an angle and runs obliquely across to the hotel more than 100 feet distant. Here several show windows of the specialty shops of the hotel will greet the traveller.—(Adv.)

but it is neither up to the actors nor, we think, to a University Society: it is too obvious, too easy. One doesn't read Jerome in English groups. We know there are difficulties about royalties, but it does seem to us, with all due respect as a humble soul trying to criticize, that when there are hundreds of fascinating plays crying to be acted, the University clubs should give their time to Shaw. And, at least, if they want to do comedy, why not get a new and less-used one.

U.C. Musicals

An enthusiastic audience of men and women, who called for many encores, packed the Junior Common Room last night to enjoy the piano recital of Madame Norah DREWETT de Kresz at the first Sunday Evening Musicals of the University College Literary and Athletic Society.

Madame de Kresz gave brief talks in explanation of the subject matter of her selections, which helped her audience in their appreciation of the music. Speaking of her first selection, "Air de Ballet d'Alceste" by Gluck-Saint Saens, Madame de Kresz told her audience that she had heard it in the original production in Paris some years ago and that the vivid recollections of that evening at L'Opera aided her rendering of the piece which she explained as the composer's picture of a woodland scene with the playing of flutes and pipes and dancing.

Men students will be glad to know that they will again have an opportunity of hearing Madame de Kresz next Friday afternoon in the Music Room at Hart House at the Friday Musicals, when she will assist her husband, who is with the Hart House String Quartet.

Yesterday evening's Musicals was arranged by both the Senior and Freshman year of University College in conjunction with the Common Room Committee. It was ably conducted by Mr. R. A. F. Anderson, president of 279, Mr. Stewart Brownlee, president of 372, and Mr. Graham Morrow, president of the Common Room Committee. T.J.K.

The girls have about five engagements a week, although not every one with a boy friend. This averages about five hours a week dolling-up. At least an hour a week is spent at the hairdressers, making a total of six hours a week spent in sacrifice to the goddess of the boudoir.

Counting the time spent in getting ready for formals and special occasions, six years of a woman's life are spent in making herself beautiful.

'Twas a glorious spring morning. Peter awoke in his little hollow stump bungalow. "Oh goody goody! To-day is Christmas," he squealed, crinkling his little pink ears, but the Man in the Moon winked at him through the window. "Deary me! I'm late!" cried the Duchess as she hurried by. It won't be long now, cried Peter as he stepped on a mushroom. Just then the Duchess knocked the knocker. "What makes your ears so big?" cried Little Red Riding Hood as she flipped the flapjacks in the kitchen-kitchen. "Where's Foxy Grandpa?" was the reply. "Here I am," said a deep voice under the table. "Has his Majesty come," said the Mad Hatter. "What cheer," shouted the Duchess. "Now is the witching hour," screamed Willie Wessel. Here we go gathering nuts in May, piped up Jimmy Skunk, as he led the way. As they passed Farmer Brown's meadow Buster the Hound joined the party. Here's the Bean Stock, and we will surely find Jack the Giant Killer eating his porridge. Good morning, little Jack Horner, have you seen Uncle Wiggly? Where, cried the Duchess. Oh! look at Alice and the Knave of Hearts. They'll bounce it. Late again. Just then Billy Bounce sailed up on the magic carpet. What hol cried Cinderella. Who me, said the Duchess. Absurd, said Jerry Muskrat, as he slid down the rock. Off with his head! She's spilled the beans. To-night's the night, cried Peter. Varlet, cried the Duchess.

HAZING IS RULED DISCIPLINE BREACH IS ADVICE GIVEN

"No" Says the Faculty
"Just Wait and See" Reply
Student Leaders

WHAT, NO WOMEN?

Special to "The Varsity"
Seattle, Wash.—Sticking a pin in the sophomore bubble to revive froth traditions, Prof. Harvey Lantz, chairman of the faculty discipline committee, declared that any tradition enforcement similar to that of former years is barred by a faculty ruling. "Any forms of hazing or of interference by any members of any class with the personal dignity and liberty of any member of any class" is characterized as a breach of discipline by faculty rule number 50.

While this ruling remains on the statute books, no freshman traditions enforcement is possible, Professor Lantz said, and any infraction of this rule will be prosecuted by the faculty committee.

The proposed traditions included the wearing of green hats, prohibition of freshmen from standing on the steps of Denny Hall, allowing first year men to smoke only corn-cob pipes if they must smoke, and prohibiting them from walking or talking with women on the campus.

The matter was considered at the sophomore meeting, and the second year students decided to bring the traditions to life, if President M. Lyle Spencer approved. However, the faculty ruling takes the matter out of the student's hands.

But Payne Karr, chairman of the student council which is sponsoring the return of the traditions, had something to say on the matter. "President Spencer told the council early in the year that he was in favour of some kind of freshman traditions," Karr declared, "and with the president's support we hope to get the faculty's consent."

So that's the situation at present. The faculty says "No" and the student leaders say, "Well, just wait and see."

free, has the treasures of knowledge at his command, incorporates their suggestions in his paper, and actually smiles as he writes.

Yet his was a narrow way; as Jesus said, "Straight is the gate, and narrow is the way, and few there be who find it." If someone had asked Paul how he gained his masterfulness, he would probably have answered, "This one thing I do." We differ from him as a swamp differs from a river, and would answer to such a question, "These forty things I dabble in."

It is no flip of the coin that Jesus stands to-day a single unabating Power—he paid the price of the narrow gate. Long after the secluded garden of Abraham has withered, long after the throne of Allah is gone, the God of Jesus will hold our hearts. He would make law identical with oneself, and thus Law becomes Liberty and sings its way to Life.

To have self-expression, one must have some self to express. We don't break laws, we break ourselves on them; we break ourselves upon the moral facts of the Universe.

We may be tempted to take merely the aesthetics of religion, yet if we deliberately take the narrow way, if we take the thorn bush instead of the flower, we will find a bloom on it we never dreamed was there.

ed for the only other point in the quarter with a boot to the deadline. The Tigers, although much the stronger in the second period, were unable to count.

The third period is where "Pep" Leadley made sure of things. Led by the former Queen's star, the Rodenites scored three tries with Simpson, Walker and then Small counting one apiece, while "Pep" Leadley shot three converts over the bar. The other score in that period was Welch's, a hoof for a rouge.

The brilliance of Leadley in his finest days while at Queen's was not any better than what he showed at Hamilton on Saturday. His converting of three touchdowns out of four attempts with a slimy footing, was the best shown by any kicker this season without a doubt. His attempt in the fourth period to just miss out was a brilliant effort, to say the least. The Tiger last try came in the dying moments of the title when Timmis plunged through for a major with only minutes left to play.

The Reginas were in position to gain singles on more than one occasion. In the last quarter they were on the Tiger line with only eight yards to make, and after two unsuccessful attempts to plunge for yards they tried an inside hoof with Sandstrom doing the hoofing and the ball was snared by Leadley, who took it out of danger:

Tigers: Flying wing, Small; halves, Gibb, Welch, Bowdway; quarter, Walker; snap, Cox; insides, Deman, Elford; middles, Baker, Timmis; outsides, Fear, Simpson; subs, Leadley, Fitzpatrick, Cappell, Inketter, Murphy, Crawford, Yeale, Wright.

Regina: Flying wing, Grub; halves, Wilson, Erskine, Grassick; quarter, Sandstrom; snap, Gilhooley; insides, Pitman, Patrick; middles, Bates, Arnot; outsides, Busch, Duff; subs, James, Doctor, Currie, Warner, Mc Dougall, Traynor, Mitchell, Urness.

Referee: Hal De Gruchy, Toronto.
Umpire: Joe O'Brien, Montreal.
Head linesman: Joe Breen, Toronto.

Queen's Hall was the scene of another successful party Tuesday when the freshmen and juniors held their dance. A marvellous time was reported by all.

The freshettes of Victoria College entertained their seniors at Hart House Theatre on Saturday evening, returning to Wymliwood for refreshments afterwards.

VICTORIA THEATRE

A play straight from Broadway, which has never before been produced in stock, is to be given the week of December 3 by the Victoria Players. This is "The Queen's Husband" by the well-known New York critic, Robert E. Sherwood, and it is a delightful and humorous bit of writing, showing that royal families are "just folks" after all, in spite of pomp and ceremonial. There is a king and queen, a beautiful and wilful princess, a prime minister, and even an anarchist in the east, and the situations are amusing, and the dialogue most entertaining.

Helen Kingley will play the Princess Anne, a role which will give this versatile actress yet another chance to strengthen her popularity among theatre fans in Toronto. Ernest Woodward is to be King Eric, and Louis Scott will have an interesting role as the prime minister. The King has a secretary, who is to be played by Edward Blaine, another popular member of the company. Then there is a new actress who will be introduced next week, Ruth Rickaby, who is coming from New York to appear with the Players at the Victoria. Jack Soosch, Helen Robinson, Leslie Thomas, and Viola Kane will also be seen in "The Queen's Husband" which promises to be one of the most successful of the productions yet given by this clever company. The action takes place in the king's private office of the palace, and this will be designed by James A. Dwyer. The Victoria Orchestra, under William Liveridge will provide its usual excellent program of music.

"The Queen's Husband" will be given all this week, with the usual matinees on Wednesday, Thursday and Saturday, and popular prices will prevail at all performances.—(Adv.)

PROFESSOR HUNTER GUEST OF HONOUR AT DENTAL DINNER

Respected Teacher to Occupy Chair of Biochemistry Soon at University of Glasgow

MUSIC CUP DONATED

To Be Put Up for Inter-year Competition in Honour of Professor Cummer

Professor Andrew Hunter was the guest of honour at a dinner meeting of the Faculty of Dentistry held in Hart House last night. There were upwards of fifty members present and sincere regret was expressed that Dr. Hunter was leaving at the close of the session to occupy the chair of Biochemistry at the University of Glasgow.

Dean Secombe in calling upon Professor Hunter to address the council upon the subject of Research, referred to the establishment of the chair of Biochemistry in the School of Dentistry of the R.C.D.S. in 1910. The first occupant was Professor H. S. Roper, who later became professor of Physiology in the University of Manchester. Professor Hunter occupied the chair for two years previous to the Dental School's becoming the Faculty of Dentistry of the University of Toronto and holds the admiration and respect of every student as well as the members of the Faculty.

Announcement was made of the donation of a cup for inter-year competition in music to be known as the Cummer Cup, in honour of Professor W. E. Cummer, who has always taken a keen interest in music.

FROSH MUST CONFORM TO MANY REGULATIONS

First Year Students at U. of Hawaii Are Subservient to Wishes of Upper Classmen

Special to "The Varsity"
Honolulu, Hawaii.—Not only are the men entering the University of Hawaii forced to follow a rigid set of commandments, but also freshmen women must live up to exacting traditions. The men must wear green caps and must press the button on these caps when ordered to. They are not allowed to smoke, but they must carry at least two brands of cigarettes in an old sock and pass them out whenever required. They may not talk to the women or be seen riding with them on the campus. The freshmen women are required to wear on four consecutive days the following costume: Curl papers in the hair, a grass skirt which sweeps the ground, goggles, no belt, black cotton stockings, men's shoes, handkerchiefs pinned to their shoulders and no cosmetics. For the benefit of the upper classmen they must carry sacks of jelly beans.

"Varsity" Has Society Editor to Report Social Activities

A new office has been created on "The Varsity" staff—that of Society Editor. Will any individuals or clubs who would like their social activities reported leave a notice in the Women's Office, University College.

Until this year the Medettes were the only faculty allowed to swim in the Lillian Massey pool in the evening. This privilege has now been extended to the other faculties. A joint swimming practice of St. Hilda's and Victoria College was held last night. A large crowd turned out and much enthusiasm was shown.

S.C.A. CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR UNIVERSITY WOMEN

Guests of Honour at Social Celebration to be Students from Other Countries

By the good holly and mistletoe, it's only seventeen more play-days till Christmas! So if you would like a little advance share on ye jolly yuletide spirit come on Wednesday night at eight o'clock to Wymilwood, where the S.C.A. will be holding forth with a Christmas party for the women in every faculty. Women students from other countries are to be the guests of honour, so here is a good chance to show them just what Christmas is all about in Canada.

Carol-singing? Yes, all the favourites. Christmas story? Yes, told by Miss Mary Edgar of Glen Bernard Camp. A play? Yes, from "Birds' Christmas Carol." And Santa Claus? YES, with goodies for every well-behaved little co-ed.

The complaint is often abroad that the women of the various faculties have not enough such opportunities for getting together and meeting each other. Well then, here's your chance. Come on, women students, whatever be your college or your country—let's put the "Merry" into Christmas!

STUDENTS ORGANIZE ATHEIST SOCIETY

Minneapolis Undergraduates
Ask Recognition for Secret
Body of Unbelievers

RECENTLY ORGANIZED

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn.—University students who recently organized a secret atheistic society were reported to be preparing to ask Edward E. Nicholson, dean of student affairs, for official recognition of their body by the university. The society, which is said to have had an undercover organization since the beginning of the fall quarter, will make official application for recognition, according to one of the purported members, who withheld his name from publication.

According to E. Marion Johnson, head of the department of journalism, such a society was formed at the University of Wisconsin several years ago and is still in existence. Considerable agitation for organization of atheistic societies has gone on in a score of American universities during the past two years as a result of the activities of various fundamentalist groups.

Official recognition to organized atheistic groups has been given at several eastern universities. A canvass of a number of "campus intelligentsia" failed to elicit any definite information concerning the new group.

ENGINEERS HEARD T.T.C. OFFICER AT MEETING

Mr. Tate Explained Complex
Organization of Staff and Financial System

MANY OPPORTUNITIES OPEN

School Men Can Fill Many Positions in Various Departments

"There is a great field for engineers in every great business, even in some that seem far removed from engineering," said Mr. H. W. Tate, Assistant General Manager of the Toronto Transportation Commission, speaking before the Engineering Society yesterday. Referring to mention that had been made of his appearance before the Society last year, Mr. Tate remarked: "Gentlemen, this is the first time I have ever heard there is any advantage in being a freshman."

Proceeding to his announced subject, "The Toronto Transportation Commission," the speaker emphasized the fact that there are many School graduates employed in the various departments of the Commission. "The general superintendent is a School graduate, and there are others in the Traffic Department, Traffic Study Department, and other branches of the organization."

The powers of the Commission include the right to construct and operate street railways, buses, tubes and elevated railways. It is worth noticing that all the T.T.C. services must be operated on a self-sustaining basis. Not a cent of the people's money goes toward operation.

"The average fare is 6.17 cents. This year we will have carried 200,000,000 passengers. A drop of one cent in fare would reduce our revenue $2,000,000. So do not expect a reduction in fare very soon, for our surplus last year was only $250,000."

In addition to operating the city street cars and bus lines, the Commission operates the radials as trustees for the city. We also operate transportation systems for the adjoining municipalities. The Island Ferries, which cannot be made to pay, are operated by the Commission for the city.

Mr. Tate went on to explain the complex organization of the Commission's staff of 4,200 men, and detailed the system of finance control in use. This system makes each department head responsible for expenditures in his own department, which he must estimate at the beginning of the year. The Comptroller makes up a budget from the departmental estimates.

A number of slides of equipment and construction work were shown, and the speaker concluded by saying: "I haven't told you much about the Transportation Commission, but if you appreciate the service you command when you put your fare in the box, I think I have accomplished something this afternoon."

FEW UNDERGRADUATE PARTIES AT U. OF T. REPORT STUDENTS

Private Activities Frequent
But Student Parties
Less Numerous

MANY STUDENTS NOT FREE

Faculty Members Fear Neglect of Intellectual Discussion Due to Too Many Parties

In the University of Toronto the number of undergraduate parties pure and simple is few, "The Varsity" learned yesterday. The majority of parties held throughout the year, with the exception of the big Medical and S.P.S. dances, are for the most part comprised of undergraduates. "There are three groups of undergraduates," one student stated, "those who spend all their time and energy in social activities, those who do not go out enough, and those who strike the middle way." Members of the academic staff observed that a proportion of the students spend all their time in this form of entertainment and neglected the social intercourse that is afforded by conversation and discussion between intellectual equals.

There are not as many parties in the University as there were, though the private entertainments, which include sorority and fraternity parties, are numerous, was the general opinion of those interviewed. The undergraduate whose home is in the city and who comes to Varsity simply to supplement the "coming out" year, is never free.

The Masquerade, the Arts Ball, the Household Science Dance and the Graduation Dinner are the big events in the social year. The residences all have house parties, and Wymilwood and Annesley Hall both have an "At-Home." Each year in the different colleges has one or more class parties, subject to the year and the college. Trinity and St. Mike's have two big dances a year. Trinity holds one in the autumn and the "Conservat" in February. Loretto and St. Joseph's both hold yearly balls.

Each club and society such as the M. and P. Society and the Honour Science Club holds parties and dances, it was learned, the number and time being under the control of the social caput.

These parties and social functions are subject to a committee of the council and the rules and regulations vary with the college and the faculty.

HYPNOTIZED FRESHMAN BUT CANNOT REVIVE HIM

Initiation Ceremony Avoids Tragic Ending When Subject Restored to Normalcy

Special to "The Varsity"
Brooklyn, N.Y.—Because his hypnotizer forgot the magic word which was to bring him back to normalcy, a Lehigh University freshman was taken to St. Luke's hospital, where a shock revived him.

The freshman was being "rushed" at a fraternity house on the campus and was successfully put in a trance as part of the initiation proceedings by a fellow student with hypnotic powers. However, these powers were only partially developed and when the time came for the subject to be restored all efforts failed and there was consternation for a while.

The freshman was almost immediately revived at the hospital and was none the worse for his experience.

King's Condition Still Improving

The health of the King continues to improve, and rumours of his death which circulated yesterday throughout the University were quite unfounded on fact. An official bulletin issued yesterday evening by the physicians attending the King stated that there was a slight improvement in His Majesty's condition; his temperature was reported to be nearly normal. The infection in his lung was under control, but his physicians were still anxious about the weakness of his heart.

A later press despatch received by "The Varsity" ran as follows: "An authoritative bulletin issued at Buckingham Palace at 10:30 to-night said that an improvement in the condition of the King indicated in the evening bulletin was still maintained."

"Sir Stanley Hume" was the only physician remaining at the Palace, and it was understood that there would be no midnight bulletin given out to-night."

MISSING ARTICLES UNEARDED AT U.C.

Everything from Parkers and

Be Discovered in Registry

A REAL TREASURE CHEST

There are untold treasures in University College hidden from the eye. Now if anyone is skeptical let him take a look at the many "lost" which find a resting place in registry office's cupboard and the cubby holes in "Archie's" office. It is interesting to see what a variety of things can manage to get lost.

There are positively hundreds of fountain pens, from portly Parkers to willowy Watermans, to say nothing of pencils. But these aren't the half of it. There are books by the score, Algebras, practically untouched, notes, even a tiny leather bound copy of Shakespeare.

It appears that the female of the species is more prone to losing than the male. There is quite an attractive array of scarves of every hue, likewise pretty umbrellas. A box of rouge, a lip-stick, and a coin-purse were brought forth from dusty depths for a brief moment to satisfy an inquisitive eye. Gloves seem to be about the easiest things to lose, for they are piled high. The suggestion that these articles be disposed of, after a suitable length of time, by means of a raffle, or a rummage sale, was frowned upon. However, this account may induce many an owner to rise up and claim his own; if so, it has not all been in vain.

FOOTBALL COACH GIVEN SUPREME AUTHORITY

Holds Position Higher Than Principal's to Turn Out
More Efficient Team

Madison, Wis.—The football coach at a Wisconsin high school has been appointed superintendent of schools, to give him authority over the principal of the school. This action was taken by the school board arising out of a dispute concerning eligibility of players. The school defeated its principal opponent, but many of the winning team's players were disqualified as ineligible. The principal offered no assistance, and the coach saw himself in the position of standing out of the football schedule owing to having an incomplete team.

Special to "The Varsity"
Berkeley, Cal.—Several questions relating to college journalism were discussed at the recent conference of the Pacific Intercollegiate Press Association, according to word received from King Kilkin, Secretary-Treasurer of the Association. This year the annual conference was held in Berkeley, California.

Excerpts from the report of the conference follow:

"There occurred a discussion of the publication in college newspapers of campus scandals. It was pointed out that publication of these matters was justified. Metropolitan and town newspapers will print them sooner or later and it is far better that the facts be recorded in a conservative and truthful fashion first by the campus newspaper. Another opinion was that stories, relatively unimportant and calculated to injure a person's reputation should be disregarded."

"It was decided that the central office of the Association at Berkeley be made a business office as well as a news office, and that the Executive Secretary, whenever possible solicit accounts for all member papers."

"It was moved, seconded and carried that the Pacific Intercollegiate Press Association go on record as opposing attempts of the governing bodies of student associations to dictate the policies of student newspapers. The resolution adopted follows: 'It is the belief of the Pacific Intercollegiate Press Association that student newspapers are the organs of student self-government and not organs of the elected representatives of the students. It decries attempts of student executive committees and councils to dictate to student editors the policies of their editorial columns. It believes that the editorial column should reflect the opinion of the editor and not the opinion of any other individual or group of individuals.'

Louisiana Freshman's Kindly

Special to "The Varsity"
Baton Rouge, La.—"Arrive at nine. Everything O.K. Just gave berth to a blond."

Picture the surprise of fond parents of a Louisiana State U. frosh when they received that puzzling telegram from their collegiate son.

While on the train, Louisiana-Arkansas special enroute to Shreveport, our gentleman was doubled up in an unyielding stiff backed chair unmindful of the consternation and fear that his message had thrown into his parents' hearts. He had seen his duty and done it, but that did not alleviate the cramp in his legs nor take the kink out of his spine.

As the train creaked on its seeming interminable journey his chief thought became, "Why didn't she make her own reservation?"

Members of the senior class at the University of Oregon have appointed "cops" to see that the freshmen are not treated too brutally.

A NEW WAY

A sketch depicting the quadrangle of Hart House is on display in one of the down town stores, but no one buys it,—no one even recognizes it as being a picture of one of the interesting scenes at the University. People have become so accustomed to associating the art of the University with etchings of the Memorial Tower and of the front doors of Simcoe Hall and University College that it would be difficult,—almost impossible, to convince them of the existence of any other spots which might be worthy of the artist's notice.

We are not decrying the beauty of these much pictured bits of our surroundings, but when on every residence wall we see a plaque of the door of University College, and find the same door usually labelled with the misleading "Main Entrance, University of Toronto," reproduced on most of the calendars about the University, we wonder if we have been extraordinarily idealistic in seeing beauty all about us, or if others have been a little lacking in perception.

We recall a striking picture of the dragon just inside the east door of University College, but the picture cannot be found and most people seem never to have heard of it. The Dean's House of the same college, or its quadrangle at night with the lights in the cloisters might be considered as rivaling the main door in picturesqueness if not in actual beauty. Almost any aspect of Trinity College is an encouraging one for the artist. Victoria College Library is most appealing in its austerity, Knox College Chapel in the late afternoon with a light behind its amber windows is a joy to behold,—and the sky-line of the whole University, silhouetted against a December night sky,—what could be more beautiful?

Why do not our artists keep on doing etchings of the Tower and of the well-beloved doors, but give us also pictures of scenes no less characteristic and quite as beautiful?

We note that Knox men have been kicking down fences. It gives us a great deal of concern figuring what these men are coming to; possibly we may soon hear of them going completely wild and biting the legs off tables and chewing the bark of gooseberry bushes.

We trust that due notice has been accorded the announcement of the Hon. A.C. Players' Guild

This evening and to-morrow evening the Players' Guild will present its fall term evening production. The Guild can usually be relied upon to bring out something unusual, and this is to be no exception to the rule. An attempt has been made this year to have foreign plays, and this one, "The Faithful," is a Japanese tragedy. We looked at the first page of this and it is a sort of poetic prose. They tell us it is quite beautiful and very tragic. It certainly promises to be interesting and we also look forward to seeing the Guild's newly-learned make-up.

consternation at the hypocrisy of Baron Reinier.

The vaudeville bill is very poorly balanced, having an undue share of tumbling and acrobatic skill. Evelyn Phillips is rather weak, but her "company" is good. Heller Sisters and Lynch present a very agreeable song and dance number. The rest of the programme is very ordinary, although Vardel Brothers have a breathtaking though very brief bit of entertainment.

W.F.P.

SHEA'S THEATRE

The bill at Shea's this week hits a new level of entertainment, with a little of everything, from song and dance to broad comedy. Frankie Heath headlines in a group of "personality" songs and the Cavalier Brothers have a few stunts, both old and new, that register well. Toney and Norman exchange some fast wisecracks of the back-alley type, while Ruth Robinson and Company present a hilarious skit that is full of surprise. The Usham and Whitney Revue starts it off with a smartly staged act and plenty of high-class hoofing. Conrad Veidt, who outside of "The Man Who Laughs" will be remembered chiefly for his rôle in the memorable "Cabinet of Dr. Caligari," is seen in the feature picture, "A Man's Past." This excellent actor is seen to good advantage in the story of a man who rose from a prison cell to honour and love. The picture is well photographed, tells a story that holds the interest, and is of commendable brevity. A really funny comedy and a good news reel round off an excellent bill.

THE EMPIRE: LOOSE ANKLES

"Loose Ankles" is a very funny comedy. It combines a most amusing plot that somehow smacks of Paris with the casual slang of the New Yorker. The excellence of this comedy with its unforced wit is a sharp contrast to the laboured wisecracking of most New York comedies such as "The Shannons of Broadway" produced at the Empire two weeks ago. About the former there is a delightful spirit of farce, an easy flow of slang that does not grate on the nerves because it is natural; the plot of the latter was inclined to be heavy, while the language was distinctly of the vaudeville type. We criticized "The Shannons" because of the use of "Hell" as an expression of wit; there are as many "Hells" in this play, but they are not made into witticisms; they have lost their coarseness.

The acting honours go to John Holden as the laconic "hoof" and to Frances Dade, who makes the most of her rôle as a smart society girl. We recommend this comedy; you are bound to like it.

Eric Von Stroheim has produced another masterpiece! "The Wedding March" does just credit to this gentleman's fine reputation. Playing in the leading rôle of Nicki, the wild young prince, who is forced by his royal parents to marry a girl for her millions, Von Stroheim fills the part to perfection. Fay Wray, as Mitzi, the peasant girl whom the prince actually loves, does exceedingly well in this difficult rôle.

The settings, in Vienna, and the general technical make-up of the production are, to say the least, superb. The subheads are absolutely the best, from the point of view of literary style, that we have ever seen. Colour effects are introduced with complete success in one part of the picture.

We may seem to have been indulging overmuch in superlatives, but we believe in giving credit where that is due. So here's the slam. Jack Arthur's presentation, "A Coney Island Romance," could well be done without.

LOEW'S THEATRE

In a picture revealing in a rather delightful way the hypocritical attitude of mankind, John Gilbert takes the leading rôle at Loew's this week. BLUE HOCKEY, BASKETBALL & B.W.F. MEN GET DOWN TO WORK

SPEAKING OF SPORT

There's another football season gone by and still we haven't seen an exhibition game between McGill and Varsity featuring the modified forward pass. For at least two seasons there have been rumours that the two colleges would undertake to demonstrate how one of the outstanding features of the American game with a few changes would fit into the Canadian game.

McGill has already played exhibition games using this important attack without creating any great sensation. But if McGill and Varsity would give it a trial here a large crowd would probably be on hand to witness the spectacle, and it might be the starting point for its adoption into our rules.

The introduction of the forward pass had an astonishing result in the American game. Prior to 1906 the main feature of the fall pastime was beef and brawn and then more beef and brawn. Terrific mass formations from an unlimited interference resulted in a heavy casualty list. Small colleges with a light team and few subs would put up a brave fight and then go down crushed beneath superior weight and reserve power. The famous "flying wedge" and similar types of play were the means "par excellence" of advancing the ball.

With the arrival of the forward pass and the abolition of certain mass plays a new game was evolved. Fast and tricky attacks were invented, and as was expected the game opened up. Under the new conditions a light team had a chance against opponents of much greater weight. Instead of smashing the line, an aerial attack could be used with the odds much better.

The years immediately following the innovation produced some startling gridiron upsets. There will be remembered not so many years ago the amazing success of little Centre College who came north and showed Harvard just what a small college team, aided by the forward pass and a brilliant half, could do against a much heralded opponent.

If the forward pass were incorporated into the Canadian game, a meeting between a team similar to the Tigers and one like the Orphans would be very interesting. Although it seems probable that a team like the Tigers would win under any conditions, a lighter team would have a better chance to stand the gaff on the attack if they could take to the air more frequently.

VARSITY SENIORS PLAY CENTRAL "Y"

Basketball Quintette Preparing to Give "Y" a Battle

AMERICAN TRIP PLANNED

The Varsity Senior basketball team invades Central "Y" for a practice game Thursday at 6.15. The "Y" Seniors are a quick-breaking quintette who play fast open basketball. The game should be a wonderful preparation for the American trip which the Varsity squad will take. Rainbows of Niagara Falls, N.Y., have been negotiating for a match, and it looks like a trip to the Cataract City, where it is expected that the Blue and White will hook up with some old Varsity stalwarts, among whom will be the Potter brothers.

The Intermediates will not practice to-night in order to give the Seniors a chance for some concentrated work on plays.

Since the rugby season there have been several additions to the Junior squad, notably Perkins of Chatham and "Chuck" Vaughan of Toronto. These two boys have size and speed and should be a tower of strength to the Junior quintette. Don Wood is sufficiently recovered from injuries received while playing for the "Lost Legion" to be out with the team, and his presence combined with that of "Jumbo" Burns should make the Blue youngsters the most powerful aggregation in years.

U.C. JUNIORS DEFEAT O.C.E. GIRLS AT BASKETBALL

Steady Playing of U.C. Gives Them 47-20 Victory Over Slower O.C.E. Team

University College Juniors trimmed O.C.E. last night in basketball at U.C. by a score of 47-20. A slim turn-out it was to enjoy the good lively game. O.C.E. forwards made some brilliant shots, but wobbly passes slowed down their team-work. U.C. Juniors played their usual steady game, but B. Thomas and W. Hazlett were especially effective. Louise Crouch scored most of the shots.

U.C.: Centres, G. Brick, J. Allan; forwards, W. Hazlett, A. Grant; defence, B. Thomas, L. Harvey; sub, E. Brechtburg.

O.C.E.: Centres, K. Runnels, C. Scholes; forwards, H. McKim, J. Bateman; defence, G. Keffer, M. Wallace; subs, J. Forster, A. Wales, M. Watson.

Victoria Senior Women Defeat Occ. Therapy at Basketball

Senior Victoria women defeated Occupational Therapy 30-6 in a basketball game played in the U.T.S. gymnasium. The Scarlet and Gold girls outlasted their opponents in every way, though there is some very promising material on the latter team. In the second half Vic. scored some beautiful baskets and altogether played a fast game without much opposition.

The line-up was as follows:
Victoria: Forwards, M. Lauder, R. Moore; centres, D. Kerr (capt.), H. Beale; defence, A. Muckle, N. Bateman, J. Malcolm; subs, H. Wickert, D. Doyle.

Occupational Therapy: Forwards, D. Jory (capt.), I. Cover; centres, I. Adams, M. Gordon; defence, O. Noble, E. Burgess; subs, F. McLaren, R. White, M. Fulton.

JUNIOR O.H.A. TEAM DOWN TO BRASS TACKS

New Material Shows Speed and Real Ability Under Coach F. Sullivan

Varsity Junior O.H.A. team are down to real serious business, holding practices every day at noon at the Arena. Manager McMurray has boiled down his squad of recruits from fifty-two to fifteen and in a few more days will have selected the regular members of the team.

The outstanding player of the squad in the last game with the West Toronto entry in the S.P.A. was Hetherington, of last year's U.T.S. team. He showed plenty of speed and ability as did his old team-mate Art. Brant. Harry Laing, another of the forward aspirants, is showing up to good advantage, and the Waterloo lad is almost assured of a place on the squad. Hetsler of Manville, Alberta, is outstanding for a defence berth. Hunsinger is the only member of last year's team that is available, and it appears that he will again guard the twine for the Blue and White in the Junior series.

Although the Juniors were defeated in the S.P.A. series they will be found to be worthy representatives in the Ontario Hockey League when the opening gong strikes.

The Junior team will not meet any easy opposition in their group, for it is understood that they will be grouped with Marlboros, last year's champions, Parkdale, and Toronto Canoe Club.

The coach of the junior representatives is Dr. Frank Sullivan of the Varsity Grads.

U.C. Juniors Hold S.P.S. Seniors in Brilliant Eckhardt Cup Game

MANY ROOTERS PRESENT

Junior U.C. water polo team tied Senior S.P.S. last night in the finals for the Eckhardt Cup. The teams were evenly matched and both played very well. The score, which finished 2-2, was the result of much hard playing and team work on both sides, and was not made up of the "lucky breaks" which so often occur in these games. The teams had many supporters, S.P.S. and U.C. each having their share of representatives.

Grant scored the first point for S.P.S., which was soon followed with Armstrong's goal tying the score.

In the second half U.C. made a neat goal when Armstrong centered the ball and Morrow bounced it in.

Almost immediately Goss succeeded in tying the score with a shot from the centre of the tank.

Jr. U.C.: Goal, Ayers; defence, Pee, Seecombe; rover, Spence; forwards, Richmond, Armstrong, Brown, Morrow.

Sr. S.P.S.: Goal, Bullen; defence, Little, Moore; rover, Grant; forwards, Thwaites, Goss, Nimmo, Irwin, Fisher.

PAUL WHITEMAN and His Orchestra in Concert Thursday Night, Massey Hall

The sensational concert tours given by Paul Whiteman and his orchestra in the past, for he has played over six hundred concerts in the United States, Canada, Great Britain, Germany, France, Belgium and Holland, in many cases to the season's record receipts and invariably to crowded houses, have established this popular attraction as a permanent feature of the musical life of the world. New spheres beckon the genial "Jazz König" (Jazz King), as he was dubbed in Berlin, and Mr. Whiteman and his Band expects to shortly embark for a tour of the Orient and the Antipodes, after which there will be no more worlds to conquer.

Paul Whiteman's magic name is a household word all over the country, and his coming serves to bring all classes into the concert hall, where they are entertained and informed, and at the same time strikingly informed that their native music has a verve and a dash and a humor of its own which they may well take pride in—(Advt.)

St. Mike's Women Win Fast Baseball Game Against O.C.E.

A snappy baseball game was staged last night at U.T.S. when College of Education girls defeated St. Michael's team by a score of 16-4. The play was fast throughout, although O.C.E. showed superiority on bases and in the field. The Saints did some splendid catching on fly balls, but failed to hold down the score. Only five innings were played and neither side had a complete team.

O.C.E.: K. Ferguson, F. Allen, L. Bates, I. Jones, T. Graham, M. Hayes, A. Murphy.

St. Mike's: Corcoran, Quinlan, Way, O'Malley, French, Campbell, McGinn.

Special to "The Varsity"

Madison, Wis.—Getting married in November, two or three years after graduation, seems to be the custom of graduates of the University of Wisconsin, according to a survey made by the commerce school of Wisconsin. The survey covered 15 years and showed that the majority of Wisconsin graduates preferred November to the traditional June marriages. It was also found that most marriages take place during the second year after graduating.

Minneapolis, Minn.—A delegation from the Blackfoot tribe of Indians recently attended a University of Minnesota football game, dressed in full tribal regalia. They attracted considerable attention, and were the honour guests of the University.

Lawrence, Kan.—After he had achieved fame by going through four years of college without having a date, James H. Hogg of "daisies" fame of the University of Kansas was married the other day. During his entire college course he shunned the co-eds entirely, not giving them a single date.

Montreal, Que., Dec. 1.—Upwards of six thousand five hundred men will probably be kept employed this winter at the great Angus shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway, which will continue to operate at full capacity, it was unofficially learned at the headquarters of the railway at the Windsor Street Station this morning. Although in the past activities of the railway works have been curtailed somewhat during the winter season, and last year the staff numbered five thousand nine hundred, during the forthcoming winter it appears at present likely that there will be no slackening down. It is possible that the staff, whose payroll amounts each month to little short of a million dollars, will be increased by another couple of hundred men, it was said.

The present volume of work and the probability of further increases are due to the orders for rolling stock that have been placed with the various Canadian steel car construction companies. The steel frames built at Hamilton and other points in Canada are finished up as railway cars at Angus shops. One hundred and six passenger cars, including sleepers, diners, first class coaches, and other equipment will have to be handled shortly by the Angus shops, while at present the construction of 40 cabooses, 7 snow ploughs, and 2 rail hoists is going on.

The Angus shops of the Canadian Pacific Railway, situated on the eastern outskirts of Montreal, are the largest diversified railway shops maintained by any railway on the continent. They cover 200 acres of ground and handle each year upwards of 29,000 railroad cars of various sorts and descriptions.—(Adv.)

American University Sets Styles And Inspires Comic Strips

(By Special Contributor)

Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, the home of collegiate styles! Fur coats of every type and description, racoon coats, black bear coats, and the smaller the student the bigger the coat. Men wearing immense bulky sweaters and golf knickerbockers, men not able to afford fur coats wearing rough sheepskin and heavy leather jackets and corduroy trousers, freshmen wearing jaunty little green caps, co-eds alone fairly uniformly dressed in luxurious furs and the latest and daintiest of "What the young miss will wear this fall." To a Toronto student's amazed gaze, John Held Jr. and his inimitable colleagues were making their appearance in person.

Northwestern's arts, commerce and engineering campus is located along a narrow mile long strip of wooded and park land fronting on Lake Michigan. In season, boating is the favourite recreation of the students. From the fraternity homes to the lecture halls was a full three-quarters of a mile walk and lectures started at eight sharp each morning. Breakfast taken at the unearthly hour of seven o'clock.

Fraternity houses and sorority houses are the pride of the campus. The lecture halls and administration buildings are older and smaller and more scattered and much less imposing. The university built the fraternity houses, grouped them together in the style of great residential quadrangles, made them of a uniform architecture and the same large commodious interior, and sold them in due course to the respective fraternities. A few of the units remain "open houses," corresponding to college residences at Toronto. The sorority buildings are similar in layout, but are placed at the opposite end of the campus.

Evanston is a delightful residential city that has built up under the sheltering academic influence of Northwestern University. But Chicago has grown up and surrounded Evanston until it is now just one of the closer in suburbs. An elevated express rushing past the back windows of mile long rows of unending apartment houses takes less than an hour to reach the loop district of the metropolis.

The dental and medical faculties are located in towering skyscrapers on a stretch of reclaimed lake front opposite the congested loop district. Students travel from class room to class room via express elevators.

The link between the downtown campus and Evanston is the football stadium. The university as a whole has about as many students as we have here at Toronto. Their stadium seats 65,000 spectators. They are planning to enlarge it. Tickets for a Dartmouth-Northwestern game were selling for $10 apiece through speculators and the game was still a week ahead.

The artist who draws that notorious comic page "Harold Teen" lives at Evanston. He obtained his atmosphere and his comic incidents by observing student life on the nearby campus. We were told this and we believed it.

R.O.T.C. is very much in evidence. Drill for the different companies are held quite regularly if the frequency of uniformed figures on the campus is any indication. Marching into classes attired in spurs and riding boots simply meant that one had a parade next hour.

In the line of academic work, there are several general and favourite courses quite different from any given at Toronto. Hygiene is a subject taken by most of the students in art, while probably the most popular lecture course is entitled Current Thought. Each division is given by a different professor and subjects range everywhere from Anthropology and Modern Ethics to Contemporary Drama.

CANADIAN FOOTBALL PREFERRED TO AMERICAN GAME

Many Prominent Speakers at Banquet of St. Mike's
Rugby Club

HAD SUCCESSFUL SEASON

Intermediate, Interscholastic and Mulock Cup Teams Distinguish Themselves

Last evening the Hotel Carls Rite was the scene of the most successful football banquet St. Michael's College ever had. It closed a most successful season, the food was of a high order and the speakers and guests wisely chosen. Russell Morin, the genial S.A.C. president, handled the duties of chairman in a most happy fashion. With the coming of coffee and cigarettes he called for a Hokeley Choke, then on Father Storey, the head manager of St. Michael's sports. Father Storey pointed with pride to the records established this season by the Intermediate, Interscholastic and Mulock Cup teams, particularly the latter.

J. P. Fitzgerald, Sporting Editor of The Telegram, arose next. He referred to St. Michael's yard full of football players and said his teams this year went through their plays without signals, just like through a catechism lesson. Mr. Fitzgerald advised athletes to play the game, win, lose or draw, and then concluded that his "bite notes" were going to banquets, making speeches and listening to them.

The chairman then called on John De Gruchy, President of the O.R.F.U. This grand old man harked back to his own days when sport was not so clean as now. He attributed the improvement to college players and to the press. Football he lauded as the greatest character builder of any game as it developed self-control, initiative and the instincts of a gentleman.

Father Carr, head coach, next spoke. He said he would rather sing a song, but several of the guests had died since the last time he had done so. He had no ideas for next year but plenty concerning the past. Father Carr also had a word of praise for the Mulockers.

Father Spratt, assistant coach, followed to say he preferred the Canadian football game to the American after experience with both. Though St. Michael's field was too crowded for good practising, he would not have it reserved for one team, even at the price of a championship. He paid a tribute to the De Gruchy family as an influence for good in football.

Father Lebel, former star footballer, now coach, and Joe McGaghey, who has played his last game for the college, closed the list of regular speakers.

Chuck Bailey, captain of the Varsity Orphans, was greeted with a ringing "Toronto." T. L. Church, ex-mayor, next favoured the gathering in his own inimitable manner, and referred to St. Michael's record in sports and work.

He was followed by Joseph Thompson, former Speaker of the Ontario Legislature.

Rev. Dr. Inkster delivered a witty speech in a broad dialect, loaded with quotations. He said Ottawa College had produced the greatest football teams in Canada and attributed it to an infusion of religion into football.

Controller Joe Gibbons reported the City Council as extremely favourable to clean sports and said a word for girls' athletics. The evening closed with God Save the King.

CENSORSHIP MOTION WINS AT OXFORD DEBATING CLUB

Canadian Debaters Take Part in Eighteenth Debate in British Isles

Special to "The Varsity,"

Oxford, England.—At the Oxford Debating Union Alexander upheld and Kenny opposed the motion on "Censorship." The motion was carried by a majority of three.

This is the eighteenth debate in which the Canadian debaters, Alexander of McGill and Kenny of Toronto, have participated during their tour of the British Isles. In four of these debates the Canadians have opposed one another and in the fourteen others they have been defeated but once, at Bristol. They have, as well, taken part in three Mock Parliaments. They are now nearing the end of their tour, after which Alexander will sail for home, while Kenny will remain in England for the winter.

FOURTH YEAR DENTS WIN CUMMER CUP

Royal Dental Society Holds Successful Opening Meeting

DANCING TO SCHOOL MUSIC

"The finest opening meeting in years," was the general opinion of the first meeting of the year of the Royal Dental Society held last night in the Dental Building.

The feature of the evening was an inter-year musical competition for the Cummer Cup, which had been recently donated for the purpose of holding annual competition. The Cummer Cup was donated as a tribute to the Professor, Dr. W. E. Cummer, who besides being regarded as one of the most outstanding men in the Dental profession, is a musician of note.

Each year competed and a fine musical programme was put on. The judges were Drs. Willmott, Fish, Singleton, Marshall, Guest, Scott, and they after careful consideration decided that the possessors of the Cummer Cup for the coming year would be the fourth year.

Between the musical numbers, short speeches were given by Dr. T. N. Scott, Dr. Singleton, Dr. Guest, Dr. Marshall, and Dean Secombe concluded the speeches with a few well chosen words.

At the termination of the meeting the school orchestra provided music for two hours of dancing.

For some years it is felt the Royal Dental Society has not had the interest of the students that it deserves, but the meeting of last night has done much to again put the Society on a firm basis.

The meeting was under the guidance of the Society's President, R. J. Fleming.

Artists Not Confined to Two Pieces of Architecture

The best-known etchings of University buildings done by Canadian artists are undoubtedly the Memorial Tower and the front doors of University College and Simcoe Hall, "The Varsity" discovered yesterday. This is true of the Memorial Tower because of its universal appeal, and of the door of University College because it is regarded as the finest thing of its kind in Canada.

In spite of this, however, artists have not entirely confined themselves to these two pieces of University architecture. Owen Staples, for one, has done in the neighbourhood of eighteen etchings depicting buildings and scenes on the campus of our University. Among these are Knox College, Convocation Hall, the Quadrangle and the Medical Building.

TRAINED MINDS NEEDED FOR BUSINESS TO-DAY

Sense of Responsibility and Purpose in Life Greatly Stressed

RESEARCH NECESSARY

Mr. John A. Tory Warns
Commerce Club Against Easy Money

"If a young man is to succeed in business to-day, it is of absolute necessity that he have a great amount of human sympathy for his associates, as well as possessing a real optimistic view of life, enthusiasm and imagination," stated Mr. John A. Tory in his address to the Commerce Club at their dinner in Hart House last evening. Mr. Tory also warned the undergraduates against seeking an easy means to wealth. "For," he continued, "you cannot make a real success of life unless you work for it. Man's greatest satisfaction is not only to be found in the enjoyment of the results of work, but in the personal pleasure found in it."

"The call to-day is for trained minds and it is impossible to accomplish anything in the business world without scientific research," the speaker further stated, when discussing the rapid growth of Toronto's and Canada's leading industries and mercantile establishments.

That the graduate should have a real purpose in life was greatly stressed when he stated that the person who thinks only in terms of dollars and cents will not be the real successful man in life but rather the one who recognizes his sense of responsibility to his community and nation. "If you live true to the ten commandments you live true to the business ethics of life."

"We have in Canada a heritage which few nations have ever possessed and I have no fear for the future of the country because its citizens are true," he concluded.

In presenting Mr. Tory, Prof. E. J. Urwick of the Economics department assured the speaker of the Club's appreciation of his efforts to be with them at their annual dinner.

PARIS EXAMINATIONS CLAIMED ATROCIOUS

Two Types of Tests Are Used
Survivors of Written Test
Subjected to Oral

ATMOSPHERE ATTRACTS

"Examinations at the University of Paris are atrocious," said Father Bondy, C.S.B., in speaking to "Le Cercle Français" of St. Joseph's College last evening. Father Bondy, who is the Honorary President of the club, chose as his subject, "La vie d'étudiant à Paris." The speaker pointed out that one did not go to the University of Paris because the professors were superior to those at the University of Toronto but to absorb the atmosphere.

In speaking of the examinations, Father Bondy remarked on the difficulty with which a student was successful. The students are subjected to two types of examinations. The first of these is a written test and those who survive are admitted to an oral examination at which about only one-third are successful.

In France there is only one university recognised by the government.

Mr. Henry States Debate
Pointless Because Changes

"Any attack I make against the editor of 'The Varsity' will be against his work as editor and not against him personally," said Mr. H. B. Bell in opening the battle for third year U.C. in their debate with the first year on the policy of the Undergraduates' Newspaper at last night's meeting of the U.C. Lit. in the Junior Common Room.

"I would first like to emphasize the power of the Press. At the present time this power is in the hands of an editorial staff that is not representative. The present staff consists largely of non-fraternity men from U.C. The shameful way in which 'The Varsity' overlooks interfraternity spirit while publishing the inane accounts of the Lovely Laura Louise and the assinine antics of Mr. Singe should be condemned."

"Instead of a newspaper with a few ads 'The Varsity' is rapidly becoming an advertising journal with a few items that might be of interest to the students. As to his ability to select advertising, one half-page recently was the extreme of vulgarity and bad taste. We object also to the editor's extremely perverted sense of humor and his wise-crack remarks about serious matters." Criticism was then made of editorial footnotes to letters and a lengthy singing of the praises of Mr. (Continued on page 2)

SUBJECT INEXHAUSTIBLE

At a meeting of the Trinity College Science Club last evening an address on "Atomic Structure" was given by Mr. Perrin. In beginning he stated that the subject was practically inexhaustible. He then proceeded to sketch the history of the atomic theory of matter, outlining the false trails upon which pioneers in science had strayed and followed in the pursuit of the constitution of matter.

The modern theory, he pointed out, bases the formation of the atoms of all elements on a combination of protons, forming the nucleus, which possess a positive charge of electricity and around this at a relatively great distance—negative electrons revolving very rapidly in certain orbits. The heavier elements have larger nuclei in simple multiples of the weight of the hydrogen proton and some electrons in addition. About this nucleus revolving in definite circular or elliptical orbits are negative electrons sufficient in number to balance exactly the remaining positive charges of the nucleus.

Mr. Perrin clearly and concisely outlined this theory and enlarged upon it without allowing the subject to become unmanageably involved. After his illustrated talk, an interested discussion followed, while the hosts, Messrs. Wilson and Perrin, served refreshments.

Yesterday afternoon at three o'clock in the Senate Chamber, Simcoe Hall, Sir Edward Kemp handed over to Sir Robert Falconer the official deed of trust in connection with the Maurice Cody bequest. This bequest provides scholarships in fourth year Modern History and in U.T.S.

MODERN WOMEN NEED NEW LAWS

Prominent Feminist Exorts
Co-eds to End Inferiority of Their Sex

NOW WOMAN GIVES UP JOB

"Grow your self-respect; don't let us remain any longer the inferior sex!" said Mrs. Archdale, president of the league of women voters, to women of U.C. who attended Mrs. Kirkwood's tea yesterday afternoon. After various experiences as a suffragette, including time in prison and a hunger strike, she is still working ardently for equal rights for women, and is a member of the "Six-point Group" of England, which concentrates its activities to the gaining of six definite points, adding new ones as the old ones are attained.

"Feminists want the equality of women with men," said Mrs. Archdale. "Young as you are, some of you have already bumped against some of the inequalities which now exist. Anti-feminists believe in greater opportunities for men." Feminists, she went on to explain, had now progressed to international efforts, such as the international labour organization at Washington which is part of the League of Nations. In the Peace Treaty was a clause stating that women and men should receive equal pay for equal work, but so far this has been ignored.

"Many of our laws are based on antiquity, and do not fit modern conditions," asserted Mrs. Archdale. "The laws that suited your mothers and grandmothers simply don't fit with you." Continuing this line of thought, she remarked that although some (Continued on page 4)

Professor J. C. McLennan to Address Honour Science Club

Professor J. C. McLennan, head of the department of physics and director of the physical laboratory, will address the Honour Science Club in the large lecture hall of the Physics building this afternoon. The subject chosen is Band Spectra and Chemistry. The work of Dr. McLennan is famous not only in the University but has spread throughout the whole scientific world. His popularity as a speaker and his interesting work will doubtless draw a large crowd of both staff and students.

Tea will be served, Mrs. Craigie and Mrs. Allen officiating.

COMPULSORY FEES TO BE PAID BY ALL MEN OF U.C.

U.C. Lit. Decides on More Meetings and Parliamentary Form

TO BE CHANCE FOR DEBATE

Athletic Director States Intention of Spending All Available Funds

Compulsory three dollar dues, payable to the Bursar, by all men in University College for class fees as well as for the support of the U.C. Literary and Athletic Society, passed a second reading with much violent discussion at last night's meeting in the Junior Common Room of the U.C. Lit. This motion will add more than seven hundred dollars to the finances of the Literary and Athletic Society. The meeting, including a brief but hotly contested debate on "The Varsity," lasted until nearly midnight, and all stayed till the bitter end.

The suggestions that the number of Lit. meetings be curtailed were put forward in two separate motions, both of which were overwhelmingly defeated, while the motion of Mr. Lionel Gelber that the Parliamentary form be adopted for future meetings was carried by a large majority.

A compulsory athletic fee of one dollar on the motion of Mr. J. N. Omana had passed its first reading at the previous session of the Lit. This motion was virtually dropped, being amended out of existence by two amendments moved by Mr. R. A. F. Anderson and seconded by Mr. "Sheep" Brownlee, president of ST2. The first was that the fee be compulsory and the second that athletics be given fifty per cent of the Society's funds instead of forty per cent as at present.

Mr. Gale, the Athletic Director, in urging the need for more funds, stated the policy of previous executives had been to save money and boast a surplus at the end of their year. "I am not only going to leave no surplus from this year but will also spend the money turned over by last year's executive," he said to the hearty applause of his audience. Moreover the Athletic Director requested that the reserve fund which by the constitution is to be spent for "things of lasting benefit" should be used for football equipment which will last for five years.

"The Literary and Athletic Society will get its two dollars as at present, while the extra one dollar will be paid to the year treasurers by the Bursar instead of the executives having to work their heads off selling year cards as at present. This will give the year treasurers just a shade more than they are getting now with the sale of two dollar year cards. I understand this is much lower than what the Bursars collect in other colleges," said Mr. Anderson in supporting his amendments.

"I would like to point out that compulsory fees to the Lit. do not make for enthusiasm," said one speaker in reply to the suggestion that greater interest would be taken in class parties if all were compelled to pay dues.

The vote on the first amendment was carried, 37 for, 15 against. The second also carried, by an even greater majority. The main motion having been amended out of existence, was then formally carried.

Mr. E. M. Henry, president of the Lit., opened the discussion as to the number of meetings per year by suggesting a letter from a graduate, Mr. R. H. Soward, should be read.

Prompt objection was made that the letter was eight pages long and the hour was late. Mr. Stringer, the secretary, had, however, a brief outline (Continued on page 4)

OUR LITERARY ISSUE

It has been the custom to make the last issue in the fall term of each year a literary number and to throw open the columns of "The Varsity" to contributions in prose and poetry from the undergraduates. The custom will be followed this year, in which connection it would not be inappropriate to review the attempts at making the undergraduate newspaper a literary vehicle.

Many editors have agreed with those people in the university that have been anxious to see the paper encourage efforts of the students in the writing of articles and verse. But when the time came to publish an issue for this purpose the members of the staff have had to supply most of the material themselves. They did not mind doing this but they were disillusioned of their ideas about the willingness of the students to support the venture.

This comparative lack of enthusiasm is an interesting commentary on the opinion that this paper should be primarily a literary journal and not a newspaper. The outstanding weakness has been the prose submitted. In neither quality or quantity has it shown enough to justify special issues. But of course much good prose which may be available is unsuitable for our purpose since we have no space for lengthy articles and short stories. To explain the preponderance of poetry over prose the theory has been advanced that students do not bother writing especially for literary issues but use the opportunity to clear out their desk drawers of what poetry may have accumulated therein, since they first wooed the Muse.

In regard to issues of this sort one group believes that it is better to suppress some of the weaker leaps at Parnassus in order that there might not be revealed the halting lines and limping plots of which some of the brethren are capable. But such a policy of suppression and protection is ill advised, in our opinion, and free and unhampered development is to be preferred to paternalistic expediency. We shall print anything that is written on one side of the paper only and that is within the statutes.

POLICY OF VARSITY VIOLENTLY ATTACKED

J. L. Davenport, whose letter had been followed by "boorish comment" for which "an apology was in order."

"As long as 'The Varsity' is edited by pin-headed individuals with biased opinions, as long as it refuses to exercise discretion in the advertising it selects and makes foul statements about those who criticize it, 'The Varsity' is and will continue to be detrimental to the best interests of the University."

"The attitude of 'The Varsity' has been to print all the news," was the opening comment of Mr. W. C. Hebdon for the first year term.

"The Varsity" has shown fair play and has printed news about all faculties and about all the residences. In four stories about one residence, I know that 'The Varsity' had the facts in every news account. This printing of details will discourage conduct that will not look well in print. I defy the affirmative to deny one fact of 'The Varsity's' news accounts.

"At first I was inclined to consider the raid of the S.P.S. men as a lark and wished I had been there. Not until the seriousness of their offence, the dangers of panic and the loss of life were pointed out by 'The Varsity' did I realize just why such conduct should be suppressed. Even senior members of S.P.S., who must know that a grave offence has been committed, continue to ridicule 'The Varsity' when they must know that they are wrong."

"I have never seen a journal so fairly-minded, even to the extent of printing opinions opposed to the editor." The hammer sounded as he sought to refute the attack of "pin-headedness," so Mr. Hebdon was forced to be content with looking his great contempt at the Opposition.

Mr. Jack Gringorton opened with the citing of two cases of false news on the part of "The Varsity." Miss Dinwiddie's statement about class parties being the one and the fact that the report on the hanging at the U.C. Follies had stated the sign to read "The Varsity" whereas "The Varsity Editor" had been the label on the figure that had swung from the roof of the big gym.

A brilliant attack on the editorials followed which condemned in particular the "pseudo-sophisticated big brother" attitude of the editor in his replies to his critics.

This speaker spoke a lot but gave few direct statements that could be either quoted or replied to by his opponents. This fact was mentioned by later speakers.

Particular attention was directed to the attempt on the part of "The Varsity" to stir up trouble between S.P.S. and Saint Michael's after the dispute over the Mulock Cup game had been thrown out by the Committee.

"College Spirit is not college spirit, and not the doing of damage to property," began C. J. MacKay, the concluding speaker for the first year. "Play up, play up and play the game has been the spirit encouraged by 'The Varsity'."

"The front page of 'The Varsity' has great educational value in that it gives space to the speeches of prominent men speaking on Science, Religion and Commerce. These are the essential things of life."

"Our paper condemns that which is (Continued on page 4)

Art, Music and Drama

Dr. Mouré's Recital

In yesterday's recital Dr. Mouré gave Bach the place of honour—the middle of the programme—a pleasant change from the former and too prevalent practise of placing Bach at the beginning, where one is given the impression that it is regarded merely as an unfortunate piece of ritual which must be dispensed with before the audience really begins to enjoy itself.

And Bach was the feature. The rarely-heard Tocatta-Adagio and Fugue in C major were very delightful. The difficult pedal passage, the adagio with its lovely melody, and the difficult fugue subject were all well and sympathetically handled.

Harwood's Dithyramb, while Dr.

Mouré made the most of it, is disappointing. It is the sort of thing an organist improvises when in particular bad humour, or when his wits have failed him in providing something better.

The andante from Tchaikowski's Fifth Symphony provided a really Russian atmosphere. Some might, however, feel that the solo stop was rather heavy for the accompaniment.

Limmen's Marche Pontificale and the Gigout "Rhapsodie sur des aus Catalans" introducing Spanish folk-themes were both interesting and well played.

Altogether a very enjoyable hour of music.

THE WROMANCE OF WRIGHTHOUS WRONALD

Caught in escaping from an insane asylum by a naughty policeman, our hero Ronald Rottingham was taken to the Children's Aid Society, where he was confined for several weeks full stop chapter 6.

No one really knows how or why Ronald departed from that institution. Some say that he was expelled for telling the children fairy stories, while others maintain that he contracted potato-bugs in his cauliflower car and was removed to the sanitarium. We do know, however, that he was rescued by the salvation army, who taught him to play the bass drum and gave him a place in one of their bands. Soon after he gave several recitals at Hart House, Convocation Hall and the red mill, which needless to say, were thunderously received by his delighted audiences. Unfortunately Ronald's musical career was abruptly terminated at this time when he bust the drum. Unable to raise enough funds to put another skin on his instrument, our hero once more found himself destitute and out of work.

Had it not been for his great fortitude and his ambition to make himself worthy of the beautiful girl who had hit him with the beefsteak, Ronald would surely have given up. But as spring was approaching, he one day filled his pockets with restaurant silverware to disguise himself as a university man and went downtown to apply for the job as bellhop at Big Gin Inn, a popular northern mosquito lions. As it happened he secured the position and set off one spring morning for the north, with his luggage (a pair of dice) in his pocket.

Another Review

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir: Although I suppose one should bow to the superior knowledge of his seniors, I cannot refrain from expressing my opinion on the sentiments put forth by U.C. '28 (Male) in Monday's issue of your paper. I might say that I also attended the performance in question last Friday evening and I do not entirely agree with my friend of '28.

Perhaps it would be wise to state here that I am not a freshman either. Not being addicted to imbibing alcoholic refreshments myself I cannot pass a judgment on the quality of the "drink" act. However, it would be only just to admit that it was rather ridiculous to say the least.

To come to the incident to which U.C. '28 refers with such vehemence, although "The Blue and White" was not rendered with such ardour as a group of students would have displayed, I found that it gave one a twinge of pride that he belonged to such an institution as the University of Toronto. In fact on the evening on which I attended it drew applause from several in the audience, and on looking around to discover the origin I recognized one or two students of the said University near me who appeared to approve of the proceedings. Thus it would appear that I am not the only one who holds the opinion expressed above. As far as the "slap on the face" from the Uptown is concerned, I consider that it is non-existent.

Our friend also took a parting shot at "The Varsity's" policy with which (referring to policy) I might say I heartily agree.

Hoping this has not lulled you to sleep.

Yours, etc.,

U.C. 3T1 (also Male).

VICTORIA WOMEN LEAD INTERFACULTY BASEBALL SERIES

VIC. BASEBALL SQUAD DEFEATS U.C. 10-4

Fastest Game Witnessed in Women's Athletics This Season

VIC. NOW LEAD SERIES

Last night U.T.S. saw the fastest game played in women's athletics this year. The Victoria baseball squad pushed ahead of University College and won with a score 10-4. And it was no walk-away for the Scarlet and Gold. U.C. was in the running every inch of the way. The Vic. pitcher, D. Quance, is a star and kept down any heavy slugging from U.C., but Vic. was outclassed in their fieldwork. It would have done the hearts of any baseball fans good to see the first-class game the girls staged. U.C. had a set-back when "Frankie" Dale, the old faithful, had her finger put out of joint.

The size of the U.T.S. floor makes any baseball game lively—if the players do not get the ball on the fly, they must keep an eye open for the rebound, and any of the spectators (wall-flowers in other words) are persuaded to keep their eye on the ball, else they might not "duck" at the suitable time.

Line-up:

Vic.: Pitcher, D. Quance; catcher, A. Tilley; 1st base, M. Jarrett; 2nd base, M. Lindsay; 3rd base, E. Craw; s.s., O. Ives; fielders, C. Dobbin, A. Chorolsky, F. Wright; subs, M. Cadmore, A. Graham, M. Rogers.

U.C.: Pitcher, E. Blackwell; catcher, F. Dale; 1st base, W. Hazlitt; 2nd base, D. Budreo; 3rd base, M. Hilchie; s.s., C. Elmslie; fielders, P. Howard, P. Ferguson, D. Batcheller; subs, E. Hogg, M. Robb.

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Monday, Dec. 10.—Play-off between Junior U.C. and St. Hilda's, U.T.S. gym, 7-8 o'clock.

Semi-finals:—Dec. 6—Senior Vic. vs. Junior U.C. at U.T.S., 7-8 o'clock.

Dec. 11—Junior U.C. vs. Senior Vic. at Hart House, 8-9 o'clock. (For this game admission will be 25c.)

An indoor artificial ice skating rink which will be ready this month is the latest addition to the athletic department of the University of Michigan. The rink is approximately 208 feet by 60 feet and will offer opportunities for skating from November until April.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The beginning of next week will see the completion of the Interfaculty Baseball Schedule. The Scarlet and Gold are in the fore and it looks like a championship for good old Victoria. It has been apparent during the season that the umpiring has not been of a calibre to promote the best interests of the game. It may be advisable in the future to secure a professional umpire. This would tend to buck up the players and produce a better brand of ball.

If "Frankie" Dale of U.C. had not unfortunately put her finger out of joint, U.C. would have given Vic. girls an even closer run. The play was fast and furious, with both teams continually on their toes.

Although Doris Budreo injured her knee in the last U.C. baseball game she was on deck last night with the old-time pep.

Pete Sedgewick, the star captain of the O.C.E. baseball team, is down with the measles. O.C.E., who are an important factor in the baseball series, feel considerably weakened by her absence.

Unless O.C.E. come from behind and trim the Vic. baseball team, which hadn't lost a game, the Scarlet and Gold team will be undisputed champions.

Now for the play-offs in the Interfaculty basketball! Come on, fans, let's show the old U. of T. spirit and turn out en masse to encourage our favourites.

The teams have been showing real class, and who knows but they may be the team to overthrow the so far unconquerable Edmonton Grads.

If the Saints do not turn the tables on Vic. in their basketball game next Monday, Victoria College will have two teams in the play-offs.

Both Junior U.C. and Senior Victoria are to be congratulated for winning their basketball group without a loss.

The prospective examinations have not dampened the enthusiasm of many fair co-eds who have been continually making use of the Lillian Massey tank.

TWO VARSITY TEAMS WIN HONOURS IN WATER POLO

West End and Broadview Go Down to Defeat at Hands of Varsity Teams

Two Varsity teams were victorious last night at water polo. The Varsity "A" team won the championship of the Western group from West End Y.M.C.A. when they defeated the latter with a score of 12-0. In the first few minutes of play Leo Latchford scored three times. Glass then got a goal with a backhand shot, and was followed by Graham, who shot the ball in while the goalie was out of his net. In the second half it was again Varsity's game from the very start, although West End played in a spirited manner with plenty of combination. Goss started the scoring in this half, followed by Glass, Grant and Sinclair. Between them they ran the score up to twelve-zero before the final whistle blew.

The teams:

Varsity "A": Goal, Bullen; defence, Sinclair, Graham; rover, Goss; forwards, Latchford, Glass, Grant. West End Y.M.C.A.: Goal, Fewell; defence, MacMillan, Hutton; rover, Ide; forwards, Heron, Miller, Longwood.

With three minutes to play and Varsity leading by 4-2, the referee declared the game forfeited to them in the semi-final of the Eastern group was played off between Varsity "B" team and Broadview Y.M.C.A. last night. The teams were well matched in an exciting game. At half-time Varsity was leading by 3-1, Pierdon and Moser having both scored. The visitors were giving the "B" team some real opposition and the game was growing tense.

In the second period Broadview scored the first point only to have Spence swim down with the ball for another Varsity goal. The play was then carried to Varsity's end, and it was there that a Broadview man ducked a Varsity defence player. The referee ordered the offender off and an altercation ensued, whereupon the referee declared the game forfeited by Broadview. Players on both teams expressed regret at the unfortunate ending of the game.

The teams:

Varsity "B": Goal, Ayres; defence, Spence, Middleboro; rover, McConachie; defence, Thompson, Pierdon, Moser.

Broadview Y.M.C.A.: Goal, Dunlop; defence, Baker, Taylor; rover, Mullis; forwards, Law, Leblond, Vale.

WOMEN BASKETEERS SHOW ENTHUSIASM

Keen Competition Makes Result of Finals Hard to Predict

PLAY-OFFS SOON

This is the first year that there have been three girls' basketball groups, and with the increasing number of players there has also been a growing enthusiasm. Occupational Therapy deserve to be commended for entering a team for the first time in the U. of T. interfaculty series, and the busy Medettes, with their comparatively small numbers, have entered a plucky team too.

Good basketball, on the whole, has been the order of the day and a great deal of speculation is going on among the fans as to which team will win the championship. Just now it is difficult to make any predictions as to the result even of the semi-final games, which will be staged Friday the 7th from 5-6 at the O.C.E. gym, and Tuesday the 11th at 8 o'clock at Hart House.

U.C. and Vic. this year have both entered two teams. Unlike hockey, the teams are chosen according to the years in which the players are registered, the senior team being composed of fourth and third year girls, and the juniors of the best material in the two lower years.

U.C. Juniors have a strong team and have won their group from O.C.E. and St. Mike's, while the Vic. Seniors head the group in which Meds and Occupational Therapy have been playing.

By their win last night against U.C. Seniors, the Scarlet and Gold Junior team have tied in the third group with St. Hilda's, who have the best team which they have had in years. The play-off will be next Monday.

The basketball club have arranged to have U.C. Juniors play against the Vic. Seniors, with the winning team of the Vic. Junior and St. Hilda's play-off as a bye.

The final games will be played on Friday, 15th, at O.C.E. gym, and Monday, 18th, at Hart House. The winners will deserve the championship and there should be good turn-outs for the climax of the girls' basketball games.

National Guard is Detailed to Patrol Stadium at Washington Game

TEMPORARY JAIL BUILT

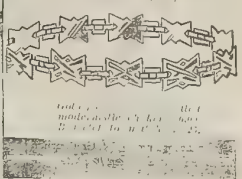

Special to "The Varsity" Washington, Seattle.—Gate-crashers who didn't "crash" when martial law was declared in the area immediately surrounding the Stadium during the California game will be foiled again Thursday. Maurice Thompson, adjutant general of the national guard, has again ordered a detail of 100 soldiers to patrol fences and gates around the giant bowl. Another development in the plans to keep the crashers out of the Stadium was disclosed when Earl Campbell, graduate manager, explained that at no time during the game would the gates be thrown open. Vic. Scores Against U.C. in Closely Contested Game

Victoria Juniors defeated the Senior University College basketball team 20-18 yesterday in a closely contested battle. Both teams appeared rather excited in the first period, but steadied down and played splendid ball in the last. There were a number of fouls on both sides. Vic. succeeded in converting more of their free throws than U.C. Both jumping centres were outstanding, and Willa Mahoney was best for the winners.

U.C.: Centres, Edith Peake, Betty Macdonald; forwards, Phyl Ferguson, J. Ramsden; defence, Marion Henderson, Honour Tett; subs, Gertrude Johnston, B. Gowing.

Victoria: Centres, M. Hough, D. Bishop; forwards, W. Mahoney, M. Parks; defence, A. Storey, B. Doyle; subs, K. Jordan, K. Carscallen, H. Merritt, B. Keyes.

What are you buying for Mother?

She would appreciate a scarf, of soft colours, to add a touch of youth to her fur coat, either in heavy crepe or georgette. Squares or triangles are new. $2.98

The added touch of a little flower brings just the right relief to the older woman's dark clothes. Dainty bouquets, especially violets, would make a charming gift, specially boxed, with a personal gift tag.

The first toast of the evening to "The King" was offered by Mr. David Currie, the chairman. In his toast to "The University" Mr. W. McPherson commented on "Varsity Spirit." Responding to the toast, Professor Gilbert Jackson praised highly the traditions of the University, particularly that of clean sportsmanship and scholarship. The large number of graduates who have carried public service to a high degree also were commended by the professor of Economics, who also urged the students to be more concerned with what they are "putting into" the University than what they are "getting out" of it.

In his toast to "The Club" Mr. J. Eakin stated that the Commerce Club develops an "Esprit de Corps" in the course. Responding to this toast, Dr. H. A. Innes replied that the University places a student on his own feet, and urged a more active participation of the members of the Commerce Club which is a liaison between university life and the business world.

"Home for Christmas" seems to be the slogan of the people of Ontario this year according to H. C. Bourlier, General Passenger Agent of the Canadian National Railways. Indications of one of the heaviest years in Christmas travel is seen by him in the advance bookings and enquiries that keep pouring in to the Depot and City Ticket offices daily.

Mr. Bourlier said that "Easter and Thanksgiving come in for their share of the holiday travel, but throughout the year there is no period like a magnet for drawing people together as at Christmas time. The Canadian National Railways, with a view to placing every facility at the disposal of their patrons," said Mr. Bourlier, "have been organizing their train crews and making advance preparations to handle the holiday rush. Extra trains will be operated out of Toronto and additional equipment will be placed on all regular trains during Christmas week."

"For those who have to spend Christmas on board the trains," added Mr. Bourlier, "Christmas Day will be made a special event, special menus will be prepared and everything possible will be done to see that patrons will have as enjoyable a time as could be possibly had in the circumstances."

One Canadian National feature that comes in for much favorable comment, during the Christmas holidays, Mr. Bourlier pointed out, is the service arranged for those who wish to prepay the fare of relatives or friends from any outside point. Money for these fares may be deposited at any Canadian National Agency and the transportation will be delivered to whom it is designated immediately.—(Adv.)

Corruption Causes Consternation Few Find Florentines Faultless

(By F. W. Burton)

As we passed through the murky regions of Hell Virgil turned upon me his luminous eyes and thus began: "O Dante, tell me of the younger generation in thy native Florence: are they truly of surpassing excellence, or of villainess so low as evilly to cumber the ground?" And I with reverence responded: "Verily, O my blessed comrade, among the elder Florentines is much diversity of view on this most serious topic. Some there are who say that never was such wickedness known upon the quivering earth, while some few there be who maintain that the present youth are of a virtue most peculiarly gleaming, but whether these latter are moved by ignorance, or by some secret yearning to seem to have been gayier dogs than they were, I know not." "Even so," he replied, "even so was it in my lifetime. Many and manifold were the opinions on the younger generation. But on certain things we all agreed: to wit: that the youth were victims of some special and specific anger of the gods, who wrathfully cast in their way temptations unknown to a less unlucky age, who broke down moreover in caprice all those standards and conventions by which, as everyone with ease remembered, the prudent lads of the previous years guided their comprehending steps; all observed, too, agreed that the arms of the parents were weaker than ever before since first our cookie-shaped world rose by the primal justice from the original shoreless waters." "Exactly thus," I said, "it is now in Florence." "Come," said my guide, "I have a hot Hell to show thee. Scathing flames roar wildly across a broad and barren plain. Ice-water is then poured over the victims. Great bats rend them with crooked, bloody talons. Snakes bite them, and devils lash them with barbed wire. They are lowered slowly head first into billowy seas of boiling pitch. Then they are turned into snails and tortoises and shapeless lumps of stuff. Slowly, through long ages, they are twisted in pieces by being turned round and round and round—" "Tell me no more!" I cried, "it is too awful. Is this place of punishment prepared for all the successive evil younger generations?" "No," he answered with a divine smile, "it is for all the preachers, journalists and other authorities who fussed about the younger generation."

MODERN WOMEN NEED NEW LAWS SAYS SUFFRAGETTE

people considered that the adoption of new laws better suited to modern women would cause too great an upheaval, if present conditions were bad, we should not hesitate to remedy them. At the conclusion of Mrs. Archdale's short address, an open discussion took place, clearly showing the intense interest which was taken in the subject. At one point in this discussion Mrs. Archdale explained with feeling: "It is always the woman who has got to go home; never the man who must give up his job. It is always paid work that women must not do; she can work herself to the bone scrubbing floors, or do any amount of voluntary work."

Wymilwood Open Forum to Discuss Modernism

Rabbi Isserman's discussion of Judaism proved so popular that a second Open Forum has been planned for Thursday night at Wymilwood. Various requests for an enlightening view of the modern tendency in religion, of the truth concerning controversies rampant between "old-fashioned fundamentalists" and "heretical modernists" have come to the S.C.M., with the result that Dr. W. R. Taylor of U.C. will speak upon "What is Modernism." Open discussion will follow, and men and women students of all faculties are invited.

rowdism) and has been constructive in its attitude. "I have never heard such bitter personal attacks since I have been at University," said Mr. Lionel Gelber in the heated discussion which followed from the floor of the house. "I wish to apologize for the third year in which this debate has been conducted, and for the hanging of 'The Varsity' editor at the U.C. Pollies when the hosts of the evening." Mr. R. A. F. Anderson replied, "The hanging was not the work of our college," and proceeded to attack the inaccuracies of "The Varsity." Mr. Gringorton suavely explained his attacks as being but part of the necessity of debate, saying that he had been quite as willing to defend Paddy Ryan.

Mr. Lou Golden said, "We got out one issue of 'The Varsity' with all the cuts we could beg, borrow or steal for the Orphan." He explained the cutting of Mulock Cup stories in one issue as being due to one large advertisement which crowded the page. After the affirmative had been upheld by a large majority, Mr. E. M. Henry concluded the meeting by saying that the whole debate had no point in present student policies in view of the fact that a recent decision had been arrived at whereby the policy of "The Varsity" had been greatly modified.

of the letter, which set forth the main point that the number of meetings should be reduced to two open meetings per year.

"This would be digging the grave of the Lit. Society," said Mr. Anderson in opposing the suggestions embodied in the letter. "With business handled behind closed doors, soon the executive would become incompetent and soon the Lit. would be dead. There is nothing wrong with the Lit. At least it is no worse than it has been in the four years that I have attended. We would just be giving way to false sentiment that has been created by 'The Varsity.' We should plan to keep our business down and trust our executive. We should get the best speakers in the College, who have been wasted in Hart House debates. This society is the one thing that fosters literary activity in the college and to drop it would be to admit inferiority to Trinity and Vic."

"Speaking for the defunct U.C. Parliamentary Club, I would like to point out that it disbanded on the understanding that an opportunity for debate would be allowed in the open meeting of the Lit. itself," said Mr. P. E. Usher in opposing the suggested curtailment of the number of the meetings.

"I would like to say that it wasn't 'The Varsity' that started the discussion as to how dead was the Lit," said Mr. Gelber. "The present executive started it and I do not blame them for it. It shows a large degree of enlightenment on their part." Mr. Gelber outlined in a forceful speech

PARIS EXAMINATIONS ARE ATROCIOUS

Throughout the whole of France there are colleges of this university established at Lyons, Bordeaux and Montpellier, etc., but the most important branch is the Sorbonne of Paris. This university was first begun by Napoleon.

As an example of how a foreign student might spend his leisure moments, Father Bondy pointed out the interesting places that he might visit, the Pantheon, Notre Dame, La Sainte Chapelle, which is noted for having the finest stained glass windows in the world, and which was built in the thirteenth century by Louis IX. He also suggested visiting the Louvre, which contains such famous pictures as "Mona Lisa" and Murello's "Assumption."

the advantages of parliamentary methods, and defended his own participation in the Hart House debates showing "a larger loyalty to Hart House." Whereupon Mr. Anderson withdrew his accusation against the Hart House debates.

When "Point of order" was called on length of discussion, "I would suggest that members who are hungry be fed and then they'll be in better humour," said one. "I'm neither hungry nor in bad humour," was the retort. The votes were then taken as given above and the meeting proceeded to its debate on "The Varsity."

PROF. J. C. McLENNAN DESCRIBES SPECTRA AT SCIENCE CLUB

"Work is Merely Verification" Declares Widely Noted Scientist

LARGE TURN-OUT

Professor Mulligan of Chicago to Lecture on Band Spectra
Later

"Chemistry concerns itself with how atoms and molecules unite. Physics seeks to get a picture so to speak of their relation," remarked Professor J. C. McLennan in his address yesterday on "Band Spectra and Chemistry" to the Honour Science Club in the Physics Building. Before a creditable showing of both staff and students this professor, whose fame as a physicist has spread throughout the world, described the relation of atoms and molecules to light. The lecture was illustrated by numerous slides pertinent to the subject.

The professor spoke at length on the recent and rapid advance in the science of atoms. "We practically know all the states that all the atoms can be in," he said. "We have reached a point in this science where our remaining work is merely verification. Now we have to find out about molecules."

By means of diagrams portraying the orbits of molecules cast on the screen, Professor McLennan showed that the pattern of the molecules described about each atom determined whether an element would readily unite with another element or not.

On the subject of the relation of light to atoms and molecules the speaker said, "Light comes because some atom is changing from one state to another. Ery, in other words, because it is changing from one state to another."

In concluding Professor McLennan said that he had obtained a promise of a few lectures on Band Spectra by Professor Mulligan of the University of Chicago, who is recognized as the foremost authority in the world on this subject. The date of the first lecture is to be announced in the near future.

Previous to the lecture, refreshments were served, Mrs. Craigie and Mrs. Allen officiating.

Successful "Nickles Day"

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
The "nickle patrolers" of U.C. wish to express, from the tips of their frozen toes to the ends of their rosy noses, their thanks to the members of the other colleges, to the faculty, and last but not least, to the "men in general" who helped so ably along the weary mile. Our own U.C. contributors as they searched for the required nickle could visualize those happy times (now nearer than ever before) when cosy libraries and perhaps real badminton courts will await their spare moments; those others had no such selfish stimulus. The men were quite at liberty to pass by with looks averted and thoughts dwelling upon the leisure hour to be enjoyed in the haunts of Hart House—but they didn't.

We announce with pleasure a mile containing one hundred and fifty dollars.

Yours unanimously,
"U.C. Nickel Patrolers."

"MILE OF NICKELS" DRIVE NETS CONSIDERABLE SUM

Some Students Uninterested Majority Glad to Help Along

Yesterday, the "same old tag day" was fairly well camouflaged when the "Mile of Nickels" campaign was waged by the University College women to scurry up more money for their building fund. The chill breezes did not cool away their ardour. Anything from pennies up, were gracefully received by the taggers for the would-be mile. By noon hour the loose change was counted, and now U.C. is $155 nearer her goal.

Some uninterested ones passed by on the other side supposing it only one more way to wheedle money from unsuspecting victims. The majority, however, had heard of the plan, and were only too glad to patch up the mile by piling on their pennies and helping the "good old cause."

ABSOLUTE EQUALITY NOT DESIRABLE

So Say Majority of Varsity
Co-eds Re Feminist Movement

"DON'T FEEL TRAMPLED ON"

Do Varsity women agree with Mrs. Archdale, president of the league of women voters, in demanding equal rights with men? Yes and no. "The Varsity" found many ardent supporters of the feminist movement who sounded sufficiently enthusiastic to endure prison terms and hunger strikes for the cause. One co-ed resented the fact that women students who work during the holidays at downtown stores are paid less than men, even though their jobs are bigger. "Why should I be paid less than a lot of stupid men?" said another. It was felt by many that a woman could not live any more cheaply than a man, and should not therefore be discriminated against.

Some women were inclined to dismiss the matter, as one third year student did, with a shrug and an airy, "I'm having a perfectly good time in life!" The great majority, while refusing to admit the inferiority of their sex, did not think absolute equality desirable.

P. Howard, U.C.: "Mercy, I don't feel trampled on! I believe in the feminist movement, but it can be carried too far."

M. I. Bradley, Vic.: "Women are physically unfit to compete on an equal footing with men. If they are to be accepted as equals they must work under the same conditions."

D. Harkness, Vic.: "The man whose whole life depends on his career should have preference over the woman who is in business herself temporarily."

Medical Women's Tea

The Medical Women's Undergraduate Association gathered informally on Wednesday at the Women's Union for the December meeting. A friendly cup of tea was followed by a delightful talk on "Books" by Mrs. Kirkwood, the Dean of Women of University College.

After speaking of the attractiveness of various departments, fiction, poetry, biography and the essay, she urged her hearers to read regularly and widely. She reminded the Medettes that Sir William Osler had considered that he owed much of success and happiness in life to the daily habit of reading good literature.

A Date With Laura Louise!

In case you haven't noticed it, Lovely Laura Louise offers a prize of one evening date to the individual who writes and submits the best poem or limerick employing "Louise" as a rhyme. All entries must be handed in to "The Varsity" Office in U.C. or Hart House before 6 p.m. to-day, addressed to Laura Louise, and signed with name and address of the author. Any member of "The Varsity" staff will be willing to assure prospects of the rare treat which an evening with Laura Louise would ensure.

WOMEN'S GATHERING DISCUSSES WIVES' "STATELESSNESS"

Dr. W. P. M. Kennedy Suggests
Changes to Simplify Question

MIGHT ADOPT U.S. IDEA

Perplexing Situations Arise in Case of Divorced Under Present System

A Canadian woman, marrying an American citizen, thereby becomes an American citizen by the British Naturalization Act which is incorporated into the Canadian law. The Cable Act of 1923 refused to allow marriage to interfere with a woman's nationality, and so by American law, the Canadian wife of an American citizen remained a British subject, thus giving rise to the problem of "statelessness." Such was one of the questions which arose in the discussion on "Nationality with special reference to the nationality of married women," at the Policy Club in the Women's Union last evening.

Dr. W. P. M. Kennedy, of the Department of Law, presented the problem in a most lucid manner, suggesting some changes which might make the present system slightly less complicated.

By the old British common law marriage made no change in a woman's nationality. By the act of 1870 a British woman marrying an alien became an alien, while an alien woman marrying a British subject automatically became a British subject. Such was and still is the rule in ninety per cent of the countries in the world to-day.

If Canada were to adopt the American idea as represented by the Cable Act, and allow a Canadian woman to retain her Canadian citizenship though married to an alien, the hardly won imperial nationality would revert to its former status of local allegiance. The solution, according to the speaker, appeared to be to keep the rule generally, but in order to eliminate all possibility of statelessness a woman marrying an alien would retain her British nationality if by the law of her husband's country she did not acquire his nationality. Residence in her husband's country would automatically deprive her of her British nationality. To prevent deportation in cases of desertion, as when a Canadian married an Italian who subsequently deserted her, leaving her subject to deportation as an alien to Italy, Dr. Kennedy would suggest that in such cases the woman might resume her British citizenship.

In yesterday's "Varsity" the Honour Science Club dollar dance was dated for Friday in the "Coming Events" column. This should have been Saturday, Dec. 8th.

"PEOPLE ARE TIRED OF CHRISTIANITY" SAYS DR. GUINNESS

"Peace and Pardon" of Christ
Discussed at Hart House
Noon Service

HOCKEY BRILLIANT GAME

English Colleges Not So Well
United as Those in Toronto

"Have you ever said thank you to Christ for dying on the Cross?" was the question of Dr. Howard Guinness, M.D., in his address in Hart House Chapel yesterday noon.

"People are tired of Christianity, Religion, Churchism," he continued. "They want reality, they need Christ. There is something far better for us than an external Christ as an example and inspiration—good as this is—it is Christ in the life, Christ in the mind, heart and will—Christ in the personality."

Taking as his subject the "peace and pardon of Christ" in the larger topic of "the personal relationship to Jesus," Dr. Guinness emphasized the importance of peace in one's own soul, and that peace with God meant peace with man. He compared the Cross to "a great diamond with facets of light shining forth," and related how one facet of this light—"pardon and peace"—had come into a new and vital relationship to him in his own experience.

Dr. Guinness is a graduate of Cambridge and of St. Bartholomew's Hospital in London, and is making a tour of Canadian universities. "Simply magnificent—everything that body and mind could desire," was his description of Hart House. "You're in luxury in comparison to what we have in England," "The Varsity" was told. "There colleges are separate things with no common meeting place." Dr. Guinness was also favourably impressed with Canadian rugby and with hockey. "It seems the most brilliant game in the world," was his comment on the latter.

Beard Contest

Special to "The Varsity"

Seattle, Wash.—Two men and three women will take up the committee to decide which sophomores have the longest, stiffest and handsomest beards, Howard Neikirk, soph class president, said. Neikirk will announce the personnel of the committee and the prizes to be awarded by avenue merchants. The interest that has been shown in the beard contest from its beginning was augmented by the announcement that two sophomore men, Chuck Quigley and Bill Cranley, are gaining by several hairs over the other contestants.

On Wednesday afternoon St. Hilda's College was entertained at tea in "Strachan Houses," the location of St. Hilda's College of olden days.

U.C. GRADUATING YEAR PLEASED WITH MATINEE

Slang of Actors and Tea
Later on Contribute to Merriment

"The best ever" was the satisfied comment of one of the participants in the 219 U.C. women's theatre party on Wednesday afternoon. The Empire, with its presentation of the hilarious comedy "Loose Ankles," was the mecca which attracted many braun-fagged women of the graduating year. "Loose Ankles," as the title suggests, was a farce of an highly-amusing and sophisticated nature. To judge by remarks overheard, the chic costumes of the actresses and the slang of the men made a strong impression. This delightful show was supplemented by a tea at Bingham's, which served to send the already satisfied girls on their way rejoicing.

WESTERN DEBATERS TO VISIT VARSITY

Literary and Debates Committee Wants Opinions on Subjects

THREE POSSIBLE TOPICS

The Literary and Debates Committee of the S.A.C. wants to know what subject the university would like to hear debated, and also the names of men who would be willing to debate for the University on the occasion of the visit of the Western Canada debating team in January.

The members of this team are Nelson Chappell, University of Alberta; G. E. Bretnell, University of Saskatchewan, and W. J. Masterson, University of British Columbia.

The debate may be on any of the three following subjects:

1. "Resolved that the present system of instalment buying of manufactured articles is in the best interests of the buying public."

2. "Resolved that this house is opposed to all forms of censorship."

3. "Resolved that the existing agencies are adequate for the establishment of world peace."

Suggestions with respect to subject or speaker may be handed in to the S.A.C. office.

U.C. DEFEAT ST. MIKE'S 17-6 WOMEN'S BASEBALL SERIES

University College women's baseball team played St. Michael's College last night at U.T.S. gym. The game resulted in a victory for U.C. with a score of 17-6.

St. Mike's were very unfortunate in having their pitcher, T. Corcoran, flogged in the second innings. However, Athol Wesley, U.C. coach, was kind enough to pitch the rest of the game for them.

St. Mike's were not able to make as good a showing as usual owing to the illness of three of their best players. However, the Red and White also suffered in this respect as their catcher was not able to play. As a result of these misfortunes the game was not as fast as it otherwise would have been.

Line-up:
U.C.: Howard, Hazlett, Budreo, Blackwell, Hiltche, Ferguson, Elmslie, Batcheller, Hogg, Robb.

St. Mike's: Quinlan, O'Malley, Corcoran, Campbell, French, Way, Hayes, De Rocher, Fitzpatrick.

The U.C. men's residences, North, South and East Houses, held their annual dance at Columbus Hall last night.

CLASS EXECUTIVES STRONGLY SUPPORT COMPULSORY FEE

New Scheme Will Do Away
With Need for Year
Cards

BETTER CLASS PARTIES

Plan Must Have Approval of College Council Before it is Official

"The new system will be very advantageous, I think," said A. A. Woods, president of second year U.C., regarding the extra dollar fee payable by all U.C. men to the Literary and Athletic Society, as proposed at the meeting of the Society held Tuesday evening.

"This system will do away with the necessity of year cards as the dollar will be paid to the treasurer of each year directly from the fees. It takes an extra dollar from the student when he has the most money and so feels it less. The expense is also divided up amongst more students. This year we sold 40 year cards in second year, whereas we should have sold many more," said Mr. Wood. "This system should increase the interest in year functions, as every man will be forced to contribute. The men who do not now take any interest in these affairs will be drawn into them. Also there will be the added advantage to the executives that they will know just how much money they are going to have. The six hundred dollars will be divided among the years according to their registrations."

"This measure has the support of all year executives and I believe it will be of advantage, as it will make for better class spirit, and better class parties," said R. A. F. Anderson, president of fourth year U.C. "The executives will also have the advantage of knowing just how much money they can spend. Now, as things are, they are afraid to spend money, not knowing how much they will take in at a class party."

Mr. Anderson also wished to make it clear that the motion has not yet gone through, as according to rules there must first be notice of motion and then two readings, the motion then going before the College Council and then to the Board of Governors.

Santa Claus in Person at S.C.A. Christmas Party

With merry bells and merrier guffaws, Santy himself (or was it our good friend Elnd Walker of U.C.?) descended upon the S.C.A. Interfaculty Women's Christmas party at Wymilwood last night and exacted promises "to be good" from over one hundred and forty co-eds. Amid much laughter he distributed presents from the Christmas tree to the student guests of honour from Japan, China, India, England, Scotland and Newfoundland.

An excerpt from "Bud's Christmas Carol" was dramatized by an interfaculty cast headed by Beth Mader as the conscientious Mrs. Ruggles, who plastered her nine children with manners. Carol singing by a group from U.C., in which everyone later joined, and a few words from Miss Mary Edgar on "Do your Christmas thinking early" further added to the happy feeling of Christmas around the corner.

Refreshments, including candy cones, were enjoyed between broad beans expressive of "Some party!"

JUST A NICE MEETING

"The Varsity" was discussed at a meeting of the University College Literary and Athletic Society the other night. Forty people voted on a motion and it is said that almost sixty were present at one time or another during the evening out of a total membership of seven hundred men. This is an excellent showing when compared with previous meetings and the executive and "The Varsity" may congratulate themselves on their attempts to enliven affairs. We hope to be rewarded for our small but earnest part by attending next year's Follies via the front door and on a hearty invitation from the president and officers of the Lit.

We do not mind being called "pin-headed individuals with biased opinions" but we might point out that if our sins are so great it is unnecessary to blame us for matters that do not lie within our province. The first speaker from the third year, who thinks we are pin-headed individuals, attacked us because of the advertising. He thought that there was too much advertising and mentioned a certain half page advertisement as an example of "extreme vulgarity and bad taste." With regard to which we can only say that the editor of "The Varsity" has no more to do with the advertising than any other undergraduate. These matters are in the hands of a permanent official responsible to the Joint Executive to which body complaints as to the quantity and quality of advertising should be referred.

It is strange that a man chosen to represent his year in a debate, upon the subject of which he is supposed to speak with some authority, should reveal his ignorance of the fundamental rule upon which "The Varsity" is operated. For a man who launches a personal attack based on absolute untruth we have only two terms. One of these applies to the person who essays to lecture on a subject and then betrays his innocence of the very hypothesis of that subject. The other applies to the person who understands that hypothesis and deliberately falsifies it. Both of these terms are harsh ones and must not be used by editors of official papers. Indiscriminate abuse of editors of official papers at official meetings is of course highly ethical and conducive to free discussion. Let us have free discussion until such time as the editor is getting the better of the argument and then he can be sat upon forthwith.

"The present staff consists largely of nonfraternity men from U.C." was the statement made as to the lack of representation on our staff. Careful examination will show that the first nine ranking officials in the masthead do not come under this description. The nonfraternity men from U.C. are a large and able body but this is the first time that we have ever heard them accused of controlling anything. Whenever anything is allowed to fall into their hands it will be time for the boys and girls to sell out their goods, adjourn to the roof and prepare their brief for the last assizes.

But regardless of the truth of the statement, which after all does not matter very much, we have some advice to give to the young man who uttered it and to others who are starting out on this line of attack. Whenever you want to smack the nonfraternity men, do not mention them as such. Say "Ah the glorious history of our university" or "Sir, Canada is the brightest jewel in the Empire's crown." Then after a few such preliminary sallies proceed cautiously to the logical climax, "Soandso is indeed an excellent fellow and I would not say anything against him for the world but, Sir, and I think I speak for my entire faculty in this matter, I think that in the best interests of the university, Soandso's neck should be broken." Thus statesmanlike deeds are done and the personal aspect is eliminated.

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:

I should appreciate it very much if you would find space to publish the following letter in your Correspondence Column.

In yesterday's issue of "The Varsity" there appeared a report of the debate held at the University College Literary Society at which the policy of "The Varsity" was "violently attacked." I noticed on reading this report the following sentence which was directed as an attack upon the Editor-in-Chief. "As to his ability to

M.C. Players' Guild

Masefield's "The Faithful" is a truly splendid conception but it falls far short of being a great play. The story is of a sort of Japanese vendetta, mingled with the curious philosophy of pre-Europeanized Japan and has genuine charm, there is splendid characterization, how well some of them did this, especially Mr. Miller, Mr. Knights and Mr. Fauman. Miss Dow and Miss Porter also did some very very well but their parts were short. It is regrettable that, as most of the rôles were for men, women were doing men's parts in the mob scenes, but careful handling of these scenes and a few deep voices from in back helped considerably. Although we cannot say that the acting was all perfect, especially as many of the actors were slow in taking their leads, still the whole cast did "fall into the period" and the play was realistic. The costumes, make-up and scenery were also good.

We wish most heartily to commend the Guild on its presentation of something serious and something new. While they might have shown better in an easier play, they chose to plunge into the most difficult thing possible in a desire not merely to do play-acting but to seek out drama in all its forms. They might, perhaps, have made a better choice in this also, but the idea is the right one.

The characters were:

Asano, a Daimyo—John Cowan; Kurano, his counsellor—James Knights; Hazama, Leader of the Ronin—G. Alexander Fee; Shoda—Katherine Crowe; Kira, a Daimyo—Hamilton Miller; Sagasaki, his counsellor—Earl Fauman; Kamei, a Daimyo—Andrew Allan; Honzo, his counsellor—Arthur Marron; A Youth of Kira's Palace—Sylvia Gelber; A Woman of Kira's Palace—Jean Dow; Ono, a Servant to Kira—Nancy Blanchard; The Envoy—Paul Gardner; A Poor Girl—Dorothy Porter; Lady Kurano—Helen Anderson; A Captain of Kira's Guard—Gordon MacNamara; Chikara, Kurano's Son—Constance Shiell; Harima—Isabelle Ericson; 1st Ronin—Sylvia Gelber; 2nd Ronin—Winogene Hills; 3rd Ronin—Helen Musson; 4th Ronin, Irmenegarde Westernman; 5th Ronin, Dorothy Brisbin.

Dear Champus Cat,—

Long has it been my secret ambition to compose a poetic conceit on those profound words—squeeze, squeeze, squeeze. Here goes:

There was a young Scotchman named Rosen,
Who slid on a river half frozen,
But he trope as he trad
And sloped as he slid
And drone in the drink with his clothes'n.

There, old dear, that ought to hold you for a while. "Bub."

I read all kinds of poetry
In magazines and papers;
But always finish with a groan—
What maniacal capers!

A lyric here, an epic there,
Or even silly dramas;
Such fluttering flights are only fit

And though the Muses be diverse
I reach the same conclusion;
All verse is but a shuffling nag
And wins out by illusion.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity-Port Colborne look-up at the Arena to-night should be a good exhibition of hockey. With the victory over the Argonauts under their belts, the boys should take the S.P.A. Cup by downing the Elevator Towers.

The return of Jimmie McMullen to the squad will add a good deal of strength. Jimmie played smart hockey last winter, ranking with the best in the group. This season illness threatened to keep him in retirement, which would have been a big loss to "Red" Porter's boys.

Ralph St. Germaine, the "Flying Ghost" of the gridiron, is holding down the centre berth for the McGill sextet. St. Germaine had a serious illness late last winter and had the misfortune to miss his year. He was ineligible for Intercollegiate football, but will be in action for the Red and White in the Quebec Hockey Association series.

The senior hockey schedule as yet has had no final arrangement. As far as is known at present, Kitchener will not operate a senior team, thus leaving Varsity, St. Michael's College, Queen's and Preston. Any difficulties will likely be soon smoothed out and definite notice is expected any time.

The appearance of the schedule for the Big Four O.H.A. junior group signifies that the juniors will soon be at the long grind. Varsity open the season at the Arena on Friday, December 14, taking on Toronto Canoe Club in the first half of a double-header. The hockey displayed in this group is of very fine calibre and chances for a Varsity win in this section are very good.

Don't forget that the Students' Season Ticket admits the holder to all the regular schedule Varsity games played at the Varsity Arena. This means Senior, Intermediate and Junior.

It seems that St. Thomas has the honour of having the final football game of the season. Regina Juniors will play St. Thomas Juniors Saturday, and the victors will be Dominion champions.

comparatively short time ago yet, already, it has achieved considerable impetus. Prominent European thinkers who were mildly attracted have now entered whole-heartedly into it.

It is, therefore, with interest, that scholars here look upon the establishment, at St. Michael's College, of a department for Mediaeval research.

The proposal originated, it appears, with Dr. Etienne Gilson of Harvard University and the University of Paris and, further, it is said Dr. Gilson will accept a permanent position on the staff of St. Michael's.

Anent his visits to Toronto, the 1928 edition of the College Year Book has the following:

"Professor Gilson's visits to St. Michael's have greatly stimulated interest in the problems he discussed and have spread a broad sympathy in the thought and culture of the Middle Ages. This is particularly true of the question of the basis of a truly Christian philosophy, a problem to which Professor Gilson devoted his attention in a paper read before the Philosophical Society of St. Michael's. Since the meeting at which he delivered his address, echoes of his thought have come from many quarters."

SENIOR HOCKEY TEAM AND PORT COLBORNE AT ARENA GARDENS

Port Colborne Team Were Intermediate O.H.A. Champions Last Year

FINAL GAME OF PLAY-OFF

Varsity Confident After Victory Over Argonauts Last Week

To-night the Varsity Senior hockey team meets the Port Colborne Intermediate at the Arena Gardens in the final game of the Senior S.P.A. play-offs. The Blue and White sextet found it no easy task to dispose of the Argonauts Seniors last week, and in the Port Colborne team, last year's Intermediate O.H.A. champions, the Seniors should run up against some stiff opposition. However, "Red" Porter's boys have been practising consistently, and will take the ice as a team that will be hard to beat.

Playing in goal for Varsity is Murray Snyder, who tended the nets last year. On the defence is another regular, Captain Harry Whitehead, who is assisted by Bruce Paul, who starred with the U.T.S. team last winter. This pair work together well on the defence. Bill Stewart holds down the centre position on the Seniors again this year, with Mel Harley back on left wing. Murray of the Newmarket Juniors on right wing completes the flashy forward line. Jimmy McCullen, who did valuable work for Varsity as a forward last season, is out the game for the coming season owing to illness. Statham, Robinson, Marshall and McMullen are the other puck-chasers on the Blue and White squad.

In addition to Dr. Gilson and greatly supplementing his work, such eminent Europeans as E. Longpré, Maurice de Wulf, and Léon Noël have given courses of lectures here. To use the words of Dr. Brebner, University of Toronto Registrar, that such men were "brought to Toronto to deliver lectures, speaks much for the enterprise of the College."

U.C. AND SENIOR SCHOOL IN WATER POLO FINAL

The final game of the two-game series for the Eckhardt Cup, symbolic of the interfaculty water polo championship, will be played at Hart House at 5.15 this evening. Junior U.C. and Senior S.P.S. are the rival teams and they put up a fine contest in the first game last Monday.

S.P.S.: Goal, Bullen; defence, Little, Moore; rover, Grant; forwards, Thwaites, Goss, Nimmo, Irwin, McCarthy.

U.C.: Goal, Ayers; defence, Seacombe, Fee; rover, Spence; forwards, Armstrong, Boddy, Richmond, Morrow, Brown.

1929 What Will It Mean For You?

If going into business, will it mean the beginning of a long apprenticeship period—the trial and error method—which possibly may never lead to success?

Or will it mean a year spent in preparation for business—followed by a steady rise to leadership?

If you desire the latter, Babson Institute can serve you—and serve you well.

Train for Leadership

To meet the demand for special training for men looking forward to successful business careers and executive leadership is the purpose of Babson Institute. Here you would be taught the fundamental laws of business and shown how to apply them effectively to actual business life.

select advertising, one half-page recently was the extreme of vulgarity and bad taste."

I would like to say to Mr. H. B. Bell, who was reported as making this statement, and to any others who, like him, have a wrong impression in this matter, that the Editor-in-Chief is in no wise responsible for the advertising which appears in "The Varsity." Advertising belongs to the business end of the paper and is separate altogether from the Editorial and News side. There is an adequate explanation for what happened in connection with the above mentioned advertisement, but it cannot be elaborated upon here.

It is very unfortunate, indeed, that the Editor-in-Chief should have been blamed for that which the writer was entirely responsible and I sincerely hope that this letter will once and for all relieve the Editor-in-Chief of any criticism concerning the advertising policy.

Aunt Mary Informs Us That Straw Vote Means Hey! Hey! Hoover

(By Greta Reid)

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I have used six bottles of Listerine and I'm not popular yet. What can the trouble be?

Anxiously,

Lotta Bunk.

Ans. Do you ever order chicken salad when you are dining out? Do you know how to order Virginia ham and scrambled eggs in perfect French? Can you play a saxophone? Do your friends smile when you sit down at the piano? Does your tongue freeze and give your teeth a sleigh-ride when you are asked to make a speech? Is there dandruff on your collar? Has your school-girl complexion graduated? Ask yourself these questions, my dear. You must learn to face the facts of life squarely. Send thirty cents for my booklets on Diet, Social Errors and Instructions for Opening Conversations.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

What is a straw vote and what was the result of the one held recently in the States?

Sincerely,

Paul E. Conn.

Ans. A straw vote is the vote of the farmers in the middle west, and the result was Hey! Hey! Hoover!

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Last week "the fairest chorus of damsels" I have gazed upon in many moons" romped out upon a downtown stage and sang "The Blue and White." Naturally I stood up, but was soon bawled out by a big bass voice from the next row back. I sat! What ought I to have done in a case like that?

Yours in doubt,

Signor Mayle.

Ans. I can imagine your embarrassment. Under the circumstances I (think you did the right thing. Now if the voice had been soprano, falsetto or even tenor, there might have been room for argument, but I have found that a big bass voice usually means business.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I have recently become dissatisfied with my lot at Victoria and have decided to leave. Could you offer me any advice or suggestions?

Sorrowful Soph.

Ans. They have wonderful lots at Mount Pleasant, but their entrance requirements are rather stringent. However, having spent a whole year at Vic, you should be able to qualify.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

My daughter intends to enter college next year and shows a decided preference for U.C. Now, I have heard terrible stories about that institution, and would be very grateful if you could advise me in the matter.

Anxious Mother.

Ans. In U.C. the students attend on an average ten lectures a week and are willing to swear on oath that they spend at least forty hours during the same period in the perusal of texts, thereby making this the hardest-working faculty. They write for the Varsity, play in the Guild and engage in other harmless pursuits. They display a hearty contempt for any faculty whose lectures total over thirty hours, which contempt is returned with interest. The U.C. Women's Residences have recently suffered from malicious poison-pen attacks, grave charges of nocturnal gum-chewing behind closed doors have been levelled against the inmates. The whole affair is referred to only in whispers and italics.

"If you've bats in your belly that 'flut,'
 If your comprenez-vous rope is cut,
 If you've nobody home in the top of your dome,
 Your head's not a head, it's a nut."
 To prove it I am sending you the following lines:

"MY GIRL"

I've got a girl, you bet your life!
 And she is going to be my wife.
 Tho' Mother says she's not for me,
 "She wears her skirt above the knee,
 And she says 'd-n' when she is mad.
 (I know the word, I've heard my Dad)
 Just let the conversation lag
 And, from somewhere, she pulls a tag.
 She's fast! O yes, I know that's true,
 I've seen her paddle a birch canoe.
 If on a hike you wish to go
 All things of Nature she doth know.

This evening the French Society will give its annual evening production, consisting this year of "La Joie Fait Peur" by Girardin and "Le Serment d'Horace" by Mürger. We must confess ignorance of both these numbers, but the usual custom has been to have light comedy. We cannot speak for this presentation but in the last two years the French Society has had splendid actors and the plays have been well directed.

U.C. MEN DIVIDED IN OPINION ON PLAN OF COMPULSORY FEE

New System Might Allow Outsiders to Crash Year Parties

MUCH OBJECTION VOICED

Feeling That Plan Would Tend to Greatly Increase
College Spirit

"I am not in sympathy with the idea," said W. W. Buchanan, II M. and P. U.C., when questioned by "The Varsity" regarding the new three dollar fee for the Literary and Athletic Society as proposed at Tuesday evening's meeting of the Lit.

"In the first place," he continued, "it would make the class parties more crowded, and they are certainly bad enough now. The present system enables anyone desiring to attend parties to do so by paying the fee, and those who do not wish to attend don't have to pay for something they're not getting. The new system would allow for more outsiders to crash the parties, for if everyone in the year had an admittance card, others could always borrow cards from those not wishing to attend. The result would be not a U.C. party but a free-for-all. Other college have exclusive parties and I don't see why we should open up an avenue whereby outsiders can be treated to an evening's entertainment."

H. B. Bell, III C. and F. U.C., stated, "I am in favour of the new system. I have looked into the matter very carefully and I think it is a good plan to thus split things up and make it easier for every man to be an actual member of his year."

"I think that for the sake of the college spirit everyone should take part in year activities," said R. K. Cameron, IV U.C., "and therefore this fee should be collected from every man. As it is now, there are some who never pay in anything, but with a compulsory fee of $1.00 for the year activities, every man would be taxed and in all probability more money would be placed at the disposal of the year executives than under the present system."

"I think it will bring a greatly increased attendance at class parties," stated Donald Jack, III U.C., "for those who don't dance will give their cards to men in other faculties. S.P.S. men won't have to crash U.C. parties any more. They can go on borrowed tickets. I think that under the new system the executives will have to find a larger hall."

J. M. Robbie, II Eng. and Hist. U.C., said, "I am in favour of it. I always paid my $2.00 for a year card and I don't see why it shouldn't be better to pay $3.00 instead of $4.00. As to men who don't dance, they can attend theatre parties and the like, and some will probably learn to dance in order to get full value for their money."

"BEER OR NO BEER" IS QUESTION AT MCGILL

Straw Vote on Sale of Beer at McGill Union to be Taken

W.C.T.U. STRONGER

Special to "The Varsity"
Montreal, Que.—At a meeting of the Managing Board of the Daily it was decided that the McGill Daily, following the example of the Literary Digest Poll on Prohibition, should hold a straw vote on the beer question. A coupon will be printed in the Daily on Monday or Tuesday of next week containing the plain question, "Are you in favour of having beer sold in the premises of the McGill Union?" A ballot box will be installed in the basement of the Union in the offices of the Daily, and ballots filled in with "Yes" or "No" may be deposited here between the hours of nine and six o'clock.

It is hoped by the Managing Board that the straw vote will be taken seriously by the student body, and that each student will vote on the merits of this momentous question. A real expression of opinion is sought for, and it is pointed out that the practice of stuffing the ballot boxes by students zealous of either side of the question will turn a serious attempt to secure an honest opinion into a meaningless sham.

A regular referendum may take place later if the results of the Daily's straw vote proves satisfactory. Women will probably be able to express their choice, although their votes will likely be segregated from those of the men so that the interpretation of the poll may be facilitated.

The beer question has been fomenting on the campus for over a week, and it is felt that the straw vote is very timely on the subject. One of its advantages is that its results need not spell either the final adoption or rejection of the idea of selling beer in the Union. Its outcome will be undoubtedly challenged eagerly by the disconsolate losers.

It is rumored from more than one reliable source that the Anti-Saloon League is being flooded with applications for membership and that the executive are considering very seriously the establishment of a Chartered Branch on the campus. At the same time the Women's Christian Temperance Union are holding enthusiastic meetings everywhere, attracting huge crowds of zealots, eager for the chance of soul salvation. The straw vote is expected to be one of the heaviest ever held in the history of college journalism.

The Managing Board is looking forward to its first voting venture with expectation and are soliciting the support of the student body to make it a success.

MODERNISM ATTEMPT TO EFFECT A UNITY OF GOD AND WORLD

Not the Result of Antagonism to Religion But is the Spirit of the Times

OPPOSED TO STATIC VIEW

Professor Taylor Believes it is a Positive Movement in Thought

"Fundamentalism should not be conceived as a question mark against all traditional beliefs, but as a revolt merely for the sake of recreating," stated Professor W. R. Taylor at the Open Forum last night at Wymindwood. The term modernism, the definition of the modern movement in the field of religious thought, appeared first in the encyclical of Pope Pious in 1907. It was used subsequently by others than Catholics as a broad and exclusive term to cover all progressive movements in the field of religion.

Modernism is really an attempt to effect a synthesis or unity in our thought in respect to God and the world. The spirit of Modernism is not the result of antagonism to religion. The last exponents of it have been most sincere and devoted disciples of the faith. It is born from the spirit of the times in which we live.

The spirit of thought during the last three hundred years has insisted on the right of free investigation of all beliefs, and also the inductive method in the field of science. This has resulted in, firstly, investigation of all records of religion, or higher criticism, and secondly the field of science in the evolutionary view of the world. Modernism is on these grounds opposed to a static view of things. It believes that God is imminent in the world, that the Church is not the house of dead traditions, but the tabernacle of a living God, and that the Bible is a record of the experience of men of the ages in which it was written.

Modernism is not a negative movement. It is a positive movement towards individual judgment in thought.

"Varsity" Literary Issue

"The Varsity" announces its first literary issue of the year which will appear Monday, December 17. Contributions of prose and poetry are solicited from the undergraduates and these will be accepted by the Editor up to and including 5 p.m. of Friday, December 14.

Two prizes are offered, of five dollars each. One of these will be awarded for prose and one for poetry. Subjects of a Christmas nature are welcome but will not be given preference either with regard to prizes or publication.

AMBITIONS FORMED WHILE AT COLLEGE BY SERIOUS CO-EDS

Fair Sex Seem to Come Without Purpose But Are Influenced in Life-work

PROFESSIONS PREFERRED

Myth of Coming to College
Merely for Social End
Seems Unfounded

"What am I? Heaven only knows," was one fair senior's reply yesterday to "The Varsity's" query, "What are you going to do after you graduate?"

For the most part the men students seem to come to college with a purpose more or less definitely mapped out in their minds. They have chosen a profession and enrolled accordingly in the Faculty of Medicine, Dentistry or Arts.

It seems to be the fair sex who drift into college with nothing definite in view. After all, four years gives lots of time to decide. One fair senior stated, "No, I did not come to college for the social end of it, still I intended to take that in."

Then there is the exception, who chooses her path and proceeds with unwavering determination. "Yes, I did have a definite purpose in coming to Varsity. I have always wanted to teach and so expect to go to O.C.E. next year."

Amongst those interviewed, there was only one co-ed who admitted her intention of "staying at home." The others felt that they would secure positions, some out of personal desire or ambition, some out of necessity.

There are some who count on a business career, others look forward to library work. These involve post-graduate work. Those students who are specializing in courses here have chosen their work and prepare themselves for it.

One student of Commerce and Finance expressed her desire to get a position in an insurance or a broker's office, "just wherever I can get a good job." It seems that the students will follow their inclinations rather than the line of least resistance. "I won't do anything I don't like," one co-ed explained.

Only one of those interviewed expressed a desire to go to the United States. Her aim is Interior Decorating. "I don't think that Toronto affords many opportunities in that line. I came to college merely for higher education, which would better fit me for what I am to do afterwards."

Even in the faculty of Medicine there are some who have not solved the problem of what to do after graduation. One fifth year Medette says, "When I came to college I had a definite aim in view; as time goes on it gets vaguer and vaguer. Some of the girls will do research work, but most of them will practice sometime, somewhere and somehow."

SEMI-ANNUAL ELECTIONS OF VIC. TAKE PLACE

Keen Interest Displayed in Elections with Close Voting and Acclamations

Although no actual scene took place at the semi-annual elections of 371 at Victoria, the competition was fierce and the interest keen. From all reports, that class has the reputation of being composed of potential politicians and women who are still fighting for women suffrage. So peerless were some of the nominees considered that only two in offices was an election required. Nevertheless, the votes for these officers were so close that several recounts were necessitated, but this may have been due to the dullness of the returning officers, according to the information given to the representative of "The Varsity."

All Victoria is exceedingly enthusiastic about the choice of officers, which are as follows: Pres., E. B. Joffe; 1st vice, Miss Olive Ives; 2nd vice, L. G. Bowles; Sec., Miss Marion Bray; Treas., G. W. Woolner. The honorary president of the class is Prof. H. E. Ford, M.A., Ph.D.

to Graduates

FIRST UNDER NEW CHARTER

The first convocation to be held by Victoria University under its new charter will be in Convocation Hall this evening when degrees in divinity will be conferred, and diplomas presented to the first graduating class of Emmanuel College. This afternoon Professor John Line will be inducted, as professor of religious ethics, in Victoria College Chapel. At the Convocation at 8 p.m. the Moderator of the United Church, Sir Robert Falconer, A. E. Ames and Sir James Woods are expected to speak.

The honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity will be conferred upon the following:

Rev. William T. Gunn, moderator of the General Council of the United Church; Rev. W. A. Bradley, minister of Aberfoyle, Guelph Presbytery; Rev. F. L. Brown, Toronto, superintendent of missions in central Ontario; Rev. J. A. Cranston, minister of Kew Beach Church, Toronto; Rev. G. D. Kilpatrick, minister of Chalmers' Church, Ottawa; Rev. W. J. Mortimer, London, missionary to West China; Rev. C. A. Myers, associate secretary, Board of Religious Education; Rev. R. Newton Powell, minister of Centennial Church, Toronto; Rev. A. Lloyd Smith, minister of Grace Church, Brampton, and Rev. A. E. M. Thomson, minister of Calvary Church, London.

At 6.45 to-day the Board of Regents is giving a dinner for Alumni and visiting ministers.

I.S.A. Meeting Postponed

The meeting of the International Students' Association which was to have been held last night in Alumni Hall, Victoria College, was postponed at the last moment. The purpose in transferring the meetings of the Association from Hart House to Victoria, it is understood, is to encourage the co-educational aspect of the organization.

Blue Squad Trim Intermediate
O.H.A. Champions in Fast Game

STEWART, WHITEHEAD STAR

Work of Every Player on Team
Was the Outstanding Feature

Varsity Seniors won the Sportsmen's Patriotic Association Trophy last night at the Arena Gardens by trimming Port Colborne by a total of 4 to 1.

Beautiful combination, some pretty stick-handling and speedy skating on the forward line, with a stalwart pair of defence men gave the Blue and White squad the victory over the Intermediate O.H.A. champions last night. The team from the Elevator Town played a strong offensive game, rushing up the ice time and time again only to be stopped by "Red" Whitehead and his team-mate. Varsity had the edge on the play in all departments throughout most of the game.

Stewart and Whitehead were the outstanding players on the ice. Time and time again "Bill" Stewart stick-handled his way through the Port Colborne team only to be beaten by the goalie, "Dinty" Moore. Captain Whitehead's work on defence coupled with Bruce Paul, and his magnificent rushes up the ice followed by long hard shots was beautiful to behold. Harley and Murray played well on the forward line, assisted by Jimmie McMullen, who was able to be on the ice, though not yet in the best of condition. Murray Snyder made some beautiful saves in goal.

Mountain was the outstanding player on the Port team, with Morrill, Nixon and Horne playing well for the visitors. "Dinty" Moore was a tower of strength in goal.

The Port Colborne Intermediates, quite rampant in their new outfits and championship crests, started the game with a bang by a rush to the Varsity end, but Snyder saved. Whitehead took a couple of rushes down the ice but missed each shot. Snyder in goal made a beautiful save, and Mountain of the Port team was penalized. With but three minutes to go Stewart made a lone rush to score the first goal. Paul was penalized, and the period ended with the score 1 to 0 for Varsity.

Port again led the attack in the second period, and while the period was yet young Whitehead was sent off to the cooler. Stewart scored on a beautiful pass from Harley in the first eight minutes, with Nixon tallying for Port in the next minute. McMullen played most of this period on left wing. Near and Cuthbert were both benched in this period, with Port playing with a four-man team. The score at the end of the second period: Varsity 2, Port Colborne 1.

Whitehead started the final period with a rush on the Port goal, but

To meet the situation, he now broadcasts his lectures. Members of the class, if they so desire, may "attend" classes by turning on their radios.

THAT INFERIORITY COMPLEX

"Just Pass" is the humble answer given by many an undergraduate when questioned as to his course at the University. For so many years the Pass or, as we should prefer to call it, the General Course, has been so looked down upon by members of the faculty and honour students alike that students registered therein have developed a very conscious feeling of inferiority, and even those who have chosen the General Course in preference to any other have come to feel that they must defend themselves and their choice with many arguments and much bravado. But no matter how logical the arguments, the defense is always weakened by that sense of inferiority from which no pass student seems able to escape.

Critics of the General Course have much right on their side. Originally intended to give a broad general education and to provide a basis for later specialization, the course has degenerated, in the popular opinion at least, into a dumping ground for those social butterflies and intellectual nonentities who wish (or whose parents wish for them) the prestige of a degree, but who have neither the inclination nor the ability to carry an honour course.

This opinion is in some measure justified, and will probably continue to prevail as long as the present system lasts, for pass students are given no opportunity to demonstrate its fallacy. The mere fact of their being in the course is taken as conclusive proof that they are mentally lazy and incapable of any but the most elementary intellectual achievement, and to make sure that they do accomplish very little they are herded together in large classes where any individual contacts with instructors are impossible, where discussions are out of the question and where no attempt is made to encourage facility in the speech of other countries. Yet in spite of these handicaps a number of pass students emerge from the May siege of examinations with an "A" which is generally admitted to be as difficult of acquisition as a "First" in any of the honour courses.

While it cannot be denied that some select the pass course as the line of least resistance, it is no less true that others, even when they have the entrance requirements for an honour course, decide to register in pass because it seems to be the only course in which they can find what they want at the University. They feel that for a general education the pass course is the only one and that most of the honour courses are as narrow and as practical in their scope as any of the courses offered in the Science faculties. With one or two exceptions the honour courses lead directly to some particular line of work after graduation, which may help to explain why, in this essentially utilitarian age, the pass course, which leads to nothing in particular, should be regarded with scorn.

But why should these souls who are idealistic enough to live in the present be despised? And why above all, should they be relegated to intellectual oblivion who have never been given opportunities to disclose their abilities? More tolerance for the present, and for the future,—occasion for at least those pass students who are interested to meet their professors in small tutorial groups, would do much towards removing the "inferiority complex" which has seized such firm hold on that class which forms the majority of our students in Arts.

JUSTIFICATION BY WORKS

There is a violent row at the University of Toronto over the editorial policy of The Varsity. The facts would seem to show that the publication is closely read—The Globe.

From one morning newspaper to another this is indeed a compliment.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Opposes Compulsory Fee
Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
I have before me "The Varsity" for December 6th in which I note that the "class executives strongly support compulsory fee." Of course they do when it means that if the ruling passes the Board of Governors, they can sit back without a care in the world on the strength of money collected from every man in U.C. including those who, like myself, have not the slightest interest in or intention of attending the series of social events sponsored by these executives.

Art, Music and Drama

The French Play

We do not know enough about French Drama even to bluff a criticism of French plays as such and even our ear for French, if any, seems to be getting duller so that we missed the odd line, but the choice of plays for the "Société Dramatique" seemed to us very good. We enjoyed it. The first, "La Joie Fait Peur" by Girardin, was eighteenth-century and serious, with regard for the unities. It was on the Enoch Arden idea and ended happily, but was difficult to act, as there were long soliloquies and several empires, which English amateurs never seem to manage naturally. The cast did very well, the best being Miss

Orr, the mother, and Mr. Peterson, an old servant, and the comedy relief.

The second play was a modern farce about just those types of French people who are so often taken off in English—people who say smart things at high speed and by into tantrums, throwing the crockery about. Mr. Steinhauer as a violent naval officer was the best, though his part was made easier by action.

In both plays the accent was good and the speech most of the time quite clear, though we wish they had been merciful and turned more to the audience.

Erratum

Owing to lack of space on page two of yesterday's issue, a review of the University Players' Guild performance signed by the Dramatic Editor had to be cut with unfortunate results.

This is going to be a real old-timer. Now, can anybody sing us the Pig-iron Rhapsody? We thought not.

VARSITY SENIORS TRIUMPH OVER PORT COLBORNE TO WIN S.P.A.

VARSITY BASKETEERS DRUB CENTRAL "Y"

Uncanny Shooting and Air-tight Defense Feature Game

"Y" MAKE NO FIELD SHOTS

What Varsity Senior basketball team did to Central "Y" last night was too bad! Central didn't get a single field basket and emerged from the fray on the lean side of a 31 to 2 score. The duce was the result of fouls. This has occurred seldom, if ever, in the history of the cage-game. The "Y" team has been playing championship basketball for several weeks and are considered one of the best aggregations in the city.

The Varsity team exhibited an uncanny ability to find the basket, every player scoring except Hurwitz. O'Leary was particularly deadly with 12 points to his credit. At that, the squad was not at its full strength. Captain "Mo" Mitchell and Johnston were unable to play on account of illness.

The team expects to play West End "Y" and possibly Central again next week. These fixtures should fully prepare the Blue and White for their American invasion, which commences December 15th.

Varsity: Forwards, Murray, O'Leary; centre, Salder; defence, Burns, Hurwitz; spares, Beaton, Currie, Newman.

Central "Y": Forwards, Charbonneau, Pogue; centre, Scott; defence, Weyms, Boland; spares, Trowen, Digby, Johnston.

JUNIOR U.C. TAKE ECKHARDT TROPHY

Defeat Senior S.P.S. in Finals for Interfaculty Polo Championship

INTERFACULTY POLO FINAL

Junior U.C. romped home with the Eckhardt Trophy, symbolic of Interfaculty polo championship, by defeating Senior S.P.S. 3-1. Last Monday School tied Junior U.C. 2 all, but yesterday the Arts men left no doubt as to their superiority. The Engineers' rooters were out in full force and the pool resounded with their shouts of indignation at the referee, obviously because they misunderstood the rules of the game, but they certainly cheered their team on.

In the first half, School started it off with a bang and Ayers stopped some difficult shots. But U.C. took the play to the other end of the field and rained shots on Bullen. With the team short one man, Morrow with a pretty shot tallied the first for U.C. The second half was all Arts. Boddy scored number 2 and Armstrong made it 3. School came to life and made it hot for Ayers. Johnny Goss scored School's only, and the score remained 3-1, Junior U.C. winning on the round 5-3.

Jr. U.C.: Goal, Ayers; defence, Secombe and Fee; rover, Spence; forwards, Armstrong, Boddy, Richmond, Morrow, Brown.

Sr. S.P.S.: Goal, Bullen; defence, Little and Moore; rover, Grant; forwards, Thwaites, Goss, Nimmo, Irwin, McCarthy.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Well, here's the first of the many championships coming to Old Varsity this winter. The Blue and White Seniors by virtue of their victory over Port Colborne are the new S.P.A. champions.

"Red" Porter's boys seem headed for a banner season. By the time they have a few more exhibition games behind them to smooth things out a little they will be mighty hard to stop in the O.H.A. series.

The customary jaunt to various U.S. points during the Christmas holidays will provide the necessary competition previous to the opening of the senior series here. In the last few years the class of hockey played by American college teams and various club organizations has improved, making certain that Canadian teams will be given some stiff games on their sojourn across the line.

The Regina Pats junior football team had a snappy work-out on the back campus yesterday. The Queen City boys have a husky aggregation and seem sure to give St. Thomas a tough battle to-morrow afternoon. Four of the Pats were used by the Regina Roughriders against the Tigers last Saturday, and these same four will revert to the junior ranks to-morrow.

The St. Thomas-Regina game will provide a rather unusual feature. Football fans will remember that early in the fall there came out of the West dispatches praising one Saul Bloomfield of the Regina Pats, the sensation of the Western juniors. Almost simultaneously came the word that Saul had left for Queen's. Then came a hiatus (classy word for a gap). Finally we learned that Bloomfield was at Queen's but not eligible for football. Now we learn that the same young gentleman will play for Regina to-morrow, having arrived in Toronto yesterday. This is a perfectly regular procedure, Bloomfield having qualified by playing several games in the West before he left for Queen's. However, this is a somewhat unusual and interesting procedure.

O.H.A. Junior Big Four Schedule Announced

The Big Four O.H.A. junior group, comprising Marlboros, Varsity, Toronto Canoe Club and Parkdale Canoe Club, will play an eighteen-game schedule, with the opening double-header on Friday, Dec. 14. The schedule is as follows:

Tuesday, Dec. 18, Varsity Arena—Toronto C.C. v. Parkdale C.C., Varsity v. Marlboros A.C.

Friday, Dec. 21, Arena Gardens—Toronto C.C. v. Marlboros A.C., Varsity v. Parkdale C.C.

Friday, Dec. 28, Arena Gardens—Marlboros A.C. v. Parkdale C.C., Varsity v. Toronto C.C.

Friday, Jan. 4, Arena Gardens—Varsity v. Marlboros A.C., Toronto C.C. v. Parkdale C.C.

Tuesday, Jan. 8, Varsity Arena—Varsity v. Parkdale C.C., Toronto C.C. v. Marlboros A.C.

Friday, Jan. 11, Arena Gardens—Varsity v. Toronto C.C., Marlboros A.C. v. Parkdale C.C.

Friday, Jan. 18, Arena Gardens—Toronto C.C. v. Parkdale C.C., Varsity v. Marlboros A.C.

Friday, Jan. 25, Arena Gardens—Toronto C.C. v. Marlboros A.C., Varsity v. Parkdale C.C.

Play-off—Wednesday, Jan. 30, and Friday, Feb. 1, between the first and second teams.

SECOND YEAR WIN HONORS IN SCHOOL B.W.F. MEET

School enthusiasts were rewarded last night in seeing many good bouts, both boxing and wrestling in addition to the work shown in fencing. Boxing headed the list of attractions with four main bouts.

In the light heavy, Tyson (179) and Furbur (157) contributed lots of heavy hitting, and the decision was

VIC. SRS. DOWN U.C. JRS. IN CLOSE GAME BY 20-21

The snappiest and closest women's basketball game of the season was staged last night when Victoria College Seniors defeated University College Juniors by a score of 21-20. The first half ended in a tied score of 10-10. In the second period Vic. plunged ahead and made four baskets, but U.C. rallied and evened the score again. Excitement ran high when each scored another basket, but the Scarlet and Gold forged ahead and finally succeeding in making the winning tally. In view of the fact that the U.C. team was entirely from first year, the Red and White have great hopes for their future in basketball. The Vic. Seniors were all experienced players, showing confidence and skill in handling the ball. The return game, which will be full of interest, is to be played in Hart House gym Tuesday. Both sides are hoping for a large crowd of supporters.

Line-up:
Vic. Srs.: H. Hilliard, M. Lauder, L. Moore, D. Ker, H. Beal, A. Muckle, N. Bateman, J. Malcolm.

U.C. Jrs.: W. Hazlitt, A. Grant, L. Crouch, J. Allen, L. Harvey, B. Thomas, G. Brick, E. Breithaupt.

postponed for an extra round, when Tyson won. In the 135, McCarty defeated Price, 118 Shields defeated Brownlee, and Wahl defeated Poppleton.

In wrestling the winners of the various weights were: 174 Tyson, 158 Ferguson, 145 Rudd, 135 Price, 123 Barrett. The fencing honours went to J. F. Moore, a freshman. The second year topped the score in points with 32, followed by first year with 25, fourth year 5, and third 0. The third year were not well represented and came out rather badly.

Moore's beautiful save prevented a score. Varsity led the attack again with Whitehead and Statham playing some fine combination. Snyder again saved some close shots when Port rallied in a desperate attempt to score. On a pass from Statham at centre Harley scored. Mountain made a rush on the Varsity net, but Snyder prevented a score. With eight minutes to go, Paul scored the final goal, making the score 4 to 1 for Varsity.

In the last half minute of play "Red" Whitehead failed to rise after sliding into the boards at the Port Colborne end. He was unmolested by the referee, and did not attempt to leave the ice when the gong sounded. Fearing an accident, the Varsity players rushed back, but it turned out that only

Lovely Laura Louise Overjoyed By Limpid Love-Lorn Limericks

(By D. Kendell)

'The Varsity'
December 7th.

Dear Betty:

The mail-man sure has been making whoopee—and how! My dear, do you know that I had over forty letters this week. I got everything from a offer of marriage to an insult. Oh Boy! It sure is a wonderful life. Thirty-seven men wrote exquisite letters to me and five girls also warbled limericks. I picked one awfully good poem, but I happened to see the man. If I was in the Garden of Eden with him as Adam, I'd choose the serpent. Tut-tut . . . to even think of rhyming chemise with fleas. There was an excellent literary effort by Don G'wan. I fluttered for a moment but I saw by his real name he was a Prof. No Don, I'm to innocent a girlie to travel with a professional. I play safe. Queens Hall overflowed some tragic lines, but I refuse to be rhymed more than once with 'sneezes'.

I could go on for ever talking about the belles I got. Harry, Jean, Humber Valley, Bill, Reggie, Betty, Hickey and three more lines of them were marvellous. Bill's especially. I believe I would have taken J. M. McLean to the show, but Gid got so mad that I simply couldn't. Besides the Royal was too expensive. So I had to take a girl at last. It was the only way I could keep peace in the inner circle of friendship. Its good, real good, extra good. That why it won. Here it is.

P.S. If anybody is awfully disappointed I'll go to the show with them Dutch treat. L.L.

Some lovely night
'Neath a crescent moon
With you at my side
How opportune!

Your rough eyes
And my moustache
With your disposition
How very rash!

A gentle whisper
A sudden sneeze
A doubtful silence
But, dearest, please!

A glance above—
Oh Laura Louise!
A wisp of hair—
How it can tease!

A murmured assent
A naughty squeeze
A quick decision
Ah—Laura Louise!

My head awhirl!
Your sudden kiss
Ye Gods above
What heavenly bliss!

You ran away
My adored one
Come back again
Oh boy! what fun!

By L. M. McLean

I've spent all my money in fees
For parties and dances and teas.
So this is the bait
To get a free date
At the Royal with Laura Louise.

This also is touching:
By a theologian

A young lady called Laura Louise
Once sat on a college man's knees,
When his arms went around her
She said "Why you boonder—
You must be related to DEE."

Not too bad either:

Oh, lovely Laura Louise!
You're really an awful tease,
You offer a show
With yourself, don't you know,
To go where you jolly well please.

It is this point I wish to stress. I am strongly of the opinion that this method would be most unfair. The parties and dances I wish to attend are those at the homes of friends. This is my third year at U.C. and I have never yet felt the need or desire to attend a "class" party. There are others in my year who feel as I do. I must say I entirely fail to see why I should pay even a nickel toward the expenses of such entertainments. I sincerely hope this rule does not go into effect, not for the sake of the dollar bill, but because I believe those who benefit and no one else should pay.

Having "got this off my chest," let me just say, Mr. Editor, while I'm writing that I have been thoroughly in agreement with the policy of "The Varsity" as regards news and in particular its editorials. "The Varsity" has been the best this year that I have ever known it. Go to it—and good luck!

NEGRO FOLK SONGS RHYTHMIC IN FEELING

drum beats of African ancestors. The adaptation of negro folk songs by the whites and their readaptation by the blacks again has rendered it difficult to discern the original melodies, which are divided roughly into work songs, secular songs and spirituals. The work songs are short and sporadic with simple rhythms suited to the action. Interpretative pitch and emphasis distinguish between the road construction songs, cotton picking, corn husking or cradling songs. Of the latter the lullabies form a peculiar class with a slow monotonous tempo.

The secular songs are adapted from ballads and broadsides and deal especially with women. It is in this group the lowest traits of the brutal selfishness of the negro is seen, for few have sentimental feeling. Minstrel songs and dance rhythms also fall into the secular itinerary and they plainly show the influence of adaptations by the white.

The most expressive of these songs are the spirituals, imitations and developments of the evangelical hymns

HOCKEY PROSPECTS LOOK VERY GOOD AT OLD M'GILL

Annual Excursion to Boston and New York Followed with Much Interest

ST. GERMAIN CANNOT PLAY

Toronto Only Other Contender for Intercollegiate Honors

(By L. S. B. Shapiro, McGill Daily)
Montreal, Que., Dec. 9.—With last year's line-up practically intact and a few likely prospects added to the roster, it appears that McGill's hockey campaign for the 1928-1929 season will be a highly successful one. With the Intercollegiate schedule consisting of only the home series with Toronto Varsity, chief interest in the season lies in the senior group of the Q.A.H.A. in which McGill is entered. The idea of an International Intercollegiate Hockey League that had its birth at McGill two years ago is still alive and kicking and unofficial but nevertheless influential groups going ahead with plans that might well culminate in an international schedule to open within a year or two. Thus McGill's annual Christmas trip to Boston and New York will be followed locally with much interest. The Red team plays Yale at New York on the 22nd, and Dartmouth on the 26th; from there they move to Boston, where the Red team play University Club on the 27th and Dartmouth again on New Year's Eve.

The veterans to return to the squad include Maurice Powers in goal, Captain Hall Smith and George MacTier on the defence, St. Germain at centre, and MacGarraile, Dogberry, Robertson and Farquharson on the wing positions.

St. Germain will not play in the Intercollegiate series with Toronto on account of having dropped his year. Among the newcomers to the squad, young Russel Ward, former high school player, and Bert McGillivray look good. Coach Doctor V. P. Heaney is again handling the squad.

The Red team opened the season two weeks ago in a senior group fixture.

JUST ONE MONTH OLD DUTCH DATE CLUB EXPIRES

Ten Desert and Remainder Abandon Fight Against Hoary Custom

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn.—The Dutch Date Club is disbanded. After operating for about a month the club decided that the organization would have to go the way of all which strive against tradition and custom.

The club started with three charter members and gradually grew to include about 15 students. Several meetings were held during the past month. At one of the previous meetings it had been decided to hold a dance at which the Dutch Date ideas would be fully carried out. Girls invited would have to pay for their own admission as one of the principal rulings of the organization.

At the meeting of the society it was found that ten of the former members had deserted the budding organization. After a short but bitter discussion members decided to abandon the fight against time-hallowed tradition and hoary custom.

LIMITS ON HEIGHT VETOED AT WYCLIFFE

Peril of Sunburnt Tonsils Through Gazing at Skyscrapers

LAST MEETING OF TERM

"Resolved that it is in the opinion of this House that the city of Toronto place restriction on the height of its buildings." Such was the interesting question which was battled to a finish by four of Wycliffe's fiery orators on Friday night at the closing meeting of the Literary Society for the term, with Mr. A. J. Jackson, M.A., President, in the chair.

Although the members of the society were frequently swayed back and forth in their opinion concerning this question at issue by the eloquence of the speaker, finally both the popular vote and the decision of the judges gave the victory to the negative. Wycliffe does not consider tall buildings to be detrimental to Toronto.

The speakers for the affirmative were Mr. J. J. Hurley and Mr. P. C. McRitchie, representing the third division, and for the negative were Mr. H. R. Perkins and Mr. C. S. Watkins of the fourth division. The speakers for the affirmative vigorously attacked Toronto's skyscrapers, declaring that they were the cause of downtown congestion, traffic blocks and so danger to life. They also stated that they were neither healthy nor beautiful and dangerous in case of fire.

The negative refuted many of these points and pointed out that if restriction was placed on the height of buildings it would decrease the big building boom which is prevalent at the present time. Incidentally, the leader of the affirmative stated that policemen in downtown sections are liable to get the "white plague," a throat disease caused from gas fumes from cars. The leader of the negative declared that he was surprised that the affirmative should have taken this aspect of the health question, but rather the liability of people to be stricken with sunburnt tonsils from gazing at the tops of Toronto skyscrapers.

The meeting close with a vote of thanks to the judges, Mr. E. S. Ottley and Mr. C. G. Worrall, members of the society, and Rev. J. N. Blodgett, B.A., field secretary for Wycliffe College.

If the women undergraduates propose to collect enough nickels to make up the shortage of $15,000 in the building fund, they will require about forty-seven miles of them, but this should not be discouraging.—Globe.

ENGLISH STATESMEN PICTURED AS BEAST BY PROFESSOR FAY

Motion Before the House is Lost by Vote of 28 to 21

ONE SPEAKER USHERED OUT

Tories Have Emerged More Powerful After Four Years of Administration

"The Conservative party is as old as Homer who invented the chimera—a beast with the head of a lion, the middle of a goat, and the tail of a snake," stated Professor C. R. Fay, speaking for the Government at Trinity Literary Institute on Friday evening. The motion before the house was "Resolved that this house would welcome the election of a Labour government in England." The motion was lost by vote of 28 to 21.

Professor Fay pictured the Premier, Sir Austen Chamberlain, Joynson Hicks and the Chancellor of the Exchequer as parts of the beast.

"The Labour party in England today is made up of men with simple, constructive, hopeful views. And what have they received for the restraint they have exercised? The Trade Union Bill which has dropped their faces in the dirt."

Upholding the Labour party's imperial tariff policy with imperial preference as a growing factor, and their policy of imperial relations based on peace, not war, he pointed out that it was reasonable to presume that this domestic policy would be just as commendable.

"The Conservative government, which after four years of administration has emerged more powerful than ever before, is powerful enough to remain entirely unridicled," said C. L. M. Douglas, leading the attack of the Opposition. He outlined his conception of the essential points of the Labour policy and proceeded to deal with them point by point, showing alleged defects in all the planks of the

DR. MERCER SPEAKS ON ORIENTAL CITIES

Petra a Wonder of World
Springing from Desert
Like Jewel

WILL TAKE TRIP TO EAST

"Rose-red, mauve, purple—a monument, springing up out of the desert like a jewel, is the city of Petra, one of the most remarkable things in the world," said Dr. Mercer on Saturday afternoon in his final lecture upon "Some Ancient Oriental Cities." Petra, or "Selah," meaning "rock," as it was called, is carved from living stone of a glowing red hue; it is a fascination to travellers, and legend relates that they who were lured through the gigantic, scarlet chasm which forms its entrance never returned.

Jerusalem, too, "the City of Peace," he described. Here voices from the past are ever ready to speak to the pilgrims of the present; voices from every age and era, for Jerusalem has changed rulers many times during its vivid and tempestuous history.

VARIOUS OPINIONS ON BEER FOR LUNCH INSTEAD OF COFFEE

Froth-blowers Suffer Defeat in Straw Vote Held at McGill

ONE MAN PREFERS SCOTCH

Ontario Under "Closed Bar"
Too Long to Welcome Change

"Would the men of the University like beer as an option to coffee with their meals in the Great Hall? This was the question asked of a number of undergraduates by "The Varsity." The question was suggested by the decision of the McGill Daily to hold a straw vote on the question, "Are you in favour of having beer sold in the premises of the McGill Union." The vote resulted in a defeat for the froth-blowers.

The majority of the men interviewed by "The Varsity" refused to take the question seriously. It was felt that even if the students wanted it the matter would be turned down by the authorities, and even if their consent would be obtained it would be impossible to secure the necessary legislation.

Among those who took the matter seriously, opinion was divided about evenly pro and con. It was pointed out that the system was worked quite successfully at Oxford and Cambridge, where it was immensely popular. In stressing this aspect Mr. G. L. English, I.U.C., said, "Let us have beer by all means. It would require a special act of the legislature but it certainly is worth it. It is compatible with the best traditions of the old world universities, puritan or otherwise." Many thought it would

VICTORIA COLLEGE HOLDS CONVOCATION

President Congratulates Emmanuel College on Admission

PRESENTATION OF DEGREES

At the Convocation of Victoria College held Friday night in Convocation Hall, an announcement was made by A. E. Ames of a proposed new theological college and men's residence to cost in the neighbourhood of $1,000,000. Victoria College is at present greatly overcrowded, and it is hoped by having a new building to house the divinity students, to relieve this congestion.

Sir James Woods, chairman of the campaign committee, in his speech stressed the need for more ministers, well educated and thoroughly trained.

In bringing greetings from the University of Toronto to the newest member of the Federation, Sir Robert Falconer congratulated Emmanuel College on its admission and gave great hopes of its future success.

Ten men who have been closely identified with the work of the United Church were presented by Principal Gaudier for the degree of Doctor of Divinity—Right Rev. W. M. Gunn, M.A., D.D., Toronto; Rev. of Committee

Special to "The Varsity"
Milwaukee, Wis.—The Poetry Society of Marquette University, Milwaukee, has founded a contest for all undergraduates, irrespective of creed, who are resident in Catholic colleges or universities in Canada and the United States. Rev. Dr. Gerald B. Phelan, professor of Philosophy at St. Michael's College, University of Toronto, formerly of Halifax, N.S., has been appointed the Canadian member of a committee of awards to choose the winner of the $100 intercollegiate prize. The first award will be made next May. Dr. G. N. Shuttler, managing editor of "The Commonwealth," New York, is an associate judge.

AGE OF SPECIALIZATION

Students interviewed by "The Varsity" over the week-end on the question of the "Pass Course" in the University expressed various opinions regarding its potential value to a student. Some spoke quite openly on the matter, while others were somewhat hesitant in expressing their opinions. Mr. W. McDonald, I. year, St. Mike's, stated that in his estimation the Pass Course offered a great deal to the student especially in the way of a liberal education, and that no man should feel inferior because of his following that course.

F. J. McNamara, 3rd year English and History, said: "I believe that a student should specialize in some line. After graduation a man finds himself in a world where everything calls for specialization and one who is trained only in the general finds himself lost when the occasion calls for the particular. A small percentage of students aim at 'A' standing, the majority are satisfied with a lower rating."

R. Bassett, II. Pol. Sc., made the following statement: "The value of the Pass Course is generally proven by the large number of students enrolled in the course. There is no need for anyone to apologize for the course, for while it does not lead to a definite end, nevertheless a graduate has something worth while when he receives his B.A. on completion of four years' work in the Pass Course."

One fair graduate now attending O.C.E. who requested that her name be withheld, stated that as a graduate of the Pass Course she could see nothing wrong with it. "It gives a broader education," she stated, "and if a student exercises care in choosing the subjects to be followed, he or she will benefit greatly."

Mr. A. Weller, III. Honour Philosophy, said: "If a student aims at a high standing he ought not to feel inferior to an honour student, but I do not, on the other hand, believe that anyone enrolls in the Pass Course merely with the idea of just scraping through. If a young man entering the University for the first time has not decided upon his vocation, the Pass Course is the logical course for him to follow."

First year co-eds as well as freshmen at the University of Indiana will wear the green cap.

Beautiful girls in dazzling gowns made a picture of fairyland at the first formal Hart House ball of the season, the annual At-Home of the Athletic Association.

The traditional big block "T" with its scarlet maple leaf, emblem of heroic conflict for Alma Mater, featured the decorative scheme. On each wall were draped the colours of the Big Four, McGill, Queen's, Western and Toronto, while the opposite side had the three jousting flags that are flown at Intercollegiate games, Western being not here represented as their army have not yet passed the College of Heralds.

But the jolly moon chuckling at the play of the spotlight in the many moon waltzes was the real thrill of the evening. "He looks more than half shot," said one, as he followed the cheerful example.

"Of the four hundred and ten tickets issued, only two went to freshmen, and those for athletic distinction," said Murray Snyder, chairman of the committee. However, the many freshets added much to the charm of the occasion.

"Sorry, sir, no smoking in the Pool," and "Sorry, sir, no smoking in the Library," were courteous warnings but hardly helpful to those who must not smoke in public view in the halls or among the palms of the West Common Room.

"Awfully sorry, but we were right here," explained many who when filling programmes had said, "They'll only be dancing in the big gym, so we'll meet there."

Attention was directed to a party in the upper gallery when several glasses crashed to the floor right by the cheerleaders of the patronesses.

Mrs. D. Bruce Macdonald, Mrs. C. H. Mitchell, Mrs. Wallace Secombe, Mrs. M. A. Mackenzie, Mrs. T. A. Reed and Mrs. V. Easton Brown as patronesses were receiving in the entrance hallway leading to the big gym.

BAR FOR LIQUOR OPENED IN REFRESHMENT ROOM

Dean of Windsor Approves;
Better to Drink in Good Company

Special to "The Varsity"
Windsor, Eng.—A bar for the sale of alcoholic beverages has been opened in the refreshment room of the Royal Albert Institute, Windsor, England, and has earned the support of the Dean of Windsor, Dr. A. Baillie. The Dean's attitude is that it is much better for drinking to be done in good company and under proper control than in questionable resorts.

This innovation has earned the approbation of Colonel C. R. Grant, general secretary of the T. H. Great Britain's foremost war memorial society. Colonel Grant said, "I think people will drink, and it is much better to drink in decent company than to go away by themselves and load up."

NUNC EST BIBENDUM

Down at Old McGill recently there was quite a pother over a suggestion to serve beer in the Students' Union. Since this institution is controlled by the Students' Executive Council, the issue became uppermost in student discussions, argument raged in the McGill Daily and finally the newspaper held a referendum in connection with the elections.

The Noes had it. It is significant that by a large majority, the men of the ranking university in Canada's first "wet" province, refused to permit the sale of beer in their Union. And it is of further significance that most of those interviewed by "The Varsity" here were opposed to the idea. There is no immediate possibility of its being applied at our university, of course, because of the provisions of the Ontario Liquor Control Act.

Student sentiment, then, appears to be against the introduction of strong refreshment into their clubs. This marks a sharp difference between the universities of the New and the Old Worlds.

For if one may believe all that one reads, the foaming stein and the sparkling glass bulk large in the background of student Europe. The eminent historians that compose our musical comedies in a foreign collegiate setting would be quite lost without the opportunity of building up a big scene around a rousing drinking song. Memoirs of all kinds dealing with student life are agreed in describing the preface to thunderous discussion of politics and literature. Many of us have heard from Oxford men living here of the feats of skill and endurance performed in this worthy pastime by students at the old English universities.

There seems to be some effort made in American colleges to retain the traditional colour of this custom. Some have rooms in the cellars of their unions on which is neatly printed: Rathskellar. The students sit therein and drink ginger beer.

How many of us would transplant the custom of stimulating thinking with drinking? Here, in our opinion, at least, the stimulant would have little effect in the provocation of thought and epigram. We are a stolid people and when we wish to speak our minds on anything in life or art, we deliver our message on formal occasions, with due warning, and without previous moistening.

Another Review

Editor, "The Varsity,"
Dear Sir:
It seems to be quite out of order for one from School to agree with anybody from U.C. in "The Varsity" correspondence column. I therefore disagree with the opinion of U.C. '31 re the Uptown as expressed in Wednesday's edition.

"The Blue and White" incident was very obviously introduced to save a dying song by appealing to civic pride. Had the appeal been well made, I might have accepted it more gracefully. But that appeal was on a par with the rest of the performance. One approximation of a U. of T. penant was the only distinctive prop employed. And if the spectacle of several chorus girls labelled "Princeton," "Yale," "Harvard," etc., shouting our Alma Mater generates in U.C. '31 a twinge of pride, I wonder at his discernment. The type of show is all too prevalent. Having no merits of their own, their producers as a last resort drag in the dear old flag to patriotic music, and the audience, seeing only the flag and not the shabby purpose

The Man Who Laughs: One notes by a piece in Friday's paper that the fair sex seems to come to college without purpose but are influenced here in life work and that the myth of coming to college for social purposes seems entirely unfounded. Lou Guffaws pass along the ranks of the men students. One is willing to bet that a preponderance of the ladies who enter college have visions, somewhere in the beyond, of a ceremony involving orange blossoms, confetti, and soft music. And anyone who attempts to prove otherwise is simply talking bunk, hooey and hokum. Arise, ye militants!

Yes, our feet sometimes feel that way: Amazingly we discovered the following sentence in Sir Harry Johnston's volume in the Pioneers of Empire series, p. 113: "In the summer of 1731, he (Verendrye) and his expedition . . . skated on snow-shoes down the ice of the Winnipeg River." We figure that somebody has kind of been kidding Harry along.

Friday Afternoon Recital

An interesting departure from the ordinary procedure in Friday recitals came in the lecture recital given in the Music Room by Mr. Thomas Crawford of the Toronto Conservatory of Music. In response to repeated requests, the Music Committee arranged this hour of pleasant instruction with the aim of widening the knowledge of those who attend the recitals of the House with respect to the fundamental forms of musical composition. Mr. Crawford fulfilled his purpose admirably and conducted his lecture in a vein of good humour which delighted his hearers. Taking the well known theme of a once popular song, the lecturer built a fugue upon it in the style of J. S. Bach and then went on to cast it into the style of a Mozart sonata. The rudiments of musical form were then discussed and from that point Mr. Crawford passed on to comment upon the Sonata and Symphonic form. The illustrations of the lecture were particularly apt and the intimate manner in which he carried on his remarks clothed a rather dull subject with entrancing interest. We are sure that the success of this venture will lead to a frequent repetition in the future.

Sunday Evening Concert

The Canadian Singers gave the fifty-first Sunday Evening Concert in Hart House last night and sang to a house packed to every conceivable corner. Contrary to the usual custom, the artists sang from the dais of the hall and we are obliged to remark that in our opinion the choice of that position was a mistake. In our humility, we sought a seat near the back of the hall and found to our regret that certain numbers were far too intimate to grip listeners so remote from the performers. We know the abilities of the Canadian Singers too well to consider for a moment that under these circumstances, our judgment upon their programme can be entirely fair to them; but our comment will serve a purpose if it obviates a repetition of an error in judgment which considerably diminished the pleasure of a great portion of the audience who were so unfortunate as to find themselves at the back of the hall. Too great a burden was imposed upon the light voices of these six women.

In a few numbers the harmony was slightly fuller, the beautiful quality of the Singers' tone overcame these disadvantages and in the Papillon and the Stabat Mater particularly, the total warmth and volume were truly enjoyable. On the other hand the intricate contrapuntal passages of the Mozart became thin and uninteresting as the various qualities of the voices became blurred by distance.

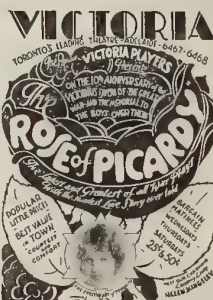

Speaking generally, however, the concert was a genuine pleasure, and the French-Canadian and English Folk Songs were received with obvious enthusiasm: we must comment

INTERNATIONAL INTERCOLLEGIATE HOCKEY LEAGUE NEXT SEASON?

JUNIOR ASSAULT BILLED FOR DECEMBER 12 AND 13

Same Classes as Last Year
School Men Should Cut Wide Swathe

The Junior Assault-at-arms, which is open to any undergrad who has never won a Senior Interfaculty bout, is billed for Wednesday and Thursday, December 12 and 13. This is the big chance for any budding boxer, wrestler or fencer to strut his stuff and show the world at large and the powers that be around Varsity in particular, that he will be a contender for a place on the Intercollegiate team.

The classes this year are the same as last. In wrestling, the divisions are 118, 125, 135, 145, 158, 174 and heavy. The boxers are divided into six classes, namely, 112, 118, 135, 145, 160 and 175 lbs. The fencing will be one general class open to all. The lists are in the Athletic Office and any who have a leaning towards the "manly" arts are urged to get down their names before it is too late. It is a safe bet that the fur will fly and some gore will be spread around, because this is the chance for friendly enemies to get together and settle their differences. From the way that they have been capping around all fall, the School men ought to cut a wide swathe in the assault. Remember the dates, Dec. 12 and 13. Be on deck when the bell rings and let the fun begin.

Chicago is going to teach aviation in some of its schools. What schools? High schools, of course!—Los Angeles Examiner.

The secret of many a man's success merely lies in his ability to keep it a secret.—Los Angeles Examiner.

Cape Girardeau, Mo.—A legacy of approximately $40,000 has been given to the University of Missouri by terms of the will of Charles Kiepe.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

A wire to "The Varsity" from the Sporting Editor of the McGill Daily appearing in to-day's issue tells of a rather interesting development in the Intercollegiate hockey series. There appears to be a further attempt to form an International Intercollegiate Hockey Association, including Varsity, McGill and two American universities. Although it is unlikely that anything will be done in that line this year, yet the suggestion is a good one. The addition of the American colleges would not only add colour to the group but would round out what looks like a very weak organization. At present with Varsity and McGill the only members of the union, the league lacks attraction; in fact they will be unable to challenge through the C.A.H.A. But with the United States entries included there would be a fine group that would not only attract crowds but would also mean better competition for all concerned.

Queen's has another star at the University. When the Regina Pats defeated the St. Thomas Tigers for the Canadian junior title, Saul Bloomfield scored all their points, and that lad is at Queen's. That means a good left foot booter for their football squad next year.

The junior assault at arms to be held at Hart House on Wednesday and Thursday should bring out some promising material. There are a number of vacancies on the team that will represent the university this year, as only two members of the boxing team are back, Jimmie Jackson and Rusty MacGee, while the wrestlers have very few men back. The fencing is the only line where there seems to be a good team left. The fact that but few men are back will give impetus to the number of entries as there are plenty of places on the team for new men that show ability in the assault.

Faculty and students met for a cheery social hour at tea in Croft Hall in U.C. yesterday. Mrs. Chant, Mrs. Needler and Mrs. Curdell of the Thursday Tea Club were hostesses.

"Red Devil" is not considered a dignified name for the literary magazine of the University of Utah; it is to be called the "Utah Crimson" hereafter. The faculty requested this change saying that the name was not in keeping with the dignified character of the magazine.

VARSITY INTERMEDIATES IN FAST O.H.A. GROUP

Blue and White Have Many Candidates for Positions on the Team

This year Varsity is again entering a team in the Intermediate O.H.A. series. Although no group schedule has as yet been drawn up the teams composing the group will be Richmond Hill, Newmarket, Willowdale, Oshawa and Varsity. This looks like one of the best Intermediate groups in the country. It is almost entirely different from the one the Blue and White played in last year. Newmarket, who eliminated Varsity last year, being the only team remaining. Richmond Hill's strength is uncertain but Oshawa can be counted upon to place a strong team on the ice. Willowdale gives evidence of lining up a very strong contender and have already signed several Senior O.H.A. players. The Varsity Intermediates will not start practising until after the holidays. Judging from the number of candidates who have signed up, the Intermediates ought to present a strong front before the season opens, and this number will be augmented by several good players who fail to make the Senior team.

BLUE AND WHITE JUNIORS ALL SET FOR OPENING

Have Been Practising Faithfully for the Hockey Season

The Big Four Junior hockey series commences next Friday night, when the Varsity Juniors will book up with Toronto Canoe Club in the first game. The Faddlers are the team that defeated West Toronto, which ruined the chances of the Blue and White boys copying the S.P.A. trophy. But the Varsity squad is a much improved aggregation from the one which competed in the S.P.A. The boys have been practising conscientiously five days a week and have engaged in two successful exhibition tilts, trimming St. Mike's 3-1 and St. Andrew's College 6-2.

Brant, Laing, Crerar and Hetherington are the scoring threats on the Varsity team, the last named accounting for two goals in the 6 to 2 fixture. The same lad also acquitted himself in the approved fashion in the game with West Toronto. With the additional practices and new material, the prospects of winning the Big Four group are brighter, and although Marlboros are called to win, Varsity will supply plenty of contention.

too upon the stroke of creative genius which transformed the hackneyed Alouette into a gem of Folk Song, overflowing with fun. The programme closed with "Drink to me Only" as an encore, and this number the Singers sang with a depth of sympathy and wealth of poetic beauty which it seldom receives. Their diction lends itself so admirably to song and the delicious round vowels both in their French and English speech was a treat. Therein the training of Mr. Campbell McInnes was obvious. Mr. McInnes conducted some of the numbers, but the major part of the programme was rendered in an intimate fashion by the singers without a baton and unaccompanied. It did seem unfortunate that this intimate atmosphere should fail to reach all who were present.

ANNIHILATING DISTANCE

Nothing so completely enters into the Yuletide touch as on Christmas Eve, or on Christmas Day, to receive a telegram from a close relation or dear friend conveying season's greetings. To have this message in your hands, written on a beautifully printed form, with an artistic interpretation of the spirit of the season itself kindles the heart strings as would no mere letter or card. It spans the bridge of distance; it brings the absent one close to you.

Unfortunately, everyone cannot be where the heart would desire at this season of seasons. Business reasons, personal reasons or the shadow of accident may intervene. It is with a view to meet such happenings that the Canadian National Telegraphs have organized their titanic corps of workers to co-operate with those who wish to send greetings at this holiday time. Special telegraph forms, with an attractive Christmas scene depicting the old-time waives and beautifully printed in five colors, will carry all messages of greetings and no matter how far away the sender may be from its destination, it will flash over the tens of thousands of miles of telegraph wire in a second.

As Christmas is a busy time further to facilitate the sender a book of messages will be at his disposal to select from should he be special. Nor is the ocean a barrier. Special Christmas cable greetings will be flashed across the broad waste of water by the Canadian National Telegraphs for one dollar. Of course, these messages are selective ones in order to meet this low rate, but they are replete of Christmaside and adequately convey the true Christmas spirit in a few words. So though the sender may be thousands of miles away from hearth and home or dear friends, yet the Canadian National Telegraphs will bring him so close that only a few minutes separate the distance.—(Adv)

Bullshooters Assemble To Seek Cause Of Dirty Smudge Appearing On Moon

(A. H. Arell)

Boom! Boom! let the tom toms resound, let the bullshooters assemble, a dirty smudge has appeared on the moon. Who has caused this dirty smudge is the question. Let the hunters from across the Taddle decide this absorbing question.

And it went thus:—
There was a young lad named Bell,
Who had a great deal to tell,
He said with much rust he was filled
With disgust,
Let the Editor go plumb to . . .

Trinity.
And the reply:—
Now the same little lad named Bell
Knew not what he was to tell,
He made quite a fake as he made a mistake,
Now the Asses can go plumb to . . .

Knox.
"There is an adequate explanation for all this but we can't elaborate on it here."

And so the 'vested' interests don't run things, we suppose he still believes in Santa Claus, and thinks if he went to the Solmen Asses in Concave and said they were a lot of asses they would reward him for his upstanding truthfulness by giving him the job.

Which reminds us:—
Our poor old Varsity,
The Asses would make a Farcity,
They sang quite a song
And we won't say they're wrong,
But thanks be there's still the Varsity.

And so in our wandering in the Happy Hunting Ground we came to the pool of everlasting childhood. After one has been dipped into it, one runs about the street at night wearing lanterns, plays with silverware, etc., and takes dolls to dances.

There was a young man from School
Whose head had been dipped in this pool,
He went to the dance with two pair of pants,
Now I ask you who was the fool.

Boom! Boom! let the tom toms resound, the bull has been shot, and will the editor give an adequate explanation of the finding of the dirty sack in the Varsity office.

Complaint from Wycliffe

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:
May I take the privilege of using this column to voice a complaint of many students who live in the immediate vicinity of Hart House. It is the extraordinary noise made by forgetful individuals when making their departure from Hart House in the "two sma' hours" after an occasion of revelry.

The sleep of a student isn't always as sound as it might be, especially after an evening of study, and to be awakened by a bedlam of noise such as occurred after Friday night's dance between the hours of 1.30 and 2.30 a.m. was fierce—to put it mild. Granted that much of the noise is necessary, such as trying to start a car on a cold morning, but surely the general noise could be cut down considerably such as shouting, blowing of trumpets and honking of horns. It isn't necessary, for instance, to have a siren or horn blowing continuously from the entrance to Hart House to the main streets.

I have no desire to be a "killjoy" in voicing this complaint, but only plead that those among us who "trip the light fantastic" may remember their fellow students who are trying to get some well-earned sleep.

Yours sincerely,
J. J. Hurley,
Wycliffe College.

platform. "A good government should have certain definite qualities, namely, discipline and unity in the party in power, experience, and the confidence of the electorate. The Conservative government, embodying all these, gives ideal administration."

Following the first two speakers, many members spoke from the floor of the house, creating a heated discussion, during which one speaker was suspended and ushered out by the sergeant-at-arms. Government members argued that the policy of the Conservatives was not in the best interests of the country or of the empire, laying hold of the Anglo-French Pact as an instrument with which to flail their opponents' foreign relations. Their domestic policy was also strongly attacked.

Speakers on the Opposition side accused the Government of not having a clearly defined policy and of using vague terms. Considerable defence of the Conservative party was offered. The Opposition thought that the Labour party lacked experience and capable leaders.

Those speaking from the floor of the house were, for the Government, J. C. Clough, G. O. Murell-Wright, A. C. Craig, W. S. B. Wong, A. W. Walters and E. Sinfield; for the Opposition, Glen Wilton, R. H. Loosmore, J. T. Wilson, G. H. Bitton and W. Bilbrough.

be very interesting to see by means of a straw vote just what student opinion on the matter was, especially since this would have no definite result as to the final adoption or rejection of the matter. Others thought that if we were to go that far we might as well go all the way. As one man said, "Beer is all right, but I prefer Scotch."

Two Medical students were strongly opposed to the matter. "It is absolutely contrary to the traditions of our University. The authorities would never stand for it," they said. Others thought that Ontario had been too long under the influence of the closed bar to welcome a return to such a situation. Quebec was under entirely different circumstances. Others were opposed to the measure on its merits. The opinion was expressed that the meals were bad enough now. Mr. W. R. Howard said "Beer for Hart House?" I should say not. Anyway, froth-blowing is a messy business."

UNKNOWN ARTIST DISPLAYS HIS WORK ON KNOX FENCE

Artist's Efforts, First Displayed
Saturday Morning, Continued
Following Night

AUTHORITIES CO-OPERATE

Caricatures and Proverbial Inscriptions Are Prominent in the Exhibition

Exhibitions of art have lately been on display at Knox College. The gallery is located on the newly erected fence between Knox College and North House of Emmanuel College. A suitable background having been prepared by the authorities, the first offering was seen on Saturday morning, including work both elementary and advanced. With bright red standing out against sober gray, the artist's efforts stood out to good advantage.

A prominent position was given to a cat in real fighting trim, while a checker-board danger sign also had an important place. Inclusions were also conspicuous and included such expressions as "The End of the Road," "The Great Divide," "Thou Shall Not Pass," and "The Home of the Theologians."

The authorities seemed anxious to co-operate with the artist, losing no time in providing a clean canvas for the artist to work upon during the silent hours of the next night. The result was that the morning light revealed two new efforts of the artist, namely "Much Ado About Nothing" and "And So To Bed."

COLLEGE EDUCATION NOT A NECESSITY

So Says Editor of American Magazine in Address on Open Gate

BUT IT IS AN ASSET

Special to "The Varsity"
Columbus, Ohio.—"A college education is not a necessity to success in the business world," stated Merle Crowell, editor of the American Magazine, in an interview. Mr. Crowell visited the campus to take part in the programme of the Ohio newspaper conference, delivering an address on "The Open Gate."

"While a college education is not a necessity, it is most certainly an asset. It is in reality a tool, whereby the college man can help himself in his chosen profession," he elaborated.

The editor and publisher further has a distinct view of the attitude of the college man after graduation. "If the college graduate can forget that he is a college graduate and humble himself enough to learn his business from the ground up, he will no doubt pass the non-college man. This, however, many college men are unable to do."

Mr. Crowell is in a position to judge the college man, as he states, "Every year thousands of people from all parts of the country and from all walks of life come to me looking for work and among them are many college graduates."

LACK OF CANADIAN HUMOUR DEPLORED

Types of Humor Analysed and Leacock's Humor Said to be American

HISTORY OF "GOBLIN"

The Women's Press Club had as its guests Mr. McDougald, editor of "Goblin," and Mr. N. A. Benson, former dramatic editor of "The Varsity."

Taking "Humor" as his text, Mr. McDougald gave a very enjoyable talk on Canadian humorists in general, and the "Goblin" in particular. Humorous magazines, he thought, are tending to become more sophisticated. The highest type are smart and full of nonsense, but never slap-stick. With the old type of humor, one found some fifty-seven College Comics on this continent turning out much the same thing—slap-stick, not always funny, and usually dealing with one of two topics, liquor and women. These subjects were funny—once or twice.

Real humor was the kind that was written because something tickled your fancy, the sort of stuff the author got more kick out of than anybody else. Bitterness in humor was banned, from a business point of view. Satire written by somebody "with a hate on" might be superficially amusing, but it didn't engender a lasting feeling of satisfaction.

Stephen Leacock is undoubtedly the greatest Canadian humorist, but his humor is American, in the opinion of Mr. McDougald. Canadians take themselves too seriously as yet to not the spontaneity, or abandon, and of course, they are up against a tremendous inferiority complex as far as all Canadian literature is concerned.

Asked about the founding of the "Goblin," which began at this University some seven years ago, Mr. McDougald said that its start was an absolute necessity, since there were several groups at the University who wanted to see their stuff in print, and no publisher would take it. With a borrowed printing press, they got out the first issue of two thousand copies, which sold out in half an hour. In the course of the varied and interesting career which followed, the magazine was obliged to sever its connection with the University, since it was frowned upon as not quite dignified enough for University circles. Speaking from experience, Mr. McDougald advised anyone who might be interested in getting out a literary publication to wait until they had finished college—if they wished to graduate!

IMAGINATIONS RIOT WITH DARING LINES ON 'BLUE BIRD' SETS

Misses Boutbee and Heddle
Aid Mr. Aikens in Scenery for Maeterlinck Drama

ILLUSION OF UNREALITY

Miniature Sets Constructed and Modified as Practical Difficulties Arise

"We are simply allowing our imaginations to run as riotously unconventional as they will," said Miss Margaret Boutbee and Miss Muriel Moodie Heddle, in regard to their treatment of the settings for Maeterlinck's "Blue Bird." Miss Boutbee and Miss Heddle are graduates of the Grange, and with the help of students from the art school and a carpenter, they are making the scenery in Hart House.

They first built complete little models of the six sets and collaborated with Mr. Carroll Aikens in the interpretation dependent upon his direction. Now as the actual work progresses their plans are modified and changed with the difficulties of space and intricacy of plot. Several flats have to actually disappear, which presents the problem of building sets suitable to be handled by mechanical devices.

Among the flats which are now near completion are the charming cottage of the grandparents and the scene of the "Luxuries." The latter is an ory of line and colour which typifies the tone of the action. Effects of the unreal are being produced by treatments in black and gold, and blue. Such properties as grapes like apples and apples like pumpkins carry out the prevailing tone of modernity and feeling of the unusual.

"The difficulty of procuring a real but actually blue bird of size and docility is proving to be one of our amusing worries," said Miss Heddle in explaining the details of the scenes. Mr. Aikens also stressed the unconventionality that will mark not only the interpretation of the action, but also the backgrounds. They have been working over a week on the plans which were plotted out a month ago, and hope to complete them successfully in another at least.

Mr. Grunwald Describes Conditions in Russia During Revolution

The German Study Club opened a novel meeting at Annesley Hall last night by the reading of a play, "The Kleptomaniac." The readers were, with one exception, actual Germans, and the rapid fire of conversation gave the members an excellent opportunity of hearing the language as spoken in the Vaterland.

The outstanding feature of the evening was Mr. Grunwald's speech on "The Political and Cultural Background of Bolshevism." The speaker, who lived in Russia during the revolution, was reticent concerning his personal experiences in these years, designating them as "zu schrecklich." Even before the World War, he said, every man who knew anything of the conditions prevalent in Russia could foresee in her decadence the horrors of the revolution. Communism might in some degree be traced to the very large and patriarchal family circle. Miss Krimm contributed to the musical enjoyment of the evening by several piano solos. Refreshments and singing brought the meeting to a close.

Father McMahon of Newman Club officiated at the annual reception and dinner of the Loretto College Sodality.

The service, which consisted of the formal reception of new members, a short address and Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament, was followed by a banquet in the college dining room, which was prettily decorated for the occasion.

Among the guests of the community were Rev. Father McMahon, Rev. Father Bondy of St. Michael's and Rev. Father McGrath of the China Mission Seminary.

Philosophy of Religion took place. The ceremony was conducted by Chancellor Bowles, who was assisted by Rev. J. E. Reid, Rev. D. L. Gordon and Rev. John J. Ferguson. Professor Line gave an appropriate address.

"Varsity" Literary Issue

In its last issue of the term, that of Monday, December 17, "The Varsity" will depart from its newspaper form to include contributions of a literary nature. Undergraduate readers are invited to submit poetry and prose for this issue. Articles and poetry bearing on the Christmas season will be welcomed, but those dealing with other subjects will receive equal consideration.

Two prizes of five dollars each are offered for the best efforts in poetry and prose. The contest closes at 5 p.m. Friday, December 14. Matter must be written on one side of the paper only and may be handed in to the news office in Hart House or to the women's office, Room Two, University College.

Slight Improvement In King's Condition

According to reports received early this morning, there is a slight improvement in the condition of His Majesty King George V. Although the fever persists, the situation is improving, and is less menacing than last evening, "The Varsity" ascertained.

Recent bulletins have indicated that the infection has been affecting His Majesty's heart. The present report gives reason to hope for a change towards the better. In the meantime, the Prince of Wales is rushing home and expected to arrive shortly at his father's bedside.

TRINITY AND VIC. TOO

"Sing a song of Christmas," say the girls of Loretto Abbey as they make ready their tree for the party which is to take place next Saturday. Members of about fifty poor families will come for a share of the season's cheer, which will be gained for them by the efforts of the girls. An eye for the practical side of things is not lacking either, since sweaters are knitted for warm and attractive gifts; nor do the girls have any transportation worries since Loretto girls become chauffeurs for the nonce, driving their car-loads to and from the scene of festivity.

Trinity and Victoria are also doing their share of contributing to the spirit of the season. Numerous dolls dressed by the girls of Victoria will be gay messengers at the Settlement.

FOOTBALL IS SOURCE OF COLLEGE FUNDS

Average Football Player in U.S. is Worth $10,000 a Year

Chicago, Ill.—The average football player is worth $10,000 a year to his school, according to James Weber Linn, professor of English. In a speech before football enthusiasts Professor Linn said: "Many of the big universities clear $200,000 a year in their football season. That's $600,000 for the players' three years of eligibility. Thus each man brings in about $10,000 from gate receipts alone." But in return he gets nothing but cracked ribs and hard looks from his professors for falling in his studies.

EMBRYO WOODSMEN OBSERVE CEREMONY OF REMOVING LIONS

Majestic Animals Now Repose

ANNUAL CUSTOM

Statues Are Said to be Valuable to Students as Book Repository

On the evening of Friday last the entire first and second years of Forestry turned out to transport the cast-iron lions that usually repose at the front door of the old Botany Building, to the steps of the new building of the department of Forestry. Amid hilarious shouts the panting freshmen bore the rather weighty animals, the avowed purpose being to prepare them for their labours during the summer in portaging. The gloom of midnight was dispelled by a blazing torch of white pine. It is creditably reported that mishaps were not lacking in the slippery snow as the procession wended its way across the whitened campus.

The annual removal of these lions to the new Forestry building has become a tradition since the faculty moved into its new home. The students claim that the statues belong to them and are valuable to them because the space underneath them is used as a repository for text books.

The rumour goes that as the lions are in a sad condition for lack of paint, arrangements are being made for a new coat. The colours proposed are either green or the colours of the faculty—green, blue and white.

FORESTRY PROBLEMS REVIEWED BY HEAD

Foresters' Club Hears Interesting Address by Mr.
A. H. Richardson

REFORESTATION DISCUSSED

Mr. A. H. Richardson, the man in charge of reforestation in the Ontario Forestry Branch, was the speaker at the Foresters' Club meeting in Hart House Thursday night.

In one of the most interesting addresses heard by the club in some time, Mr. Richardson outlined the work of his division of the Government service. There are three phases in reforestation as carried on by the O.F.B.—seed collecting, nursery practice and actual planting. In the first of these, the speaker stated, our Provincial Government is the leading organization in Eastern Canada and the States. Each year thousands of bushels of cones are gathered throughout the province under his supervision. There are many forest tree nurseries in the province, the most important of which is at St. Nilians. This year ten million young trees were sent out for planting—ten times the number distributed six years ago.

The most important project of the Branch has been the planting of trees in Prince Edward County to stop the shifting of sands. Although all other methods have been futile, Mr. Richardson stated that the windbreaks of pine are proving successful in saving farms, roads and dwelling places which inevitably would have fallen prey to the shifting sands. "I feel perfectly sure that reforestation is going to go ahead in Ontario," said the speaker in closing.

ROMANCE VERSUS FINANCE

We note with interest the fact that the Dutch Date Club, recently organized at the University of Minnesota, has disbanded after enjoying one month of life. Our dispatch states that the organization was compelled "to go the way of all which strive against custom and tradition."

There are organizations, though they are very few, which might successfully fly in the face of tradition, but this particular association was doomed before it ever began. Under present conditions, we cannot see how people could consider the formation of a Dutch Date Club, and still less can we understand how such a club, once organized, could continue to exist for even one month. The charter members and those who were associated with them must have been much impressed with their own ingenuity to have persevered as long as they did.

Yet though the organizing of a club to put into practice "Dutch Date" theories is perhaps a novel idea, the theories themselves are not new. In our own University there are two examples of divided expenses—class parties and Varsity Staff parties. Yet these could not be called strictly Dutch dates, for though the expenses may be borne equally by men and women yet gasoline, taxi fares and street-car tickets always seem to be extras that must be looked after by the man. Any other sort of a social engagement could not possibly be managed in the "dutch" way. It would be manifestly unfair for a man to ask a woman to an expensive entertainment and then to expect her to buy her own ticket. And equally obviously, of course, a woman could not invite a man to a dance and expect him to pay for his good time.

In any case, until there is absolute equality of sex and until women are economically independent, the Dutch date must be regarded as impractical. At the present time the men enjoy too much their superior sense of doing a favour to the dear things, and the women enjoy too much the dependent feeling of having some man spend a great deal of money on them, to give up the time honoured system of "dating" for another, which, however sound it might be, would take away half the romance and place the whole thing on a commercial basis.

Art, Music and Drama

Victoria College Orchestra

To-night the Victoria College Orchestra are presenting their annual concert and their concert gives promise of great interest to those who attend. Their programme will include a movement from a Mozart Symphony, two Moskowski numbers and excerpts from Gounod's Faust. This choice is indicative of the desire of the orchestra to maintain a consistently high standard in their musical offerings; in their concert this year, however, a special attraction is offered in the appearance of Mr. F. Winfield, violinist, and Madge Hunter Parker, soprano.

The orchestra has been trained under Mr. Frank Blatchford, the well-known Toronto violinist, whose ability as a conductor has been amply demonstrated in the successful concerts of the Victoria organization in past years. J.J.K.

'HORSE LAUGH' TO BE USED TO CURE TARDINESS

Minneapolis Don Resorts to Spectacular Methods Against Delinquent Journalists

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn. — The well-known "Horse-laugh," used alike by "high-brow" and "low-brow," is being tried in the department of journalism by Robert W. Desmond, in an effort to cure tardiness. This new method was introduced after repeated failures along lines which were instituted to force budding journalists to arrive at

Mr. Desmond's class on time.

The first experiment was one of fear. The fear of large, open spaces. The student was made to walk across a broad expanse of bare floor, exposed during the stroll, to the gaze of several classes in progress.

A "public executioner" was next appointed to trip the late incoming journalist just before he reached his seat. The "executioner" was too easily spotted and the experiment again failed.

Sarcasm was used, flattery was introduced, subtle suggestions were put into practice but all to no avail. Everything came to nothing.

THE EMPIRE: MARY ROSE

This is positively excellent. It is not only the best thing we have seen at the Empire; it is among the best things we have seen anywhere.

Some crass, unimaginative souls may not like Barrie, but, frankly, we do. And this play, substance plot and characters, is the essence of Barrie. Besides, the play seems always just on the verge of becoming a "mystery thriller" and it never loses the audience. Barrie has the power of combining tragedy, comedy and the supernatural in just those proportions which make "good theatre."

The cast, too, was small enough so that only the best players were used and the effect was not marred by the inclusion of extras. There was a bleary tenor in the orchestra pit who could have been replaced, but, apart from that, everything was as perfect as a stock company could make it. As a final bouquet (this is all gratis) we would like again to commend the really excellent orchestra. B.D.B.

CHAMBER MUSIC CONCERTS

There will be three more concerts in this series in Convocation Hall. The next one takes place on Thursday, Dec. 13th, at 5 p.m., when the Hart House Quartet will play the Italian Serenade by Hugo Wolf and Brahms' quartet in C minor. Mme. Jeanne Dusseau, Canada's foremost soprano, will appear with the Hart House Quartet on Jan. 7th in songs specially composed by Drs. Ernest MacMillan and Healey Willan. Henri Leroy, the great French clarinetist, will join the Hart House Quartet on Feb. 25th, when the last concert of this series takes place. Those desiring to hear the remaining three concerts may secure tickets at the Hall Porter's desk or at the Box Office, Hart House Theatre, any day after 1 p.m. The price is 50 cents, and admits undergraduates to all three concerts.—(Adv.)

JUNIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS TO BE HELD TO-MORROW & THURSDAY

MANY OPPORTUNITIES FOR VARSITY MITMEN

Coming Junior Assault-at-Arms Predicted to be Best in History

FINALS THURSDAY

The annual Junior Interfaculty Assault-at-Arms gets under way on Wednesday and Thursday of this week. The preliminaries will take place on Wednesday with the finals Thursday night. According to reports the coming assault will be one of the best ever. As none of the boys competing have won an assault there should be no lop-sided contest, and there are bound to be a lot of rousing struggles before the final winners are declared. Those desiring to enter this assault may do so by signing the list in the Athletic Office.

The Junior Assault offers an excellent opportunity for ambitious boxers, wrestlers and fencers to get in line for Intercollegiate competition. There is a dearth of material in the 115 and heavyweight classes in both boxing and wrestling, and as men who have even a small amount of ability should turn out, for these are the opportunity classes.

ST. MICHAEL'S WOMEN LOSE IN GAME WITH VICTORIA

Victoria Co-eds Win Handily by 12-5 in Fast Baseball Tussle

In a by-no-means hostile game of baseball, Victoria College women nonchalantly zipped their way to victory yesterday, defeating St. Michael's by a score of 12-5.

The game was featured by good batting and consistent playing on the part of Victoria, while St. Mike's lost ground through fumbling.

Although Daisy Quantz was hit in the eye during the warming-up, her injury did not affect her splendid pitching.

St. Michael's: Catcher, Quinlan; 2nd base, O'Malley; pitcher, Hayes; short stop, Campbell; 1st base, Way; 3rd base, French; left field, MacQuinn; right field, Fitzpatrick; short stop, De Rocher.

Intercollegiate team before them, there ought to be a large entry. Entrants are requested to make their entries early to facilitate the arranging of the draw.

(L. C. DAWSON)

We should like to submit to the consideration of all in the University who are interested in football a few suggestions.

In place of our present coaching system substitute this arrangement. First, a head coach to be appointed for a period not less than four years. This man is to be supervisor of all football in the University, including the Mulock Cup series. Under him are to be appointed assistant coaches directly responsible to him. The head coach is to have complete control of the Intercollegiate team, and is to have an assistant to aid in its coaching. Coaches are to be in constant touch with the supervisor and are to be well versed in his methods. These men are then to apply these methods to the team under their charge with the result that one system and one only is in force among all teams. Every player on the Junior, Intermediate and O.R.F.U. is being trained in the system used on the Varsity with the idea of being potential first team material constantly kept in view by their coaches.

Second, this head coach is to be in possession of the most complete information available on every football prospect registered in the University. This is to be done by a scouting system, particularly in the Mulock Cup series, where in the past much good material has gone unnoticed. Players showing ability should be immediately given a chance in higher company. From the Mulock Cup to the Orphans the supervisor should receive frequent reports on players, giving him a much greater opportunity to bolster the Intercollegiate team than has been available in past years. The O.R.F.U. team would benefit similarly and so on.

Third comes the question of reimbursement for time spent by the coaching staff. The head coach should receive an honorarium entirely sufficient to enable him to devote a great deal of time to the teams without suffering from loss in any interests which he may have. And the other coaches should be treated accordingly.

Lack of space prevents us from going into the matter more thoroughly here, but we offer the above hoping it will be of interest. We will welcome any correspondence dealing with this subject and hope that the readers will make use of the columns to express their opinions.

BASKETBALL AND HOCKEY OUTLOOK HAPPY AT KNOX

Cage Practices Now Under Way with Two Veterans and Host of Promising Recruits

Prospects are bright at Knox College for the coming season in basketball and hockey. Many of the members of last year's team are available as well as some valuable new material.

Basketball practices have been held for several weeks and slowly the squad is being rounded into form. From last season's quintette Bill Miller and Wismer are the outstanding representatives, while Wyse, Loucks, Rayner, Davidson, Adams, Heath, Glen and Higdon are among the recruits. Several practice games have been arranged and the Knox team is expected to hold its own when the interfaculty series gets under way. Although as yet the hockey team have held no official practices, it is understood that Knox will be represented stronger than ever in the hockey league. Practically the whole of last year's team have signed up as well as several new men of no little repute.

Looney, Larry and Lionel Wax Patriotic As They Near The Shores of Britain

(By Dorothy Fleming)

One bright and shining morn three little graduates of U. of T. set forth on an adventure. Two of our heroes, Looney and Larry, were shining examples of Bachelor-of-Arts-hood. The third, Lionel, was an engineer. They decided to take him along at the last moment because they thought he'd be useful if any of them came down with fallen arches or anything.

They embarked on a particularly bovine cattle-boat. Right away they began to have trouble with Lionel. He discovered that one of the cow's horns were not on the level, and in spite of remonstrances he persisted in his intention to survey them. What he intended to do about it is a matter for conjecture. It is possible that he contemplated artificial landscaping of some sort. At any rate, all went well until her cowship woke from a particularly interesting dream punctuated with delighted snores to find a two-legged being in front of her snorting through what looked to her untrained eye like a shotgun. Moreover he was shouting and waving his arms in a manner capable of inspiring fear in the stoutest heart. She arose. So did Lionel. Suffice it to say that her coiffure remained unmolested.

Lionel and the captain nearly came to blows when one night the port light was found missing. It was discovered in Lionel's baggage bag along with a nutmeg grater and a few dozen toothpicks, whose disappearance the ship's cook had been loudly lamenting.

When they sighted England, they became intensely patriotic and wanted to sing "Britannia Rules the Waves," but Britannia was off duty for a time, during which they were bereft of inspiration.

When they landed they were extremely disappointed not to find advance notices of their arrival in the Times. One member of the party wanted to buy out the evening edition and have a public incineration, but the other two prevailed upon him to curb his primitive impulses. They spent their first night on English soil still free and innocent of crime and all set for whatever Fate might have around the corner.

logue and an epilogue for good measure—broad comedy, if you will, be sprinkled with the sort of unadulterated melodrama we used to thrill to before going out to the strains of "Hearts and Flowers." Only in this instance it happens to be "Roses of Picardy."

Miss Helen Kingsley succeeds in living down the fact that an uninspired press-agent has styled her "The Sweetheart of Toronto" and is so captivated by the particular Rose of Picardy in question that even the existing requirements of the gentlemen in the first three rows are satisfied. Mr. Ernest Woodward is a virile masculine with enough humour to make him convincing. The comedy throughout, despite occasional inevitable lapses into crudity, has an authentic smack to it. There is something amazingly convincing even to a jaded palate in much of the foolery of the stage soldiers, especially of the gentleman who plays the part of "Dignan."

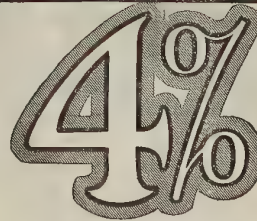

There is, of course, nothing uplifting here. It is a usual stock-company piece. But it may help to chase the dust out of a mind in the clutches of the pre-exam grind. And this particular stock company has something rare to be found in its ilk—that is a certain enthusiasm, a sense of enjoying the whole proceedings, which is quite irresistible.

UPTOWN—"FAZIL"

Long ago when the world was young, Valentino agitated the younger generation by his characterization of "The Shiek." If you will look up your records you will find it was a story about an Arabian prince who carried off a Parisian damsel and married her despite a certain amount of good-natured protest. It failed entirely to reflect on the difference in nationality and custom of the lovers; love, it was inferred, bridged all such puny barriers.

Someone, however, has conceived the idea that love is not all, and that

Berkeley, California. — Five San Francisco residents were victims of a ticket swindle at the Big Game, when a young man, posing as a member of the University of California ticket office staff, obtained their seats by explaining that an error had been made in them, and that he was gathering tickets to correct the mistake.

The young man left a receipt which proved to be worthless, and stadium officials are still wondering where the tickets of the Big Game are. Any found will be carefully traced.

the real drama in the lives of the Arabian and his European bride comes not before marriage, but after, when civilizations clash. To depict this, "Fazil" was produced, and though New York and Hollywood critics have panned it thoroughly, it remains a much more honest and searching picture than "The Shiek." The tragedy, which is evidently distasteful to a public which likes its Clara Bow, is almost inevitable, and the death scene is the finest bit in the picture.

SHEA'S

Shea's this week is as good as usual. Rod La Roque stars in a fast moving comedy full of old and new gags. It is called "Love Over Night." The Collegians are there in their rapid melodrama à la Frank Merriwell. Then there is the Pathe News. The vaudeville is mainly high-class. A shapely golden girl who knows her ropes does some clever work with the aid of a rubber gob. Then a black-face comedian makes a hit with a silent poker game, a clarinet and step dancing. In the third stanza a quick-change artist performs some astounding feats both by himself and with a troupe of trained whippers.

An inane theme barely gets by in the fourth act with a fast line of repartee. Finally a pleasing song and dance act by the Collegians is the high light of the bill. And so to bed.

HOTEL ASTOR MANAGED BY CORNELL STUDENTS

Practical Work Engaged in by Students in Hotel Management

New York City, N.Y.—Thirty-five students in the course of Hotel Management at Cornell University took over the entire management of Hotel Astor, in this city.

The men assumed complete control of the hotel, including the assignment of rooms and the planning of meals. The students were given special rooms in the hotel during their stay in the city in return for the publicity given the hotel by their one-day management. Last year Cornell students had similar control of Hotel Roosevelt for one day.

The Lure of a Winter Holiday

The Highlands of Ontario are visited every summer by thousands of Canadian people, but very few have ever seen this wonderfully picturesque territory in its winter dress, when the earth is carpeted deep with glistening snow, every tree and rock is hung with fleecy white, and the air, crisp and dry, like old wine, sends the blood tingling through your veins.

Winter vacations are becoming more and more popular, as resorts are being opened up and comfortable accommodation provided for the urban dweller, in these delightful winter surroundings where winter sports of all kinds are provided for both old and young. The outdoor sports include skating, skiing, snowshoeing, ski-touring, tobogganing and horseback riding, while the evenings are spent in dancing and games, or just "dreaming the happy hours away" before the open log fireplace. A week-end at one of these resorts will give you the desire for a more extended visit.

MALIGNANT MALADY STALKS IN HALLS OF VIC. RESIDENCE

Enquiring Reporter is Met with Evasiveness and Silence

PERIOD OF DISTRESS OVER

Practical Joker Suspected from Women's Residence Nearby

Elusive rumours of a strange malady affecting certain residents of North House, Burwash Hall, as the result of an afternoon tea party last Sunday have been floating about at Victoria College. Yesterday a reckless "Varsity" reporter invaded the residence and demanded the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth. Strangely enough, no one in North House seemed to know anything about the matter. Innocent queries were met by blank silence and looks of cold disdain.

Finally one obliging youth proffered the information, interesting if ungrammatical, that "lots of boys give parties they have to go to bed after." Another remarked that "he would rather be a drunkard than an imbecile," but concrete facts were noticeable by their absence. On the whole an atmosphere of comparative peace hung over the residence, as if the inhabitants had passed through trials and tribulations, but had finally gained relief.

Men from the other houses of Burwash Hall were more obliging. They stated that there had been a period of suffering and distress, but that it wasn't very serious. R. L. Fredenberg, of Middle House, said that some of the North House men had been mysteriously stricken after Sunday's party, but that as far as he knew they were all able to appear at dinner Monday.

"There is absolutely no story," stated one man in authority when interviewed, but his statement was greeted with bitter laughter by a couple of men who overheard him. Still another who should know admitted, however, that some of the men had not agreed with certain things that they had drunk.

It was ascertained finally that the unfortunate experience of the men was due to a practical joke on the part of outsiders who probably had placed some foreign substance in the tea and not to any defect in the food served. There is a strong suspicion abroad that the guilty persons may be found in near-by women's residences, and it is rumoured that steps may be taken in retaliation.

COUNTY FAIR ATTENDANCE RUINED BY STUDENTS

Special to "The Varsity"
Gainesville, Fla.—The fact that it was rumoured the student body of the University of Florida was going to the Alachua County Fair en masse to rush all of the shows and to close up some of the cheaper joints did more harm to the fair than any material damage that the students themselves did, according to a statement issued to the Florida Alligator by Fred L. Craft, general manager of the exhibition.

The psychology of the "whispering campaign" conducted by the boys caused financial harm to the show, explained Mr. Craft, since none of the negroes will attend the fair if they hear that the students are going to rush the place. Many of the ladies likewise will not go when it is rumoured that there will be any rough play.

MUSICAL EVENTS FEATURE MODERNS STUDES' MEETING

Professor Cano Addresses Italian-Spanish Club
at Wymilwood

"Ruben Dario was not Spanish but cosmopolitan," declared Professor Cano in an interesting address delivered at the meeting of the Italian-Spanish Club held at Wymilwood last evening. The speaker then gave a short sketch of Dario's life and read in Spanish some of his outstanding poems, prominent among which was "Sonatina" and "El Velo de la Reine Amah."

"The second part of the evening's entertainment consisted of a delightful programme of English and Italian songs given by Miss Jean Davidson of the Toronto Conservatory of Music, who was very ably accompanied by Miss Foote. Among the songs rendered by these visiting artists, "Violet" by Scarlatti was particularly pleasing.

Mr. Dawson, president of the club, conducted a business meeting, the chief feature of which was the election of Mr. Scovell as first year representative.

COLLEGE HUMOUR IN SOME DEMAND

Others Call It Unworthy of Thought and Say It's Not Funny

GIVES WRONG IMPRESSION

"I do not believe that the subject of college humor is worth while expressing an opinion on," stated one student very unconcernedly, when "The Varsity" asked his opinion regarding magazines of humorous trend in universities.

Students at Varsity enjoy a joke and a humorous story as well as those in other universities. Mr. Mark Williamson, 372, in giving his ideas on the subject, stated: "I find humorous magazines very interesting, and enjoy reading them very much. They are good for a college, and I for one would like to see a humor magazine at Varsity." H. C. C., 2nd year Arts, was rather surprised with his answer that as agents for killing an otherwise drab half-hour the better class of humor magazines are worth the money expended on them.

J. W. S., of 371, S.P.S., said: "Humorous magazines of various colleges are very interesting and provide a pleasant way to pass the time, when you desire some light reading. On the whole, though, they are very similar and do not really express college humor because of the fact that most of the jokes are exaggerated." Mr. F. Cunningham enlightened us on the subject by stating: "I think that humorous magazines in colleges would be great stuff if they would contain some humour."

"According to stories I read of colleges during my high school career, I thought that college was entirely different than it really is," replied Mr. J. Austin, 3rd year St. Michael's, to our question. "The only way in which they express college humor is in their puns and rivalry."

OPINIONS LACKING AS TO REAL VALUE OF OUR EDUCATION

One School Frosh Prefers Getting Training Here to Working

"Is a college education essential to success in the business world?"

An astonishing lack of interest in that subject on the part of undergraduates was revealed to "The Varsity" reporter during the course of an afternoon spent in questioning undergraduates.

"When you start to question me, I'm out," declared one fourth year Medical student.

"The present competition in all lines of industry demands a specialized training in some line, and where the work chosen is such as science or engineering it is impossible to secure it from any other source than a university training," said R. Cameron, second year B. and M. student. "An education is something we all desire, and from the number who are now graduating from universities it appears that the man without such an advantage will be seriously handicapped in the future through competition from his more favoured fellows."

School of Practical Science were singularly non-committal on this subject. Several men questioned all refused to give an opinion on the subject.

"An education must be secured in some way, and this is the place to get it. It is a much easier and pleasant way than by going to work," was the comment of one first year School man made, however.

Comptroller Being Muted Takes Some Precautions

Special to "The Varsity"
Berkeley, Cal.—The comptroller of the University of California has announced that all students registering for the spring semester must present their incidental expenditures in cash or by check for the exact amount. No change will be given.

This ruling was the result of approximately $2,000 in bad checks which were received during the autumn registration. Most of this amount was made good later by the students concerned, but several students who gave bad checks dropped out before they could be reached.

Correction

In the Friday issue of "The Varsity" the article on Professor Taylor's speech should have begun "Modernism" and not "Fundamentalism."

CURIOSITY AROUSED BY EXCAVATIONS IN QUADRANGLE

Buckling of Quadrangle Walls Necessitates New Method of Support

EXPANSION THROUGH FROST

Conjectures Laid to Rest by Real Explanation of Operation

Curiosity still seems to be an attribute of the undergraduate. Many questions have been asked regarding the operations around Hart House, which have to do with that dirt pile lying on the tower road, and nobody seemed to know what it was all about. Some had vague ideas of a remodeling of the Hart House Theatre roof; some suggested that the drainage system of the roof was being perfected in some manner or other, but these conjectures do not seem to be true.

The two long walls at the side of the quadrangle started to buckle in places; the cause was soon discovered to be the expansion of the earth between them due to frost. These buckling left openings and water penetrated through the roof. Such a bad state of affairs could not be allowed to exist.

Three weeks ago they started to work on a scheme, which it is believed will eliminate such expansion. Sloping cement walls were built on the inside of each long wall and tied one to the other by iron rods. The earth was then replaced and the residue, from the excavation for the new walls, carried to the tower road. The work will be completed to-day, and it is hoped the roof will then be secure.

HARDY A TRUE POET STATES MISS HOWE

Motives in Writing Poetry Different From Those of Most of Our Scribes

HIS PEOPLE MERE PUPPETS

"That Thomas Hardy is not a poet, is a viewpoint frequently heard and one which I am prepared to discuss, since I am convinced that he was," stated Miss Rhoda Howe in a paper on Hardy at the U.C. Women's Literary Society last night. Another question to be discussed concerning Hardy's poetry was whether he had a definite outlook on life of which each poem gave an instance.

Hardy was not an artist or a philosopher exclusively. His poetry contained the peculiar anomaly of a tremendous grasp of the universal combined with simple, homely detail. Pessimism, the catch-word in discussing Hardy's philosophy, was the result of his apparent conception of the universe as immoral, inconsistent, and unintelligible. Hardy saw eye to eye with science in thinking the force behind the universe too great to be connected with the human mind. The world was a perfectly irrational and casual mass which went on its way in complete indifference to the individual. The series of incidents going wrong in some of Hardy's novels showed this. His people were puppets playing with blind Fate, and in this conflict arose Tragedy.

Hardy did not deliberately give a philosophical system in his poetry; his poems were too true to life for that.

DREAD DISEASE ATTACKS SOME LOCAL COLLEGES

Depletes Ranks of Waitresses and Cripples Several Basketball Teams

Influenza already prevalent in Northern Ontario seems to have invaded Toronto and especially the University. Almost every college and faculty reports many students confined with more or less mild cases of the "flu."

St. Michael's College seems to have been especially hard hit with some seventy-five men in the infirmary as a result of the spread of the disease. Most of these are reported to be doing well and no serious consequences are anticipated, though it is feared that a number will be sick for long enough to miss some of their Christmas examinations.

Loretto College also reports a number of cases. Many of the teams in the women's basketball and baseball series are seriously hampered as a result of sickness in the ranks of the players.

At Hart House the most serious effects are said to have obtained among the waitresses in the Great Hall. According to one committee man, nearly half the staff has suffered during the present week from the general sickness.

DISTINCTIVE ART BEING DEVELOPED

Canadian Artists Depict Land of the Maple Quite Vividly

COURSES BECOME ARTISTIC

"Canada is developing an art movement distinctly her own," stated Mr. Arthur Lismer at the tea given by Mrs. Kirkwood in the Women's Union yesterday. "This point is one which I wish especially to emphasize, in that the Canadian painters are showing Canada to Canadians more vividly than it has ever been shown. Railway folders and hotel prospectuses can no give an adequate picture of the country; one does not get the idea of a lake from a picture of a string of fish held up beside a little man."

Mr. Lismer also advanced his opinion that art, in a practical, not cultural, sense, is creeping into our university courses. Already there is the Art Group in University College, formed of those interested in gaining a working knowledge of the technical points. Speaking of the modern movement in its extreme form, Mr. Lismer said that "this new school is an absolute challenge to the imagination. There is no need of feeling ignorant because one cannot grasp the meaning of such pictures right away, as if they were anecdotal."

This abstract method is working out towards a new conception of art, an impression caught by the artist in an entirely different manner. To look at all pictures "apart from their literary titles and without historical or romantic crutches to lean on, as it were," helps one to gain an adequate conception of the underlying theme of a picture.

Mel Kenny Debates in London Over Radio Station 2LO

HOTEL MANAGEMENT GRADS WELCOMED AT LOCAL HOSTELS

Those Trained at Cornell
Which First Gave Course

COLLEGE MAN PREFERRED

Favourable, Unfavourable and Indifferent Opinions Heard by Reporter

The managers of downtown hotels were all favourably inclined towards the man who had had a university training in hotel management, when asked by "The Varsity" what their attitude would be toward graduates in this course should one be instituted at the University of Toronto.

Cornell University was the pioneer in this line and others are now taking it up. The manager of the King Edward had had Cornell graduates under him and found them very satisfactory. He said that if University of Toronto offered a course in this line the graduates in it would be very welcome in the hotel business. He went on to point out the necessity for practical experience but said that after that had been obtained the university man was very much ahead of the man without this training. He felt the university man should and would have the preference over any other as he would have a very valuable theoretical foundation. He said the opening for women was large, although not so much in the managing as in specialized departments; however, he did cite some cases where women were managing hotels very successfully.

At the Ford Hotel the assistant manager pointed out that disposition and personality are large factors in making a successful hotel man. He felt that if a man is as willing to spend his time and money in a course in hotel management that that man must be serious about it and so would make good and should be given a preference over others without training. He said the university trained man would undoubtedly get ahead faster than another, and went on to state that he would be very favourably inclined toward a man who took a course in this work at the University of Toronto.

The student opinion on the subject was varied. One co-ed who has worked with the C.P.R. hotel system for two summers said: "The Americans are not way ahead of us in having women at the head of their hostilities. Women are in charge of the chalets and bungalow camps in the Rockies, and also one of the camps in Western Ontario is managed entirely by a woman with a staff of University of Toronto students."

Agatha Chapman, 370 U.C.: "An excellent opening in that field, and after all we have to catch the American tourist."

Ross Anderson, 279 U.C.: "This is not within the scope of a university which should be confined to the arts and professions."

Rex Barnes, IV S.P.S.: "If a downtown hotel was run by S.P.S. men for a day the management might get our point of view, but they would probably chain their silverware to the table."

Marjorie Smith, a fifth year Med student, who has done hotel work in the summer, thought there was a large opening for women in this field as dietitians and other specific lines. She said that at Jasper Park there was a social hostess and a sport manageress, the latter being a graduate of University of Toronto.

CLEAR THINKING

From time to time some one re-echoes Wordsworth's plea for plain living and high thinking. The latest voice to be raised in this plea is that of Lord Birkenhead who recently resigned from the Baldwin cabinet to enter the councils of big business, previous to which he had built up for himself a reputation as a parliamentarian ranking in brilliance with those of Lloyd George and Winston Churchill. In delivering his rectorial address at the University of Aberdeen he made an appeal to the undergraduates for intellectual honesty and straightness of thinking.

It will be remembered that some years ago the same speaker provoked considerable controversy over the rectorial address which he delivered at the University of Glasgow. Whether it was because of his being misreported or not, people concluded that Birkenhead had advised his young listeners to go out and do the best they could for themselves regardless of any ideals that might lie in the way. Commenting upon his latest rectorial address, the Aberdeen Press and Journal claims that its content was the same as that of the former one and that the furore that raged on that occasion was foolish and based on a misinterpretation of the phrase anent the "glittering prizes" that lie to be won by "sharp swords." It describes the speech as follows:

"Ambition, intellectual honesty, character, and seemingly manners, these are the attributes the exercise or neglect of which determines an individual's success and status in the busy and exacting life of the world. Time was when these same qualities were regarded as supremely worthy of cultivation by every straight-thinking Scot, and it will be a sorry day for this country if and when the reverse opinion triumphs, and the 'age without a name' becomes the be-all and end-all of our existence. The 'toiling upward in the night' is the hard labour which every man must grimly or cheerfully undertake not only in his own interests, but for the betterment of the race.

"In Lord Birkenhead's oration no warning was more requisite than that of the necessity for straight-thinking, for intellectual honesty. That quality springs from and reacts to the advantage of character. To-day the temptations are innumerable to loose thinking and an easy superficiality of the intellect. Such methods can not avail either the individual or the nation. The crank, the faddist, the Utopia-monger, the advocate of the 'primrose path' are all devil's disciples and all more than usually rampant in our time. They are poisoning the very springs of life, of culture, of politics, of philosophy. Nations advance through the common and united efforts of their members, but no man can contribute an iota of progress if he does not develop himself by his own strenuous efforts. No progress is possible, either physical or mental, national or individual, without painful and arduous toil and conscious self-discipline. 'Courage, therefore,' Carlyle used to say, when he had wrestled with his problems and found their weak spots; and 'Courage, therefore,' might have been the concluding words of yesterday's inspiring Rectorial Address."

The foregoing is a good summary of Lord Birkenhead's remarks inasmuch as they constituted a strong defence of the doctrine of individualism and a sharp attack on socialistic ideas. It is interesting to note that he included the late President Wilson along with socialists and communists among those he considered examples of loose thinkers. Was it the idealism of Wilson which he thought was the great American's weak spot?

Co-eds Transported in Van at National Convention

Special to "The Varsity"

Evanson, Ill.—At the recent national convention of Sigma Delta Chi Fraternity held at Evanston, the problem of bringing co-eds to a party at the North Shore Hotel was uniquely solved. In the old days it was the horse and buggy, then the railroad, the automobile, and the airplane. For that occasion it was the moving van. Thus some thirty co-eds were transported in a la cart—or rather a la van to the dance which was the closing event of the convention.

Art, Music and Drama

St. Joseph's Play

The play, "St. Francis of Assisi," is not good theatre. It contains only one or two scenes that hold the interest, and the rest are more or less wasted effort. It is supposed to represent the life story of Saint Francis of Assisi, the son of a wealthy merchant who renounced his riches and subsequently became founder of the Franciscan Order. The first few scenes present the situation and follow up the plot in a fairly connected manner; thereafter there is a gradual degeneration.

Francisco is depicted in the first act as a rollicking young blade who becomes much disturbed at the sight of the poverty and suffering about him. Himself the son of a rich man, he feels the contrast between the rich and the poor very sharply when he impersonates a beggar for a day. His sympathy for unfortunate people grows within him until finally he renounces his own riches and gives up his life to charity. The author of the play failed, however, to follow the gradual change of character with subtlety, and thus a truly moving narrative lost its chief point.

The students of Saint Josephs gave a fine performance considering the natural disadvantages under which they worked. Miss Helen Grant as Francesco, and Miss Bernita Miller as Ser Pietro, Francesco's father, gave excellent performances. The music, composed especially for the play, and the fine costumes added much to the production; Miss Angela Prew, as the Minstrel, King of Song, sang some beautiful numbers. Several beautiful tableaux and the rendering of the Canticle of the Sun concluded a rather fine effort on a rather poor play.

THE WROMANCE OF WRIGHTWONE WRONALD

Chapter 7

At Big-Gun inn Ronald found life as a bell-hop intensely enjoyable, the more so after he learned that if one carried up a pitcher full of ice water to certain of the guest rooms, one could bring a pouch full of fire-water back. Our hero's tact and courtesy soon made him a great favourite with the guests, especially the ladies, and he was continually being rewarded by generous tips for the skillful way that he handled their trunks and band-boxes.

But Ronald little realized the great surprise that was in store for him. It happened this way. One morning he carried a pitcher of ice water up to the room of a new arrival and knocked at the door. It was immediately opened by a comely young woman whom Ronald at once recognized as his long sought beefsteak girl who had once befriended him in his misery. He swooned.

When he came to she was sitting on his chest, pouring ice water down his collar and reviving him with her beautiful smile. "Ah, you recognized me as the one who hit you with the piece of steak that night as you stood below me in the gutter," she said. "I had a hunch you would. I also have remembered you. But sit up and tell me what has happened to you since then."

Time passed. Ronald and the beefsteak girl, whose name by the way, was Ammonia Waters, became fast friends. And they arranged meetings and went canoeing and tramping together as frequently as they could.

One day, however, they rambled on much farther than usual and before they realized it they were hopelessly lost. When night fell they were no nearer the hotel. They sat down to discuss the situation. Return was impossible before morning, and that meant expulsion for both, as Ronald should have taken the evening shift.

JUNIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS BEGINS AT HART HOUSE TO-NIGHT

TRINITY WOMEN DEFEAT VICTORIAS

Vic's Final Rally Fails to Overcome Early Lead of Winning Basketeers

VICTORS THUS REACH FINAL

A large and enthusiastic crowd, composed chiefly of Trinity men, watched the St. Hilda's team defeat the Victoria Juniors 20-19 in the semi-finals of the women's interfaculty basketball played off in the U.T.S. gym at 8 o'clock last night. The game proved fast and furious and was quite as close as the score indicated. At half-time the St. Hilda's girls led by 16-9, but their opponents crept up, led in the attack by their captain, Wilts Mahoney. S. Ballard played well for St. Hilda's. The spectators noisily and heartily appreciated the splendid work put forward by both sides. Now St. Hilda's will play the winners in the Jr. U.C.-Sr. Vic. match for the cup in the near future.

The line-up was as follows:

St. Hilda's: Forwards, R. Harrison (capt.), P. Tilston, M. Lewis; centres, S. Ballard, B. Borbridge; guards, M. Johnston, F. Crooks; subs, G. Murrell-Wright, M. Dickinson.

Victoria: Forwards, W. Mahoney (capt.), M. Parkes; centres, D. Bishop, M. Haugh; guards, A. Storey, K. Jordan; subs, D. Boyle, H. Merritt, K. Eaton, K. Carscallen.

The co-eds are to be instructed how to dress in Northwestern University in order to retain a stylish figure, no matter if it is too tall, too short, too stout, or too thin.

U.C. GIRLS SEXTET WIN TRIUMPH OVER VIC. SENIORS

Will Meet St. Hilda's Team in Final Round for Cup in Near Future

The University College Juniors fought their way through to a glorious basketball victory last night when they defeated the Victoria College Seniors to the tune of 26-17.

From start to finish the game was fast and furious, each side checking the other closely. The U.C. forwards showed an uncanny ability to make baskets in spite of the steady guarding of their opponents. Credit goes to all the freshies for their good combination and steady playing. Dot Ker and Helen Hilliard were outstanding players for the Scarlet and Gold, but the whole team displayed the confident ball-handling of experienced players.

This game means that the U.C. Juniors have won the semi-finals with ten points to their advantage. They are now entitled to enter the finals against St. Hilda's, who got the bye. Speculation runs high as to which team will hold the cup this year.

The game was staged in Hart House gym and each team had a good crowd of supporters. Vic. had a line of men who lent weight to the cheering and also offered diversion at half-time with a melodious rendering of "Sweet Adeline," "Alouette," and other favourite songs:

Line-up:

U.C.: W. Hazlitt, A.A. Grant, L. Crouch, J. Allen, B. Thomas, L. Harvey; subs, E. Breithaupt, G. Brick. Vic.: H. Hilliard, M. Lauder, H. Beal, D. Ker, A. Muckle, N. Bateman; subs, R. Moore, E. Taylor, D. Doyle, H. Wickett, J. Malcolm.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

(By LOU GOLDEN)

The University of Toronto Monthly in its issue of December has as its leading editorial a column length of "football business." It discusses the failure of the Intercollegiate team to win a championship, and then offers some criticism that has already been used in the running of rugby at this University. But the reason of its sudden interest seems to be incorporated in these lines: "The alumni should be given a chance to do something except apologize for the defeats of the wearers of the blue."

Now when did the alumni have to apologize for a team that suffered defeat? And is the alumni the horrible body that the Monthly pictures it, one that must apologize for a defeat and find things laudable in victory alone? The place of the alumni insofar as University sport is concerned is to go to the game if they desire to do so or stay at home if they do not, but as far as conducting a team they have no say whatever. We feel that the majority of the graduates would just as soon see a team lose that showed its best and have that team bona fide, than to have a winning team that was imported or placed under what tended towards football as a business.

Football at the University is just an extra curricular activity that is meant for the advantage of the men playing it and not for the amusement of the graduates or anybody else. The more that is impressed on the minds of some people the better. The players are not conducting a big business. They are merely taking part in an athletic activity that incidentally many people enjoy, and to suggest that they must win or there is "something rotten" is far from the attitude desired in Canadian amateur sport.

To permit the graduates to put their fingers into the running of affairs so that winning teams may be had every year, and so that they need not "apologize for losing," would be permitted to become too much like football affairs in some American universities, where football has developed into something akin to big league baseball, where the feelings of the players mean nothing but the size of the gate and the satisfaction of the attendants at the game is everything.

It will be a sad state in university graduate life if the time ever comes about when only winning teams should be looked for and a sportsmanlike loser is one that is to be despised. Let the Monthly and its editorial writer look to the desires of the graduates, not to the whims of some few who like to come to the game in their raccoon coats and while sitting at ease draw "with my assistance they won the Intercollegiate title, my team never loses."

HARVARD MAY REORGANIZE ON ENGLISH SCHOOL MODEL

Special to "The Varsity"
Cambridge, Mass. — A $3,000,000 fund, presented anonymously to Harvard University, will make possible the reorganization of the college. The new plan calls for the formation of a number of small colleges within the university resembling the system of Oxford and Cambridge. Harvard College, under this plan, would be only a name given to a collection of schools. The college would, however, award degrees and conduct uniform examinations.

President Lowell has stated that the plan would make no change in the method of teaching.

INTERFACULTY CAGERS ALL SET FOR FINE SEASON

Managers Pass Legislation Concerning Referees and Jerseys

It is the general opinion that with nineteen teams lined up for interfaculty basketball, winning of the Sifton Cup this year will be no sinecure. As a result of the keen competition to be met, all the teams are hard at practice.

At the last meeting of the interfaculty managers the opening date for the season was set for January 9. A committee of five was chosen to collaborate with Coach McCutcheon to arrange the schedule. Because of the difficulty experienced last year in obtaining enough referees it was decided that each manager should be made responsible for one. This means that each official will have to referee about three games. The matter of uniforms was also discussed, the decision being that each team must have a distinctive jersey with the number of the player on it. It was agreed that the grouping should remain the same as last year. The schedule has not been decided upon definitely yet but will be announced at an early date.

CORNELL STUDENTS ENJOY WHOOPEE HOUR IN THEATRE

Special to "The Varsity"
Ithaca, N.Y.—A novel collegiate stunt has been inaugurated by students of Cornell University here. Every Saturday morning a local vaudeville and movie theatre sets aside in its evening performance a "Whoopie" hour for the exclusive use of Cornell students.

During this hour all the hissing, booing, groaning, deriding, razzing and advising of actors, previously under ban by the theatre's strong arm squad, will be permitted. The "whoopie" hour is a compromise growing out of a conflict between theatre management and student body.

Tumbling should be considered seriously as a major sport, for the team members work all year round three days a week to keep in condition, while of no other sport, major or minor, is this true.

Cribbers at Exams Studied by Expert Psychologists

Special to "The Varsity"
Colgate University, N.Y.—Colgate University has at last found a use for cribbers, students who pass their college exams with the aid of little slips of paper and roving glances. Thirty successful cribbers from that institution were recently studied, entirely unawares, as laboratory specimens to determine the mental and emotional traits of college students who know how to cheat and get away with it.

Gibraltar, December 11th, 1928.—One of the largest passenger ships to berth here arrived this morning when the Empress of Australia of the Canadian Pacific Line anchored to enable her passengers to visit the town and fortifications.

There were about four hundred passengers on board, including Canadians and Americans, as well as British, on a cruise round the world that started from New York December 1st. Officials stated that the voyage will take four more months.

A call has already been made at Funchal, Madeira, and the ship will clear to-night for Algiers.

gently with a morning song which he had composed in the long hours of darkness.

Awake! Little Sister from your soft leafy bed,

The wazoos are singing, the hoboes are fed;

Dawn has arrived, so rise from the hay,

Wash off the mud and greet the new day.

Come bathe and refresh in the sparkling brook

That ripples and gurgles by each leafy nook;

Let your laughter be borne o'er the clear morning air,

As you comb out the beetles and ants from your hair.

The waffies are wailing their whimsical cry,

As the mangoes go winging their way through the sky;

Awake, Little Sister for do you not hear

The shrill crowing note of the farm chandler?

"O Ronald dear," cried the girl, rising,

"can't we run away and live together in some quiet spot where there will be only just us two?"

"Yes, Sweetest Ammonia, we will go to Wrangle island and start life anew."

And hand in hand they wandered away through the green forest aisles.

Mr. B. Shuter Sad and Disillusioned Gives The Lowdown on Newspapermen

(By N. J. DeWitt)

"Get out of here!" shouted Master Bunkley Shuter as ye scribe skipped up the front steps, "You're a dirty yellow press-man!"

"What's the matter?" asked the representative of the Aurora Borealis, handspringing pacifically back eight steps.

"Press-men are low creatures, all of them," announced Bunkley.

"But, Bunkley," we objected plaintively, "you used to like us."

"I've been to college," said Bunkley, showing us over the bannister.

"So it seems," we replied sapiently, removing a boot (our own) from our west pocket.

"Yes, and I've found out some of your tricks. I've found out . . . well . . ."

Bunkley began to sing in a sorrowful tenor, accompanying himself on the oboe:

"I went down to college, believing
In ethics and honour, what-not;
I spoke to the press-men, relieving
My mind of what really I thought.

"But then my high trust was demoted
And my faith in my fellows was gone,
For rightly those press-men had quoted
Though I knew all along they were wrong.

"I met a most charming young fellow,
On a Hart House Committee, I know,
He said that all papers were yellow
So I learned about journals from Joe.

"And there was a young Oxford professor,
His a's were as broad as could be.

Lloyd: I can't keep my date to-night.

Boyd: What's wrong?

Lloyd: Well, if I kiss Polly, I'll give her Irene's cold.—Flamingo.

He became my father confessor
And I learned about papers from he.

"And I chummed up one day with a Miner
Whose purpose was murder and sin.
We strangled a penny-a-liner
And I heard about papers from him!

Close harmony:
"So listen and learn, I do pray you,
And murder a press-man a day,
They love to quote and betray you,
And I'm willing to give them away."

At this point Bunkley drew from his pocket a paper, and aimed it at our gizzard.

The menace in his eye led us to fear for the worst. "What," we screamed, "is that?"

Bunkley grinned. "It is a clean-bright-optimistic undergraduate paper."

A terrific shudder gripped us. "Not that! No! Not that! Death before—!"

We gasped, as the full import of his movements dawned upon us.

"Read this!" snarled Bunkley, inflexibly showing his bi-cuspid.

We shook like an agitator in the U.C. Lit. "Will nothing," we begged, "cause you to relent in your purpose?"

"Nothing," answered the adamantine juvenile, "could possibly."

"You may fire when ready, Bunkley!" we sobbed (Dewey).

We read the sheet and immediately after the editorial fell into a state of comma.

"It's his colon," said a voice presently.

"Dashed if it ain't," said another. "Whereupon the internes at the hospital laughed 'Hoe, Hoe!' and discharged us with a bang and a marcelle.

'APPROVE VARSITY'S POLICY AND BECOME LAUGHING-STOCK'

Women's Smoking Rooms Are Discussed at Victoria Students' Parliament

SMOKE IN ANY CASE

Object to Use of College Rooms During Christmas Holidays

"If the motion is passed, it will be approving of the policy of 'The Varsity,' and there is no necessity for our becoming the laughing-stock of the campus," was the opinion of one member of the House, when the Victoria College Students' Parliament, in its last meeting of the year, discussed the motion, "That this House upholds the editorial policy of 'The Varsity' when it expresses the view that smoking rooms should be provided for women's residences."

Mr. Joe Binning, in moving the resolution, referred to the editorial statement in "The Varsity" of Tuesday, November 20, that "If she smokes, she'll do worse." "When Mr. Ryan put that in, he had a purpose," said Mr. Binning, in the advocacy of smoking rooms. "Women will smoke with or without the sanction of the authorities," he went on. "We can't have two standards. If we allow the men to smoke, the women should have permission also."

In seconding the motion, and upholding the "sacred mouthpiece of undergraduate opinion," as he termed it, Mr. Carson said that the desire for women's smoking rooms was universal, and that in this "age of democratic action," the co-ed should not

MASEFIELD SUBJECT OF FINE ADDRESS

Famous Writer Seen to Have Had a Varied Career

SHOWS STEADY DECLINE

"Vigour and versatility are of the very essence of good art," said Dr. G. H. Clarke of Queen's University, addressing the English Association on John Masefield. "Masefield knows the sea as Conrad knows it, through actual experience. He has faced it, challenged it, fought it. He had only three and a half years of formal schooling, then began his sea citizenship. With Masefield, as with Conrad, the sea takes second place. Ships come first, barques, schooners, liners. Yet after several voyages he was still undecided in his choice of a career, hesitating between poetry and medicine. His meeting with Yeats, to whom he said he owed everything, decided him."

During the first few eventful years as a sailor he worked as a farm hand in the United States between voyages. Once he was engaged as bar assistant by Luke O'Connor, proprietor of a hotel in Yonkers. He was not considered proficient enough to mix drinks, but served beer. His employer said, "He never went out, never had no fun."

The speaker considered that the poet's genius was most powerfully displayed in his narrative poems. Of these "Dauber" is greatest, the story of a timid soul whose objective life was a hell of misery and scorn, but

CLAIM STUDENT LIFE IS MISREPRESENTED

Relations with Magazine Are Severed by Midwest College Comic Association

CONDEMN SENSATIONALISM

Special to "The Varsity" Minneapolis, Minn.—Declaring that College Humor had misrepresented college life to the outside world, and that it had damaged the advertising field for the college comic magazines, the Midwest College Comic Association decided to sever relations with that magazine at its business meeting. This action, following that of the Pacific Coast College Comic Association last year, leaves only the eastern organization maintaining an official connection with College Humor.

Basing their decision on the belief that College Humor had misrepresented college life to the public and that it had stated to its advertisers that the magazine had a large circulation among college students, thus reducing the amount of advertising given to the school magazine by national firms, all the representatives voted to discontinue their connection with the magazine.

"College Humor," said Don McBeath, new president of the association, "has circulated a booklet to solicit advertising which states that it is read by the majority of college students. We do not believe this is the truth. That instead of drawing its readers from the universities, its widest circulation is among outside people."

To determine the exact ratio of readers of College Humor as compared to those reading the comic magazines of the individual colleges, all the members of the association will circulate a questionnaire some time very soon, asking each student which magazine he reads. The inquiry will be placed in all the post office boxes and the answers will be placed in all the post office boxes and the answers will truly represent the attitude of the students. It will be used by all the members of the association when soliciting advertising.

As a result of this move, no school publication will renew its contract with College Humor when the one now in effect expires. Previously, the magazine had been allowed exclusive reprint rights to all material published in the comic magazines of the Midwest and Pacific coast associations.

The policy of College Humor in sensationalizing school life was also condemned by the delegates who said that much of the criticism of universities was based on the distorted picture given in the magazine.

'WHOOPEE HOUR' FELT TO BE 'TOUGH' BOTH ON ACTORS AND FANS

Student Opinion Varied Here on Plan Introduced at Cornell Theatre

RAZZING NOT GENUINE

Chance Would Be Given to Vent Stored-up Animal Instincts

Campus opinion on the so-called "Whoopee hour" introduced at the local theatre at Cornell is extremely varied. Every Saturday night an hour is set aside by the theatre management to allow the students in attendance to give vent to the critical leanings at other times suppressed by the strong arm squad. Most of the undergraduates interviewed expressed sympathy for the actors and the rest of the audience. "The Varsity" was able to obtain the following views on the campus:

R. A. Armstrong when questioned remarked: "Darn tough on the other people. Darn tough on the actors too, because no matter how good a show is, unless there's some odd looking fellow in it you are going to have fellows boo it if they're in a bunch."

W. A. Tevans, II French, Greek and Latin: "I think it's a lot of nonsense, although it gives the students a chance to give vent to their animal instincts."

G. E. Alexander, I C. and F.: "It would stop things like what the engineers did. Perhaps give them a chance to use up excess energy."

J. B. Sister, I Pass: "I certainly would attend it. Yet I do not fully approve of it. A great deal of the razzing would be mere imitation."

C. W. Wilson: "It might be all right for the students but rather hard on the rest of the patrons."

J. Austin, III Pass: "Why not have a ghost hour with lots of spirits?"

E. F. Fennell, II Commerce and Finance: "I think it's a good idea but try and get it here."

Student: "The actors might object to it, but it certainly would be a lot of entertainment for the students."

RECOMMEND APPOINTMENT OF MUSICAL DIRECTOR

"The recommendation of the music committee, urging the appointment of a music director for the University has been sent to the Board of Governors of the University," said the Warden of Hart House in the course of an interview to "The Varsity."

"The matter has been fully discussed by the Music Committee, but beyond that we can do nothing more at the present. The Board of Governors will probably be influenced by Dr. MacMillan, the Dean of the Faculty of Music, in their choice of a suitable man for the position, as he is better qualified to choose one than anyone else," said Mr. Bickersteth.

The importance of the position was also stressed by Mr. Bickersteth. There lies a great field for the right man in this work, in connection with the formation of a University Glee Club, a University Orchestra and many other similar organizations.

COSTLY NEW MEDICAL BUILDING PLANNED ASSERTS JOURNAL

Medical Library and Academy of Medicine to be Housed in New Structure

CONVENIENT LOCATION

Two or Three Years Needed to Complete Costly Development

Arrangements are under way for the erection of a new Medical Library and Academy of Medicine Building in Toronto which will vie with any on this continent, according to The Canadian Journal of Medicine and Surgery. The building, which will cost in the neighbourhood of $300,000, will be erected on the present site of the Botany Building, No. 11 Queen's Park, and will contain at least 50,000 volumes.

Consideration of a new academy has been hastened by the request of the Ontario Government for the present academy site, which is required as part of the Botany Gardens scheme. When the Botany Building is completed, the Academy of Medicine will tear down the old building and proceed with the construction of the new edifice. Two or three years will be needed to complete the development, after which the academy hopes to concentrate all the medical associations as well as the academy of dentistry in the one building.

It is intended that this new library will become the main library for the faculty of Medicine at the University of Toronto. Its location will make it convenient to the use of University students, and will obviate the maintenance of separate libraries at all the hospitals, claim the academy.

Already considerable funds are in view for the project. A reasonable replacement price will be paid by the Ontario government for the present academy building. This will be used for the new building, and that it will be fairly large is assumed from the fact that the academy paid $25,000 for the addition of Osler hall to the present academy.

FEW AWARE THAT STARS RISE AND SET LIKE SUN

Interesting explanations of astronomical terms in the classics were made by Dr. C. A. Chant at the meeting of Victoria Classical Club in Annetley Hall last evening. He emphasized the fact that we should regard, as astronomers do, the stars as moving rather than the earth. Dr. Chant expressed his surprise at the number of people he met who were not aware that the stars rise and set as the sun. The ancients were keenly observant of rising and setting of the different constellations. Owing to the lack of instruments their terms of rising and setting did not coincide with the same movements that modern nomenclature designate. In reference to Hesiod, Dr. Chant explained how an approximate date of his writings could be obtained from a calculation of the position of constellations which he mentions.

Hopes of Subjects Rise For King's Recovery

Shortly after midnight it was reported that the condition of His Majesty was considered satisfactory and the hopes of his people for his recovery are rapidly rising from the despondency of the past two critical days. The Prince of Wales and the Duke of York were both present yesterday during the operation.

About 5 o'clock this morning it was learned that though his condition was still satisfactory, indications were such that a second operation, to drain further purulent fluid from the base of the right lung, will be deemed necessary. The physicians, with the exception of Sir Stanley Hewitt, who as usual will remain at the Palace all night, left shortly before this statement was given out.

COSTLY PAINTINGS ADORN HART HOUSE

Parts of Many Private Collections Loaned for the Winter

ALL HIGHLY INSURED

Members of Hart House are perhaps unaware of the high value of some of the paintings which hang on the walls of the Common Rooms, the Music Room, Lecture Room and Great Hall, as well as the few in the galleries.

While the real value of some of these pictures can only be estimated, yet the insurance which they carry shows to some degree the value which is set upon them.

Of these paintings, which total forty-three, eighteen are owned by Hart House, and are insured for $3,435.00. In addition to these there are twenty-five pictures loaned by private persons for the winter, which are insured for the sum of $8,400.00, an average of over $300 each. Many of these pictures are parts of private collections. Of course, in addition to this special insurance, the whole House and contents are insured under the blanket policy of the University.

It is the hope of the committee that in a few more years Hart House will possess enough pictures of its own to make it unnecessary to borrow any from others.

MUCH ENTHUSIASM ARGUES GREAT FUTURE FOR ROWING

Intercollegiate Two-mile Race to be Annual Event

Rowing will become definitely an intercollegiate sport next summer if plans discussed last night at the dinner of the University of Toronto Rowing Club are carried out. It is at present intended that beginning next summer there will be an annual intercollegiate race between the University of Toronto and McGill over a two mile course to be decided on later.

Promises of funds for the building of a new club house on lands offered free of charge to the club on the Humber River were also announced at the meeting that followed the dinner. A graduate committee was formed to make arrangements for future development of the club.

The club expressed the desire to secure four coaches and new coach boats, so that five crews could be kept interested and active. Professor T. R. Loudon, the honorary coach, expressed the hope that with increased undergraduate enthusiasm more crews might be captured by the club. Sir Robert Falconer also spoke on the bright future of rowing in the university.

THINKS NO APOLOGY DUE FROM ALUMNI FOR LOSING TEAM

Football Meant for Advantage of Player, Only Theoretically True, is One Opinion

UNDERGRADUATE OPINION

General Agreement with Sport Editorial About Relations of Alumni to Varsity Football

Agreement with the general tenor of yesterday's sporting editorial in "The Varsity" regarding the relations of the alumni to intercollegiate football, but disagreement with various details, seemed to be the consensus of male undergraduate opinion.

Opined E. Braund, Dent: "That 'football' . . . is meant for the advantage of the men playing it and not for the amusement of the graduates or anybody else" may be theoretically true, but not actually."

D. Stockwell, another Dent, hailing from the state of Nevada, declared: "From what I know of the graduates, they'd rather see the team put up a good, fair scrap and lose, than win by any other means. As for the States, in the smaller western universities, at least, the teams are backed to the limit, win or lose."

A gentleman in third year U.C. Politics and Law, however, who wished his name withheld, stated flatly: "Personally I think the writer in 'The Varsity' may have the wrong idea. The alumni probably do want to 'do something except apologize for the defeats'—and the 'something' is not necessarily to import outside talent or to pay plumbers to play."

There is no reason why the alumni shouldn't have a fatherly interest in the team," thought H. E. Smith, I S.P.S. "They've been through the University and they ought to have a

OPPOSITION DEFTLY PRODS GOVERNMENT

Knox College Undergraduate Association Holds Lively Meeting

NO BUSINESS AS USUAL

"The government had several reasons for not calling the regular meeting of the Knox College Undergraduate Association this week," stated J. D. Smart, M.A., President of the K.C.U.A., at a special meeting of that organization held last evening. "Because there was no particular business, because of the closeness of examinations, and because of the strain of Christmas exam work," Mr. Smart gave as the reasons for not calling the meeting in question.

Mr. Smart's remarks were called for in defence of the government when 33 men signed a petition objecting to the cancelling of the regular bi-weekly meeting and demanding that one be held within forty-eight hours. Then, too, the fact that the opposition was leaderless through the sickness of Mr. Kelman was another reason given by the prime minister.

An attendance of over 75 signified that the petition had occasioned considerable interest among the men in residence, who went away rather disappointed that there were "no fireworks." The meeting opened in the usual manner with Mr. G. C. Webster as acting speaker.

U.C. TAKES LEAD IN JUNIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS PRELIMINARIES

GAMENESS DISPLAYED IN CLOSE CONTESTS AT JUNIOR ASSAULT

Murray Wilton Gives Fine Exhibition of Skill in "Manly Art"

PROMISING MATERIAL

Many Closely Contested Matches Produced in Wrestling Division

The preliminaries of the Junior Interfaculty Assault-at-arms were held last night in the Big Gym. There was a large number of bouts run off and a lot of promising boxers and wrestlers were seen in action. Nearly all the contests were evenly fought and the gameness and sportsmanship displayed were worthy of the "manly art."

Probably the best boxing exhibition of the evening was that put on by Murray Wilton in scoring a technical knockout over Malton in the 147 lb. class. Brook and Wolfstoft put on a fast bout in the 135 lb. class, with Brook displaying a lot of speed to win. Wall and Toll in the 147 lb. class mixed matters merrily, with Wall the winner on aggressiveness. Longest in the middleweight division displayed a punch to defeat Mike Furber. Keenan scored a technical ko over Bassett in the third round in the

The bouts furnished by the opening night of the Junior Assault-at-arms provided some real good entertainment for the lovers of the mitt and mat games. The men gave everything they had and showed plenty of "wim and wigour."

Several contestants showed enough last night to warrant claims as favourites for to-night's finals. Longest scored a technical ko. in the middleweight division, and Wilton another one in the 147 lb. class. Brook at 135 lbs. was also good.

The finals of the assault take place to-night and we hereby warn all and sundry not to pass them up if they like plenty of action. To-night's bouts will deserve a full house and should get one. Several of these boys will be heard from in the Senior Assault later on, so get out and get a line on them.

The schedule for the U.S. trip of the Blue and White sextet provides interesting food for thought. Games have been arranged as follows: Two with Harvard, one with Yale, one with Dartmouth and one with the University Club of Boston. McGill have made similar arrangements. Thus we are something which approaches to the much proposed International Intercollegiate Hockey League. It would not take a great deal of juggling to make this league an actual fact. Who knows but that there may also follow something similar in the field of the great fall pastime?

The Blue and White Juniors get under way on Friday night at the Arena Gardens. The Juniors generally play smart hockey and are deserving of support. Marlboros and Toronto Canoe Club, who along with Parkdale and Varsity form the Big Four Group, were the S.P.A. junior finalists. There will be some sparkling exhibitions of the ice game in this section with the winner called to go a long way in the play-offs.

Light-heavy division after a furious struggle.

The wrestling division produced a number of very closely contested struggles. Mainland defeated Wilton. 134 lbs., in one of the most interesting mat sets of the night. Another interesting match was in the 145 lb. class with Willis getting the decision over Graham after a lot of action.

There were no fencing matches on last night's card; they will be run off to-day.

INTERMEDIATES SHOW GOOD TEAM FORM

Have Been Successful in All Games Played

WESTERN NEW ENTRANT

Varsity Intermediates are gradually taking on the aspect of a basketball team. Up to the present the impression has been one of a group of individual players, a condition which every coach has faced in the early stages of developing his men.

The squad has been reduced to twelve, and will be brought to the final ten soon after the new year. So far the Intermediates have taken part in two exhibition games, the first with Central "Y" Intermediates, who were badly beaten, and the second with Broadview "Y," who also went down under Varsity's superior play. In the near future the team hopes to hold another exhibition game with Central "Y" Seniors.

In former years the intermediate group has been composed of four members. McMaster, Ontario A.C., Osgoode and U. of T. This year Western University has entered a team in the Intermediate schedule, making the fifth member of the group. Occasionally the intermediates work out with the seniors, and still more occasionally they beat them. While the seniors are away on their Xmas trip, Mr. Mayor, the manager of the intermediates, hopes that his squad will get a better opportunity of practicing team play.

The present candidates for the team are: Forwards, Brady, Foxe, Stevenson, Riggs; centres, Grainger and Pasternak; defence, H. Devitt, McMahon, Laughlin, Gord Cock, Van Sickle, E. Devitt.

ilchboro, Latchford, Maconachie, Armstrong, Dyble, Alexander.

If unable to be present, notify the manager immediately.

SENIOR HOCKEY CREW SHOWS GREAT FORM

Stiff Practices Prepare Team for Heavily Scheduled Season

ANNUAL U.S. INVASION

Although the Blue and White Seniors have the Sportsmen's Patriotic Cup salted away for a year, there has been no let-down in their efforts, and Coach "Red" Porter's men are hard at work every night at Ross Workman's winter palace.

Varsity have a long and tough schedule ahead of them. Their official O.H.A. opening game is called for next Wednesday evening at the Arena Gardens. Then comes a week's breather before the annual U.S. invasion takes place. Leaving Toronto on the 27th they play five games up to and including Jan. 5. Then back to old "Trawna" with a game in Preston on the 9th to re-open the hard and heavy pull.

The Blue and White have a real good team with plenty of reserve power which will be necessary in a long season, and right now they are shaping up nicely.

Last night at the Arena the boys were going at top speed under "Red's" watchful eye and showed plenty. A most pleasing feature of last night's practice was the neat combination play. The puck was passed freely, with the goaltenders being given plenty to do. Jimmy McMullen, "Bill" Stuart and Harley worked nicely on one forward line and had as opposition "Red" Statham, Murray and Marshall. The latter two, recruits from last year's Newmarket Junior O.H.A. finalists, will fit nicely into the forward line.

Interfaculty Assault Draw Semi-finals and Finals

The draw for the semi-finals and finals of the Interfaculty Assault-at-arms is as follows, the semi-finals being held at 4 p.m. and the finals at 8 p.m. to-night in the Big Gym:

160 Lewis, For., vs Longest, U.C. —Final.

175 Smily, U.C., vs Keenan, U.C. —Final.

WRESTLING

123 Barrett, S.P.S., vs Harkness, Meds.—Final.

134 Algite, Vic., vs Walker, U.C. —Semi-final.

Mainland, Vic., vs winner semi-final.

145 Klimaszewski, St. Mike's, vs Willis, S.P.S.—Semi-final.

Taylor, S.P.S., vs Armstrong, Vic.—Semi-final.

Rudd bye.

158 Henry, Meds, vs Brown, Dents.—Final.

174 Mervynne, Trin., vs Tyson, S.P.S. —Final.

University College women last night defeated Ontario College of Education 31-4. O.C.E. was playing under a handicap, four of the regular players being unable to play, and U.C. was in top form.

little say. But it is pretty hard to say just where it ends. They shouldn't override the coach, or anything like that. But I think Golden is right in speaking against commercializing the sport."

"Why should the alumni apologize for a losing team?" asked H. L. Henrick, II U.C. "They're not responsible for defeat."

Considerable mention was made of the enthusiasm which prevailed after the game at Hamilton among undergraduates, alumni and outsiders alike, on the Orphans' terrific losing battle against odds.

"I maintain that the word 'demand' does not signify an order for expulsion," stated D. K. Perry, chairman of the House Committee, in reference to a charge made by a member of the opposition at the last meeting. Mr. Perry maintained that the House Committee, in reference to a charge made by a member of the opposition at the last meeting, Mr. Perry maintained that the House Committee in "demanding" that a certain member leave the residence had not ordered his expulsion, only requested it. Stating that it was only a test case, to try the powers of the House Committee, Mr. Perry went on to say that Principal Eakin, quite unofficially, had suggested that the powers of the said committee might be curtailed to minor misdemeanors of residence life.

The fact that the government has no particular business to bring up is the usual thing, why cancel the meeting for that?" asked Mr. J. W. L. MacLean from the opposition benches. He thought that a very feeble report had been given by the Chairman of the House Committee, and that the real reason for the government not calling a meeting was that it wanted to avoid certain issues.

The meeting adjourned with the opposition shouting its disapproval of the motion of adjournment, which as is customary was not put to the house.

Whoa! Slow! and Go Like Blazes Aunt Mary Explains Coloured Lights

(By Greta Reid)

Dear Aunt Mary—

Could you give me any information on the North House tea last Sunday? From the account in "The Varsity," I have not been able to decide whether it was a wild Bacchanalian orgy or merely a slight touch of ptomaine poisoning.

Anne S. Lee.

Ans. We could give you the inside dope, but we don't think you'd like it.

Dear Aunt Mary—

As we were wandering over by Burwash Hall in a moment of abandon, we espied a blot on the landscape which bore a haunting resemblance to a well-known brand of car. On closer inspection we found that it actually was the remains of a partially dismantled Ford. It certainly adds nothing to the charm of the spot, and we think it ought to be removed. Will you look into the matter for me?

Too Busy.

Ans. From your letter we judged that the services of a wrecker would not be required, so we phoned the S.P.C.A. They promised to drag it off and give it a Christian burial before it becomes offensive.

Dear Aunt Mary—

What is the meaning of all these red, yellow and green lights which flash on and off at so many of our busy intersections?

Anne Howe.

Ans. What next? Well, child, they are technically known as Whoa, Slow and Go signs. The red means Stop, the green means Go, and the yellow means Go like blazes to beat the red. Some people claim that the yellow light is there merely to give Scotch motorists a chance to start the engine.

Dear Aunt Mary—

My brother Jim and I have a car with a right-hand squeeze and I am left-handed. Jane wants me to turn it in on a Morris-Cowley, but Jim refuses. It's really awfully low-down on his part, as Janet has been in three serious motor crashes and won't let him drive with one hand anyway. I realize it's all very complicated, but I hope you can find an adequate solution.

Sincerely,

John.

Ans. Allah be praised! An almost intelligent question! There is but one answer—John ought to park with Jane and Jim ought to taxi with Janet.

be "forced into nauseating associations."

Considerable discussion, marked by a tone of humour and levity, and involving both moral and physiological elements, now followed from the floor of the House. One member expressed the fear that the open bar would follow on, and that for the sake of the W.C.T.U., smoking rooms should not be allowed. The motion was eventually lost by a large majority.

In regard to a request from the Warden of Hart House that a sum of money be raised for the under-staff of the House, it was moved and carried that the Parliament grant $20.00 for this purpose.

Most of the evening's discussion, however, centered about the motion, made by Mr. Douglas, that "This House go on record as registering its objection to the policy of this college in allowing its rooms to be used during the Christmas holidays." In spite of criticisms of the severity of its tone, however, the motion was carried practically unanimously. Objections were raised by residents to the use of Burwash Hall by organizations during the holidays, members of which, it was claimed, did not always leave Masefield was too often content with a fraction of good writing. He wished to become a good practical practitioner in the art of literature. His prose is never too attractive and shows a steady decline. "Saard Harker" is a splendid failure, a melodrama redeemed by its style.

DENTS' PARLIAMENT DATES BACK FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS

Powers of Cabinet Are Similar to Those of S.A.C. Over University

COMPULSORY FEE

Two Cabinet Men Have Jurisdiction Over Student Disputes in Faculty

The Students' Parliament of the Faculty of Dentistry seems to date its organization to 1910, when the seven-year-old "Lit. and Deb."—Literary and Debating Society—of the Royal Dental College took the designation, "parliament."

Although there are occasional meetings of the student body, the Parliament is not such in the true sense of the word. The Cabinet, a stated executive committee, has complete charge of undergraduate activities without recourse to the parliamentary system.

The Cabinet, composed of fourteen men, is selected in a very definite manner. The president is elected by the students as a whole. The vice-president is president of the senior year, the secretary is president of the fourth year, while the presidents of the other three years are also members of the Cabinet. The presidents of the Royal Dental Society and the S.C.A., the editor of "Hya Yaka," and the senior "Torontoniensis" reporter are members, as are the presidents of the committees in charge of the "At Home," of dramatics, and of athletics. A committee of two men is chosen from the Cabinet to have jurisdiction in disputes among students of the faculty.

Eight of the men on the Cabinet are seniors, very much tied up with their work. For this reason, according to Mr. A. A. Somerville, president of the Cabinet, sporting activities at Dents do not flourish as they should. He expressed the hope that some new arrangement would be evolved next year in this regard.

The presidents of the various sports committees and the president of the athletic body constitute the governing athletic body of the faculty and have the power to award Dental Colors.

Periodically the president of the Royal Dental Society holds year competitions, such as the musical one which took place recently for the Cummer Cup. About five years ago these competitions were one of the features of the college life; this year an attempt to restore them to this status is being made.

It is the business of the president of dramatics to engineer Noctem Cuckoo—the annual Dental dance—and night—and Deutants—the faculty's theatre night.

"Hya Yaka" is the official student publication of the college. This year, according to reports it may be changed to the form of a year book.

The constitution of the Parliament is modeled on that of the S.A.C., and the powers of the Cabinet over the Dental Faculty are similar to those exercised by the S.A.C. over the whole university. Financial support is obtained from a compulsory fee.

"Varsity" Staff

The men and women of the staff of "The Varsity" are required to meet to-day in Wynniwood at 4.30 p.m. This applies to all staff reporters as well as all special writers and night editors.

MIDDLE HOUSE SCENE OF KIDNAPPING LAST NIGHT

Avenge is Taken for Tappings Perpetrated by North House Men

A kidnapping was staged last night when five North House men from Burwash were assailed as they issued forth from the library, by a group of Middle House men, who bore them off to their lair and turned the lock on them. They were not left to such a bitter fate for long. In no time their comrades had got wind of the matter, besieged Middle House and engaged in a violent water bout with the kidnappers. Bed dumping and general hubbub were the order of the day. All this was the outcome of a tapping in discretion yesterday morning. The battle fought, a truce was signed and tappers and kidnappers dispersed.

ORIGIN OF LIFE REMAINS A MYSTERY

May Never Have Proof for Theories of Evolution

HUMOROUS NOTE

"No one has a great deal of actual knowledge of the subject. There are plenty of fairly logical conjectures as to the probable mode of synthesis of our primordial ancestors, but no one has and I do not think any one ever will have anything in the nature of scientific proof for his theories," so stated Mr. R. J. Monkman, B.A., of the Department of Physics, when speaking on "The Origin of Life" before a well-attended meeting of the Mathematical and Physical Society at the Physics Building yesterday afternoon.

He further went on to say that away back in the time of the Greeks, theories of biogenesis were in evidence. A humorous note was struck when the speaker reminded the audience that one biologist in the Middle Ages stated that a dead horse produces wasps, a mule, hornets and a daisy bumble-bee.

Illustrating his address by a blackboard chalking of formulae, he showed how the relation known as "The Euler-Maclaurin Sum formula with Poisson's Remainder" can be deduced from Fourier's cosine-series; and from it, in turn, certain of the equations of Jacob's theory of Elliptic Functions, and of the theory of diffusion and heat conduction.

Refreshments were served at the beginning of the meeting, the tea being poured by Miss Quinlan. Both speakers were introduced by the President of the Society, Mr. W. D. A. Douglas, '29. These meetings are held every second Thursday. The next one is to be held on January 17, Mr. Wm. Tovell, '30, will speak on "Incidents in a School-teacher's Life," and Professor S. Beatty on "Paradoxes of the Infinite." A skating party is to be held in the near future for members of the Society.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

A Christmas Party is being given at the University Settlement next Wednesday night for 175 girls between the ages of 12 and 18. The Dickens Fellowship Club are putting on a play, followed by games and a visit from Santa Claus with presents for all. The leaders are anxious to have all University girls interested in Settlement turn out and help make this party a success.

PROMISING MATERIAL UNEARTHED AT JUNIOR ASSAULT-AT-ARMS

Even Contests Delayed Judgments for Extra Rounds

SINGLE KNOCKOUT SCORED

S.P.S. Wins Best of Recent Junior Interfaculty Assaults

The Junior Assault-at-Arms unearthed no end of material for the Intercollegiate team when many promising boxers and wrestlers showed their stuff at Hart House last night. The affair was one of the best junior interfaculty meets held in some time and much enthusiasm was stirred up upon which a good foundation can be built for the Senior squad. The majority of the matches were very evenly contested and in several cases the judges forced the men to go an extra round before they offered their decision.

In view of the fact that some of the contestants were called upon to fight in the afternoon and again in the evening, some of the meetings were not as lively as they might have been if the men had been fresh.

The only knockout of the day was when Keenan of U.C. put Smily of U.C. away in the second round with a hard right to the solar plexus. Referee Chris Newton stopped the bout between Longart of U.C. and Lewis of Forestry in the first round when Lewis received a bad beating from Longart but stood up under it all. Murray Wilson of Trin. displayed some real skill when he defeated Boyton of Vic.

Clark of U.C. annexed the fencing honours when he defeated W. A. Gilbert of Wycliffe in the finals.

Barrett of S.P.S., who is suffering from an infected arm, was forced to default to Harkness of Meds in the 123 lb. wrestling class.

RESULTS OF RAID MAKE KNOX COLLEGE DEN OF LIONS

Beasts Sheltered for Night But Expected to Grace Steps To-day

ADVANCE HOLIDAY SPIRIT

Evening Ends with Friendly Attack on Inmates of North House

Apparently imbued with holiday spirit in advance, Knox College men spent many hours last night engaged in spectacular and stealthy raids on other faculties on St. George St. Beginning with a successful pillaging party in which the two lions that one time graced the Botany Building were removed from in front of the Forestry Building to which they had been taken last week, they finished up with a friendly scrap with the inhabitants of North House next door.

The much travelled lions are now assisting the stewards of Knox College in the preparation of a slot entitled Daniel in the Lion's Den. In other words, they, assisted by fifteen East House men, journeyed up St. George St. to Knox, where they for a short period graced the entrance. The procession was given loyal support by the remaining members of East House and the quietness of the street was destroyed by the loud "Tid-abors" rendered by the theologists.

Finally about midnight two parties came from within and again removed the lions to unknown caverns in the basement of the college.

One of the Knox men intimated that the genealogy of the appropriated beasts would be traced to see if they were "Lions of the tribe of Judah." From others it was learned that Chief Engineer Bonner will be requested to polish them in the morning, when they will again be placed on the stone steps of Knox.

Still later came the raid on North House. During the scrimmage which took place, Knox men, outnumbering their opponents by some 20 to 8, had rather the better, and some North House rooms were set up and their occupants severely handled.

Principal Gandier of Emmanuel College, when questioned by "The Varsity," stated: "I really don't know much about it. For an hour or more students had been making a noise around the college, but I don't know whether they were from fraternities or from Knox. I understand that finally they raided North House."

When asked if any damage had been done, Dr. Gandier replied that he did not know.

Peace was finally restored to the satisfaction of both parties and quiet descended again. It is understood that the raid was a friendly affair and that no retaliation is intended or expected.

Miss Addison entertained the University orchestra and the fourth year students of Victoria College with refreshments last Tuesday evening.

'DAFFYDIL NITE' TO BE HELD IN HART HOUSE THEATRE

R. Morrison Mitchell Editor of Medical Magazine Epistaxis

"Daffydil Nite" 1929 will be held in Hart House Theatre, not in Convocation Hall as in previous years. The Daffydil committee feels that this location is more suitable. The dates are Feb. 21st and 22nd. Contrary to the custom of former years, the Daffydil committee is already working in preparation for the entertainment.

R. Morrison Mitchell has been appointed editor of Epistaxis by the Medical Society. J. Telford Biehm is business manager, and A. H. Walker, last year's editor, is associate editor. The staff is comprised of one representative from each year.

Mr. Victor Raiton is the new president of Sixth Year Medicine as the result of an election which followed the resignation of Mr. J. S. Hawkins. Illness was the cause of his retirement. Mr. Raiton emerged victorious in a three-cornered contest. His opponents were J. W. A. Greig and J. E. Gundy.

NEWSPAPER REPLACES BOOK FOR GREEK

Spartan Customs Reviewed at University College Classical Meeting

LYCURGAN INSTITUTIONS

"As a result of the Lycurgan institutions the Spartan assembly met under a bridge, as an elaborate building erected for such a purpose would excite an interest in art." So stated Mr. Collins in his paper on "Spartan Customs" given at the meeting of the University College Classical Association held at the Women's Union Wednesday as the guests of Mr. Bennett. The speaker stressed the fact that in Sparta as nowhere else the pleasure and freedom of the individual, man, woman and child was subordinated in the military interests of the state. He exemplified this all-important aspect of the Lycurgan institutions by many illustrations from the daily life of the citizens.

"The Greek language has changed no more from A.D. to the present day than English has since Chaucer," declared Miss Thomson in her paper on "Modern Greek Poetry." She introduced the main portion of her speech by tracing Greek literature from classical days through the Byzantine Age to modern times. Everything from abstruse science to lyrical poetry is found in Greek newspapers and periodicals, since the absence of wealth prevents the average man from buying books. The speaker read some excerpts from poems to illustrate their style.

After an animated discussion delicious refreshments brought the evening to a most successful close.

Medical Society Will Discuss Post Graduation Activities

"After Graduation—What next?" will be the subject of an address by Dr. Harvey Agnew at an open meeting of the Medical Society this afternoon.

The speaker will stress the need of young practitioners in Canada, and point to the wide field of endeavour open to the Medical graduate. He will also tell about the work of the Canadian Medical Association, and what it is doing for the graduate in Medicine.

The meeting takes place this afternoon in the Medical Building at 5 p.m. It will be in Room 111.

PROBLEM OF SELLING CRESTS AND BLAZERS WORRIES MEN'S S.A.C.

Students' Band May Be Formed on Lines of the McGill Band

QUEEN'S NOT COMPLAINING

Complaints Re Advertising and Distribution of The Varsity

The problem of how to sell the official crest and blazers of the University was dealt with at the meeting of the Men's S.A.C. yesterday evening and it was voted to instruct the Men's Executive to go to the Joint Executive that the question of crests and blazers be reopened and that the crests and blazers be sold separately. It was mentioned in the meeting that a large amount of time had been spent the previous year in discussing the problem, but that, owing to lack of cooperation between the Men's S.A.C. and their Executive, nothing had been done. It was suggested that the crests and blazers might be sold in the Tuck Shop and some sport or haberdashery store downtown. A résumé of the lengthy negotiations of last year in regard to the crests was given by Mr. A. H. Ferry.

Some delay was experienced in starting the meeting owing to lack of members to provide a quorum. A report was read by J. A. Marshall on behalf of the committee appointed to look into the matter of a Students' Band and it was announced that steps were taken to acquire information that might lead to the formation of a band organized along the lines of a club like the McGill Band.

Certain freshmen at Queen's having complained to the Council that their tams had been stolen at one of the football games, the Queen's student government body wrote assuring the Men's S.A.C. that any such complaint was entirely unofficial and a matter of minor importance.

The President of the Council gave a brief summary of the relations between "The Varsity" and the Joint Executive, and a discussion of advertising in "The Varsity" ended the meeting. Complaints were uttered as to the undue amount of advertising and the tardiness of distribution.

STAFF WOMEN FAVOUR MARRIAGE AND A CAREER

Cooking and Lecturing Satisfy Different Sides of One's Nature

Can marriage and a career be successfully combined?

In search of an answer for this question, "The Varsity" questioned several women on the staff of the University who are making the experiment.

Mrs. Partridge, research assistant in the Connaught Laboratories and in Hygiene in the School of Hygiene, would not say much on the subject except that she was perfectly satisfied with her two careers.

Mrs. Creighton, professor in English, expresses her satisfaction with her career and says: "I do not think any career that involves long hours can be successfully combined with marriage. A University professorship is one of the few professions which requires but few hours per day, yet brings one in contact with a great number of people. Thus the two careers do not interfere with one another. Cooking and lecturing are both made enjoyable, and they satisfy the different sides of one's nature."

The Last Call

Contributions for the Christmas Literary Issue of "The Varsity" must be submitted before five o'clock this afternoon either to the News Office in Hart House or to the Women's Office, Room Two, University College. The contest closes at this time for the two prizes of five dollars each for the best efforts in poetry and prose.

Considerable matter has already been submitted. Of this the major part consists of poetry. The issue needs two or three more pieces of prose as well as something relating to Christmas, on which subject most of the copy thus far has been silent.

THE CHRISTMAS 'FLU

Along with the rest of the city, the University has been hard hit by an epidemic of influenza. As a result of the "scare" St. Hilda's College is closed and its inmates have gone home in order to escape infection.

This situation is already a serious one and may become more so. In University College particularly, because of poor ventilation, conditions are ideal for the spreading of infection, and just at this time of year when the Library is crowded with anxious students, some of whom doubtless have colds, the contagion may spread very rapidly. Infirmarys which are already filled to capacity may soon have many more patients, and it is possible that numbers of students will be unable to go home for Christmas.

For those who are already shut in, the situation is simple if aggravating. They are ill, they are not allowed to study, and they are going to miss their Christmas examinations. The last clause may appear very jolly at first but on due consideration it assumes its true significance. A very large group of students are to be compelled, through no fault of their own, to miss various examinations and, what is more important, to forfeit the valuable and necessary term marks which are acquired at such examinations.

The prompt action of the authorities in closing St. Hilda's College seems a very wise one. The possibility of a fresh outbreak of the disease is automatically checked by the move, and since it affects the whole College, no one will have to suffer from missing the Christmas tests. It is to be hoped that there will be a careful investigation at the other colleges, and that equally prompt action will be taken if conditions warrant it.

Ed. Note: Letters to the editor of the "Morning Kilt and Sporan" must not be written on more than two sides of the paper and must be signed with the names of at least two irresponsible parties who can detect a robin in a gooseberry bush in January at forty paces.

Dear Sir: I wonder if the Rev. Pralong is indeed as he claims aware of the entirely expegetical as it were or scriptural meaning of the word "ichthus." If this is indeed as he claims so then how can any true believer hold that after all Meighen's Bagot Speech precipitated a crisis which resulted in a general election. Let us have no more of this heretical modernism and strike out straight from the shoulder in the cool old Grit tradition and revere the memory of Sir George A. MacDonald.

Editor:

I wonder if it would be contrary to your rules for me to voice a slight protest at the way the street cars are crowded. In dear old London they were never crowded this way and one was able to remain a gentleman. But here one is herded like a sardine in the can and forced to lunge and lurch every time the nasty motorman turns on the current in the tram. May I ask how long it will be until these colonials realize that a man's dignity

Hart House Quartet

It was a pleasure to hear our own Hart House Quartet again in the fourth concert of the series on Chamber Music Concerts at Hart House Theatre last night. The programme included the Brahms C Minor Quartet, Wolf's Italian Serenade and the Schubert Cello Quintet, Opus 163, in which the Quartet were assisted by Mr. Leo Smith.

I feel compelled to remark that the ensemble seemed a trifle off colour in the Brahms in which pizzicato and staccato passages frequently lacked that crispness and spontaneity which usually characterizes the work of this quartet, but in the Schubert they responded admirably to the lure of the melodic quintet. The additional Cello gave a depth and body to this delightful concerted music. There is in the allegro an entrancingly beautiful song melody repeated by each instrument in turn and the adagio, rather pictorial in style, possesses a serenity which even the violent outburst of the basses fails to dispel. The dance rhythms of the "Hungarian" allegretto were an effective contrast to the less vigorous movement of the Wolf Serenade.

Perhaps the mood of these numbers suited my own mood more closely last night; one must be receptive in a particular way for Brahms and the C minor seemed somewhat disturbing and in places even unpleasant; the Romanche, on the other hand, was intrinsically beautiful, but that is only a convenient way of saying that the greatest pleasure of the evening came in the numbers or movements in which the movement was less turbulent.

Both the Serenade and the quintet are typical works of their respective composers, and as usual the quintet is filled with reminiscences of other works of Schubert. The Italian Serenade, though but a succession of quaint dance tunes in delicate rhythms, leads one to regret that a composer who could write so adequately for strings should confine himself to two works in this form. Letter from House Committee of Hart House

Dear Sir:
The House Committee of Hart House is grateful for the response to the Warden's letter which resulted in the return of certain of the decorations which had been removed from the Gymnasium on the occasion of the Masquerade. Some of the valuable coats of arms on silk banners, loaned to the Committee expressly for the Masquerade, are still missing, however. We wish to appeal again to their possessors to return them without further delay through either some member of the Committee or through the Hall Porter.

Yours very truly,

Geo. H. Duff,
Chairman.

SEVEN OCCULT SOCRATICS

Final meeting on Monday, Dec. 17, for this year. Full attendance of the seven members is required for particular purposes.

BIOLOGICAL CLUB

The Biological Club of the University of Toronto will meet in the common room of the University College Women's Union at 7:30 p.m. to-day. Professor A. F. Coventry will give an illustrated lecture on the subject: "Natural History Photography." Plans for a social evening to be held after

James W. Robson, ex-editor of "The Varsity," is renewing old acquaintances in town and is expected to speak at "The Varsity" staff meeting

Christmas will be discussed. Refreshments are to be served.

WATER POLO

Varsity "B" vs. Danforth-Second Swimming Club to-night at 8:30. Will the following players report in the locker room at Hart House at 8 p.m. for towels: Maconachie, Ayres, Spence, Middlebro, Shortt, Dible, Armstrong, Pierdon.

MEN OF U.C.

You will be approached during the next day or so by executives of your various years who will ask you to contribute to a fund which will go towards providing Christmas gifts for employees of Hart House. Since no gratuities are allowed in the House during the year, and as U.C. men use Hart House a great deal, it is to be hoped this appeal will meet with a very generous response.

Laura Louise Lacks Time To Write
Sends Betty Also-rans of Contest

(By D. Kendall)

Dear Betty:

As Christmas is galloping fast towards us, I simply have not a single minute to write to you, so I am sending a few of the also-rans in the wonderful contest.

Here's a sweet one.

There once was a young thing, Louise, Who got hot and more hot by degrees, But the boys who went with her Weren't able to 'kith' her, Her fondness was limberger cheese.

Considerable truth in this effort.

At Varsity tried for degrees, She sat by her taper And wrote for the paper, But the Editor, she couldn't please.

He never took a chance.

Though you warn me of 'squeeze' And 'tease' as rhymes I must spurn, Should your choice of all men Chance to fall to my pen, Tell me dear, are you willing to learn?

Though 'tis true that to go With you to a show Would reward all my labour for me, Don't you think that the bliss Of a hug or a kiss Recompense far greater would be?

But even if I Great restraint were to try, And content me with movies or such, Would you promise my dear, That I need not fear Of learning that your treat is Dutch?

Bring on the Ford.

Just lately there came to Varsity's walls A girl with beauty and poise, From a small town she came,

Full of magic her name, And soon was well known thro' the halls.

One day just to please and endeavour to please, She asked us to write her a poem. No requirements were set Save one to be met, 'Twas to laud our dear Laura Louise.

Tho' we know we should leave admiration to men Who come in DeSoto's or Chrysler's, We just can't resist Entering ours in the list Though we've only a 'Liz' to our nomen.

Now Laura Louise, for our first endeavour We think this is awfully good, But alas for our aims It's far short of our claims, We're your servant forever and ever.

I'm never out after eleven-thirty. One night our friend Laura Louise Felt terribly weak at the knees. At the Residence gate The Dean called "you're late And you'll take a week's gating, Louise.

It must be the flu. Last night lovely Laura Louise Prolonged her advice in the breeze. As she kissed him good-bye, She thought she would die, For she suddenly heaved a big sneeze.

Your dearest friend, Laura Louise. P.S. I had something to tell you, but I've simply forgotten what it was. L.L.

JUNIOR O.H.A. SCHEDULE
OPENS AT ARENA TO-NIGHT

Varsity Juniors and Toronto Canoe Club Play in Double Header

To-night the Junior O.H.A. schedule opens with a double-header at the Arena Gardens. The Varsity Juniors take the ice opposing the fast Toronto Canoe Club sextet. The Juniors have been practising hard under the tutoring of Frank Sullivan and have developed some real scoring plays. Hetherington on the forward line is the scoring threat of the team and is more than seconded by Brant, Laing and Cerer. Hunnisset in goal is the despair of more than one would-be scorer. This is his second year on the team and he fully justifies his position. The Canoe Club players have shown themselves to be real hockey players, and the local lads are going to have to step to down them. They made a name for themselves in the S.P.A. series and their meeting to-night with the Boys in Blue should be a battle royal. The other teams playing to-night are the Marlborough Juniors and Parkdale Canoe Club. It should be well worth your while to see these games and take your mind off exams.

player, has been away from practises for the last three weeks, and it is doubtful whether he will be able to accompany the team. "Roy" Currie, stalwart defence man, also was kept away from the workouts by a bad attack of the gripe. The remainder of the squad with the exception of Murray has been nursing colds. But all will be fit and on edge for their first game on Saturday.

The social spirit seems to be somewhat subdued at Victoria College for the time being, owing to last Sunday's unfortunate occurrence. A speedy recovery is hoped for.

A graduate students club has been organized at the Colorado Agricultural College at Fort Collins, Colo., to give the graduate students a more active part in student affairs.

Men in the dormitory at the Oklahoma Baptist University, at Shawnee, will spend three evenings a week in their rooms after 7 o'clock.

Peace on Earth Good Will to Men

I dreamed a dream—a horrible dream. Shudders of terror shook my frame to the marrow. I became a whirlpool of succeeding emotions—but let me tell you.

Wherever I looked I saw Jews, Jews, thousands of them,—big Jews with heavily bearded faces, sorrowful little Jews with shuffling gait and baggy clothes, Jews with kindly, interested faces, ugly Jews with gruff scowls, Jews dapper and neat—the last word in fashion. They walked in many directions but did not seem to be going anywhere, for the same ones crossed and re-crossed my path. Suddenly a thunderbolt crashed shaking violently the road on which I stood, then came a flash of light which grew from a small spot in the heavens to a vast circle. It became more and more intense until my eyes throbbled within my head, but it did not blind the eyes of these Jews; their features lightened, worries dropped from their faces like magic, joy took the place of sorrow. On the lips of all were two words only—"The Book." What was happening? I looked back at the light. It struck me blind, all became black, and I was plunged into a deep silence.

Gradually the black turned to a grey, the grey to a lighter grey and I became conscious of forms and houses. I was in a crooked narrow alley on either side of which clustered unbelievably rickety buildings, so filthy as to be unfit for pigs. A deadly stench arose in a fog from the black ooze at my feet. Crowds of Jews once more surrounded me. No sound of joy or happiness lightened that dense throng. Dirty ragged little children crouched in corners groaning and crying piteously from sheer hunger and misery. Some pleaded with their mothers for a bite of something—anything. The distracted mothers with frightened haggard faces grasped the poor creatures in their arms trying in vain to comfort them. Presently I discovered this Jewish Ghetto to be surrounded with a wall out of whose gate no Jew might pass without special permit. As for the Christians in the city without, they gave it wide berth lest the vile stench nauseate them.

The scene vanished and others appeared only to vanish in their turn and always I found myself among Jews. Like a wandering ghost I came down through the ages. Century after century I saw them beaten, stoned, cursed, hanged, burned and harassed from one end of the earth to the other. They were excluded from the trades, from farming and from society. They were allowed to do only the meanest, filthiest work. Money lending was considered despicable—they took it over, made vast fortunes out of it only to have it wrung from them by extortion. I saw hundreds of thousands of them tortured and killed by the rack, the wheel, the thumb screw and all the ingenious contrivances of the Inquisition. Those whose finer cultured tastes would not allow them to do such things merely cursed, railed and spit upon them. Each of these horrors passed slowly before my eyes until I could bear it no longer. Why did they not rise in rebellion? Why did they take it, and take it, and take it until they had to give up in exhaustion only to bid their children to carry on with the burden, with never a murmur of revenge on their quivering lips—or was there?

Blackness again spread before me but once more the grey thinned and I was flashed into another great concave of Jews. These were Jews of my own time. But no levity marked their faces, only deep serious frowns as though a great problem beset them. They divided themselves into two groups which eyed each other and talked in solemn whispers.

And the one group said, "Enough! Enough! We have had enough. For over two thousand years have they plagued, persecuted and humiliated us. Less than a month ago some of them drove and stoned our students from the University of Budapest. The others pretend indifference to us to our faces but they detest and revile us behind our backs. Their children that shout 'Sheeny, Sheeny' after us down the street do not do so because they have been taught to, but because it is their instinctive heritage of hatred from centuries of heartless ancestors. It is something they will never overcome. They still refuse to admit us to the trades, society and government. But we will show them, the wretches. They will never learn until we pound it into their heads with an iron fist. We, one per cent of all peoples, control sixty per cent of the wealth of the world. We own the largest industries of the United States; we control Wall Street and the British money markets. We will squeeze them till they yelp. With glee we will watch their slums grow and their populace suffer from hunger and poverty. We now have a tool that can place them helpless at our feet. Let us arise and use it."

But the other group said, "Peace, brothers, peace—they will learn. At ready they have begun to tolerate us a little. We will command respect by worth rather than by bending them. No country, empire or race will ever last that has been built by force. They object to us filling the libraries and universities with our students, but these same students are accomplished wonders. Who has exceeded the greatness of Einstein? The world rings with the work of Spinoza, Disraeli, Bizet, Bach, Rubenstein, Mendelssohn and Elman. We have written the books on which they have founded their religion. It may take another hundred, five hundred or maybe a thousand years, but let us not give up the noble work of our ancestors—work so well done that it will live and grow to be the most glorious accomplishment of any race of people. Let us pray therefore that the spark of sympathy which is planted in the breast of all these, our fellow men, may soon be swept into a flame that will bring them from the darkness, that will make them become just a little kinder, just a little more tolerant and that perhaps after a while will give them the impetus to actually regard us as friends and equals."

I awoke. The peal of bells from a nearby church proclaimed the great day Christmas. I watched the people in the street below. Through the softly falling snow two fat, jovial old gentlemen with Bibles tucked under their arms sauntered merrily along shouting "Merry Christmas, Merry Christmas," to everyone they met. They laughed gaily and patted the little children on the head. Presently a small bearded Jew came shuffling past. The two jovial old gentlemen looked the other way, their faces beaming, as the bells burst forth with "Peace on Earth Good Will to Men." I laughed—laughed bitterly.

Prize Awards

POPULAR OPINION FAVOURS DIRECTOR

Activities of Proposed Musical Director Are Discussed

NOTHING DEFINITE YET

Dr. MacMillan, Dean of Music, interviewed re the proposed music director for the University, said that the matter was "all very much in the air at present." It was hard to say just what the musical director would do. He would have to look round and see what was most needed. His activities need not necessarily be confined to Hart House, which would probably be extended to cover the whole University.

There was certainly a need for something of the sort. Victoria College had, of course, an orchestra, and he believed something in the nature of a Glee Club. Hadn't they been doing operettas recently?

Nothing definite had been decided on, but something would probably be done about it soon. Personally, he hoped it would.

Jack Griffin, leader of a prominent orchestra, thought there was a good opening for a musical director. The Glee Club of a few years ago had dropped out of existence for some reason, and a musical director might be able to bring it back to life.

As for a University orchestra, the field seemed to be pretty well covered by the Vic. symphonic orchestra. The "Varsity Entertainers" was composed entirely of students, but was, of course, only a jazz orchestra. There was also a possibility of the Medical Society having its own orchestra by next year, in place of the temporary one which was always formed for "Daffydil Nite."

Vic. people interviewed seemed to feel that the idea was decidedly worth while, but that there was no crying need for a musical director as far as Vic. was concerned. The Music Club and the orchestra were both thriving organizations, and already had their own directors.

Morning

R. R. Bonis

Cool are the breezes of morning that flow
Down through the rifts in the green circling hills:
Bright are the arrows of sunlight that go
Driving the mists from the lakes and the rills.

Softly the sentinel spruce on the rocks
Whisper farewell to their words of the night;
Echo on echo our cheery call mocks,
Rousing the ducks, as we launch for our flight.

Strong are the strokes of our swift-circling blades
Plunged in the waters that rush by our sides:
Restlessly onward through bright gleaming waves,
Dewed with the spray, our undaunted bark slides.

The Valley of Remembrance

J. T. Rempel (S.P.S.)

There is a valley far away
From all the world's turmoil;
It is a place where people may Find rest from work and toil.

The sun is gold there
All day long—
The moon and stars are silver,
The flowers—music;

Birds are thoughts
Which rise into the air
And chase and sing and quiver.

This is a place where everyone,
The aged as well as young,
Find comfort, rest and happiness,
From all the world's throng.

The flowers whisper in his ear
Their music—soft and quiet . . .

The eyes shine brighter,
Sorrow's flee;
And a deep joy
Fills heart and soul.

RHODES AWARDS MADE FOR 1929

Ziegler and Cartwright Are Chosen by the Rhodes Trust

ANNOUNCEMENT LAST NIGHT

On behalf of the Rhodes Trust, D. R. Michener last night made the announcement of the choice of Messrs. H. R. Ziegler and G. S. Cartwright for the 1929 Rhodes Scholarships.

Mr. Ziegler is a sixth year Medical student, and is president of the Medical Society. He has ever displayed great interest in athletics and secured his senior "T" in basketball. This year he is serving in the capacity of the representative of the Student's Administrative Council to the Athletic Directorate. Mr. Ziegler's ability in studies is attested to by the fact that he is a member of Alpha Omega Alpha.

Mr. Cartwright, a student of Trinity College, is at present in fourth year Political Science. In former days Mr. Cartwright was captain of Trinity College School, and after coming to the University became associated with the Historical Club. Mr. Cartwright is well known in sporting circles, having played as outside in the victorious Orphans' rugby team this year, and he has also played on the Junior University team.

MODERN LANGUAGES ASSOCIATION

On Dec. 27, at 8 p.m., in Room 26 of the Mining Building, Professor W. Caldwell of McGill University will speak on Czechoslovakia and Central Europe, under the auspices of the conference of the Slavonic Groups of the Modern Languages Association and the I.S.A. of the University of Toronto. University students and their friends are cordially invited to attend.

Loretto Abbey College gave a very enjoyable tea at Newman Club on Sunday afternoon. Vocal and instrumental music was much appreciated.

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

Miss Singer, who played at the Friday recital last week, has made several appearances in Hart House programmes and one it seldom disappointed in an hour's music which she presents. On her programme on Friday were representative works of Bach, Beethoven, Liszt and Debussy. Undoubtedly the Beethoven was Miss Singer's finest work, for although she plays Bach with precision, her métier seems to lie among the Romantics, a fact substantiated by the choice of Liszt's arrangement of Hark Hark the Lark and a Rhapsody as concluding numbers. In my opinion, that was pathetic, but to many perhaps this "climax" in technical display and rather doubtful scale passages was a triumph sufficient to warrant the pianist's return to close the programme with two short encore numbers.

J.J.K.

Sunday Evening Concert

A musical performance must possess some inherent form before one can make formal comment upon it, and it is in some ways to be regretted that the concert given in Burwash Hall last night for the students of Victoria College was so informal as to render criticism valueless. However, the evening's music was an experiment for the college, and as such a commendable effort for which the committee in charge were indebted to a group of singers introduced by Mr. Harvey Doney.

Though last evening's performance was far from successful as an artistic musical performance, it is to be hoped that Victoria College will develop their own concert tradition by seeking only the best in music and the sincerest artists and by dispelling any existing sentimental "Sunday" atmosphere make a delightful Sunday concert possible.

Social Inequalities Discussed in New Book

"Undergraduates" is the title of a new book, the result of research into the conditions and influences affecting the life and character of American students. Environment, Extra Curricular Activities, The Relations of Men and Women, are among the subjects dealt with. "For many, the curricular system proves as much of a hindrance as a help to their development. To some it seems like being forced to listen to old records on a phonograph when they might be in the orchestra. The authorized curriculum they say is 'passive,' 'formal,' 'dead,' 'canned information' and almost wholly lacking in 'adventure' and 'creative' sermon."

Social inequalities are dealt with: "The really poor student is reminded of his limitations by the quality of his room, and food, and clothes and by being bound to long hours at dishwashing, window-cleaning and furnace tending."

GAY WOMEN SERENADE UNAPPRECIATIVE MEN

Cause of Inflection is Undiscovered But Told To Go Home

RATHER AMATEUR

"It came upon the midnight clear" alight but it wasn't any "glorious song of old" which smote the ears of the North House men the other night. Nor were the angels of that celestial "arrayed in white" variety. They were quite substantial co-eds of the 85 Charles St. residence who swarmed and sang beneath Burwash windows. "The Varsity" has not as yet been able to discover whether the maidens were just filled to overflowing with this thing called Xmas spirit, and simply had to warble under the men's windows; whether they were inspired by revenge for the sleepless hours when Burwash has "many a time and oft" in the dead of night, sallied forth on inter-house tapping expeditions in the course of which all neighbours within the half mile radius were aroused; or whether the affair was a last gasp leap-year serenade squeezed in just before the co-ed kissed her chances good-bye for another four years. At any rate they were responsible for the "Whoopie" wails and sweet melodies on Charles St. in the "wee sma' hours." Their efforts, however, did not seem to be appreciated. Even the most plaintive songs met with a rude "Aw shut up" or "Go on home to bed" and other equally emphatic suggestions, in varied tones and voices from the windows above. The entertainment, though unappreciated by the neighbours, might have been a success if the numbers had not been so well interspersed with feminine giggles and jazz whistles.

INTELLIGENCE WANES STUDENT SALES HELP DETERMINES TRINITY GREATLY EVIDENCED

Bilborough Quotes Polish in Support of the Affirmative

SMALL MAJORITY

The world is becoming less intelligent, decided the Trinity College Literary Institute on Friday night. By a vote of 17-15, the house voted upon the motion "Resolved that promulgation of intelligence has not kept pace with the propagation of the ignorant."

Mr. W. Bilborough introduced the motion and endeavoured to prove diminishing intelligence in Poland and elsewhere. He quoted Polish in support of his argument.

Mr. R. Seaborn for the opposition proved from statistics the declining number of illiterates. He centered his attention upon Canada.

From the floor of the house speeches were given by Messrs. Wilton, Wilson, Ryan, Roundings, Wasley and others.

Undergraduates Preferred by Downtown Stores for Christmas Rush

THE HOLIDAY PROBLEM

University students seem to be in popular demand in the downtown stores as extra sales help during the Christmas rush. As a result book rooms are infested with English and History students, and all the other departments boast their undergraduates.

When "The Varsity" interviewed several workers the opinions as to lengthening the holidays varied. One co-ed supported the movement enthusiastically and bewailed the inopportune term examination. She claimed that the money earned just before Christmas was invaluable to the student working his way through college, and that some consideration should be given those in that position.

A somewhat disconsolate Queen's Hallite added that since the Hall closed for the holidays, longer ones would be of no use to her as she would have no place to stay.

But a fifth year Meds claimed that there was no need for lengthening the vacation for such a purpose, as very few of those who worked were really forced to do so to put themselves through university, though as a matter of principle he approved of such an idea.

However, they all agreed on the desirability and popularity of university students in such positions. Managers willingly give undergrads preference to others, and one girl has been asked to stay right on in her department as a complement to her ability. These same managers would approve of longer holidays before Christmas, so there may be combined action of business heads and students.

Dr. and Mrs. Malcolm Wallace gave a delightful tea on Saturday afternoon for Dr. Wallace's fourth year class in English. Quite a number of the staff of the English department were present also, and after tea, all joined in singing Christmas carols, led by Mrs. Dow.

THINGS YOU MAY KNOW:—

You must keep your body fit, you must take exercise, you must get out in the open if possible for this exercise, you must get good fresh air.

Well! What better than to fulfill all these obligations in such a pleasant manner and under such favorable circumstances, especially during the winter months, and at such a low cost. This is not being given to you as some would tell you. No, you have to pay $2.00 for the privilege, and that only to the first 1,000 as more than that number get beyond our personal control, and secondly, $2.00 is less than cost and we cannot give the whole rink over to a less than cost crowd—and at the same time maintain our usual high standard.

If it is an off-night, nothing more pleasant than to join with a few friends and enjoy the strains of music, while talking over old times or times to come or the odd rugby or hockey game. If only a few minutes, why a good whirl around brings those lungs into excellent shape, but don't get over-heated. Perhaps you have been studying until 9 o'clock and getting very dull, well that means too much CO₂. Just beat it to the rink, if close enough; have a good skate and home to bed for a good mental rest—with good, fresh air as medicine.

VARSITY DEFEATS CANOE CLUB TEAM

Juniors Surprise Hockey Fans on Saturday Night by 2-1 Victory

GOOD TEAM WORK

The Varsity Juniors gave the fans a big surprise when they defeated the Toronto Canoe Club by 2 to 1 in the opening game of the O.H.A. junior series played at the Arena on Saturday night. Varsity led all the way with good team work and tricky passing. The solid Varsity defence combined with the efficient work of Hunnisset in goal was too much for the Red Ringers. McIntyre, McManus and London starred for the Canoeists.

There was no score in the first period, though both teams had plenty of shots at the opposite net-minders. Williams, a newcomer to the Varsity squad, scored the first tally of the game at the very start of the second period. He got cleanly through the Paddlers' defence on a rush from his own declivity.

Brant scored again in the first minute of the final frame, making it 2-0 for Varsity. Three minutes later London scored for the Canoe Club. "Red" Foster then led the Paddlers in a desperate attempt to get an equalizer but the Varsity defence stood up to the test.

The teams—
Varsity: Goal, Hunnisset; defence, Smith, Bell; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington, Laing; subs, Crer, Williams.

Toronto Canoe Club: Goal, Miller; defence, Robertson, Foster; centre, McIntyre; wings, McManus, Brydson; subs, Richardson, London.

PROMISE INTEREST IN SENIOR HOCKEY

Varsity and McGill Are Alone
Left in Intercollegiate Hockey Union

EXTENSIVE SCHEDULE

With the Xmas season at hand the Blue and White senior hockey sextet is about to begin one of the most extensive schedules that a Varsity team has had in years.

The University of Montreal, following the example of Queen's, is no longer a member of the Intercollegiate Hockey Union. Varsity and McGill alone are left. The Blue and the Red will play home and home games, preserving the true intercollegiate tradition, but the winner will not be eligible for the Allan Cup play-offs. Varsity will make her bid in the O.H.A. as has been the custom for several years, and McGill as a member of the Quebec Hockey Association.

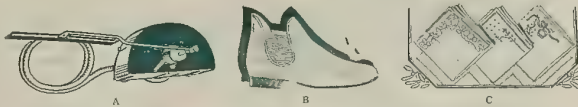

The appearance of a Canadian college sextet south of the border all-ways creates interest and draws good crowds. This season's trip will be no exception and will continue to advance the enthusiasm for the great winter sport which is more and more taking hold in American institutions of higher learning.

An International Intercollegiate Hockey League with Varsity, McGill, Harvard and Yale as a basis to which additions could be made later would be acceptable in many circles. Intercollegiate sport has a "color" that can be found nowhere else and with participants of the calibre mentioned above there does not seem to be any doubt but that such a league would receive a great deal of interest and support.

Hockey in the O.H.A. senior group appears to be in for a most successful season. The entry of St. Michael's College has stimulated the senior hockey in the city. Varsity and St. Michael's should hook up in some stirring battles that will likely draw the Toronto fans in large numbers. Queen's and Preston have strong line-ups, and at present it appears it will be a well-balanced circuit. With four good teams grouped together Toronto, Kingston and Preston will be shown a class of hockey that may go a long way in reviving the glory of the days when the Senior O.H.A. played to a capacity house.

CHRISTMAS PARTY FOR U.C. WOMEN

The annual Christmas party will be held at the U.C. Women's Union, 79 St. George St., on Tuesday, Dec. 18th, at eight o'clock. A play is to be presented, after which carols will be sung and refreshments served. All women of University College are very welcome.

BUFFALO TEAM BEATS VARSITY'S SENIORS

First Game of Basketball in American Trip Was Fast and Furious

VERY NARROW MARGIN

Varsity senior basketball team lost the first game of their American trip to the University of Buffalo, 27 to 24. But the Blue and White put up a game battle, extending the U. of B. quintette to the limit. The game was fast and furious and at no time were the teams separated by more than four points.

At the end of the first half Varsity led 13 to 9, but Buffalo overcame this advantage with spectacular play, and Varsity in vain strove to check the rally. With two minutes to go the score stood 24 all. Seigel, left forward of the Buffalo squad, potted a field basket and sunk a foul shot to end Varsity's hope of a win. The game ended Buffalo 27, Varsity 24.

"Mo" Mitchell, high scorer of last year's intercollegiate league, was the best for the Blue and White on the forward line, while Murray starred on the defence.

INTERMEDIATE SQUAD IS STRONG PROSPECT

Varsity to Play in Group
Mostly Comprised of Small Town Teams

WILLOWDALE FORMIDABLE

Now that Jimmie Douglas has been appointed coach, the Intermediate O.H.A. hockey team is beginning to take shape with Herb Moran managing the team. Of last year's team the Intermediates still have Herby Little in goal, Bob Graham on the defence, and Walter Smith, who was the regular right-winger last year.

There are a number of good new men turning out with the team who ought to round out a strong outfit. Alex Carrick, of junior hockey fame, is teaming up with Bob Graham to form a nice-looking defence. Clancy is a good prospect from St. Mike's on the forward line. There is a strong possibility of three or four members of the senior squad coming down to further strengthen the Intermediates.

This year the Blue and White Seconds are in a fast five team group composed mostly of small town teams where home town spirit runs high and victory is consequently very difficult for the visiting team.

Willowdale, a new team in Intermediate hockey, is rated as the team to beat. Included in their line-up are a number of former senior O.H.A. players with the two McPhersons, "Shrimp" and Johnny, and Collins, late of the Peterboro Senior O.H.A. team, being prominent. It will be a real task to defeat a team as strong as this Willowdale team appears to be, but this task ought not to bother Jimmie Douglas after his memorable effort with the Orphans.

BASKETBALL NOTICE

The finals of the Women's Intercollegiate Basketball Series will be postponed until after Christmas.

Victoria Women Again Win First Honours in Baseball

Another year has gone by, as far as women's baseballs are concerned, Victoria women kept up to their last year's mark and carried off the honours again. University College kept the Scarlet and Gold team stepping the whole time, and O.C.E. was not far behind. Her brilliant start lagged a bit, when their three best players were on the sick list.

Every game was a hard fought one. Close competition and the exceptionally good pitchers made this year a successful one. Daisy Quance, for the Scarlet and Gold, is a star in the pitcher's box. She is right at home on a baseball team and keeps any team busy. The same may be said of Edie Blackwell—U.C. are in luck to have such a good all-round player.

Vic's last year's pitcher was in the foreground for O.C.E. this year—Kay Ferguson. St. Mike's showed their good sportsmanship, though they were in a losing contest. All in all this year the baseball fields got all the thrillers they wanted.

TUESDAY TEA

Owing to the occurrence of the Christmas party on the evening of Tuesday, Dec. 18th, there will be no tea served in the common room of the U.C. Women's Union in the afternoon.

Varsity Faced with Strong Opposition in Basketball

Although there have been no startling developments along intermediate basketball lines, the prospects for a first class team are increasing. With the senior squad away they will have plenty of opportunity for improvement. Coach and manager are working hard to put their men into shape and so far they have done very well. Since Western University entered in the intermediate group Varsity will find they have yet another stiff barrier to intercollegiate laurels. So far the Blue and White have been successful in their exhibition games, and their next encounter with Central "Y" Seniors should be worth watching. The other members of the group consist of Ontario Agricultural College, McMaster and Osgoode Hall.

Our Theatres in Retrospect

We find it difficult to sum up undergraduate dramatic activity, it is so varied. All we can do is to make a few detached comments like the South East corner of the "Star." Comparing Victoria's "Private Secretary" with the Players' Guild's "The Faithful" we might say this. "The Private Secretary" was a Sunday School play almost perfectly done. "The Faithful" was extraordinarily difficult tragedy of the most perverse type, done well enough but by no means perfectly. One was a theatrical success, the other part of an attempt to seek out drama in all its forms. You may judge which you prefer. The Loretto play "St. George" does not quite compare with these. The acting was good but the cast had to struggle with a dramatically poor play.

The Guild had a good season. The best fall play was undoubtedly Boccaccio's "The Tale Untold" which took high among Guild productions. Also worthy of mention was the bit of Shakespeare. There were a couple of duds in the term but it is hard to get a good play every week.

We are glad to see the Victoria Dramatic Club take up the fall play idea. In our opinion it is the best way for undergraduates to study drama. They lack a theatre and are not quite into the spirit of the thing yet, but the latter will right itself.

Our regret is that Hart House has been silent. The Home of the Canadian Muse is locked and the windows barred. Mr. Aikens says he wants fewer and better plays, so we look forward eagerly to his "Blue Bird." At any rate there is still a Canadian Week on the bill.

B.D.B.

Day by day in every way we are getting cynicaller and cynicaller; it's an occupational disease with us, like housemaid's knee or radium poisoning. We feel that the season so far, in our particular scope that is stock and movies, has been like a boiled New England dinner, wholesome and stodgy.

The Empire Theatre has some very fine players, especially Mr. Abbey, Mr. Camp and Miss Foster, also the best theatre orchestra we know. Its plays have been good on the average—nothing we could really call dreadful, nothing except perhaps one, brilliant. The company works best with a small cast, for the stage is none too big, and as for some of the extras they have trotted out this fall—well, we would have liked to sit and shoot peas at them.

The "one" we spoke of is Barrie's play of last week, which was perfectly delightful, even in retrospect. We like Barrie. There was also a good comedy, "Loose Ankles," so good in fact that it deserves a travelling company and three dollar seats. "Queen Victoria" and "Pickwick" were boiled beef, educational and all that sort of thing, and nice to have seen. It was nice, too, to have "Able's Irish Rose" up as a museum piece, like the world's champion faggote sifter. The one about the doctors, "The Outsider," has faded out of our minds with some of the weaker comedies which we laughed at as well as with. We repeat, though, there was nothing dreadful.

The Victoria Theatre changed horses. The early musical comedy company consisted of one fair comedian, a few pretty good actors who could sing tolerably well and a chorus which would neither sing nor dance and were far more than any chorus we ever saw, but which was not too bad to look at. We had hopes of this company; a chorus can be taught to dance, sometimes to sing and even to wear bathing suits, and the leads were good enough not to run a good show. But alas! They gave up without one noble attempt. Their plays were either so-so or just too sweet.

We have not seen enough of the present company to be outspoken, but it seems to be about grade A stock. They have provided light things for the tired business man and what-not, of which "That Girl Patsy" was perhaps the best. There has been nothing memorable but then you never can tell what may happen.

B.D.B.

Since the talkies have become the rage in Hollywood, all the famous and infamous stars have taken to oiling their larynxes, and have left their screen children pretty much to themselves. As a result the movies for the last month or so have been sloppier than usual, greatly assisted by a few squeaks and squawks from the movie-tone. Neither has anything been added to the great, silent drama, nor to the great, noisy drama except a few rather regrettable efforts. One thing the talkie has shown us, that it is a perfect medium for the vaudeville comedian who is unable to continue his show despite all boos and catcalls from the cheap seats. As a

Lovely Laura Louise Wishes All Her Friends a Merry Christmas

By D. Kendall

The Residence,
Monday.
Dear Betty:
So Christmas is coming at last. Like Christmas. It is such a relief between Thanksgiving and Easter. If it weren't for it there wouldn't be nothing—no snow, no fur coat (I'm going to get one this year), no five pound boxes of chocolates, no turkey, no Santa Clause, no nothing. I feel like four month old kitten in the City Dairy.

Its going to be a wonderful Christmas. I simply know it is. There's the holly and of course the mistletoe. I'm going to take some home for fear they forget. Everyone will be there. Aunt Lizzy, and Bob, Uncle Peter, and Jim, Cousin Francis, and Jack, and Phil and Maurice and Walter and Clarence, and all the girls as well. It will be glorious.

Of course, I don't believe in Santa Clause like I used to. No educated person does that. He's just like Adam and Jonah and the Stork. But all the same, it makes you feel darn good to know that someone will send you something even if he has a moustache instead of whiskers. I guess I'd as soon have a present to a dear little girl as to a good little girl, like I used to.

I don't care how old I am but I still like a Christmas tree, even though it would be a whole forest if it wasn't cut down in a hundred years. It looks awfully good with the candles and the kids singing 'Hark the Herald Angels sing' on it. I do hope that there's lots of frost and sleighing and I can skate without having to take my meals standing up for two days afterward. Thais awkward—awfully! And on Sunday we'll all go to Church and here the preacher and the choir and I'll shut my eyes and pretend its God that's saying 'Peace on earth.' I'm not really religious, but it does make you feel trembly and shaky and happy all over to sing 'I came upon the midnight clear.' It means so much, even if you are sophisticated and half through the first year at Varsity.

Its been a good year and I've had lots of fun, and I expect lots of presents. I bought ties for the boys 3 for $1, at a sale, but they look awfully good in those cute holy boxes. I hope they send me something. It would be terrible to give them a real present and only get a card in exchange.

So, dear, I'll see you in a day or two and will wish you a Wonderful Christmas.

Your dearest friend
Laura Louise.
P.S. Tell all my friends that know about me, that I wish them ALL a simply, heavenly, gorgeous, MERRY CHRISTMAS.

Victorious Orphan Team Entertained at Dinner

There was a happy echo of the football season on Saturday night when Dr. and Mrs. E. A. McCulloch entertained the members of the victorious Varsity Ontario Rugby Football Union team at a dinner-dance at the Granite Club. There were present J. W. Douglas, A. C. Baillie, J. D. Sinclair, J. E. R. Wood, W. J. Spence, D. S. Wood, W. F. G. Adams, G. S. Cartwright, J. C. Carrick, A. J. Stringer, C. A. Ruddell, John Burk, M. B. Furber, D. A. McFadyen, J. C. Johnston, S. Kernohan, J. M. Scott, R. Gray, T. J. Wright, R. J. Gallows, N. Hutton, R. G. Knowles, J. B. G. Stewart, W. R. McIntosh, E. M. Henderson, F. M. Scott and A. H. McCulloch.

result of the talkies we now have a line on Will Mahoney, Chic Sale, George Bernard Shaw and the King of England, though already these episodes have become somewhat confused in our mind.

"The Man Who Laughs," Hugo's pleasant little tale about mutilation, and "White Shadows of the South Seas" are the best pictures we have seen this term. The former was excellently cast with Conrad Veidt in the leading role; his portrayal of Gwynplaine, the mutilated clown, was memorable. The latter was a picture of marvellous scenic effects, but with little else to recommend it. The worst movie we have seen happened to be the also the first movie we had witnessed, that is "What Every Mother Should Know"—or was it "Mother Knows Best?"

A few weeks ago Mr. and Mrs. Martin Johnson passed through town with their three ringed circus, known as "Simba," this interesting elongation of a news reel was almost ruined by bad cutting and Hollywood showmanship. "Fazil" must be mentioned as a honest attempt to contrast the eastern and western ideas of marriage; the concluding scene, the culmination of the tragedy, was beautiful and dignified; but the picture as a whole was a failure because it was produced in Hollywood where the creed is, "All sins of acting and direction shall be forgiven, if the final clinch is hot enough."

FORESTRY RETRIEVES ITS PETS FROM KNOX

In a Hard Fought Battle Lions Are Rescued for Honours' Sake

A FEW CASUALTIES

With their leader waving a huge broad-axe and dressed in a lumber-jack's macinaw, some fifty men from the Faculty of Forestry staged a successful and well planned raid on Knox College and in a hard fought battle rescued their pet lions which the East House Knox men had stolen from the steps of the Forestry Building the night previous.

Scouts had done some cruising for the Foresters and had located their pets before the doors of Centre House within the safety of the Knox quadrangle; therefore the First Year men were assigned the job of carrying the lions while their retreat was covered by a massed formation of upper year men who blocked the stairway as the Knox men poured out from their dining hall. In the melee on the stairs several Foresters were captured and roughly handled in fighting for freedom. One man left a shoe behind him. "We couldn't leave for the holidays with such a blot on the honour of our faculty," said one in explaining the cause of the bell. "They're well hidden now," he continued.

Among those absent whom the Forestry raiders left in the hands of the enemy were several football stars from their Mulock Cup team, including Simpson, star half back, and the quarter back and several of the big line men. The captive lion men were treated to a choice assortment of tapping, showers and cold tubs in the gentle Knox fashion.

Burwash Hall held the first of a series of four musicals last night. Harvey Doney, baritone, soloist of Sherbourne St. United Church, sang, assisted by a quartet.

An invitation is extended to visit the University Settlement Christmas tree Friday night to see the open air Christmas play and help sing carols.

big affairs that lies just around the corner. Perhaps past Albrecht Durer's house you saunter to the castle—the city on the hill. A tumbled mass of towers, and of battlements, of courts and sumptuous living rooms this splendid barbarism is. The mould and dust of antiquity lies there—in its gruesome "museum of torture," and narrow winding stairs that lead to dark and fearsome dungeons. But as from the great balcony you gaze down upon the city lying steeped in the haze of twilight, you feel that, in spite of the surging maelstrom of life which eddies in the streets, the spirit and the presence of those long-forgotten ages have enshrouded you in the impenetrable lure.

Moonbeams

Rheta E. Towle

Sailing from the lands O' Dream,
Across the seas of blue midnight,
Through the mists of finest sheen,
A precious cargo heaves in sight.

By my garden there will port
A peerless craft of fairest mold,
To land a store of varied sort,
Worth more than fields of precious gold.

Sparkling gems!—enchanted beams!
Tiny specks of silvery mist,
Fairy things that lure sweet dreams
All are on the cargo's list.

Till the eastern sky is bright,
The golden craft at anchor lies,
Then 'twill float far off of sight,
And vanish into distant skies.

who you are." "Who I am?" asked the stranger in a voice that was neither friendly nor unfriendly. "I am merely a wanderer who is looking for a place to stay." "Peter could not help but laugh for long, so that he could hardly hear the stranger's words. But he did not say a word. He only looked at the stranger with a steady gaze. "But are you not going to tell me who you are?" "No, I am not," said the stranger. "I am a wanderer, and I am looking for a place to stay." "But are you not going to tell me who you are?" THE WORLD OF CONRAD Conrad's life was a long and hard one. He was a wanderer, and he was looking for a place to stay. He had heard many stories wherein one did kindness on Christmas Day, and he was wondering if you were one of them. Will you not then reveal yourself to us?"

The stranger continued, "Is it not sufficient reward to know that you have relieved my necessity and have given me happiness?"

Peter smiled, a chill, twisted smile, and he said, "I am a wanderer, and I am looking for a place to stay. I have heard many stories wherein one did kindness on Christmas Day, and I am wondering if you are one of them. Will you not then reveal yourself to us?"

Selling Gertie Garters

L. J. McManis

A Junior was seized with the Christmas spirit and decided to make a few dollars for himself. He decided to sell garters. He had a lot of garters, and he was sure he could sell them. He went to the store and bought a lot of garters. He then went to the door and started selling them. He was very successful, and he made a lot of money. He was very happy, and he was sure he could do it again next year.

Twilight, and then there comes a tiny star,
And then his fellows follow one by one
And then one brighter than the rest by far
Heralds the coming of God's only Son.

And as I watch the stars in Heaven's floor,
The eyes of God that watch the world; Again
I hear the strains of heavenly music soar:
The Angels sing of God's good-will towards men.

And He will come again to-night, I know,
From out the starry Universe above
Just as He came two thousand years ago,
To teach the world once more, that God is love.

Sunset on Lake Huron

In Huron's rippling waters, all agleam,
The sun, a crimson ball, has sunk to rest,
Clouds, many-hued, now climb the rosy west,
Their forms fantastic ever-changing seem—
Now balmy isles, where palms half shade a stream,
And vessels cleave each fiery billow's crest,
Now spires and minarets, which breezes wrest
From lofty summits. Soon the parting gleam
Of crimson fades from clouds and sombre sky,
A wisp of smoke from some great freighter trails
Across the evening sky, to disappear
Among the twilight shades; bright Venus hails
The swift approach of night; now faint, now clear,
The tiny wavelets croon their lullaby.

A Very Short Story
B. D. B.

There was once a young man, a University student in fact, who kept a correspondence file. There were a number of envelopes "Relatives to be answered," "Joe," "Broker's Ship," "Camp fellows," "Prospective Jobs," "Bills," "Receipts," "Special." Also, because he was every young man, he had a streak of sentimentality, there was an envelope marked "Girls."

In the same university was a co-ed, rather pretty, rather intelligent, who smoked constantly, necked now and then and would even take one (but only one) gin on occasion. Like most girls, even the most sophisticated ones who try to look blasé and call it poise, she was quite sentimental and she kept the left back corner of her top drawer for programmes. Sometimes the drawer overflowed and they got mixed with handkerchiefs and odds and ends. Sometimes she sorted them out slowly and carefully.

They met at a class party, these two. "May I cut in?" "Did you see the richly came last Saturday?" "You may not know it, but I'm taking you home." "No, they're hazy with brown specs." "And I'm practically sure to make the team." "Thank you and Heu!" He went out and smoked a cigarette. She could not smoke a cigarette on account of the rules, so she powdered her nose. It is the same thing.

He changed gears with his left hand at the stop-light that evening, but he only kissed her twice. "After all there's a difference between love and a nucking party." Going home he thought "Good dancer—yes and not too hot—don't like 'em too hot—two at the Alice is six bucks—damn it, I'm falling for the wench—and tax sixty—l'm a fool—still, good show anyway—and Cull's too no, say one and a half and a half for the gas—just the kind of show she'd like parking a quarter and thirty-five for the dress shirt—why didn't I kiss her again—I was a fool to kiss her at all—no respect—sure am falling—lunch, a buck and a half—oh well, who not?"

She thought: "He's darling—I wonder if he's going to take me out—and dance?—What if he asks me to a movie?—I was dumb to let him kiss me so soon—maybe I won't see him again—oh yes I will!—and athletic too—Marion says it's foolish to go with one man—but his frat pin. Better than the one Philis has—and his eyes."

So they went to the play and two evenings afterwards to dance at a place just out of town. He called on her and they sat and looked at the fire, among other things. He told her about the big fellow he had knocked out when he was a kid, about the liquor he had drunk, about his hockey, his future job and why he had not got a first last year. She told him about her girl friends, how little her parents understood her and about the boys she had been out with. She wore his pin and he wore her ring.

One day he wrote her a sonnet, his first, and sent it to her with two American Beauties at a dollar and a half from a downtown florist. Then he cured himself for a sentimental fool. She wrote him a sweet letter and cured herself for a fool. He kept the letter in a volume of Kipling.

Alas, one day! It was at lunch. He suddenly looked up at her and behold! She was no longer beautiful. He had suspected this before, but now she was eating a pork chop. Just then she looked at him as she did when she wanted him to kiss her and a great loathing seized him. She smiled and he wished he were dead.

Three weeks later he was reading Kipling and he came upon the letter. Wearily he looked at it, read a paragraph, then turned to his correspondence file and looked up "Girls." There were five others. Some considerable time after that she took his sonnet off her bedside table and read it slowly. Then she opened the top drawer and found various works, mostly in verse. She chuckled, then took in a heap and with a quick movement ruffled up the things in the drawer so that a pair of pale grey stockings, which were there and had come unrolled, sprawled over the letters.

This is love, the infinite, the everlasting, the inspiration of art and the stuff of poetry.
Life is like that.

Give a little, live a little, try a little north, smile a little, pray a little, play a little, be a little glad, rest a little, give a little if the heart is sad. Spend a little, send a little to another's door; give a little, live a little, love a little more.

SANTA'S LAST ACT

into committee, woke up the senators, made the stocks oscillate, the yens go up and the hres go down, caused the banks to fail, industries to close, a maddened populace, the institution of martial law and such like.

It all happened in this way. The Prince had a cute trick of leaving spoils or lead pencils or some such thing of it's emotive tendencies, in the royal path if someone had denied him something. Now the king, who had a fifty four inch waist, seldom inspected the floor in the immediate vicinity of his feet—in fact it was rumoured that he had not seen these numbers since he took to beer and pretzels.

These spoils always proved very upsetting to the king. The First Lord of the Household and Captain of the Guard were severely reprimanded and exiled to the House of Assembly which was a very painful proceeding—every time such an event took place, which we are glad to say was not frequent.

Things went on in this way for some time. Prince Knickerknacker grew older and larger but we are sorry to say neither wiser nor better behaved. The king's temper had become almost as short as his breath. Some of his anatomy was constantly under the care of the Royal Masseuse "First Lord of the Kitchen." In 9.3 seconds—it was a hundred yards to the house—The First Lord of the former Captains of the Guard and First Lords of the Household that there was no longer room for the legislators. However the cabinet declared this to be an advantage and voted seventeen annas toward the beer and pretzel fund for exiled Royal servants.

Now the best liked gentleman in the land was Santa Claus, a queer old philanthropist who lived all alone in the forest. He was quite a magician and was known to carry a little white magic around with him in a bottle. He was very fond of children and every Christmas eve he made it a point to visit all the homes of the children and leave a toy of some kind. He managed this all through his knowledge of geometry, relativity and a Serjeant-at-Arms," he added to the F.L. of K, who stood breathless near him.

These were all good little children, the bad ones he did not visit. Now since they were paid to be good they all were—that is every little girl and every little boy but prince Knickerknacker. He had never had his stocking filled. Every day was Christmas to him. No wonder then having only one Christmas instead of three hundred and sixty-five appeared silly to him.

On Christmas Eve when he was ten years old he called the king "Uncle." He had been fretting all day. He had pulled the tail off the royal cat, tripped the butler who was carrying a bowl of oysters, made faces at the Archbishop, and pinched the fat calves of the Lord Chamberlain, all of which warned everyone that the Prince was undisciplined. The king, who was sitting on the throne reading the newspaper, on hearing this looked over his horn rimmed spectacles shouting, "First Lord of the Kitchen" at the footman, who in turn shouted down the hall under the care of the Royal Masseuse "First Lord of the Kitchen." In 9.3 seconds—it was a hundred yards to the house—The First Lord of the former Captains of the Guard and First Lords of the Household that there was no longer room for the legislators. However the cabinet declared this to be an advantage and voted seventeen annas toward the beer and pretzel fund for exiled Royal servants.

Thirty-two minutes seven and two-fifths seconds after, the guard announced the watch, which dragged in Santa Claus considerably rumpled and out of breath. "That's him," said Prince Knickerknacker, pointing, "He won't bite me boys."

"Why, you fat old red-faced toper," said the king, "off to the House of Assembly with him—We'll make him a Serjeant-at-Arms," he added to the F.L. of K, who stood breathless near him.

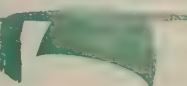

"Capital, your highness," he agreed between puffs.

But Santa Claus did not retire so meekly. He took a half ounce of white magic out of his pocket—it looked like white pepper—and blew it at the Prince. Prince Knickerknacker's head grew larger and more yellow, while his body shrank until it was quite spindling. His eyes became bluer and bluer and his cheeks redder and redder until they remained as jewels in a great gold crown on the end of a stick. He had turned into a mace.

Old Santa Claus placed it on his shoulder before, anyone could say "Boo!" and hurried out. The king laid down his newspaper, stretched his arms, yawned and stepped down off the throne. He happened to step on a spool like affair which had slipped off the end of the mace. "Treasure!" he roared.

That was the last time such an occurrence happened in the place. It was also the last time Prince Knickerknacker was ever seen. Well anyway that's why there is no Santa Claus.

STUDENTS RETURN IN SPITE OF RADIO

Announcements of Later Opening Fail to Deter Ambitious Ones

MAJORITY NOTIFIED

Even the fact that the radio was used to announce that the University would not re-open until Tuesday did not carry the glad tidings far enough to prevent some from returning last Thursday. In the Toronto papers the announcement appeared among the theatre ads and even here it failed to bring the postponement to the notice of some.

At University College two students strayed into the Registrar's office on Thursday to enquire why the halls were deserted. One of the professors at U.C. who had been in New York at a conference arrived in Toronto at eight-thirty Thursday morning and going without any breakfast in order to be on time for a nine o'clock arrival only to find himself five days early. At Queen's Hall there were only two who were uninformed and returned early. Scotty, the caretaker at U.C. told "The Varsity" that about fifteen students most of whom live in the city came back Thursday and were quite delighted to learn that their vacation had been extended. They all declared that their papers had contained no notifications. One man, however, had come nine hundred miles. He said no newspapers reached him during the holidays.

At Victoria one co-ed came all the way from Bridgeport, Connecticut, but took her unnecessarily early arrival quite philosophically. By Thursday evening there were about fifty men at Burwash but they knew of the changed date of opening and claim that they returned early to study.

Trinity College notified all their students not to return until Monday and most of the fraternities wired their out of town members about the change of the date.

On making various enquiries The Varsity came to the conclusion that the majority of those who come from any great distance, as the west, had no intention of returning before Monday in any case. These people were all very much pleased that they had been able to stay over and still not miss any lectures.

Special Offer for Students to Obtain Opera Tickets

The American Opera Company Alexandra Theatre has placed five tickets open next week at the Royal hundred tickets at the desk of the Hall Porter and at the Conservatory. Since these tickets are considerably reduced in price, students are advised to take advantage of this offer immediately.

Reduced Rates for Students en Route to Games Discussed

MEET IN KINGSTON

Representatives From Quebec Object to Invitation of Americans

An all-Canadian Athletic Federation was forecast at the National Federation of Canadian University Students meeting in Kingston which was held recently. The matter of reduced rates for students traveling to games and to and from universities was discussed. Exchange of students for a term of one year in Canadian universities was also under consideration, but may be carried into effect this year.

Rev. L. I. Green, a graduate of Bishop's College, presided at the conference. J. G. Goodsoe was Vice-President and Percy Davies Secretary-Treasurer, from the Universities of Dalhousie and Alberta, respectively. Delegates were present from universities all over Canada. E. M. Henry, IV Year Arts, U.C., was the representative from the University of Toronto.

A vigorous discussion was precipitated over the proposal to bring American debating teams to Canada. Messrs. Boucher and Chiquette of the University of Montreal protested against the invitation to American Speakers. M. Boucher declared that there was altogether too great an Americanizing trend in Canadian civilization today and voiced the opinion that the debates with men from American colleges would only add to the danger. M. Chiquette expressed a preference for national as opposed to international debating contests.

Percy Davies of Alberta, Secretary-Treasurer, was unwilling to withdraw the invitation to American speakers and asked, "Can we tell them that we are afraid of their influence?" This was a question which the spirit of international good will, he claimed. The vice-president, J. G. Goodsoe, of Dalhousie, advocated sending more Canadian speakers to the United States to cement good feeling.

The matter was dropped on the assurance that American teams would be brought here by the Federation only once in five years.

Dr. Ernest Thomas to Lead S.C.M. Group at Wymilwood

Recommendation has been made to cancel all meetings of the S.C.M. during this week in order that students from every faculty may attend the discussion groups which will be held daily in Wymilwood from five until six, with Dr. Ernest Thomas as group leader.

Dr. Thomas has been judged by many as a particularly able discussion leader, and as one who understands the student point of view. His topics alone suggest interesting possibilities. The theme for the week is "Jesus and Life", and will be divided under the following headings: Wednesday: Jesus Revisiting Tradition; Thursday: What God meant to Jesus; Friday: Jesus Finding God in Life.

The opening week of the term and the five o'clock hour have been chosen to enable as large a number of students as possible to attend.

NO NEW CASES OF FLU IN MENS RESIDENCES SINCE THE HOLIDAYS

Women Report No New Cases Although Many Suffered During the Holidays

MANY STUDENTS RETURN

Relief From Hard Study or Home Life Were Reasons For Decline

Although in the past few weeks a wave of influenza has swept Toronto, and has on the average claimed a dozen lives a day, not a single case of it has been reported from any of the men's residences in the University at the beginning of the year. This fortunate state of immunity may perhaps be set down to a relief from hard study, or to a temporary reversion to the healthful influences of home life; in any case, the ravages of the disease have not been felt here this term as yet.

In the U. of T. men's residences, the "Varsity's" South House informant reported that all were "in fine shape." In East House there were a few cases before Christmas, but they have all been cleared up, and, as in North House, no cases now exist. At noon on Tuesday, however, the men had not all returned, and it may be that some have remained at home through illness.

Knox College reports no cases at all; in Trinity House, where there were several cases before the holiday, there are no indications of the flu whatever. At St. Michael's there were many ill previous to Christmas with the mild three-to-four day type of influenza, but these have all recovered, and there are no cases there at present. At Burwash Hall, where only about half of the men have returned, no one is ill, but here, as in the other residences, the absence of the remainder may be due to sickness at home.

Whether or not it is due to the lengthened holiday or the cold weather, there is an absence of flu among the resident girls who are back in almost full numbers. St. Hilda's reports all the girls back and well though many suffered from the flu during the holidays. Very few of the students living at Argyle or Hutton House have extended their holidays—only one from after effects of the flu. The girls of St. Mikes and Victoria are back with very few exceptions and there is no flu among them. The scare is well-nigh over and New Year's Resolutions have been made to work faithfully and well have been made once more.

I.O.D.E. SCHOLARSHIP WON BY MISS M. COLEMAN

Brilliant Student at Victoria and a Former Member of the "Varsity"

The Imperial Order of the Daughters of the Empire make a yearly offer of a travelling scholarship, worth fourteen hundred dollars, to be devoted by the winner to further study in any university within the British Isles. It is a much coveted prize calling for a high standard of scholarship and a broad outlook. This year it has been awarded to Miss Mary Coleman, a former member of the Varsity staff. She is an outstanding student of Victoria College, having been prominent throughout her college career in debating and student government. As a Canadian student in a foreign university she will be able to represent her Alma Mater.

CHRISTMAS CHEER AT SETTLEMENT FOR NEEDY ONES

Grand Round of Festivities Climaxed by Great Community Tree

SANTA CLAUS PRESENT

All Enjoy Musicale, Plays, Carols and Visits to Hart House

Despite the trials and tribulations of examinations the University members somehow found time to celebrate the Christmas season with one round of festivities at the University Settlement. Monday opened the week with two musical recitals in which the music pupils from the Settlement and student-teachers from the Conservatory took part. Tuesday night Miss Anne Hodgkins of the Eaton Girls' Club entertained the Mothers' Clubs, which presented their hostess and their volunteer pianist Miss Sophie Boyd, with hand bags. Sir Robert Falconer in lieu of Santa Claus distributed the gifts, assisted by Dr. Wastney representing the Board of Directors.

In the holly-decked Women's Union on Wednesday night Mrs. Malcolm Wallace, Mrs. Grant Brown and Mrs. Kirkwood entertained a hundred and fifty girls from the Settlement. The Dickens Fellowship presented a scene from the Christmas Carol, and after most "Christmas" refreshments Enid Walker playing Santa Claus was hailed with delight.

Hart House on Thursday night was more uproarious than usual, if possible, when two hundred and forty boys enjoyed their third annual party in that building so wondrous to them. They tried every possible activity of the building, even to shooting and wrestling, by no means omitting the quantities of supper served in the Great Hall.

Friday night the biggest event of the week was the great Community Christmas Tree behind the Grange, whose lights shone clear down to Queen Street while the Christmas Carols from hundreds of throats floated out upon the frosty air. Mr. Bissett and a number of students returned to the Settlement House later, where the Professors' wives poured coffee and the University Volunteers served.

During the week Santa with his pack and bells visited the wee folk at the Settlement, bringing them such attractive gifts as blackboards, little red tables and chairs, riddles, puzzles, and dolls most daintily dressed by girls from the different colleges. Monday night the entire Settlement Group, every man, woman and child of them, almost filled the Hart House Theatre to witness the dress rehearsal of the Blue Bird. By Tuesday morning it was doubtful who had enjoyed the Christmas festivities more, the club members of the Settlement, or the volunteer students and University staff who had helped to make it such a happy week.

Prof. F. Anderson Recovers From Recent Operation

Professor F. H. Anderson, Assistant Professor of the Department of Philosophy, who underwent an operation for a varicose vein during the holidays is convalescing and will resume his classes about the 15th of January. While doing farm work in Prince Edward Island, Professor Anderson was kicked severely, trampled by a horse, sustaining an injury which it is hoped the present operation will have relieved.

DEATH REMOVES PROMINENT MEMBERS OF UNIVERSITY OF TORONTO STAFF

Our Sympathy

The sympathy of the Varsity Staff, past and present, is extended to Miss Agnes Hodgetts, Women's News Editor, 1926, in her recent bereavement. Her brother, Jack, died on January 1st, in Wellesley Hospital from pneumonia. He was prominent in water polo and hockey circles in the University and was a member of Sigma Chi.

CANON O. G. TROOP, LEADER AT WYCLIFFE QUIET DAY

Emphasizes Supreme Necessity for Consecration of Clergy to the Work

"The need of the world today is for more men inspired by the Spirit of God and fortified by Holy Scripture," stated Canon Osbourne G. Troop, M.A., during an address in Wycliffe College Chapel yesterday. Canon Troop went on to say that Jesus Christ and Holy Scripture were inseparable, and until more men were raised up who were as deeply inspired as were the apostles of the primitive church, thorough evangelization of the world would be impossible.

Canon Troop was the special leader of the Quiet Day held yesterday at Wycliffe College and he conducted a series of devotional meditations in the chapel upon "The Beauty of Holiness," "Education and the Bible," "The Noble Army of Martyrs," and "Christian Service in Relation to its Goal."

Throughout his addresses Canon Troop emphasized the supreme necessity of the whole-hearted consecration of the clergy to the work and to Christ Himself. Canon Troop has over fifty years experience in the ministry from which to speak and he stated that despite the vicissitudes through which he had passed in that time he had never regretted for an instant the surrender of his life to the work of the ministry.

RHODES SCHOLARSHIPS ANNOUNCED BY MCGILL

Two Students Secure Honors Allotted to Whole Province Of Quebec

Special to "The Varsity" from the Managing Editor, the "McGill Daily".

Montreal, Que.—An unusual honor has been conferred upon McGill University. Both Rhodes Scholarships for the province have been awarded to McGill. The winners are Kenneth Harold Brown and Henri Greer Lafleur. They are both students of the Faculty of Arts. Brown was educated at a Montreal High School; he has had class offices; is intercollegiate mile champion, and News Editor of the "McGill Daily". He is a prominent undergraduate and a First Class Honour student in French and Economics. Lafleur was educated at Lower Canada College; he has held offices on the Junior Prom Committee and the Red and White Review. He is a First Class Honour student in English and History. Both men are Montrealese and Seniors, graduating this year.

"Oh, Mandy is too funny for anything," exclaimed the newly wed, returning from the kitchen to the dining room where hubby was waiting hungrily for his evening meal. "The cook is so funny. The cooking win is all gone, and she's trying to kni herself a sweater out of spaghetti."

Dr. C. L. Starr, M.D., L.L.D., Dies Suddenly on Christmas Evening in Toronto

INTERNATIONALLY FAMOUS

Professor van der Smissen, Distinguished German Scholar Also Dies

Death removed two prominent members of the Faculty of the University of Toronto during the Christmas vacation. Dr. C. L. Starr, Professor of Surgery, died late on Tuesday evening, December 25. W. H. van der Smissen, Professor Emeritus of German, passed away in his 85th year, on Thursday, January 3.

The late Clarence L. Starr, M.B., M.D., L.L.D., M.C.M., was an internationally-known surgeon. He was born in Georgetown, spent his boyhood at Brookline, and attended the Whitby High School. Matriculating to the University of Toronto, he took a course in Medicine, graduating in 1890. He obtained his M.D. at the Bellevue Hospital in New York.

He soon dropped the general practice which he had begun in Toronto and devoted himself to intensive surgical work. In 1911 he became surgeon-in-chief at the Hospital for Sick Children. During the war, Dr. Starr distinguished himself by his war relief work. He organized the first Canadian reconstruction hospital and was shortly after appointed surgeon-general at the Granville Hospital, Ramsgate, England. Before the conclusion of the war, he helped to establish a chain of military hospitals throughout the country. The Christie Street Hospital is one of these. He received the appointment of temporary director of surgery at Harvard after the war, and was to have gone to England on a similar appointment to St. Bartholomew's Hospital, London.

The death of Professor van der Smissen removed one of the University's most distinguished men. He was in his eighty-fifth year and had been actively attached to the staff for nearly fifty years. In military as well as professional circles he was well known, having been wounded in the Fenian Raid engagement at Ridgeway. He was connected with the Queen's Own, becoming lieutenant in 1872 and captain in 1876. Professor van der Smissen was born in Toronto and educated at Upper Canada College and the University of Toronto. He won the silver medal in classics at University College, obtaining his B.A. in 1864 and his M.A. in 1866. He then became lecturer in German at his alma mater and was appointed a professor in 1892. As University Librarian, from 1873 to 1890, he was instrumental in rebuilding the library after the disastrous fire of 1890.

He held many offices, including that of president of the Canadian Institute in 1886, president of the Modern Language Association in the same year, and president of the Literary Society in 1880. In 1912, a Ph.D. was conferred on him by the university. Among the numerous books which Professor van der Smissen published was a translation of Goethe's "Faust."

Victoria Floors Cleaned

As is customary, students returning found the floors of Victoria College slick and varnished after the Christmas Vacation. Three years ago the old tiled floor system was abolished as being too unsanitary, and now every vacation finds the floors washed and varnished.

INTERNATIONALISM AND IMPERIALISM IN BRITAIN

Britain has gained nothing from her conciliatory attitude toward the United States. The armament policy of France is a disturbing fact. The best solution for England and Canada lies in an Imperialistic policy leading to a unity based on freedom of trade between the mother country and the dominions.

This was the substance of a speech given before the Canadian Club by Arthur Beverly Baxter, managing editor of the London Daily Express. His ideas command attention not only because he is a former Toronto man and Canadian but because he is the editor of the principal organ of Lord Beaverbrook who has made some important and original contributions to British politics.

Mr. Baxter described the relations between Great Britain and the United States as a series of concessions on the part of the former which had the effect of sharpening the Oliver Twist appetite of the States. Britain had cancelled the Anglo-Japanese naval agreement. She had made peace in Ireland. She had agreed to the "tragic" debt settlement which had lowered the standard of living for three generations to come. She had allowed the "Historic twelve mile limit" to be reduced to the three mile limit. She had conceded naval parity. "I hope England will go on", the speaker is reported as saying, "I hope England will say to America, 'Anything you ask in reason we will give. You can go on raising your tariff but from now on we are going ahead with a proposition we have had in mind for some time and that is the British Empire'."

The speaker came to the same conclusion after a review of Franco-British transactions. He wished to God that war was finished in the world but he was worried at the vigour and enthusiasm with which France was arming, an enthusiasm on a Napoleonic scale. The worst feature of the situation, he declared, and the worst menace to the British Empire, was the foreign policy of the present government. He described Sir Austen Chamberlain's rise to power as a "political tragedy" and charged that "Sir Austen is obsessed with Europe."

This attack on Chamberlain's pro-French policy is interesting to us in view of an event that occurred this term in our midst. After they had been granted honorary degrees by the university, Sir Austen Chamberlain and His Excellency Paul Claudel, Ambassador of the Republic to the United States exchanged eloquent expressions of Franco-British accord which were greatly applauded.

But to Imperialist thinkers old "Brummagen Joe" was more inspiring than his son. This latest pronouncement of Imperialist thought as delivered by Mr. Baxter revives the elder Chamberlain's idea of Imperial relations on a trade basis. The latter wanted a system of Imperial preferences and pushed the idea strenuously at Imperial conferences but Sir Wilfrid Laurier refused to commit Canada to the proposition. Imperial free trade would in all probability be as hard to secure as Imperial preference. The plain truth of the matter seems to be, however, that all parties in Britain are worried over the state of the country and more than anxious to find a solution by use of the Imperial instrument. A drastic proposal may be put forward at the forthcoming election but it is a large task to carry Great Britain for the measure first and then persuade the dominions. There does not seem to be any one in Britain ready for such a task.

The other point stressed by Mr. Baxter, suspicion of France, receives much less credence in the Canadian than in the American press. And there the suspicion is not reserved for France but for European nations in general, often including Great Britain. Joe Chamberlain's maxim, "Stay out of Europe" has been repeated many times during the year by American college papers.

Art, Music and Drama

"The Bluebird"

Maeterlinck's "The Blue Bird," the first Hart House play of the season was a distinct success. It is a very difficult play to produce but Mr. Atkins managed it very capably, in fact considering his limited resources he did wonders. Unfortunately we saw it on the first night and it had not quite the finish which we had expected after so long a silence, but perhaps we are too stiff in the neck. The play itself is too much of a classic to require great comment. Maeterlinck took a charming fairy story, added some poetic ideas and a few ironical Bons mots for the grown-ups, and cast it into excellent language and effective scenes. He also added a moral. The moral has dated somewhat, as well as certain sentimentality which went over better in the 'eighties, and there are hardly enough cynical saws, but the play remains beautiful, none the less. It is still alive.

The acting was quite excellent. Elaine Modson as Tyltyl, Elizabeth Forgie as Light, Lorna McLean as Night and William Atkinson as the cat made a very smart set, which Rita Davies as Hytyl entered in her splendid scene with the dead. Jane Mallett substituted very capably for Dora McMillan who was taken ill at the last moment. The dancing was rather studied in spots, but a troupe of little girls doing quite a simple dance in perfect accord made a very effective scene. The scenes, by the way, should be mentioned; they were good.

There were one or two little things which, as a matter of personal taste we would have changed. We would sooner have seen the "elements," look more like elements and less like men and even if it would cost too much to have real transformations as Maeterlinck intended, something might have been worked with dimmed lights so that we could have pretended. We would sooner have had the idea that the children slept in their clothes a little less obvious, too. But these are matters of opinion, and we will remember the scene with Night and the Cat.

B. D. B.

Moreon Yodel Hi was one of the oldest and most respected fraternities on the campus. They enjoyed a social and intellectual prestige that few could equal. At least that is what the members told prospective pledges and anyone else who would listen to them. Like Rho Psi Rho, who controlled the activities of the rowing club and Psi Lambda Guy, who directed the affairs of the boxing association, Moreon house wielded powerful influence in university Ping Pong circles. And it is an interesting coincidence that the intercollegiate Ping Pong teams for the past nine years had been composed entirely of Moreons. It is all the more remarkable, therefore, that the chapter house of such an ancient and honourable society should be the scene of the horrible crime that was committed shortly before our story begins.

It was Monday night. The regular meeting of Moreon Yodel Hi had just begun and his altitude the chief chancellor was keeping the affair in order with the frequent and accurate use of the lead gavel while the chief Chiblain took attendance. At length he completed his report. "Brothers Wootz, Spluke, and Wapinshaw are absent and accordingly will each be assessed 24 ounces as required by the constitution. By the way, does anyone know where Brother Wootz is? He has not been around for over a week." Brother Blubber moved that an examination be made of the absent man's room to see if he had left any note explaining his plans. The motion was carried and Blubber went upstairs to carry out the suggestion. Brother Blubber screamed, and the active chapter dashed up in a body. Following his quivering finger they saw a human hand, half hidden by a pair of slippers under the bed, in his room. Sorrowfully they pulled the bed away, revealing the body of their brother, partly concealed among the old shoes and dirty sweater coats. His face and hands were torn and mutilated, and his flesh battered beyond recognition.

"Men, this looks like Murder," muttered the chief chancellor gravely. "Darned if it don't!" they sobbed. And weeping they filed slowly out of the room.

Who killed Algive Wootz? Don't miss next week's installment.

Gaspard McGuffey.

Some Father!

Three children were discussing the income of their fathers. One said: "My father writes a song in an evening and takes it downtown the next morning and sells it for $50." "That's nothing," declared the third. "My father gets up in a pulpit on Sunday and talks for half an hour, and it takes twelve men to carry the money up to him."

RICHMOND HILL DEFEATS VARSITY INTERMEDIATE O.H.A. TEAM 3-1

SENIOR BASKETBALL SQUAD RETURNS

Serious Accident to O'Leary and Influenza Weakened Team Morale

WON ONE AND LOST FOUR

Varsity Senior basketball team have returned from their American tour after a series of five games with outstanding Colleges in New York state. Four losses and one win were the results of the trip. Hard luck dogged the team throughout the entire trip. The influenza epidemic prevented Newman, Sakler and Hurvitz, from accompanying the team while Johnston, Mitchell and Currie all suffered a touch of the 'flu' prior to leaving. What was much worse was the unfortunate accident which has put George O'Leary, star forward of the "Blue and White", out for the season. O'Leary, in attempting to stop a beautiful play in the game with St. Bonaventure, crashed into a brick wall and fractured both his arms. The accident was a hard blow to the Varsity team and it shattered their morale. At this point of the game the Toronto team were leading 11-2, but in the second half they failed to score a single field basket and were defeated 36-21. O'Leary's accident will dampen Varsity's intercollegiate championship aspirations.

Varsity stacked up against the University of Buffalo in their first encounter and were just noted out of a victory in the last two minutes of play by a 27-24 score. In the next game the Varsity boys vindicated themselves by turning in a 36-26 win over Hamilton College.

Colgate floored one of the strongest quintettes in the eastern states and turned the Varsity squad back by the score 34-17. The Blue and White players seemed to be in a daze and could not get going. The strain of their trip was showing and their shooting and combination play was inaccurate. These games completed the pre-Christmas trip.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity hockey team made a fine showing in their American trip over the Christmas holidays losing but one fixture and that after a strenuous week of games. Their most outstanding feat was their win over the University Club of Boston the team that defeated the famed Blue Grads last year.

McGill's poor showing on the trip and Varsity's good one points towards another Intercollegiate title for the Red Porter outfit. McGill played some mighty poor hockey on their trip but were not at full strength but even at full strength they will have some trouble defeating the blue clad warriors.

The seniors get into O.H.A. action to-night when they meet the Preston team at Preston in what should be one grand battle. They are favoured to win but the Prestonsites should make it an interesting go to say the least.

The basketball team on their American tour were most unsuccessful and although they did not lose every game were defeated badly a number of times, the Colgate team and the Rochester team made the wins most decisive. But in all credit to the team they were against the finest opposition in New York state and the lads across the line are past masters of the cage game as it should be played. The McCutcheones put up a great battle in every game.

The readers of these columns will be sorry to hear of the premature death of Jack Hodgetts, who passed away a short time ago after a short illness. Jack was a member of the University College water polo team in 1926 and was a popular lad in all circles in which he moved.

SENIOR HOCKEY TEAM BLUE AND PRESTON RETURN FROM TOUR TO MEET TONIGHT

Defeat Harvard and Boston Playing Five Times in Week With Good Showing

Senior Hockey Teams Play Second League Game of Season

TWO GAMES THIS WEEK

BOTH IN FINE SHAPE

The fact that some Canadian College hockey squads can still furnish a brand of the great winter pastime up to the calibre of past years has been amply demonstrated by Varsity's annual invasion across the border. The Blue and White senior sextet, has just returned from a trip in which a very good showing was made against strong opposition.

In the last few years the class of hockey dished up on the other side of the line has been constantly improving and Canadian teams no longer face a soft snap when they take on their neighbours of the Great American Desert. Our college friends of the institution under the shadow of Mount Royal have helped to further demonstrate just what kind of hockey is being played by the northern American colleges.

This must be borne in mind, however, the conditions under which our teams play when they make a tour of this kind. This year Varsity were called upon to take the ice five times in eight days, each night facing an opponent that was sufficiently rested and at the height of its power. Considering these circumstances the Blue and White made a most creditable showing. In their first game they tied Dartmouth in a strenuous overtime game and then two nights later forced the Crimson-shirted men of Harvard to bow to the Blue of Toronto.

Their most triumphant victory was probably that over the strong University Club of Boston, who last year took a game from the Grads, and who about a week before their loss to the Blue and White had walloped a weakened McGill sextet by a score of 13-3. This Blue win doubtless goes to show that Canada can still show a few points to the gentry to the south. The following evening Varsity playing Harvard for 'Varsity' Senior O.H.A. team, winners of the Senior S.P.A. finals, play their second league game of the season when they meet the Preston seniors in Preston tonight. The first league game against St. Mike's was won by the wearers of the Blue and White, in overtime, 6-2.

The 'Varsity' squad has just returned from their tour in the States and are in splendid fettle for their league contests. The winning of the S.P.A. finals and their most successful tour in the States is sufficient proof that Varsity has a strong contender for the Senior O.H.A. title.

Manager W. D. MacDonald has selected the following team to take the ice for the Blue and White tonight: Murray Snyder, goal; Whitehead and Paul, defence; Stewart, McMullen and Harley, forwards, with Marshall and Murray as alternates.

The Preston representatives have a strong team and are out to annex the group honours so that the fixture tonight will doubtless prove to be an exciting, thrilling, tussle from gong to gong.

Friday night the Varsity team meets St. Mike's at the Blue and White arena. With these two contests this week the team will be forced to extend itself to the utmost in order to chalk up a pair of victories.

The second time were held to an overtime tie and then two nights later, weakened by four games in such a short time, in a fixture with the Yale team were forced for the first time to take the short end of the score.

With barely sufficient time to get rested the Blue and White step into the O.H.A. They take on Preston in the "health" burg to-night, and on Friday hook-up with St. Michael's at home.

VICTORIA JUNIOR YEAR ELECTS SPRING EXECUTIVE

Howe Martyn Wins Election for President With Small Majority

The Victoria College Junior Year elected their executive for the Spring Session Friday, Dec. 14. As many had already left for their homes, the vote was light for Victoria, with votes cast by some sixty per cent of the year.

"The infirmary is full up but we have only two ballots from there," said one of the scrutineers. "They were allowed to vote by sending in signed ballots," said Mr. M. D. Hager, the retiring president, who was Chief Returning Officer.

Mr. Howe Martyn is president elect for 370, having defeated Mr. Ash Annis and Mr. Donald Ross by small majorities. In fact small majorities were the rule of the election, which was in no way sensational. Miss Evelyn Crow is vice-president elect over Miss A. G. "Rocks" Vanstone and Miss Helen Beal; Mr. Clayte Searle, second vice-president elect over Mr. Jack Tilton; Miss Eleanor Taylor secretary elect over Miss Marie Bricknell; Mr. Edward Fennell, treasurer elect over Mr. George Beavers; Mr. Jim Terry, artist elect by acclamation; Miss Mildred Bell, pianist elect over Miss Ev. Fallett; Mr. Geo. Ferrier, poet elect over Mr. Jack Thornton and Mr. Arthur Snell; and Miss Norma Bateman, poetess elect over Miss Florence Lloyd.

INTERESTING WATER-POLO GAME TO BE PLAYED SOON

Varsity to Meet Strong Team of Montreal Champions in Hart House Pool

Arrangements have been made for an interesting water polo contest between the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association and the University of Toronto water polo team. This will take place at the Hart House Swimming Pool on Saturday, January 12th, at 8:15 P.M.

International Rules will be used and this occasion will mark the first game between a Toronto team and a visiting aggregation under this code.

For the last three years the M.A.A.A. has dominated in water polo circles in Montreal and are adepts at the game. The Toronto team, however, has been practicing assiduously for some time and recently walked off with the City Championship so the Varsity boys will be expected to show some style.

ENGLISH STUDENTS REBEL AT CHANGE OF QUARTERS

Student Government Blamed as Causing Strike and parade Through Streets

Special to the "Varsity"
Pacham, England.—Self-government in the village school here has had an intoxicating effect upon the scholars in attendance, to judge from the development of events since it was introduced. Owing to the fact that the school was overcrowded, educational authorities arranged for a number of them to be transferred to a neighbouring school. Resenting this, the pupils affected went on strike and paraded through the village with banners, inscribed "Patcham school for Patcham pupils". They were refused admission at the school by the headmaster, who informed them that they would have to abide by the ruling of the authorities.

The headmaster himself inaugurated the scheme whereby most of the internal governance of the school was entrusted to the pupils themselves. It intilled more self-reliance and independence of spirit than he had expected, however. The scholars are remaining on strike, but an education committee is to confer with their parents.

Great Wind God Solicited By Men of Flaming Papers and Red Lights

By A. H. ARRELL

And now the time of the festival being at hand the men of the flaming papers and red lights, appropriately made their solicitations to the Great Wind God somewhat as follows.

"O thou maker of the mighty wind look down upon thy chosen children. We thank thee for thy bounty in the past, without thine example we would have been lost in the S.A.C. meetings."

"We trust that you will appreciate what we have accomplished especially that 'Children look like their parents more often than formerly.'"

"That we have burnt up the Varsity which offended against thy divine highness since they contained more than wind."

"As you know we are perfect. 'We seek thy protection because we work so long and as thou knowest with thyself there is much noise but little accomplishment.'"

"And we feel that it is thy duty to protect us since it is thy duty to protect both fools and children and thou getest us both ways. (If you don't believe us, ask Shea's.)"

And the mighty Sun God, father of the Wind God, replied:—
"Thou weren't wrong, men of the flaming papers and red lights in seeking the favours from the Wind God since we trust he may grow out of this windy state even as it may be with you. Yet thou solicited his favours so imperiously we suggest you apply to the S.A.C. for a position."

"We congratulate your parents that they look not as you look, and we think it will be the greatest curse on civilization if your children must look as you do."

"You say you work long hours yet this is most natural for you because even so does the iceman and all those who use their hands more than their heads."

"You say you are perfect and do no wrong. We trust as you grow older this stage will pass and you will be able to distinguish between right and wrong."

"In conclusion we would say: There was a young man named Wright,

Who for once got exceedingly bright

The joke was so old, it shouldn't be told
Now for once you'll agree we are right."

Short Shots

Gentle reader, we have the very best of news for you; we are going to write much less. Owing to a recent decision that our jolly old advertising and Laura Louise are about nine times as important as good solid dreary reviews, we are going to bury "With the Theatres." Yes—Amen! Instead we are going to have this new short column. You take one glance between breaths at a lecture and know what not to go to for the whole week. If this is still too long we shall come to the one-word review: Good, bad or indifferent.

SHEA'S—HENRY SANTREY

Henry Santrey is back again. This eminent maestro still conducts, in our opinion, the finest jazz band in vauville. There is a good musical act by Seymour and Horan but the rest is ordinary, especially the picture.

F. N. Y.

UPTOWN—INTERFERENCE

Fair to middling. The "all-talkie" movie "Interference," taken from the play, is a first-rate tale of blackmail and murder with pretty good acting. There is an excellent act of old songs and Eddie Cantor gives a few laughs.

H. G. S.

THE EMPIRE—INTERFERENCE

A very good play, intelligently written about intelligent, possible people. The characterizations are good, the conversation smart but not overdone and there is no dearth of excitement. It shades pretty close to melodrama at the end but it is excellent light stuff.

IRISH DRAMATIST SPEAKS AT HART HOUSE SOON

Lennox Robinson of Dublin to Lecture Discussing Anglo-Irish Poetry

Lennox Robinson, Irish dramatist and Director of the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, is to deliver a lecture on "Anglo-Irish" poetry in Hart House on February 15. The lecture is a continuation of the policy inaugurated when George William Russell, better known as AE, spoke here last spring. It was felt that the interest shown in this lecture warranted another one on a similar subject.

"The White-Headed Boy," a fantastic comedy, is one of Lennox' best known plays; it was produced by the Irish Players six years ago in Toronto. Among the dramatists other plays are; "The Cross Roads," "The Round Table," "Crabbed Youth and Age," and "The White Blackbird." In 1917, he published a novel, "A Young Man From the South," and he has written several short stories. He edited the Golden Treasury of Irish Verse, which appeared in 1925.

VIRGINIA DARE LIMITED

Dramatic Society President Resigns Position at Victoria

The Executive of Victoria College Dramatic Association have reluctantly accepted the resignation of their president, Bill Deroche, and have decided to carry on under the vice-president, Rosamund McCulloch. Mr. Deroche felt unable to undertake the duties of the heavy programme planned for the year, due to academic pressure, but he assured the executive that they might rely on his hearty co-operation in any undertaking.

The Association considers it fortunate that its financial situation is so favourable, otherwise the loss of its president would render the completion of the plans for the spring term impossible.

Bi-monthly meetings in Hart House are to be continued. A definite course of dramatic experiment and study of make-up and stage management has been mapped out for the members for these meetings.

Miss McCulloch feels that the society will back the decision of the executive and is confident that with their support the plans will be followed with success.

STUDENTS OPINIONS ON EMPIRE AFFAIRS AND WORLD PEACE

RUSSIA WELL ARMED

England's First Consideration
Should be the British Empire

The Empire that is most desirable is a world-wide one; not the "British" Empire, so why not be as friendly as possible with all peoples? asked H. Devitt IV Maths. Vic., in giving his opinion on the problems put forth in yesterday's editorial in the Varsity, the subject of which was the speech of A. B. Baxter, given before the Canadian Club. "World brotherhood and universal peace ideals are fine but ideals cannot be realities all at once. Anyhow armament failures at once. Anyhow armament policies do not necessarily imply intentions of preparedness for contingencies. With respect to armaments look at Russia. Dreiser says that she is the greatest military power in the world today. Men and women are obsessed with the idea that the whole world is against them and they are training and supplying themselves for a war in the near future. The great powers must be prepared for defense against this menace no matter how friendly they may be among themselves.

John P. Blewett thought that Great Britain had gained from her conciliatory attitude towards the United States—She had gained at least the good will of the U.S. At present, more than ever before it is imperative that amicable relations be sustained by these two nations, he said. U.S. INFLUENCES ON CANADA

"Professor William B. Munro professionally is an international authority on government especially in its municipal and constitutional aspect," said Professor W. P. Kennedy when questioned by the Varsity regarding the lecturer obtained to deliver the current series of the Marlett Lectures.

"He has been Professor on government at Harvard," Professor Kennedy continued, "for many years. He is recognized as one of the greatest living authorities on the Seigneurial System of Quebec. His treatises on European and American municipal government are known throughout the world. As head of the Department of Government at Harvard he has brought that department to a place of enviable distinction."

Professor Munro was born in Ontario and took his Master of Arts degree at Queen's University. It is interesting to note that his predecessors in this lectureship were Ex-President Taft (1915), Sir Robert Borden (1921), and the Honorable John Fagitt Moore (1925).

The lectures on the general subject "American Influences in Canadian Government" will be delivered in Convocation Hall on January the twenty-third, twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth.

FIRST YEARS AT UNIVERSITY CLAIMED NOT EDUCATIONAL

Disillusioned Students Find
Four Years not Sufficient
For all Knowledge

Special to the Varsity
Madison, Wis.—President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin expressed great disillusionment with both the curriculum and the net educational result of the first two years of any university in the country, in an interview given recently to a representative of the Daily Cardinal, campus newspaper of the University of Wisconsin.

He expressed the opinion that a radical overhauling of the four-year curriculum was in view. "The difficulty seems to be that there is so much knowledge that if you judge four years sufficient to pick it up, you will always be disillusioned," he stated.

"There seems to be one important thing in the liberal education; to succeed in the four years, in creating in the student a real interest in ideas and a real interest in reading sufficiently so that he will read something else besides the latest novel and the Saturday Evening Post.

"My own guess, if I were building a new college, is that my first experiment would be to set up in a curriculum the first two years in the formula of attacking episodes in civilization. I should include Greek civilization, whose material is intrinsically important, medieval society, where the close alliance of church and state

MISS WOOKEY SPEAKS ON SOCIETY COMEDY

Both Congreve and Meredith Chose Comedy of Manners
For Theme

FORM ARTS VITAL QUALITY

"Society comedy was the theme of both Congreve and Meredith," said Miss Wookey in her address to the English Association on Thursday evening. Meredith saw society as a class organization, and he constantly presented the same focus of interest. The breakfast-room, church pew, and at a stretch a picnic were his most characteristic scene places. His character became more and more individual in the social tangle, as in Richard Feverel. Delicate situations, such as abounded in Dams of the Crossways, delighted Meredith's heart. He ran the gamut of snobbery, with a multiplicity of developments. He was most successful when the social game was played for its own pure delight. There were traces of Fielding, George Eliot, Hardy and Dickens in Meredith, but his lower-class characters were not convincing.

Meredith's comedy remained such only so long as it was satire, and emotion was left out. This held true also of Shaw. St. Joan was the only Shavian play that was not comical, because it appealed to the instincts. Meredith's warm aim to champion women made him sentimentalize.

Congreve also wrote of the code of ladies and their gentlemen acquaintances. In every essential his was the same comedy as Meredith wrote at his best but Congreve's was in a keener vein. He was conscious of his own scope and appeal. Repartee with him was a sort of conviction, and he gave a detached, slightly satirical picture of the society of his day. His heroine in the way of the world was a perfect actress in her chosen role of coquette. With both Meredith and Congreve form was the most vital quality of art.

JESUS ATTITUDE TOWARD TRADITION WAS CRITICAL ONE

DR. THOMAS BEGINS SERIES

Conquest by Peaceful Rather

"What was the attitude of Jesus in relation to tradition? Was it subjection, revolt, or discriminate use?" Palestine for fifty years before and sixty years after Jesus' death was no undisturbed cemetery, but rather a succession of rebellions. During this time John the Baptist appeared with vivid descriptions of stinging adders, woodsmen's fires, and wrath to come. Jesus' baptism was only another form of our modern initiation, yet Jesus' attitude was far apart from that of John, and the appearance of the dove showed to Him God; as we would say, "The clouds cleared." As Shakespeare's usurping duke in "As you like It" surrendered not to a captain at the head of an army but to a hermit bearing a crucifix, so Jesus realized that ultimately conquest is by a peaceful rather than warlike means.

"If we recognize the devil, we aren't going to let him play with us," stated Dr. E. Thomas, in the first of his series at Wymilwood. "He may come through good times, but it is the good times not the devil which is after." Thus he described the temptations of Jesus. Turning the stones into bread merely was a suggestion from the Roman method of changing rigidity, gaining confidence by supplying food. Many historians still think that Jesus' (Continued on page 4)

Minneapolis, Minn.—St. Paul police officers agreed last night to leave psychological cases of University students to college authorities.

Mirko J. Rudman, senior in the College of Education was apprehended by the police just as he was numbering the 2664 plank on the High Bridge in St. Paul. It was a clear case of insanity, the officers decided. In addition to his peculiar actions, they found he was carrying an egg in his pocket.

Somebody had called the police. "There's a guy beating his wife down here." Another call said that a man was on the bridge with a gun. When the officers arrived, they found Rudman on his hands and knees half way across the span. Officers H. H. Mantuffel and Carl Norbeck from the Duane street station watched him write the number 2664 on the 2664th plank.

"He's cracked all right," the police muttered as they banded him into their patrol wagon. "Crazy," Captain G. H. Gates wrote on the docket, "Hold for investigation."

The investigation was over when they found a slip of paper in his pocket marked hell week instruction. He was just a fraternity pledge.

The fact that the age of chivalry is not dead—at least not at the U. of T.—was amply demonstrated yesterday afternoon when three co-eds attempted to start a cold and unresponsive Buick. Frantic manipulations of levers and buttons were fruitless, until one of the trio bethought herself of that lowly piece of mechanism—the crank. She bravely prepared to set to, when two stalwart well-known University College seniors noticed her plight and helped from mid-campus. "Want any shout?"

"I think we need some!" she cried, hither gesture. Even in the brawny hands of the male of the species, the thing proved of no avail.

"We'll have to push her," said the senior, whereupon the two men and two girls proceeded to shove the recalcitrant Buick in the general direction of Simcoe Hall. "Did you choke her?" yelled a panting masculine voice.

"Choke her!" exclaimed the driver, "We've cut her throat and kicked her 'nervestings'!"

Just then a more fortunate motorist rushed out of Simcoe Hall, started his car and decided to take a hand in the general Boy Scout movement. He gently nosed his car up to the Buick and demonstrated the superiority of mechanical force over man-power. (Continued on page 4)

WHISKERS MUST GROW ON IN SPITE OF HOLIDAYS

Edict Issued to Second Year Forbids Use of Razors by Men

Special to the Varsity
Washington, Seattle—Sophomore beard growers will spill their gray on their whiskers instead of their neckties tomorrow, if John Edwardsen, publicity chairman of the class, has his way about it. Edwardsen yesterday issued an edict that second year men were not to let a holiday interfere with the serious business of beard production.

Dinner parties, dances, and dates are all to be attended in full regalia, Edwardsen declared. The idea of sacrificing a full week's growth for one day of fickle feminine approval is unbefitting, and razors distinctly will not be part of the Thanksgiving celebration.

"Let the girls get used to 'em," is Edwardsen's advice. And he passes his contention that there is no real danger of a dateless weekend on the fact that so far no dates have been refused on account of the be-whiskered condition of the man.

VICTORIA BOOK ROOM RATHER SECLUDED

Scarlet and Gold Buy Books
And Eat Chocolate Bars
Undisturbed by Aliens

TO BE MOVED NEXT YEAR

Have Vic students deliberately conspired to hide their book bureau from the prying eyes of the rest of the campus? If so, why so?

On the second floor of the Vic Library are three rooms devoted to penants, stationery, text-books, Parker pens, and—chocolate bars. Perhaps the seclusion of the bureau is due to the fact that the Scarlet and Golds like to eat their chocolate bars undisturbed by any alien gaze.

Miss Davis who looks after this department explained:

"The book bureau is not run for profit at all, but more as a convenience to our students. We turn over about twenty thousand dollars' worth of books and stationery every year, and about four hundred and fifty dollars' worth of candy."

This raises another question. How many New Year's resolutions as to the avoidance of candy are broken at Victoria? If the book department in question were better known there might be occasion to fear for the health and pockets of the students. The problem in epidemics might then be one of Neilson or Patterson.

It is stated that the bureau will be moved next year to more suitable quarters. In this new location it is expected that the librarians will not have to procure volumes from the eighth or ninth floor up. Trinity men are reported to have discovered the merits of this bureau and are among the heavy customers in books and—other commodities.

American Attitude Would Be Clarified by Bringing in Team from Across the Line

"Would the bringing of American College debating teams to this country tend toward the further Americanization of Canada?" was the question put by the "Varsity" to several representative undergraduates yesterday—and the consensus of opinion seemed to be that it would not. The question was occasioned by the discussion to this effect which took place at the recent convention of the National Federation of Canadian University Students.

Mr. E. M. Henry, President of the U.C. Lit. and Toronto's representative at the convention, pointed out that the discussion as it came up in the meeting at Kingston was really incidental. "The attitude of the convention," he declared, "was anything but anti-American. The general opinion was that debating between Canadian universities should be fostered, but that an occasional debate with American students would be a good thing."

Mr. L. M. Gelber, prominent in U.C. parliamentary affairs and in the Hart House Debates, spoke very emphatically. "Our students do not hesitate to play games with representatives of American colleges," he said. "I do (Continued on page 4)

OUTSIDERS DEPICT STUDENT ACTIVITY

College Humour Loses
Contracts Because of Misrepresentation

TORONTO STUDENTS LAUGH

"College Humour" is in danger of losing its right to the descriptive adjective. Several of the universities across the border have withdrawn their contracts from the magazine on the grounds that it misrepresents student life. Student opinion at this university is inclined to treat the whole affair as a joke. It had not occurred to anyone interviewed by the Varsity that "College Humour" was intended to be a representation of student life as it is. And most emphatically not of Canadian student life. "It represents the idea that many people outside of university have of students," was one verdict.

Most of the comments on the magazine were decidedly unfavourable. "Too feeble for words," "nothing but wine and women," and the subject was dismissed. One co-ed said that the idea one received from attending conventions in American cities was that many students there tried to ape "College Humour" types. While it does not convey any accurate idea of student life, the magazine is undoubtedly read for amusement. "It's idiotic, but diverting," said one critic.

"College Humour" has exclusive rights in the United States to make use of material from the "Goblin," published in Toronto. The changing attitude towards "College Humour" has not caused any alteration in the Goblin's policy, the Varsity was informed.

AMERICANIZATION AND DEBATES

Is there a danger of Canadian colleges becoming Americanized through the visits of American debaters? Most people declare this a foolish question but they would have to consider the claim that visits of American speakers are indicative at least of a growing tendency in Canadian institutions.

This was the claim advanced by delegates from the University of Montreal to the National Federation of Canadian University Students when the Federation proposed to invite American college orators to visit our colleges from time to time. These delegates were of the opinion that national debates between our own colleges should be encouraged rather than those of an international nature.

We cannot understand why debates should be regarded as influences so strong in their effect. No debate we have ever heard, in the university at least, would Americanize or Canadianize anybody. Most debates between students of two countries become pleasant interchanges of views derived from books which may be found in the libraries of both countries. Such debates are no more likely to colour any one's patriotism than they are to develop the spirit of international good will etcetera which they and international athletic contests are supposed to induce.

Debates are of two kinds, the learned and the witty. The former brand, which has perished in our midst for the want of that hitherto neglected accessory, an audience, is conducted with all the thoroughness and dryness of a German scholar hunting down meanings in Shakespeare. The latter variety produces speeches in which more hackneyed pronouncements of Adam Smith are leavened with a sprinkling of the wisdom drawn from the back numbers of Punch. A speech of this sort runs thus: "What ho, Mr. Speaker, Jolly O. This reminds me that once there were two bally Irishmen, Patrick and Michael".

Americans lean strongly towards the first named style. Their teams are chosen from a host of candidates who must earnestly go through a series of trials. Then the selected ones are given the assistance of a coach, a card index and everything up to steam baths and a training table. It is no wonder then that a request for debates from the University of Toronto once received the answer from an American university that they considered our choice of subjects too frivolous. (They have evidently never heard of the Trinity Literary Institute). So that we are in no danger of being subjected to the more weightily persuasive of the American orators, in this university at least.

But the French-Canadians are accustomed to oratory that means a great deal and they are not to be blamed for overestimating its importance in the other parts of the land. Neither can they be blamed for their concern over Americanizing influences. Their Canadianism is real and vigorous and sharply differing in character from the civilization to the south. This is more than can be said for us who are outside Quebec since we imitate the Americans to a far greater extent than we care to admit.

STUDENTS' OPINION ON EMPIRE AFFAIRS

The armament policy of France is, as it has been for some years, a disturbing fact. "France," he continued, "seems to fear German retribution for the loss of Alsace-Lorraine and hence she is arming."

As regards Mr. Baxter's statement re England and the United States, A. H. Hart-Davies, agreed that England's first consideration should be the British Empire and a unit based on freedom of trade with the dominions. "It is the first I have heard of," France's alarming armament policy, he said, and I am greatly surprised. I should like further evidence before believing that the situation is as disturbing as Mr. Baxter seems to state. Another student claimed that Mr. Chamberlain was censured unjustly. France, he maintained, is not afraid but seeks the best possible alliance in case of future war.

Professor Anderson of the French Department of University College has been forced to cancel his lectures for a time. Mr. Anderson was the victim of an unfortunate accident and is now ill with a broken leg.

The Women's Council of the S.C.A. entertained the members of the General Committee of the Movement which met in Toronto during the holidays, at Wymilwood on December 30.

OCTOBER BEACHES

Yellow leaves tossed by the soft wind
Along the hard smooth sand,
While in and out
The crystal bubbles wash,
And the mellow October sunshine
Tints the leaves and sand to gold
Makes the bubbles sparkle,

And the lake so inviting
The leaves surrender
To drift away, rocked to sleep
As the waves moving along the shore
Croon their lullaby—hush—hush.

HEROISM

Too oft we hear a glowing praise
For the hero who never knew a fear:
His life of risks attracts much gaze
Though nature rules his whole career.
Too seldom sung are that man's feats
Who, when he senses a fearful chill
Roused by the crucial stage he meets,
Controls strong fear with stronger will.

Heroes indeed are they whose tact

TRINITY UNIVERSITY REVIEW (Christmas Number)

Like roommates attract, unlike roommates repel. For an elucidation of the second part of this lead the story on page fourteen, The Other Roommate — experiment, observation, conclusion. And This Is Freedom senses (and ably flays) a great modern intolerance under the guise of freedom. Quite noticeable is the propensity (they never cared for etc.) for pseudonyms like C'est Moi, Faux-Pas, Incredible, and Octogenarius.

THE CANADIAN MERCURY

The first issue of the Canadian Mercury, after considerable heralding, appeared last month. There is marked spirit throughout the issue and the general impression gathered is that the editorial board is composed of a few young iconoclasts on a rampage whose anthem is alternately "Hail, Hail" and "What do we care?" The editorial (and much more emphatically the cut on the cover) substantiates this. Their attacks, however, will not occasion alarm as they appear to be warring only on artificialities and petty conventions.

Of themselves, the editors say, "We are all well under thirty and intend to remain so. We seek to ally with ourselves all those... whose thought and verse is not afraid of being called free."

Stephen Leacock has been enlisted and his discussion on the "National Literature Problem in Canada" heads selective offerings in Science, Criticism, Drama and Politics. It is to be hoped that this magazine does not follow in the path of the last Canadian venture, Canadian Stories Magazine.

BOSTON

This is by Upton Sinclair, the author of "Oil". It presents fresh off the press, the Sacco-Vanzetti case, with most of the plot placed in New England. A copious work, necessitating two volumes, with bankers, judges, anarchists — the whole case and as it really happened. The author would be readily welcomed to the staff of the Varsity but for the fact that the continental newspapers appear to have scored a scoop.

the development of the guild system are sufficient, the closely organized medieval society, industrial revolution which broke and then a topical consideration of the rise of American civilization.

"My own dream for Wisconsin is that in the future the entire freshman and sophomore population will be enrolled in a series of small residential colleges of 100 each with a small staff for each one to carry out the general teaching procedure."

After giving his views of the future college, the president said that there is comfort in the length of time it takes to accomplish these things and none of the present student generation will be bothered with the proposed changes.

Art, Music and Drama

Conservatory Concert

The annual programme of the Conservatory choir and orchestra was given in Convocation Hall last evening by the choir under the direction of Dr. MacMillan and the orchestra under Dr. Luigi von Kunits. Several orchestral and choral a capella numbers formed the first half of the programme but the Christmas oratorio of J. S. Bach was undoubtedly the magnum opus of the evening. Both orchestra and choir have shown the most gratifying progress since last year and their work last night was exceptionally well done. In the Bach the choir responded promptly to the baton of Dr. MacMillan both in piano and forte effects and gave a stirring power to the chorales without the least suggestion of forcing tone. Equal praise must be bestowed on the orchestra who not only gave an intelligent interpretation of the orchestral score but lent also a sensitive and encouraging support to the choir. Undoubtedly the very delight of doing the oratorio carried the musicians away and gave life and clarity to the phrasing. The opening chorus set a note of joy which was sustained in all the concerted numbers. Only in some of the very intricate choruses did the singers lose their feeling for the design of the work and in those places (they were really very few) a slight lapse is forgivable. The work of the soloists varied greatly in quality; the three younger soloists certainly strove to give their best and at some moments sang quite commendably but Bach's recitative is supremely exacting and for the tenor in particular he has little mercy.

We must add to the remarks upon the orchestra that the Handel was delightfully performed; it was such a pleasure to hear the even sustained tone of the strings in the beautiful slow movements of the concerto. The Volkman opened quite auspiciously with a very attractive theme but failed to maintain a satisfactory standard and gradually lapsed into banality vividly contrasting with the Handel. Then there were the superb trumpet parts of the Bach which were given such brilliant and pleasurable rendering.

There need be little fear for the future of these comparatively new musical organizations, so capably trained and conducted as they are, now that they have more than surpassed the success gained by their Mozart Requiem in their performance of the Bach Oratorio. J. J. K.

BILL STEWART SCORES VARSITY'S 2 GOALS IN WIN OVER PRESTON

Blue Defeats Preston 2-0

Bill Stewart proved the hero in the Varsity-Preston game last night at Preston when he scored both goals in the Blue boys 2-0 victory.

Outside of the sturdy Toronto forward's clever playing which netted the only goals of the evening, the feature of the game was Snyder's air tight work in the students' goal.

Varsity Meets Team From Montreal

Saturday's Water Polo Game To be Played Under International Rules

Varsity City Champions.

Toronto lovers of aquatic sports will be given an opportunity of witnessing what should be a most interesting display of water polo when Varsity entertain the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association team at Hart House this Saturday evening. The game which is called for 8.15 and has attracted considerable attention will be played under International rules.

Varsity made a fine showing in the city series last term, crowning their efforts by coping the championship in a most pleasing style. Some good teams have been developed hereabouts in the past few years, and the present outfit seems to be no exception. Two years ago the Blue and White broke McGill's long hold on the Intercollegiate championship and have a good chance to win it this year.

Montreal is a live swimming centre and the M.A.A.A. has done its share in making it so. Of recent years the M.A.A.A. team has been at the top of the water polo league in that city and it will be interesting to watch Varsity's showing against a "foreign" aggregation of first-rate strength.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-morrow night's hook-up between Varsity and St. Michael's at the University Arena will furnish a red-hot display of the Canadian favourite winter outdoor sport. When these two outfits met last time overtime was necessary to return the Blue and White as victors. A capacity house should witness this game with the added attraction of a verbal encounter between the two rooting sections.

The O.H.A. schedule is going to provide the fans with plenty of good hockey. With four good teams grouped together there will be lots of action. The Queen's sextet comprising the pick of the amateur stars of the Kingston district ought to help add color to the series. Kingston has made a good showing in the O.H.A. for many years and the appearance of the various senior teams in the Limestone City may help to revive the interest in hockey which during the past few years appears to have waned at the Tricolor institution of learning.

The showing of the Intermediate O.H.A. sextet as yet has been nothing to write home about. It must be remembered however, that the Blue and White are facing some high class opposition. Willowlawde who are leading the group would make any senior outfit step. Sceptical Sam who just blew in yesterday figgers "them as O.H.A. finalists." Newmarket, another member of the group also have a good team.

"What's the matter with Old McGill Whose hockey team won victories nil?"

The Old Red and White certainly didn't burn up the ice in their recent U.S. invasion. Just suppose Varsity hadn't made the annual trip this season! My, oh my! some of those American hockey "experts" would have handed out a better "line" than ever. But don't forget that the McGill squad set out minus several regulars and had a hard schedule of games played without much chance to rest up in between.

TUESDAY'S PLAY-OFF WILL FINISH SERIES

U.C. and St. Hilda's Fight for Championship in Inter-faculty Series

EXAMS CAUSE DELAY

The "flu" played hob with Women's Inter-faculty basketball play-offs. The excitement was curbed just when the outlook for some peppy games was rosiest. But the time is ripe now for the wind-up game and the forced delay will draw added interest. Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Hart House, University College juniors and St. Hilda's fight for the laurels. If good fast playing and first-class basketball is any drawing card, a full house is assured.

Last year, Victoria Seniors won the round with flying colours. This year, U.C. and St. Hilda's are going to have a real old battle. It is not fair to single out players—everyone of them is out to win. But a word to the wise will do no harm. Betty Thomas' guarding shines out in any old game

RICHMOND HILL DEFEATS VARSITY INTERMEDIATES

Poor Light and Strong Opposition too Much for Blue Team

Varsity Intermediates went down to defeat in a close-checking game played on Richmond Hill's poorly lighted rink. Inability to beat Timpon, the Hill goalie, together with an disaster for the Blue. Varsity's stick-ignorance of small-ice tactics spite handling ability was useless and long range shooting was the order of the day. In the first period the Richmond Hill forward line swept in three abreast to score the only goal of the first two periods. In the second period Varsity was much the better team but Timpon was phenomenal. Early in the third period a Hill wing player shot from the corner and scored from an almost impossible angle. Varsity kept up an incessant bombardment on the Richmond Hill goal and were finally rewarded with a score. With only a few minutes to play, White broke away to score Richmond's third goal. It was no fault of Herbie Little that Varsity went down to defeat while McMillan and Smith also worked hard. Carriek, the sterling defender played received a gash in the foot in the second period and Varsity were forced to finish the game with only one substitute.

for U.C. and Wilma Hazlitt is starting with her fast work.

B. Symons for the Saints will satisfy any basket ball fiend—she is fast and sure and makes any game a peppy one.

The first game was to have been Saturday, but exams are in the time-light that day. The date is settled now—and Tuesday at 8 o'clock, it will come off and a fine game is waiting—all for 25c.

CO-EDS SPLASH ABOUT IN SWIMMING CLASSES

Splash! Another enthusiast hits the water. Up at the Lillian Massey tank co-eds are indulging more than ever this year in their swimming privileges. According to Miss Cochran who is in charge of swimming the turn-outs are quite satisfactory so that there is promise of high class contests when swimmer greets swimmer at the annual meet a few months hence.

A popular innovation this year is the commencement of evening classes, held every other Monday, with Victoria and St. Hilda's in one group, U.C. and St. Michael's in the other. These classes are held under the auspices of the University Women's Swimming Club and are attracting quite a few. The time is spent in general practice and novice meets. Every afternoon between 3 and 5.30 the pool awaits any who wish to drown academic cares in breasting the waves.

On three days a week Vic. girls have the opportunity of studying life-

AMERICAN DEBATERS WOULD BE HARMLESS

not see why we should draw the line at debating. The question of the Americanization of Canada is much more fundamental; it is being furthered rapidly enough by such instruments as the radio and the magazines. As a matter of fact, the roots of what we call Americanism are not in the American colleges but outside them. Personally, I think it would be a good thing to send debating teams to the States to debate on questions of interest to Americans, which would at the same time clear up some of the hazy notions of Canadian life and culture there extant. I am entirely out of sympathy with a certain cheap and narrow anti-Americanism and the blatant insularity which often passes for patriotism."

Stated Mr. J. Ord, President of the St. Michael's Oratorical Society: "I can't see that international debating is going to give us any more Americanism than we have already. It will probably give us, on the other hand, a clearer idea of the American attitude towards international problems."

SPANISH STUDENTS TRY ONLY ONE TESTPassing of One Oral Examination Entitles Student to Receive Degree*FEW WOMEN AT COLLEGES

Special to the Varsity
 Portland, Ore.—Spanish university students have an advantage over those in American universities in at least one respect, believes Juan Centeno, young Spaniard who has been employed since the first of the month in teaching the fine points of his native tongue to one or two hundred Oregon students. "In Spain a student is given only one examination during his college career," he says. "It is given orally by a professor, and if he passes it he receives his degree and graduates. If he does not pass, he stays in school until he does."

"Residence at the universities in Spain is not required in order to obtain a degree," Mr. Centeno said. "A student registered in a university can be away as much as he pleases. All that is required of him is that he be able to pass his big examination when the time comes." Upon coming to this country Centeno was struck by the ease and social contacts between men and women of the universities. "It seems so easy for the men here to become acquainted with the women," he said.

"In Spain it is very different. In the universities there one must be acquainted with a girl for several months before it is considered proper to ask for permission to call. But it seems not so at all here in America."

"There are very few women in the Spanish universities," he went on, "but more and more are attending every year. For a long time they have been permitted to come, but not many took advantage of the opportunity."

Mr. Centeno has been in America less than a year, and knew no English on arrival, but he now speaks quite fluently. "But I cannot understand many of your slang words," he said. "There are so many of them, and they have so many meanings."

A little negro schoolgirl down in Florida in answer to one question, "What is anatomy?" wrote the following.

"Anatomy is a human body. It is divided into three parts—the head, the chest, and the stummick. The head holds the brains, if there is any; the chest holds the liver and lites, and the stummick holds the entrails and the vowels, which are a, e, i, o, u, and sometimes w and y."

The Dominion Government having placed so much emphasis upon public and social health within the past few months the Canadian Social Hygiene Council has thought it expedient to stimulate interest in this subject in Toronto. With this end in view a series of meetings has been carried on, the third one of which is to be held Sunday, January 13th at 9 P.M., for the purpose of informing the citizens on health topics.

Sunday night's meeting, aside from the appeal of Dr. Harry S. Thompson's address, "Dental Diseases and Premature Deaths," provides a unique feature. A contest is being held for which Mr. T. G. McConkey, General Manager of the Canada Life Assurance Company and Immediate Past President of the Canadian Life Officers' Association has donated these prizes. These prizes will be awarded for the three best essays on the address. Everyone who attends the meeting is eligible to enter and the best will be published in the press. The essay must not be longer than six hundred words and must be addressed to the Contest Director, Canadian Social Hygiene Council, 40 Elm Street.

Dr. Fred Conboy, Director of Provincial Dental Services; Dr. Wallace Secomb, Dean of the Royal College of Dental Surgeons and Dr. George S. Young have consented to act as contest judges.—Adv.

Aunt Mary Solves Problem of Facial Herbage; Refuses to Chaperone

By GRETA REID

Dear Aunt Mary,—

I am faced with the necessity of making a very grave decision. Little did I think when I tenderly raised my moustache from a mere nothing, that it would come to this! You see, Helen likes the moustache and says she will quit me cold if I remove it; Isobel, on the other hand, threatens to do the same if I don't remove it. To shave or not to shave?

Distraughtly,

"Trinity".

P.S.—Personally, I like the moustache.

Ans.—You must be a student of rare cheekes appeal to be not only willing but able to support two women. Now, if you were a big heman from one of the more or less dangerous faculties to the south, the solution would be simple—merely shave the upper lip on the morning of the day whose evening is devoted to Isobel, and reverse the process for Helen. In your case of course, that is out of the question. Reduce your problem to a mathematical equation and discover whether Helen and moustache is greater or less than Isobel-moustache.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Our professor made us write an essay on women's clothes. Why do they choose subjects upon which there is such scant material?

W. Y. Cliffe.

Ans.—Why, Cliffe, I do believe you're fooling, for no sane professor would dream of assigning such a topic to a Wychlife congregation. What would they know about women or women's clothes? We have heard that they still believe in the stork and petticoat legends up there! However, we can only pass on the old adage, "Clothes make the man, and lack of them the woman."

Dear Aunt Mary,—

We are holding a dance next week and would feel highly honoured if you would consent to act as chaperone.

Sincerely,

S. O. Rores.
 Ans.—It pains me to be obliged to refuse your request, but I have recently sworn off acting in that capacity. The last time I chaperoned a party each of the seven men on the committee seemed to think that it was his duty to dance with the chaperone and supply her with punch.

After struggling through seven varieties of the modern dance and sampling seven distinctly different flavours of punch, I proceeded to give my famous imitation of a bow-legged elephant, standing on a clothes-line, tickling a flea behind the ear with a telegraph-pole. The youngsters thought I was setting a bad example and sent me home long before twelve o'clock. I have since come to the conclusion that acting as chaperone is much too strenuous for a woman of my years and dignity.

JESUS' ATTITUDE TOWARD TRADITION

vision of creating an empire might have been accomplished had he chosen to fulfill his desire in that way. The suggestion to hurl himself from the spire would have fulfilled an old legend that God would come in a miraculous way. Yet Jesus rejected these three proposals; he had an intuitive feeling that none was the true way.

Traditions usually grow from an attempt to meet some need. Yet it does not follow that the need was adequately met, or if it was that the need is still present. Some claim that Jesus tried to smash all conventional traditions of his day. "Rather," said Dr. Thomas, "let us maintain a critical attitude as Jesus did, but one which will be directed not by caprice but by values."

and-woman-power. The engine sighed, coughed, sputtered and decided to turn over a new leaf. However, its resolve lasted no longer than the usual resolutions made at this season and upon reaching the vicinity of the little red school house, it quietly relapsed into a state of coma.

The two seniors, who had been watching developments with pardonable pride and no little anxiety, immediately returned to the scene of action. The discouraged engine gave up in the face of such persistence and decided to behave. After profusely thanking their knight errant, the girls buzzed merrily home and the men pursued their belated path across the chilly campus presumably to a four o'clock.

the past they have presented two Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "The Mikado," and "Patience". Last year their production was "Merrie England" written by Sir Edward German and directed by Mr. Thomas Crawford. This work met with popular approval.

This year they are presenting by permission of D'Oyly Carte another Gilbert and Sullivan opera, "Iolanthe". This has a fascinating musical theme combined with delightful repartee and dialogue. The setting is England in the prosperous eighteenth century. The Club has again been exceptionally fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Crawford who will direct the production. Perhaps the past success and present state in the Music Club is due to the co-operation between Director, Executive and membership; coupled as it is with the support of the student body.

Christmas Carols and Drama
 At Mrs. Kirkwood's Party

Mrs. Kirkwood's Christmas Party, held just one week before Christmas at the Women's Union upheld the reputation of its predecessors in spreading the true spirit of Christmas. A choir of trained voices, under the direction of Mrs. Dow assisted by Mrs. Wallace, delighted the guests with their rendition of many of the favorite old carols. The simple beauty of an Irish nativity play staged by the undergraduates served perhaps more than anything else to bring home to the audience the real meaning of Christmas.

Mrs. Kirkwood entertained at tea for the Women of University College on Tuesday afternoon.

Principal and Mrs. Wallace of University College were at home on the afternoon of Christmas Day, especially for students who had been unable to go home for the holidays.

A group of carol singers from University College serenaded a number of members of the faculty on Christmas Eve.

WOMEN ARE BEINGS WHO HAVE LONG HAIR ALSO SHORT IDEAS

Schopenhauer's Ideas Topic of Professor Brett
In U.C.

JOKES ADVERTISE REALITY

German Philosopher Sugar-Coated His Pills
of Wisdom

"He wrote that women were beings endowed with long hair and short ideas"—said Prof. Brett in his lecture on Schopenhauer yesterday afternoon in the West Hall of U.C. Schopenhauer's views of women were amusing if short sighted. He maintained that they considered household duties a joke and had neither knowledge or appreciation of art. These statements acted as admirable advertisement for the deeper and really valuable works of the philosopher. The intense hatred that he bore for Hegel who represented the rationalistic school of Reason is another of his outstanding characteristics.

Prof. Brett outlined the life of this rebel and pointed out that the tumult of his early life, submission to a harsh father, the quarrels with his mother, his journeys, his study of new sciences and his repressed desires influenced the formation of his theories.

He was vastly affected by La-marque's writings on the struggle for survival, the opinions of the psychological French surgeons and Indian religion. Thus this Franco-Prussian hybrid philosopher evolved a new school of thought idealizing the "will" rather than "reason". The brain merely reflected the actions of the subconscious organisms, but did not control them. To the unenlightened life was the reality thus fostering individualism, to the enlightened, the illusion was transparent and life is "the veil of soul making"; welfare of the race submerged that of the individual.

His writing on aesthetics were most popular and most widely admired. Schopenhauer maintained that the root of life was the desire, either good or evil, but it was the pursuit which yielded the real value rather than the achievement.

"His writings suggest Hardy."

FLU CAN NOT STOP TRINITY COLLEGE DANCE

Smaller Crowd Does Not Affect Success of Athletic Dance

In spite of postponements due to the flu the annual dance of the Trinity College Athletic Association held last night in Trinity College was an unqualified success. Except for a somewhat smaller crowd the affair was said to be just as successful as any previous dance of the society.

Decorations in red and black, the college colours, an orchestra that was really "jazzy", attractive and original novelties, and refreshments that could be enthusiastically praised as delicious all helped make the evening a success.

The Patronesses were: Mrs. Cosgrave, Mrs. Kingston and Mrs. Kirkwood.

The Executive of the Athletic Association which arranged the dance is composed of J. M. McPherson, F. R. Wilkinson, H. A. R. Martin, Rev. J. Lowe, C. M. A. Strathy, H. A. Rapsey, C. H. Little, A. R. Little, G. A. M. Edwards and V. O'Flynn.

TRINITY COLLEGE MEN ARE SOON TO INVITE OTHER DEBATERS IN Policy of the Government of Trinity Literary Institute

MORE OPEN MEETINGS

Interfaculty Debating May Be Revived by New Policy

Interfaculty debating which seems at present to be officially dead at the University is to be revived in a new way as far as Trinity College is concerned if plans at present under consideration by the Literary Institute, of the Anglican College are carried through.

The Government of the Institute is intending to invite the debating societies of other arts colleges on the campus to participate in their debates as guests. Invitations have already been sent to various discussion clubs at St. Michael's College and a debate has been tentatively arranged for later in the term.

Officers of the Institute hope to be able to arrange debates with Victoria for the last part of January, and possibly with U.C. or Knox for later date in the year. These meetings would be carried on in the usual style of the society except that there would be guests with full privileges sitting on the floor of the house.

Open meetings with St. Hilda's College have been a very successful feature of the program of the Institute for some years past, and the present plans are said to be just an enlargement of past policy. Visitors from other colleges on the campus as well as other friends of members may at any time be introduced to the house and frequently are.

STUDENTS, TEACHERS COME FROM AFRICA

Touring Party to Visit Toronto
On January 22 for One Day

VISITING CANADA AND U.S.

A delegation of thirty-nine students and two teachers from South Africa will visit Toronto on January 22 and 23 with a view to establishing a more congenial fellowship among students of the world, and studying the economic, educational, home and cultural life on this continent. The group includes 13 men and 26 women, and represents various South African universities, while 7 of the students are not attached to any university.

This special tour is sponsored by the National Union of Students of South Africa, an organization corresponding to the National Federation of Canadian Students and the National Student Federation of America. The visitors are being entertained by the latter societies during their stay in Canada and the United States. They will be accommodated here in the university residences and in private homes.

Owing to the fact that the students will arrive one night and depart the next a very full programme is planned, and it will be of a nature that will introduce the travellers to the particular phases of life in which they are most interested. A sight-seeing tour of the city will be made, during which they will visit repre-

City-Wife

Extracts From Prize Poem By DOROTHY LIVESAY

Oh I have followed where the first bare maple
Suddenly turned to gold, where deeper still
There flamed in red a different maple tree
Boldly against the sober evergreens;
And even farther I plunged, until too soon
The other end of the wood was reached, and broke Into a line of pale wild cherry trees
Too lovely to be started by a sound,
Too young to be enchanted by the wind.

I ran there, thinking I would not turn
But follow along the swiftly curving road
Until I knew that silence was swinging back,
A golden pendulum above the wood—
No! for the sweetness was too much: a voice
Seemed to cry loud and louder: Turn! Turn once—
As long ago one thought he heard a voice
And could not move until he called her name;
The name of all names surely loveliest,
Of lost, forever lost, Eurydice.

It was learned late last night that subject to the confirmation of the Senate-to-night the Jardine Memorial prize for English verse for this year goes to Miss Dorothy Livesay, a second year Arts student of St. Hilda's College. "City-Wife", the prize-winning poem, describes a day in the life of a city woman who married a farmer and went to live in the country.

Only a poem of considerable merit can win the Jardine prize, since one of the conditions of the award is that it need not be given in any year when no poem submitted is considered worthy. The prize is of the value of one hundred dollars, and was won in 1927 by F. W. Burton, and in 1926 by N. A. Benson.

MEMORIAL SERVICE HELD FOR DR. CLARENCE STARR

The late Dr. Clarence Starr was remembered at a special service in Convocation Hall yesterday. Students and members of the Faculty of Medicine paid tribute to the memory of the distinguished surgeon. Sir Robert Falconer, President of the University of Toronto, and Dr. Primrose, head of the Faculty of Medicine, attended the ceremony.

"AIN'T" IS GOOD USAGE IF ALSO GOOD GRAMMAR

Michigan Don Declares Banned Word Based on Tradition

Special to The Varsity
Baltimore, Md.—"Ain't and It's me" are good usage, Charles Carpenter Fries of the University of Michigan told the National Council of Teachers here last week, "because though they may be traditionally bad, they form the quickest and easiest mediums of expressing and understanding a given thought."

The word "ain't," according to Dr. Fries, who is president of the council, comes in for the most severe criticism. Actually, he said, the word is good English, and is based on traditional rule, being a contraction of "am not."

It often is used incorrectly, however, he said, many times being used in place of "They are not." "They ain't," he advised, is absolutely incorrect. "I ain't," he said, "is correct."

Varsity Night Editors

All night editors on the Varsity are expected at a meeting in the News Office to-day at 5.30.

Miss Livesay is the author of a book of poems which was published in November 1928, under the title "Green Pitcher", which has been given favourable reviews by "World Wide", "The Forum" and by newspapers in other cities in the Dominion, including "Toronto Saturday Night", the "London Times Supplement", Vancouver, Alberta, and Halifax papers. Miss Livesay, who has always been interested in writing, is a member of a literary family. Her father is General Manager of the Canadian Press, and her mother is an author and poet who has published several books. Miss Livesay is on the staff of the St. Hilda's Chronicle and the St. Hilda's Literary Executive.

PROFESSOR CONWAY CALLS FOR MORE LATIN

Dead Language Needed to Free Children From Slavery

Special to "The Varsity"
Perth, Australia—"Nothing but the study of a dead language can free the modern child from slavery to mere words and formulas," declared Professor Conway, president of the Classical Association of Great Britain, in advocating the teaching of Latin in Australian high schools. He considers Latin far more use to most students than French, because so many words in the English language are derived from it. "French is only of very occasional use to the average man, whereas Latin is of vital consequence to him every hour of the day," he continued. Far more attention is being given in Australia to the teaching of French than of Latin, he averred.

He cited the case of a farmer who had given his son a sound classical education as part of his training for farming.

Professor Conway is Professor of Latin at Manchester University, England. It will be remembered that he gave a lecture here two years ago on the epic poem, with special reference to Virgil.

There are several openings for reporters on the men's news staff of "The Varsity". Those desiring to try out for positions on the staff are asked to see the News Editor in the office, Hart House, as soon as possible.

GIRLS DO NOT LAG BEHIND MEN'S RECORD IN WRITING FIELD

Undergraduate Editors Declare That Enthusiasm is Evident

BUT MEN LEAD IN U.C.

Other Colleges Report no
Lack of Female Writers

The claim that women are less interested in journalism as a career than men does not seem to be substantiated according to opinions secured yesterday from editors of a number of undergraduate publications.

Most colleges report great enthusiasm among the women interested in writing. "St. Hilda's Chronicle" is published twice a year and deals wholly with girls' activities. It seems to be steadily becoming "Bigger and better than ever" according to M. Winspear, one of its editors. "We felt that the last issue was exceptionally good, and were very pleased with the interest shown by the freshettes," she said.

"Acta Victoriana" has embarked upon a new policy this year. It now has a women's editor and her staff who are very enthusiastic and business like. A comparison between the work of the men and that of the women can hardly be made, it was stated. "The men usually are the more scholarly and do the 'heavy work', while almost all the poetry is contributed by the women."

But at U.C.: "Decidedly, the men show more interest," said Helen Allen, the Editor, pointing out that even the wiles of advertising failed to arouse the co-eds to co-operation, while the more aggressive method of cornering literary young things could not extort any promises. There were only two voluntary articles, one of which was written by a girl and was very good."

So far as "The Varsity" is concerned, such an overwhelmingly large number of aspirants aspired for work on the Women's staff that it was found necessary to reduce the ranks by a series of gentle eliminations.

Special to The Varsity
Cambridge, Mass.—The Harvard Dental School Museum has just received the largest tooth in the world, measuring 11 feet, two inches in length, and weighing well over 300 pounds. This tooth is over 50,000 years old, and was formerly a part of the anatomy of a mastodon.

Dr. Adelbert Fernald, who found the tooth during a trip to Alaska, related the unusual manner in which it was found to a reporter yesterday afternoon. The exploring party traveled up the Yukon until it reached the Porcupine River, a tributary extending almost due north from the Yukon. Inasmuch as there was practically no night at this stage of the journey, the sun being up 22 hours a day, the party continued on their way without a stop for 160 miles up.

Team

"Resolved that this house is opposed to all forms of censorship" will be the motion debated here on January 11, when a team from Western Canada, sent by the N.F.C.U.S. will meet a team representing the University of Toronto. The visitors will uphold the affirmative. The debate will be along Parliamentary lines.

Three debaters will speak on each side. The Toronto team has not been definitely picked yet, but it is understood that there will be representatives from U.C., Victoria and S.P.S. The visiting debaters are from the Universities of Saskatchewan, Alberta and British Columbia.

The leader of the team, Mr. Nelson Chappel, B.A., graduated from the University of Alberta, and is at present following post-graduate work at the Divinity School of Chicago University. Mr. Chappel commenced his debating career at Barrie Collegiate Institute and from the very first has shown himself to be a debater of marked ability, with a strong inclination to humour which is original, spontaneous and unexpected. For a time he was active on the floor of the Student's Parliament at Victoria College. Besides having four years' experience in Inter-University debates, Mr. Chappel is conceded to be a gentleman with high ideals and a striking personality and is regarded as the best choice for the leadership of his team.

Mr. G. E. Brunell, a senior Arts student at the University of Saskatchewan, another member of the visiting team, has become known for his genial humour and his gentle sarcasm. He

UNEXPURGATED PLAYS NOT FOR OXFORD STUDENTS

But Cambridge Does Not Agree
That Moliere is Not Proper

Oxford authorities have refused to allow unpurgated performances of Moliere's plays to be presented there, it is reported. M. Jacques Copeau, French actor and producer, is touring England with Moliere productions. The tour is under the auspices of the French Government. His intention of giving performances in Oxford has been hampered by the stipulation of the authorities that they themselves abridge them.

Cambridge taste differs from that of Oxford in theatrical circles, for M. Copeau has received permission at the former place to stage an uncensored performance of Moliere. Most dramatic critics are of the opinion that his plays are discreet.

THE MUSICAL DIRECTOR

Wednesday's concert by the Conservatory choir and orchestra and the forthcoming production of Iolanthe by the Victoria College Music Club reminds us of a suggestion made before Christmas, that a musical director be appointed for the University. While we are not quite sure what the duties of such a director might be, we can see very interesting possibilities for a man possessing both a broad musical education and considerable interest in student activities.

There exists at present at this University no form of musical entertainment which can be shared by the whole student body. At Victoria College there are an orchestra and a music club, both of which have a large and enthusiastic membership, and at Hart House noon sing-songs and Sunday Songsters attract numbers of vocal gymnasts. All of these organizations, however, due to restrictions of either membership or programme afford scope for the talents of only a few of the five thousand students in attendance here. For those who prefer to have their music made for them there are, of course, organ recitals, Sunday evening musicales and special student concerts, but of these only one is available to everyone, the others necessitating the purchase price of a ticket, the ability to get up early in the morning, or the possession of a friend who has that ability.

The presence of a musical director at the University would doubtless make great changes in the conduct of all musical organizations. We can imagine small groups, membership in which would be regulated not by faculty but by interest, absorbed in the study of opera, or of the folk-song, or of the works of a particular composer; we can hear student orchestras playing at all dances, and student bands leading all parades; and we prophesy also a revival of the old type of college song in larger groups who share the happy purpose of making as much noise as possible.

There are, therefore, strong arguments in favour of appointing a musical director. He would have to be given a free hand to carry out his ideas, and first before he was appointed, he would have to be asked not to make Hart House the centre of all his activities, but to include women undergraduates in his instruction.

This pooling of musical resources under central direction would doubtless be welcome to enthusiasts in the practical faculties. Opinion in the Arts colleges, however, might favour separate development along this, as along other lines. But the fact that music, originally one of the seven subjects of an Arts education, is in a backward state of organization in many of our colleges, is due to the lack of numbers and the subsequent small percentage of enthusiasts. If we think that everyone should take some part in musical activity, separate college organization would doubtless be the better solution. Central organization on the other hand, would mean the gathering of the more expert from all faculties to compose organizations capable of reflecting credit on the university.

It is interesting to read in this year's Students' Handbook, the following:

"The chief work of the Students' Administrative Council shall be:

2. To promote musical enterprises such as the Glee Club and Students' Musical Society under the supervision of a standing committee of the Students' Council."

The societies mentioned above have long since passed out and the standing committee with them. Since then periodic attempts have been made to have the students take more interest in a university musical organization. The latest is the proposal that a Musical Director be appointed, which has been initiated by the Warden and Music Committee of Hart House.

During the Christmas Holidays one year ago, a great impression was made here by the Glee Club composed of undergraduates of Harvard University. At that time the music critic of the Daily Star urged that what Harvard had done, Toronto should do. He stated that given a chorus of 200 men, Doctor MacMillan would ac-

We start the New Year, Gentle Readers (!) by forgiving everybody. Yes, even those who say sadly that the old black cat is not what she was formerly. And as for those who phone us up and make anonymous threats, we could almost embrace them. Forgiveness is our policy. And now

Notice that Toike Oike dealt with us on December 18—one day after we ceased publication—and made cracks about diving into the gutter and so forth. Apart from the hypocrisy of the thing, viewing the material used as filler by the jolly sheet, we feel honoured. Next thing we know Hush will be taking us up.

The dear old Globe starts a fund to help the Welsh Miners. We have always admired the far-sightedness of the McWhirle Organ; in this case it is so far-sighted that it looks over and beyond certain parties in its own country who are not exactly well-fed. We hardly think that the powers down on Melinda Street could have been Just Kids when small.

Our idea of irony is a reporter of the Round Robin getting panhandled on the front steps of his office.

Attention is called to the "Erat Club Murder" in an indefinite number of gasps and gulfs by Dr. Caspard McGuffey appearing Wednesday. The Doctor belongs to a dozen or so of the most exclusive outfits on the campus and is eminently qualified to write of such goings-on.

"Queen's Graduate now Noted Constitutional and Historian"—headline. How interestingly informative.

"Form Arts Vital Quality"—headline. Yes, and Swiss Cheeses Baked Potato, or Front Steps Market Garden. We always did like these self-explanatory headlines.

The midwestern college comics in the United States have been terminating the arrangement with College Humor, by which the latter had exclusive reprint rights, on the grounds that university and college spirit was being misrepresented. They complain with reason; yet we fail to see that College Humor is more than harmless. A magazine has three alternatives; First, to represent college in the classy, snappy manner so popular with the public; Second, to play up to the patriotic conception of college spirit, ideals, and broad horizons, in which case one reads nauseating sentimentality and platitudes; Thirdly, to reproduce accurately the level of culture obtaining at universities by publication of events and occurrences of significance—and if this were done we should see bonfires on the campus of every institution.

A paper, to satisfy the patriots, would have to have an editorial policy based on: (a) Our college is the best ever. (b) College Spirit is noble and glorious. (c) Hush hush!

In current issues of the Saturday Evening Post, Kenneth L. Roberts deals with colleges quite humorously and satirically; he is, we believe accurate, but he works from the removed viewpoint of a forty-year old and would prove grating to the average undergraduate.

Varsity's Junior entrant in the O.H.A. series engage in an important fixture to-night with the Toronto Canoe Club. The Canoe Club team holds second place in the Big Four group with a game and a half lead over the Blue and White. If Varsity wins they will be right in the running for a place in the play-offs.

The juniors have been unfortunate to lose as many games as they have this year, in most cases just being nosed out in last stages of the game. The strong showing of the Blue and White youngsters has surprised the critics who didn't give them a chance at the beginning of the season.

All in all it ought to be a mighty interesting game to-night. Play starts at 7.30 at the Arena Gardens. This will be the first game of a double-header, Marlboros and Parkdale engaging in the nightcap.

Having defeated Preston in a snappy game last Wednesday night "Red" Porter's men go on the ice to-night the leaders in their group.

The American tour gave the Seniors some useful experience, and showed up the stars on the team. SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity hockey fans are promised a real display of hockey at the Arena to-night, when the Blue and White Seniors meet St. Mike's for the second time this season. It took a long, hard battle plus an overtime period for "Red" Porter's boys to demonstrate their superiority over the squad under Father Spratt's care when they met in the first fixture of the season, so the game to-night should be no love affair.

The Seniors have played far more hockey this season than St. Michael's, and so take the ice to-night with everything in their favour. They started off with a bang by winning the Senior S.P.A. trophy, then took a wee trip to the south to show the natives hockey "as she is played". At the present time, by virtue of their win over Preston last Wednesday night they lead the group, and only over-confidence can stop them in their stride towards fame.

The big question is, what are the fans going to do about it? The turn-out at to-night's game will be the answer. With the new arrangement for students' season tickets, whereby rugby enthusiasts become of necessity followers of the puck-chasing game, the Seniors should find a big gathering ready to "shout and fight for the Blue and White" when they take the ice to-night. We do not need to repeat the torturing records of student attendance at hockey fixtures last year, enough to say that two digits only need to be used, and the first one not very large. The Senior team has demonstrated that it deserves some real support. What about it, gang?

ories he played a prominent part by keeping the opposing team from registering too often.

St. Michael's who tied the Varsity Seniors in the pre-holiday game, only to lose in the overtime period, are coming back to-night for revenge, and the battle should be a fierce one. The St. Mike's line-up includes such stars as "Stuffy" Mueller, Paul, and Delahey.

The Varsity squad will probably take the ice lined up as follows:—Goal, Murray Snyder; defence, "Red" Whitehead, Bruce Paul; forwards, McMullen, Stewart, Harley; alternates, McMillan, Statham, Murray, Marshall.

Registration for the Fall term is now complete and shows 5,961 students in actual attendance. This figure is an increase over last year's figures of over 500. Of this increase the faculty of Arts accounts for 200.

MIDDLEMEN GET WIN AND BEAT MCMASTER

3-2 Score for Varsity Intermediate First Win of Season

LITTLE SHINES IN NET

'Varsity' Intermediate Intercollegiate hockey team won their first game of the league yesterday when they defeated the McMaster squad by the score of 3 to 2. The fixture was a fast tussle throughout and deserved a larger crowd than was present to witness the meeting.

The Blue and White team was the better sextet from the opening gong and only stellar work in the losers' nets by Cunningham kept the winners from adding more counters to their side of the score sheet. Alex. Carrick scored the first counter for Varsity in the initial frame when he went down in combination with Giffilen. Evans tallied for Varsity when Graham and he went through and beat Cunningham with a pretty shot.

Shortly after the opening of the second session James scored for McMaster on a combination play with Lawson. Varsity's third goal came from Carrick's stick when he came from behind the Baptists' net and landed the disc in the net on a back-hand shot.

The third period opened with both teams working at full speed. The McMaster men tried hard to even up the score but the best they could do was tally a single counter.

The entire squad of Blue and White men who are coached by Jimmie Douglas, played fine hockey with most effective. Little, in the Varsity nets turned in a pretty exhibition. For McMaster, Cunningham, H. Stewart and James stood out.

The line-up:—Varsity—Goal, Little, defence, Carrick and McMillan; wings, Leak and Evans; centre, Giffilen; Alternates, Clancy, Graham, and Cloute.

McMaster—Goal, Cunningham; defence, Smith and H. Stewart; wings, A. Stewart and Lawson; centre, James; alternates, Dick, Walthe, and Pike.

Referee—Harry Watson.

the Porcupine. Although they were well within the Arctic circle, the temperature was about 98 degrees for 22 hours out of the 24. After a 40-mile trip over land, the party came to the end of their journey. The prospector, whom they were seeking, told them the details of the discovery he had made and proceeded to take them to the spot where he had found the relic imbedded in the earth.

The tusk was found sticking in a river bank, which was 200 feet high, at that point. Half of the tusk was protruding from the bank, the other half being wedged between strata of rock, as was discovered when excavations were made in the attempt to dig it up. This work took several days, as care had to be taken not to injure the tooth, which, although cracked in places, was otherwise in excellent condition.

The tooth was hauled 55 miles by dog team, then transported down the Porcupine in a boat as far as Fort Yukon. It was shipped express direct to Boston.

Heretofore the largest mastodon tusk was in the Carnegie Museum, Pittsburgh, a specimen measuring nine feet. The Harvard specimen is over two feet longer than the Carnegie specimen, and scientists have estimated that, during the 50,000 years it lay in the earth, corrosion has reduced its size at least two feet, making its former length well over 13 feet.

Efforts are being made to locate the mate of the tooth, and it is hoped that other remains of the monstrosity will be uncovered. The erosion of the river bank at the point where the tusk was found, was most fortunate, as it would not have been discovered otherwise, due to the depth at which it was buried.

VARSITY WATER POLOISTS TOUGH JOB ON HAND

Must Fight to Lead Good M.A.A.A. Experienced Squad

The Montreal A.A.A. water polo team will have a slight advantage over the Varsity representatives in their game at the Hart House Plunge, Saturday, on account of greater experience in playing under the international rules. Montreal have been competing under these rules for a year whereas the international code has been in practice at Varsity only since September.

In Montreal water polo is a well-established game and is generally recognized as a major sport. The players get training in public and high schools and become quite efficient in the game before they enter college. But in Toronto, up to this year, water polo has been confined to the University. What the Varsity players lack in experience, they must make up in enthusiasm. The game has made great strides and the outlook is exceedingly encouraging.

Varsity A and B water polo squads won the championship of their sections in the City league and the team for Saturday night's game has been chosen from these teams.

Varsity—Goal, Ayres; Defence, Sponce, Sinclair; Half, Goss; Centre, Armstrong; Forwards, Graham, Poynter, Sub, Thwaites, Bullen.
 Montreal A.A.A.—Goal, Cornforth; Defence, Light, Clouston; Half, Scott; Centre, Giddy; Forwards, Henning, Warmington; Sub, Gross.

Lovely Laura Louise at Dance But Just Because It Flued

D. Kendall.

University of Toronto, January 11th, 1929.

Dear Betty:

Ho-hum! Here I am again, and I'm simply dying with enthusiasm. Wasn't the flu fortunate? The Senate are perfect dorks to give us all those wonderful four days extra. I never would have been able to stay for the Tennis Club dance, if it hadn't flued. It was such a frisky party, wasn't it? And to think that Gid was able to get down for it. I felt so bashful introducing him to the family. Mother thought we must be engaged, but I explained it was only the modern spirit of youth. She wasn't quite satisfied, but she didn't ask any more embarrassing questions. Gid came down on the train with me and there was a boy there who I had danced with at the dance. He came and sat down with us and monopolized everything. He said that he came over on the Mayflowers, or rather his father did. Gid was positively rude when he left and said he thought that it was some of his relatives that 'ran violently down the slope into the sea and were drowned.' Wasn't that awfully cute of him.

It's gorgeous to be back again, especially when you have a new fur coat to wear. All the girls admire it and say that it's wonderful. It is too. Even if it doesn't fit into the rumble sack as well as my old one did. I've only been out two nights since I came back. It's real good of me, but I intend to keep it up. It was such a surprise that I passed all my Christmas exams that I must show the professors I have real ability, or else when Gabriel toots his tin whistle next May, I'll be left out in the hot. Now my dear, I simply must stop. I promised to go out for dinner.

Your dearest friend,
 Laura Louise.
 P.S.—Another girl got a fur coat for Christmas, but it isn't nearly as good as mine.—L. L.

ALL SET FOR WINTER AT LITTLE VIC RINK

Ticket Holders Prepared for Cold Weather and Chance to Exercise

THREE BANDS A WEEK

At the first sign of winter—in fact before there are any signs, other than the assumption that winter usually comes along about this time of year—the guardians of Little Vic spend many long hours nailing boards in place, and stringing up lights, so that all is in readiness for the first cold snap.

Then when King Winter finally makes his debut, Little Vic is ready to swarm with bright clad figures and sparkling faces. All seem anxious for this first skate of the year, in spite of the threatened interference of unseasonable term exams.

Little Vic is usually displaying her signs of "Skating to-night," long before any other devotees of outdoor rinks have considered the possibility of zero weather. Even the prediction of rain in the near future, by the weatherman, fail to dampen the spirits of "Parks" who runs the rink. "Well, if it thaws, it'll freeze again—there'll be lots of winter yet," is his sturdy assurance.

Those who feel that they must have exercise—why, isn't it just what the doctor ordered?—lament the fact that there is only a band three nights a week. But there are others, the studiously inclined, who consider that they get all the necessary exercise rushing around to lectures every day, and that the music, which assails their ears on band nights, could easily be dispensed with.

During the present taste of winter the rink has been very popular and

EVIL PAGES TORN OUT BY SPANISH PROFESSOR

But Students Had Translated Offensive Parts Already And Knew Worst

Special to the Varsity
 Salt Lake City, Utah—"To the pure of heart all things are pure," does not apply to University students, according to one of the professors of the Spanish department. The students of his class were translating their novel, when they came to a passage that was, according to the professor, quite immoral. So with the morals of the students at heart and with the firm desire not to be accused of contributing to the delinquency of minors, he specifically requested that his students refrain from reading the offensive pages. Alas, that we should be cursed with professors that are so glibly as to believe that students in colleges will do what their teachers tell them to do, or not to do. When the students found out there was something in their text that was not fit for their childish eyes to view, what did they do but all go to work and translate all the evil pages in one night. The next day the professor, with the foresight and wisdom customary to such men, called his students to his desk one by one and ripped the naughty pages out of each and every book. That will certainly fix the students; when they find that such drastic measures are taken to preserve their morals, they will go on their way and "sin no more." The professor should indeed be awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor for his heroic deed. Alack a day, if only our entire teaching force took such an interest in the morals of the students, we would all meet again in the Promised Land.

The Season tickets are selling fast; in spite of the fact that so many people were "taken in" by the weatherman last year, and scarcely knew the colour of their season tickets.

DR. CHARLES BEST SUCCEEDS MACLEOD BY GOVERNORS' RECENT APPOINTMENT

Associated With Doctor Banting In Famous Discovery of Insulin

WINNER OF NOBEL PRIZE

Widely Known for Research Work in America and in England

Dr. Charles Herbert Best M.A., M.B., D.Sc., succeeds Professor J. J. R. MacLeod as Professor of Physiology, at the University. Dr. Best, who is twenty-nine years of age, is chiefly known for his association with Dr. Banting in the discovery of insulin.

This research work, which resulted in one of the major medical discoveries of the age, was undertaken by Dr. Best while still a student in Medicine at the University of Toronto. Along with Professor MacLeod, and Dr. Banting, he became world-famous when the discovery of insulin was announced in 1922. In the previous year, Dr. Banting, then a young and practically unknown man, had obtained permission from Professor MacLeod to carry on important research work in the laboratories. Best, then equally unknown, was appointed as his assistant. Their investigations for an anti-diabetic substance culminated in the announcement that brought them immediate fame.

As a result of this discovery, Dr. Banting was awarded the Nobel prize in conjunction with Professor MacLeod, and the name of Charles Herbert Best was associated with theirs in this honour. The Ontario Government recognized the value of the discovery in a special bill, passed with the whole-hearted endorsement of all parties. It established the Banting-Best Research Chair.

Dr. Best comes from the United States, though his name has long been associated with Canada since he was a boy. He was born in Maine in February, 1899. His early education took place at Pembroke High School, and Harbord Collegiate, in this city. While engaged in the Research work which has made him famous, he was obtaining his B.A. (1921) and M.A. (1922) degrees at the University of Toronto. Two years later he got his M.B. here.

Wycliffe Literary Society Holds Oratorical Contest

The regular meeting of the Wycliffe College Literary Society was a very lively affair. The meeting was opened with God Save the King, and after a few moments devoted to correspondence and other business, proceeded with its program, which took the form of an Oratorical Contest. The Speakers were limited to five minutes, and of the eleven who took part, six were chosen to compete in a final contest to be held on February the eighth.

The speeches were extremely varied in subject, and a corresponding variation in treatment made the evening most interesting. The speakers were A. D. Pepper, H. Cannon, W. A. Gilbert, L. T. Geary, Cecil King, J. J. Hurley, L. P. Hunt, G. F. Banks, H. A. Jamieson, C. C. Watkins, and R. Latimer. Of these Messrs. Geary, Hurley, Hunt, Banks, King and Latimer qualified for the final contest. The society adjourned immediately after the decision was announced.

WORLD DISARMAMENT SPOILED BY STATES

American Smugness Criticised
Cruisers Considered Menace

LOOSEMORE WHACKS U.S.A.

"That the attitude of the United States toward disarmament and peace treaties since the war has been a menace to the peace of the world," was the decision of the Trinity Literary Institute when the subject was debated last Friday evening at Trinity House. The government received a majority of 15-12.

The temporary leader of the government, Mr. T. Wilson, opened the debate by pointing out that the United States was continually stirring up jealousy and hatred by her position of armed independence. The cruiser campaign, he said, and her interference in South African politics has been a distinct menace to, if not an outright violation of the world's peace. They should put into practice the ideas of the League of Nations.

Mr. Cranfield, leading for the opposition, stated that it was impossible to be at peace with the whole world and that the United States was certainly not at war with the whole world. If fifty-two nations are pledged to outlaw war in the League of Nations, what chance has the United States against them. Mr. Cranfield said further that the United States did not enter the League of Nations because it was contrary to the Monroe Doctrine, but that the Kellogg Pact distinctly showed her favourable attitude toward peace. In conclusion he said that the United States' views on disarmament did not clash with peace interests for "when we passed our laws, did we do away with our policemen?"

Mr. R. Loosemore, speaking for the affirmative, likened the United States to an independent flapper, who did not demean herself to speak with others, but preferred to make her own arrangements. "United States never seems to have realized what true greatness is—she will not sacrifice her own

IRISH DRAMATIST WILL VISIT HERE AND GIVE LECTURE

Lennox Robinson from Dublin
Will Lecture on "Anglo-Irish Poetry"

BROUGHT BY DEAN DELURY

Prominent in Renaissance Movement in Irish
Letters

Lennox Robinson, the well known Irish playwright will visit the University of Toronto tomorrow. He will stay at Hart House and will speak in the theatre on Tuesday evening on "Anglo-Irish Poetry."

This is a subject on which Mr. Robinson is well qualified to speak as with Yeats, W. George, W. Russell, and others he is prominent in the literary movement known as the Irish Renaissance. He began his career at the Abbey Theatre, Dublin, in 1908 with the production of "The Clancy Name". His most outstanding success was the comedy, "The Whitehead Boy". This was acclaimed not only in Ireland but in London and New York.

Mr. Robinson's versatility is illustrated by his activity as novelist, critic and lecturer. His novel, "A Young Man from the South" reflects as do many of his works, current political movements in his native country. He acted as dramatic critic of the "London Observer" and has lectured on drama at Liverpool University.

Of the play "The Whitehead Boy", Dean A. T. Delury said, "In the whole history of drama there are few plays with a finer quality of pure comedy."

This is the third distinguished figure in Anglo-Irish literature who has been brought to Toronto by Dean Delury. The other two were William Butler Yeats and George William Russell. The latter received an enthusiastic reception in Toronto last year.

"Big Money"

NOT REALLY SO TRUE

Special to the Varsity
Wayne, Penn.—Great excitement reigns in University circles here over the publication of an anonymous confession from an undergraduate in a recent book on education. The following is an extract—

"I have been writing short stories on the quiet for True Confessions and True Stories. I made a thousand dollars in eleven weeks selling my stuff to magazines. One year I tried the Vacation Bible School job and only made a little clear. I write stories and make twenty-five dollars apiece, get a good plot with an ending with a punch—many stories like those in the Plastic Age. I do not know whether I ought to write for such magazines or not. They claim their stories are true, but of course they aren't, at any rate none of mine are! I am trying to get on to a better way of making money. Am thinking of selling Fuller brushes."

VARSIITY TEAM WINS FRIDAY NIGHT GAME BEATING ST. MIKE'S

Both Paul and Marshall Score

FAST GAME SCORE 2-0

Teams Battle for Fifty Minutes
Without Score for Either Side

Varsity Seniors took their third straight win in the Senior O.H.A. series this season when they defeated St. Mike's last Friday night at Varsity Arena by a score of 2 to 0. About two thousand fans turned out to witness a thrilling encounter, and by the volume of shouting and the appearance of the sections reserved for students the undergraduate body was well represented.

The teams battled through fifty minutes of exciting play without registering a goal, until with ten minutes to go Bruce Paul rushed right through from the Varsity defence to beat "Stuffy" Mueller in the St. Mike's net with some beautiful work which gained well-earned applause. Less than a minute later Marshall picked up the puck in front of Mueller after Harley's shot and registered the second goal.

The game was fast from the start, light but speedy forward Varsity line, Stewart, McMullen and Harley, the pressed the attack from the first and only the superb work of the St. Mike's defence and "Stuffy" Mueller's brilliant saves in goal prevented a higher score. Though Father Spratt's boys threatened at times Captain "Red" Whitehead and Bruce Paul kept Murray Snyder from over-working in the Varsity net, and he had a quiet time of it in comparison to Mueller.

The game looked like a rough encounter in the first period when four penalties were handed out, the first to Bruce Paul and the others to R. Paul, Irvine and Foster all of St. Mike's. No penalties were handed out in the second period, but it had its thrills. "Red" Whitehead, right on top of the St. Mike's goal lost his balance and missed a shot when Mueller came out to clear. Then Bury got through only to have his shot smothered by Snyder when he hesitated in front of the Varsity goal.

For Varsity the forward line played well, Stewart's stick-handling and their combination being pretty to watch. Whitehead and Bruce Paul on defence were good, the former's long shots from centre and the latter's line rushes being a feature of the game.

For the double blue team "Red" Foster and Miller on the forward line were outstanding, the former threatening the Varsity net more than once. Ross Paul on the St. Mike's defence played a very good game.

Varsity: Goal, Snyder; defence, Bruce Paul and Whitehead; centre, Stewart; wings, McMullen and Harley; alternates, Murray, Marshall. St. Mike's: Goal, Mueller; defence, R. Paul and Irvine; centre, Miller; wings, Irvine and Delaney; alternates, Foster and Bury.

rites of BAPTISM BY IMMERSION STINK WAR PRACTISED BY KNOX MEN

Open warfare was resumed at Knox College on Friday night when Centre House invaded East, sending a number of the defenders to the cold showers when they finally gained the second and third floors after braving a hard-fought water battle. The participating East House men put up a very strong defence, and although vastly outnumbered by the invaders, caused them considerable trouble.

The four floors of East House ran water, and the basement having received its ample supply by way of the stairs, was beginning to take on the appearance of a first Knox swimming-pool.

The cause of the skirmish was said to be a challenge from East House. To begin the fray some form of tear gas was introduced to East House which caused the inhabitants to revert to a childhood practice. Then came the horde of Centre House men and the water fight, with the invaders completely overwhelming the handful of defenders. In the latter stages of the battle an agent came into play in addition to water, being a very good substitute for asphyxiating gas—as good a substitute as could be used in an inter-house raid. After the fight a parley was held, and good friendships re-established.

FRENCH FOR CANADIANS

Students of the U. of T. expressed varied opinions regarding the potential values of Latin and French, when interviewed by the "Varsity" on the subject. Some apparently agreed with Classical Association of Great Britain Professor Conway, president of the list in his statement that Latin should be stressed more than French as a subject for study, while others advocated more French and less Latin.

Mr. W. S. McDonnell, 3rd year St. Mike's, when approached by the "Varsity" stated, "I derive more pleasure reading Horace, Cicero, and Virgil than I do in reading French novels. Latin has real value from the standpoint of education, but I do not believe that it is one bit more important than French."

F. R. G. '28, replied: "I quite agree with Professor Conway as regards Latin. It is of much more value than French unless you are greatly interested in the Eastern section of Canada. Latin is the background of the English language and a knowledge of the language enables us to understand

Mystery of Seven Occult Socratics No Longer Occult or Mysterious

That there is a secret society in the University known as the Seven Occult Socratics has long been known to those who read the Bulletin Board and Coming Events Column. The Varsity has tried often to learn something of this society but until week end has been singularly unsuccessful.

It would appear however, that it hails forth in a cell kneedee with ashes, with tapestry of sack-cloth, stinking furiously of incense. The members are faithful disciples of that snub-nosed, bald-headed, bulging-eyed fellow of Athens (but seriously, nothing as a very fine old chap). They call themselves the Seven Occult Socratics, and consider it their supreme duty to keep themselves untainted by contact with the temporal goods of a civilization of jazz artists.

All this intelligence was discovered by a special reporter who broke into their secret place of meeting and was immediately seized, beaten to semi-consciousness, cleansed by a series of douchings in various sorts of holy water and divers injections of purgative drugs. And forthwith he was brought to consciousness and with solemn ceremony sworn to secrecy. He was then subjected to a three hour lecture on the nature of knowledge, and hypnotized into an acknowledgment of the non-existence of mere substance. At length, when he had strength and consciousness sufficient to look about him, he found that he could not recognize the Seven, but they impressed him as being Victorian philosophers, with their long faces and sophisticated manner.

When the Seven saw him reflecting thus, they considered, and finally resolved that it would be necessary to admit the stranger into the society. Whereupon, with impressive ritual they burned their old constitution, and having fully initiated the detective with agonizing and humiliating mailings, they suddenly became the Eight Occult Pedantics, sworn one and all to absolute secrecy.

Thus matters stand. The information here given is all that is so far disclosed. However, others are at work on the task, and the "Varsity" hopes to have more information about the proceedings of the Eight Occult Pedantics.

THE HIGHER EDUCATION IN RUSSIA

In our papers during the past years we have occasionally read despatches on the state of the schools in Russia. These accounts dealt with the conduct of the girls and boys under Soviet discipline and gave the general impression that most of the youthful pupils were well on the way to becoming completely demoralized. Some of the goings on might well have been amusing as the pranks of urchins who had not yet reached university age and hence might be excused for street-rioting and burning things, like a lot of little turks. But the case was rendered serious by the accounts of illness, destitution and crime into which children were led owing to the breakup of the family.

Many therefore, have been interested to know the effect of the Revolution on the universities. These before the war were noted for the high standard of scholarship maintained by the professors and by the sharp line of demarcation between the two great classes of students, those of the higher social classes who were loyal to the Czar and hence favoured in his institutions, and those drawn from the other classes, most of whom were poor and given to liberal and anarchistic opinion. In 1918 the Soviet leaders took their radical step toward the organized higher education of the masses. They published a decree throwing open all the higher schools to adults without the necessity of passing entrance examinations or of paying fees.

But Utopia had not yet arrived. It was found that the wholesale admission of the workers to the halls of learning led to the coming of many who were naturally unable to keep up with the academic work. In addition the system under which the fees of the students were remitted was revised in the light of experience. An interesting view of the effort of the Russian Government to carry out its programme is given by Lucia Perlmutter in the current issue of the New Student.

The article explains the way in which the educationalists attempted to bridge the gap between the state of education in which they found the great majority of the workers and the standards of university education. This was done by the introduction of special working men's schools. In these and in the other institutions several new ideas have been attempted to bring the schools close to practical life. Lectures are heavily supplemented by outside work. Most of the students have to work to put themselves through and industrial plants are compelled to have university students as two per cent. of their employees. The students are assessed for fees according to their ability to pay and thus many of the students have to have their fees paid by the government. In addition to this some are paid salaries. This is one Bolshevik idea that would be strongly attractive to some of us. However, although the article does not say, it may only be an extension of our idea of scholarships, which for most people would remove the attractiveness of the proposition.

The return had also to be made to the examination system of admission. But in the reaction against previous conditions, class affiliations are used as a secondary principle of admission and those who do not rank high as Comrades must make a good showing to avoid elimination on occasion. Thus the broad plan of universal education, typical of revolutionary thought, had to be amended.

Liberals on this continent often complain that the development of the capitalist system has resulted in the over emphasis of university education as a preparation for business. In Russia we see the tendency to regard education not as an end in itself but as preparation to serve the exalted Communist State. Miss Perlmutter, after describing the Soviet system, notes that no one is allowed to specialize until he has had imposed on him Marxist theories of economics. The Soviet takes care to do what nationalist governments are often accused of doing in other countries, namely, to incorporate state propaganda in the curriculum. Here is the course prescribed for all:

a. Historic Materialism. The philosophy of dialectic materialism and the Marxist theory of history. One hour a week for one year.

Art, Music and Drama

Ernest Seitz

M.E. Ernest Seitz in the Sunday evening concert at Hart House gave a programme which for such events seemed unusually popular in flavour. With the exception of the Frontini which opened the programme and the Schumann Etudes the whole programme was composed of frequently played works of the Romantic composers of the latter nineteenth century. Even in the Chopin group the better known waltzes and etudes were included to the extreme gratification of a romantic audience.

It has always been my fond opinion that Sunday concerts were far removed from the world of popular concert performers and the natural concert follows that the Schumann Etudes Symphonies, though an arid display occasionally relieved by lapses into luscious sentimentality was the most valuable piece of work of the evening. The Chopin Fantasia was the most brilliant number and by far the most interesting of the programme. The waltzes undoubtedly lacked the finish which might have given them a fresh interest; the Gluck gavotte was really charmingly played.

But such a programme lacked any real variety. Even in the Frontini Andante, labelled in the Olden style, implying some affinity with the classics, I presume, there seemed little that was markedly removed from Chopin. However, most of the undergraduate audience were seeking pleasure in popular favourites and found it.

Friday Afternoon Recital

A recital of considerable enjoyment was given in the music room of Hart House on Friday by Miss M. Gidley, pianist and Mr. Frederic Winfield, violinist.

They opened their programme rather ambitiously with the Cesar Franck sonata, a work that demands much from such young artists and though there were a few inevitable slips they were certainly pardonable and the sonata on the whole was very creditably interpreted. The latter part of the programme consisted of shorter and popular solo numbers played by the two artists in turn. Miss Gidley's D flat Prelude of Chopin and Mr. Winfield's Kreisler numbers were particularly attractive.

Scissors Cuts

Now that the festive season is sufficiently far behind us, it might be viewed in the light of cold reason. Aesthetically speaking, nature did not measure up to the traditional A. Y. Jackson Canadian Christmas; nevertheless though some of the students were, perhaps, unable to consume their quota of turkey, a survey of the new year "march past" of the treking back to the University, reveals the evidence that old Santa with customary buoyancy delivered his consignment of Christmas-neckties — just to rile the "arty" folk.

The pure delightfulness of the scissor cuts by Lisl Hummel exhibited last week in the Sketch Room of Hart House, however, doubtlessly dispelled all wrath that might have been engendered in the breasts of those just referred to by reason of the boisterous carol. Lisl Hummel, it might be stated, as well as an art student in Vienna and Munich schools. One of her professors, the writer is informed, with keen appreciation of her deft draftsmanship suggested that she try scissor cuts. The exhibition under review amply justifies considering the artist as a worker of unquestionable merit in the medium in which she has chosen to express herself. Indeed, so masterful is Lisl Hummel in cutting out these little black and white gems that she has won recognition for herself in Europe, United States and Canada as perhaps the foremost exponent of the scissor cut. Her work has appeared in English, American and Canadian magazines. Of local interest is the fact that Lisl Hummel is Mrs. Borsook the wife of Dr. H. Borsook, lecturer and research assistant in the department of Bio-Chemistry of this university. The Doctor "discovered" the talented young Viennese while himself studying in her native city.

These scissor cuts are not mere silhouettes of interesting profiles but picture compositions in which order; (Continued on page 4)

The fair sex deserve much pity, in that they depend to some extent upon the gentleman for invitations to parties, shows and so forth, but in this weather they have the advantage, for their hats come down over their ears. Dear Dec.—We had a flying time over the holidays; we all "flu". Christmas looks entirely different from behind fifty variegated varieties of cough-drops—and as for ringing in the New Year with wild bells! All the ringing we could manage was for the doctor. But the family has a new radio —. Almost any night one hears: "Miss Lena Gensler will now sing the" (Continued on page 4)

b. Capitalism and the Proletarian Revolution. The characteristics and contradictions of capitalism; the class struggle in a capitalist society; imperialism and the crash of capitalism; proletarian revolution and dictatorship; social democracy, and its trends; and communism. Two hours a week for one year.

c. The Political Structure and Social Problems of Soviet Russia. The October upheaval and its causes; the constitution of the U.S.S.R.; the domestic and international policies of the U.S.S.R.; and domestic and international problems. One hour a week for a year.

Many people today are impatient of liberal education and desirous of making it wholly vocational. They fail to see the value of a course which is not immediately capable of producing dividends for the graduate and expert workers for the employer. They may be surprised to find that they are at one with the Communists in the desire to make education wholly utilitarian. They agree with the idea of making practical the academic work and in moving further away from the medieval lecture.

BLUE SENIORS TAKE UNDISPUTED LEADERSHIP OF O.H.A. BY 2-0 WIN

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White senior sextet aren't doing so badly. They have just won three straight games in the O.H.A. and have chalked up two consecutive shut-outs within three nights. On Wednesday they lingered in the enervating aromatic breezes of the Health Town long enough to down the home hopefuls 2-0. Then on Friday they held a little session up in Ross Workman's Winter Palace with St. Michael's forming the piece de resistance. The "Irish" (with four former "Scotchmen" on the line-up) certainly put up a good battle but the Blue and White outlasted them and made them take the goose-egg end of another 2-0 victory.

Varsity are leading the senior O.H.A. with three wins and no losses. They have beaten St. Michael's twice and Preston once. On Wednesday night they meet Queen's here at the Varsity Arena. This will be the first hook-up of these two outfits and a great battle should result. Preston without much practice held Varsity to a 2-0 score while Queen's downed Preston 5-2 in the Limestone City. Everything points to a bitter struggle.

In three O.H.A. games Varsity have scored ten goals and have had two registered against them and these two in the first games. In addition to carrying a needed scoring punch the Blue and White are playing high-class defensive hockey. They have a back-checking forward line, a solid defence and a good goal-keeper. A considerable portion of the Blue and White success is due to the good work of Murray Snyder in goal. Two consecutive shut-outs is fine work.

WORK AND INTEREST IN ROWING AGAIN REVIVES

In spite of the fact that this season conjures up visions of hockey, skiing, tobogganing and kindred winter sports the rowing enthusiasts looking forward to the spring months are already making plans for another campaign.

To-day at 5 p.m. the Rowing Club is holding a meeting in the Lecture Room at Hart House and all who have any interest whatever in this sport are invited to attend. Prof. T. R. Loudon will speak on an important matter.

To-morrow the Rowing Room in Hart House will witness the beginning of the work on the machines. There will be at least three crews this year, the Senior, Junior, and the 150-pound crew.

Although for several years past enthusiasm in this branch of sport could not be said to be at a high point this year seems to promise a considerable revival of interest. The Humber civic course which seems likely to be constructed before very long has given an impetus to aquatic sports heretofore.

An important announcement informs us that a Graduate Club is to be formed. This club will assist in the financing of undergraduate rowing and should be of great assistance.

VARSITY JUNIORS TROUCE T. C. C.

Varsity Excelled Around Nets And Going Not Easy Always

SIX TO THREE WIN

The Varsity Junior hockey team kept pace with the Seniors last Friday night by scoring a nice 6 to 3 win over the Toronto Canoe Club.

Although the Blue and White doubled the score on the speedy Canoe Club sextet the latter made things interesting all the way for the Varsity team. It was chiefly in their accurate work around the nets that Varsity excelled. Richardson of T.C.C. started the scoring in the opening period on a pass from Brydson. Billy Bell tied the score on a long shot, that slipped by the Red Ringers' goalie. Then Harry Laing put Varsity ahead, scoring from a scramble in front of the T.C.C. net. From the face-off the same player caught the Paddlers napping and went in alone to put Varsity two goals up. Clare McIntyre registered on a solo effort to complete the scoring in the first period.

In the second stanza Frank Sullivan's boys commenced a very productive offensive which netted the Juniors three goals. Hetherington, on a clever solo effort, scored the first Brant produced number two on an individual rush and then Laing brought Varsity's total up to six with his third goal of the game. Towards the end of the period the Paddlers rallied and Brydson beat Hunnisset on a hard shot.

The final period produced fast hockey but owing to the closeness of the checking there was no scoring.

The whole Varsity team played well and gave their best and should give pace-setting Marlboros a real argument when they meet next Saturday night.

T.C.C.: Goal, Neal and Miller; defence, Robertson and Foster; centre, McIntyre; wings, Brydson and Richardson; alternates, McNeill and Huggins.

Varsity: Goal, Hunnisset; defence, Bell and Williams; centre, Brant; wings, Hetherington and Laing; alternates, Bennett and Lash.

INTERMEDIATES AND OSHAWA TONIGHT

Although Varsity Loses Twice Team not to be Called Outclassed

TO BE PLAYED AT WHITBY

'Varsity' Intermediate O.H.A. team meet Oshawa to-night in the third game of their O.H.A. schedule. Although the 'Middle' team have lost their two previous starts the squad will be strengthened by Red Statham of the Senior team and Graham will turn in his first game of the season in O.H.A.

The group in which the 'Middle' team has been placed is made up of the strongest Intermediate teams in the Province. Oshawa, Newmarket and Richmond Hill are rated with the best Intermediate teams in hockey, while the Willowdale entry is made up of a number of senior players. Although the Varsity team lost both of its games so far this season they were far from being outclassed in either of the contests and a good battle will be provided for the Oshawa team to-night.

In view of the fact that Oshawa has not a rink the fixture will be played in Whitby.

Manager Moran of the 'Middle' team will present a rearranged team to-night. 'Red' Statham, of the Senior Blue and White team will play centre to-night while Graham will be on the defence with McMillan, Alex. Carrick, who was moved up to left wing when the team met McMaster last week in an Intermediate Intercollegiate fixture and scored two goals against the Baptists will start on the wing

1. The following regulations govern the award of scholarships for the academic year 1928-29 only, and may be revised for succeeding years.

2. The War Memorial Scholarships are open to students (men and women), in any Faculty, who in June 1929 shall have completed their first but not their final year.

3. All applications for War Memorial Scholarships must be made to the Secretary-Treasurer of the Alumni Federation, 43 St. George Street, before April 15, 1929. Forms of application may be obtained at the Alumni Office.

4. The award of any or all scholarships may be deferred if suitable candidates do not present themselves.

5. The general basis on which scholarships may be awarded shall be as follows: (a) Standing in course of studies; (b) Merit as shown in extra-curricular activities—executive, literary, dramatic, athletic, etc. (c) Such other general qualifications of merit as may commend themselves to the Committee, including relationship (if any) to active service during the War.

6. Candidates may be interviewed personally by members of the Scholarship Committee.

7. Awards in all Faculties will be made as soon as possible after the results of the final examinations in 1929 are published. Payment will be made to the successful applicants in three instalments following their registration in the University for the Academic year 1929-30.

A man of wide experience as seaman and landman, a fervent convert, he possesses in full measure the notes of a truly Catholic spirit, particularly in his ability to fathom "the Divine humour of the Universe." Mr. Chesterton in his introduction to the volume, "Poems by Theodore Maynard," finds him especially the poet of color, which, beginning with the song

He wins through to faith — a faith that is in "the love that moves the sun in heaven and all the stars."

Mr. Theodore Maynard will give a recital from his own poetry, Monday evening, January 21st.

grouping, design, feeling and line technique combine to give a work of art, one that is infinitely pleasing to artist and layman alike. The child studies of Mrs. Borsook (now that I have revealed her identity) are particularly happy in both conception and execution. The juvenile figures possess a power of suggestion to such a degree that though black outlines only, in reality, exist one often fancies he sees the features of the children expressive of all the happiness and glee that they are obviously enjoying. The exhibit as a whole is characterized by a whimsical charm that captivates. Any description of individual cuts, the writer feels, would be not only quite inadequate, but wholly futile inasmuch as such delightful bits would but suffer in the telling. Such things must be seen to be appreciated.

NEWMAN TEA

A pleasant afternoon tea took place on Sunday at Newman Club. It was the first Sunday tea of the New Year.

The hostesses of the occasion were the students of O.C.E. The musical programme through short afforded much pleasure. Messrs. Gontarin Rocher, de la Sabliere, violinist, and Tommy Marsh, pianist, delighted the members with selections from Schubert, Hoffman and others.

Father McMahon's genial greeting welcomed both the old and new members and did much to make the afternoon enjoyable. Dainty refreshments were served by the girls who are going to Faculty.

New Year's Resolutions Resolved To Attempt To Cure Loose Habits

(A. H. Arrell)

Having come to the conclusion that there has been too many parties, that our studies have been affected, that unless this ceases, we will be unable to pass our exams, we resolve that we will settle down at our desk and refuse to move except under extreme circumstances.

But we appreciate the fact that these extreme circumstances will occur when it will be impossible to settle down and we therefore resolve that in order to waste as little time as possible in our outbursts we will have everything in readiness.

While being of the opinion that virtuousness and cleanliness were synonymous yet I was unaware that cleanliness followed so closely upon virtuousness. Yet the reason is not hard to find, it is small in fact we might say Little. In view of these things and the fact that we are cleanleopos the fact that we are dealing with sheep who can be lead by any little thing, I resolve that in future discretion shall be the better part of virtue, and that there can be as much nonsense, excitement and movement as is desired without the utterance of a word.

(Signed) Little Chief Purple Robe.

During the past year they acted like lambs, behaved like lambs and were led like lambs. My resolve is to become this year a better shepherd, to prevent all scrapes except at my best when one of the lambs becomes rebellious and tainted by the worldly sin of truthfulness, when he shall of course be suitably clean. I resolve further that the wolves pointed into the sin of publicity shall be kept from the pack. As it was in the past so may it be in the future. 'There isn't a story, there wasn't a story and there never will be a story.'

(Signed)
Chief of the Burs and the Laundry.

And now the New Year is at hand in view of our experiences of the past we resolve that there shall be appointed an official glass blower to test all the milk and we think it would be a good move if we appointed one of the Solemn Asses in Concave as having the most inherent capacity in this regard.

Speakers from the floor of the house were, R. H. Loosermore, G. O. Murrell-Wright, A. Walters, J. Evans, Mr. Douglas, R. Seaborne, T. Crosthwaite, M. DePenciler, J. Craig, and L. Malone.

After the speeches from the floor the question was finally put to a vote of the house in which the government had a comfortable majority, supporting the affirmative side of the debate.

Special interest was added by the presence of Mr. R. L. Fredenburg, President of Victoria College Students' Parliament, as honorary visitor.

It was decided that an open house debate would be arranged in the near future with Victoria's Parliament.

Dr. Best has held four important positions in Toronto until his recent appointment. He is Assistant Professor of Physiological Hygiene, as well as Head of that Department. In this connection he has been studying the dynamic history of the body. He is assistant director of the Connaught Laboratories, in which connection he is superintending the production of a liver extract, designed to combat pernicious anaemia, in addition to being in charge of the production of insulin.

Finally, he is a Research Associate in the Banting-Best Research. It is anticipated that he will resign the Connaught Laboratories post, but will continue as acting head of the Department of Physiological Hygiene until a new appointment is made.

Dr. F. G. Banting paid high tribute to Dr. Best. "I do not think the University of Toronto has ever produced a more brilliant graduate in physiology," he stated. "He has all the qualifications which are going to make an efficient head of a department."

Professor J. J. R. MacLeod, whom Dr. Best succeeds, came to the University of Toronto in 1918. He was educated at Aberdeen, London and Leipzig. He left last year to take up a position in his native country, at the University of Aberdeen.

DIVERSION OF POWER TO UNITED STATES SEVERELY CENSURED

Mr. Harry Sifton at Liberal Club Traces Story of Hydro Commission

QUESTION NATIONAL ONE

Study of Power Situation
Recommended as Future
For Public Service

"The History of the Liberal party in Ontario is a history of lost chances," said Mr. Harry Sifton in speaking to the Liberal Club at their luncheon in Hart House yesterday. Mr. Sifton, dealing with the power situation in Ontario, criticized the present Government's attitude to the export of power to the United States, and averred the situation was so serious that if the States' supply were cut off, "the international border would be moved north of the St. Lawrence."

Pointing out that power was a matter of investment of capital, that it presented no raw material or labor problem, and that it was essential in many public utilities, Mr. Sifton sketched briefly the story of the Hydro-Electric Commission, under Sir Adam Beck.

The Commission was formed, he said, to develop most of the power for the province of Ontario, but the municipalities were allowed the right to construct steam plants to carry the peak load. On Sir Adam's death, the steam plants went, and off-peak power was brought from the Ontario.

"It was realized that hydro power was not an exportable asset, and the Federal House thereupon approved no further export of power except with the consent of the premiers in the provinces concerned. Ontario power was then exported to the Buffalo and Eastern Company, which soon grew to count on it. This 'stringing a wire across the Niagara' meant, said the speaker, 'shifting' ten per cent. of the Niagara production to the States; this power, he maintained, meant twenty thousand jobs lost for Canada, with a payroll of twenty-nine millions."

That if this condition was let slide, the distinction between on peak and off-peak power would be washed out, was Mr. Sifton's contention. The United States, especially New York and Pennsylvania, with its shortage of power, would depend on the Niagara power diversion, and would create a situation that should be regarded as a national question.

In recommending to the Club the study of the power question, which (Continued on page 4)

College Street Fire
Interest Baldwin House

Fires and fire-reels appeal directly to man's primitive instincts. Clouds of smoke rising from a house on College Street about noon yesterday, brought a fine display of fire-fighting equipment to the scene. Students hurrying to twelve o'clock lectures in Baldwin House braved the threat of frozen extremities to loiter and gaze, while the windows in the hall held more than their quota of interested observers. Late arrivals were urged in excited tones, to "Come and see the fire." Others turned away disgusted. "Gosh, it's a flop!"

Verily it was a flop. The smoke faded in a world-weary fashion into the cold, grey sky, the firemen prepared to depart, and the lecture-bound obeyed, with a sigh, the insistent call of duty.

MR. LENNOX ROBINSON TO LECTURE TO-NIGHT

Players Fifteen Years Ago

Mr. Lennox Robinson, who is to lecture to-night in Hart House theatre at 8.15, on Anglo-Irish poetry, arrived in town this morning, and will probably see how the University has changed in the fifteen years that have passed since he was in Toronto with the Irish players. A number of seats in the theatre will be available to students at 50c. These can be had at the box-office after ten o'clock and should be applied for as soon as possible.

POSITIONS FOUND FOR UNDERGRADS

Bureau of Appointments Supplied
Many With Xmas
Employment

VARIETY OF JOBS HELD

Although sheltered in an unobtrusive corner of a building on St. George St. belonging to the History Department, the Bureau of Appointments has evidently been discovered by quite a number of undergraduates seeking jobs for the Christmas holidays. Larger numbers than ever before were placed this year, partly due, no doubt, to the 'flu, which made great inroads on the regular staffs.

Exact statistics were not available, since many ungrateful students, once they had been referred to a job never returned to report whether they had actually clinched it. But at least 44 men and 40 co-eds got jobs through the Bureau, mostly in stores, where the demand for extra help around Christmas is greatest. Both Eaton's and Simpson's stores were in constant touch with the Bureau, and were anxious for as many students as they could get to help out with the Xmas rush.

Besides these, a few advertising and office jobs were filled, and there was a demand for more men to sell Christmas cards at a good commission, but few men seemed to be interested in this sort of work.

The variety of jobs available around Christmas is not nearly as great as in the summer, when the Bureau offers all sorts of positions ranging from aluminum selling to chauffeuring private cars, and from cherry-picking to French translation. Nor is sock-darning the only part-time employment that students find to do during the winter. Many an undergraduate who trends the academic fields in the day-time even as you and I, is leading, all unsuspected, the double life of a janitor or a theatre-usher in the evening. And it all happens through the Bureau of Appointments.

Honor System Abolished At University of Texas

The honor system has definitely been abolished at the University of Texas. A vote of nine to two in the student assembly eliminated articles concerning the honor system from the laws of the students' association. The honor system has been in effect since the beginning of the University in 1883. The system has been considered ineffective for the last few years.

Professors and their wives met with large numbers of the students at a delightful tea given at Wymwold on Monday afternoon, by the Victoria Faculty Women's Association.

MEDICAL GRADUATES TO BE GIVEN M.D. DEGREE IN FUTURE

Senate Decides to Follow Lead of Other Universities on Continent

CHOICE OF M.B. OR M.D.

Three Hundred Graduates
Have Made Application
For New Degree

Three hundred and five graduates in Medicine in the University of Toronto, have already made application for the M.D. degree, under the new ruling, according to information given "The Varsity" at Simcoe Hall yesterday.

This new ruling, as stated in the Report of the Dean of the Faculty of Medicine, in the President's Report, is as follows:

"The Senate of the University of Toronto, on the recommendation of the Faculty of Medicine, determined to grant the M.D. to students on graduation instead of the M.B. It was further determined to bestow the doctor's degree in Medicine upon any graduates in Medicine of this University who may apply for it."

The Assistant Registrar, Mr. A. B. Fennell, informed "The Varsity" that the U. of T. is possibly the last University on the continent to adopt the practice of granting the M.D. to students on graduation.

"Back in 1843," Mr. Fennell explained, "when Kings College opened, it followed the custom of the Old Country Universities, in granting the M.B. on graduation. The degree of M.D. was reserved for post-graduate students. The American Universities, on the other hand, have practically all adopted the custom of granting the doctor's degree for all graduates. Toronto is now merely following suit."

"But what practical difference will it make to the University of Toronto graduates?" "The Varsity" inquired.

"Well, for one thing," Mr. Fennell said, "the U. of T. graduate who is now practicing in the United States under an M.B. degree has found it increasingly difficult to convince all concerned that he is a genuine 'Doctor'. All future graduates will be granted the M.B. or M.D. according to their individual choice."

With regard to what degree may now be granted for post-graduate studies, Mr. Fennell stated that an announcement will be made later.

"Big Chick" Tracks Found in Texas

Special to The Varsity
Oklahoma—Fossilized tracks of a giant's 'big chick' found in the cactus covered plains of Texas by Dr. Chas. N. Gould, of the University of Oklahoma, proves that mammoth reptiles roamed the plains of the mid-west in early ages. Weighing on an average of six tons, these immense dinosaurs roamed the country, and left immense tracks in the ooze and slime along the Gulf of Mexico. A plaster cast has been taken of the footprints and is on display at the University of Oklahoma.

STUDENTS TAKE YEAR DISCOVERING LIBRARY SAYS ANNUAL REPORT

Librarian of University Comments on Increased Use of Books

NO ROOM TO EXPAND

Unless Building Enlarged Soon
University Will Be Harmed

That certain students reach the second year of their course without knowing the location of the University Library is the statement contained in the latest available edition of the president's report in the section dealing with the Librarian's report. This condition is said not to be so serious as it once was because of advertising on the part of the library authorities.

But advertising would seem to have drawbacks at least with the limited accommodation at present provided by the library, because the report goes on to state that "on three or four occasions it has been found necessary to desist from further publicity for fear that the resources of the library would be insufficient to meet the demands made upon them."

According to official figures in term years the use of the library by undergraduates has nearly tripled, increasing from 65,718 in 1921-22 to 180,185 in 1927-28. This increase is considered remarkable in view of the nearly stationary registration figures.

Thetotal number of bound volumes in the Library is now 230,463 and there are in addition 83,641 pamphlets.

The Librarian's report closes with the statement that if the University is "to avoid in the very near future a situation in the Library which will affect adversely every department in the University it is essential that the problem of extending the library building be faced without delay."

Isolated Area on Cape Cod to Study Influenza

Special to The Varsity

Harvard—In order to study how influenza spreads, the Harvard Medical School has established an isolation area in five villages of Barnstable County on Cape Cod. These towns will not be quarantined, but as they number perhaps 400 inhabitants apiece, all comings and goings (there are no railroads) can be supervised and the course of the disease inspected.

According to Dr. M. J. Rosenau, Charles Wilder Professor of Preventive Medicine and Hygiene, who is in charge of the work, this will be the first attempt ever made to investigate the spread of influenza through a population, by watching that population during the spread of the disease. It is probable that another region of isolation will be established in the Berkshire Mountains.

"Our ability to control an epidemic is proportional to our knowledge of it," Dr. Rosenau said. "We do not know as yet how it travels from person to person. But we may well find the answer to the whole problem in our isolation area, where every case and every contact that case has had before coming down with the disease will be carefully traced."

Wymwold was the scene of a very peppy tea-dance on Saturday after- noon when some 85 girls supported the W.U.A. by the easy method of taking their boy-friends to dance to the jazzy music dispensed by Stan St. John.

"VARSITY" STILL SUFFERS FROM "FLU EPIDEMIC"

C. J. Trainor III in Infirmary, is Visited by Staff
Delegation

"The Varsity" continues to suffer from the influenza epidemic in the illness of a capable night editor, Cyril J. Trainor of St. Michael's College. Mr. Trainor contracted the dread disease before Christmas and is still confined to the college infirmary. A delegation from the staff secured special permission to visit him yesterday and expressed the hope that he would recover in a few weeks. A presentation was made to the patient after a suitable speech by the Editor-in-Chief. Proceedings closed with a singsong.

MANY JEWISH STARS FOUND IN THEATRE

Traditional Prejudice no Longer a Hindrance to Success

VERY ACTIVE IN STATES

"Some of the most illustrious names on the stage are Jewish," said Mr. S. Goldhar, at the Menorah Discussion Group, held at the Sigma Tau House on Saturday afternoon. "Sarah Bernhardt, French; S. Ansky, Russian, of 'The Dybbuk,' fame; Ferenc Molnar, Austrian, author of 'Lilium' and 'The Swan' are outstanding examples; and some of the best-known names among producers and managers on the United States stage to-day are Jewish."

In post-medieval plays when the Jew was not depicted as a Shylock, he was a usurer, thief, or character of similar and worse qualities. Fanatical anti-Semitism was so deep-rooted as to be almost traditional.

Spain was the home of the earliest Jewish playwrights, but on the whole, active Jewish interest in the stage did not start till quite recently. This was in part due to traditional prejudice against masquerading of any sort. Presentation of plays in Yiddish has been most successful in the United States, where plays typically Jewish have been produced together with translations from Shakespeare, Zola, and other master-writers through the ages.

Hebrew, although used extensively on the Palestine stage, has not been widely popular elsewhere. This, however, is not due to the adaptability of the language, for "The Dybbuk" has proved as great a success in Hebrew as it has in Yiddish and English.

PROF. LOUDON SPEAKS TO ROWING CLUB

Yesterday at 5.00 p.m. the Rowing Club met in the Lecture Room. Some interested non-members were also present. President A. D. Keith, A. Bell, and Prof. T. R. Loudon addressed the meeting. The President outlined the program of the Club and spoke of the difficulties experienced. Art Bell gave the brighter side of rowing and enthused his hearers. Professor Loudon spoke of the chances of having a civic course on the Humber and showed that rowing was not at all detrimental to health, but rather gave one a fine physique.

Wymwold was the scene of a very peppy tea-dance on Saturday afternoon when some 85 girls supported the W.U.A. by the easy method of taking their boy-friends to dance to the jazzy music dispensed by Stan St. John.

FEMININE CHARMS ASSIST CO-EDS IN MAKING GRADES

Sceptics Say it Depends on Individual Professor—
Boys Sometimes Guilty

OHIO STATE AS EXAMPLE

Although Intelligence Scores
Vary Young Women Gain
High Marks Easily

Special to The Varsity
Columbus, Ohio.—The dirt is out. The professors at Ohio State University are being vamped, which is to say they are being "worked." When a high mark is needed to qualify scholastically for a sorority then the heavy intellects of the masculine sex are lubricated with a little feminine personality or "It," and all is well, according to Dean Loretta Rose of George Washington University in a recent article in Plain Talk.

Dean Rose has been making special study of intelligence scores and grading and she contends that various tests taken in widely different regions show that the young women of co-educational institutions have no trouble at all in obtaining grades, although their intelligence scores vary strangely. She says that the two just won't correlate! Dean Rose specifies Ohio State University as a good illustration.

Dean Rose bases her article on statistics. She says: "It is interesting to note a few facts regarding the placing of men and women groups in the intelligence curves. It should be noted that no man with an intelligence score below 85 received a C, but one woman with a score below 84 received a B. Only one man with a score as low as 105 received C and one of these 12 was as low as 95. No man with a score below 125 received a B, but nine women with scores below 125 received B and two of these scored as low as 95."

In conclusion Dean Rose adds: "Sex," "Charm," "IT," or "Personality," is one of those variables in the educational world that must be reckoned with. Even to the scholarly, absent-minded professor, an attractive woman student with sex appeal will always help to make an otherwise dreary classroom a more interesting place and the daily educational grind capable of producing a few vicarious thrills when a feminine student needs a bit of extra attention and service."

Dean Esther A. Gaw of Ohio State is a little sceptical about the whole matter. "It all depends on the individual professor," she says. "There are those who lean toward the pretty (Continued on page 4)

Open Coin Slot Tempts Unscrupulous Students

Special to The Varsity
Easton, Pa.—The coin slot in the public pay telephone at Lafayette college recently was left open when the phone was installed, and as a result all money used in making calls was returned. Not a few students took advantage of this as soon as it became generally known, and the telephone did a thriving business in long distance calls. The boys called home and the girl friends, all over the country, for nothing.

When they returned from the vacation, however, they were somewhat chagrined to learn that the telephone company had traced their calls, and had taken advantage of the vacation to distribute bills for payment. Not a few students are broke.

A QUESTION OF VALUE

There has come to our ears a rumour of a certain college organization which is advertising its production and which, it seems, makes the most exorbitant demands upon the time of its members. Rehearsals are being held twice a day, and at rather inconvenient hours, which forces some of the caste to miss lunch and others to go without their dinner. Doubtless since they have undertaken the production and have advertised its date it is now necessary to do sufficient rehearsing to make the presentation a credit rather than a disgrace to director and caste, but do the results justify the expenditure of so much time and effort?

We assume that the membership of dramatic societies and music clubs is composed principally of those who are interested in the drama or in music. We do not assume, however, that the fact that they are interested in these things must necessarily mean that they want to give up approximately one sixth of their time for one month and a little less than that for another, to rehearsals for a performance which is, usually, destined to fill the coffers of the club and make possible some more elaborate undertaking next year. If people seriously want to devote their lives to the drama or to music they will become professionals and not clutter their stage with lectures and essays and examinations; but if, on the other hand, they are really concerned about their academic work and want to have other interests as a sideline, they will find a less intensive programme than is offered by most college organizations much more suited to their needs.

That the time expended in the preparation and presentation of an elaborate production cannot well be afforded by the average student need not be pointed out. The additional complications of late hours, missed meals and continual nerve strain play havoc with studious habits and make any kind of concentration almost impossible. Perhaps though, these martyred ones are philanthropists, sacrificing themselves to leave a full treasury for their successors. Why they should work so hard to enable those that follow to make the same mistake is beyond our comprehension. But even that incentive to endeavour disappears when we learn that one such society has had a fair sized deficit for at least two years.

It is quite to be expected that many who have become enamoured of the glamour of footlights and grease paint will strenuously deny that the sort of production to which we object is too exacting, but it is almost certain that if they would make up their accounts they would find the largest sum, in time and effort, on the debit side.

VIC WOMEN PRESENTED WITH VALUABLE BOOKS

Mr. Tackaberry Donor of Collection Which Includes Copies of Best Works

Red books, brown books, large and small books, exciting books, stodgy books are at Annesley Hall in the collection which was presented to the girls of Victoria College by the late Mr. Tackaberry. These books, as yet uncatalogued, are packed two deep and include fine editions of Dickens, Thackeray, D'Aubigny and practically all the old masters. On pulling out these sedate volumes, such titles as "The Golden Dog", "The Roman Empire", works of Turner and many autobiographies came to light. Mr. Tackaberry was a book lover of discrimination and after the death of Mrs. Tackaberry he retired and spent most of his time in his library. He collected all the outstanding works, particularly autobiographical, on their publication in late years, and these books form the nucleus for an excellent library. With the furniture in his study these books were bequeathed to Victoria women in memory of Mrs. Tackaberry who worked on the Victoria Women's Association. Also about fifty dollars a year has been provided for the extension and upkeep of the collection, which the college feels is an invaluable addition to their library.

A joyous throng of youths were leaving the little red school-house with the Kruchen step of those leaving a lecture behind, when one with a determined air stepped out in front, baring their way.

"Stop!" he cried, "What do you think of the 'Varsity'?" From among the eloquent words which followed such gutturals as — "I-I and xxx-I" could be detected. The mysterious one jotted them down hastily in a striped note-book advertising "Non-chew Gum", and slinking away was soon lost behind the near by boulder of rock.

Ten minutes later he reappeared outside Victoria College, where he encountered a morbid throng evidently on their way to imbibe knowledge.

"Stop!" cried the unknown in a husky undertone. The morbid crowd gaped around with that dumb expression affected by those believing themselves unnecessarily disturbed.

"How do you spell 'symphysis'?" demanded the stranger leeringly. The morbid crowd's dumb expression became intensified. They shook their heads sadly. They did not know. The unknown jotted down something glumly and withdrew.

It was growing dusk when the mysterious stranger was again seen. This time he was creeping furtively along the campus, behind a dark figure which was also creeping furtively along. In fact they were both creeping furtively. By the time the Press Building was reached furtiveness was at an intense pitch.

Suddenly F.F. No. 1 stopped by a dim light and disengaged a paper from a secret pocket in the back of his collar. He was just laughing nastily at his own cunning, when a hand shot out and seized the subject in his gloating. And here it wasn't F.F. No. 21. In a moment he had grasped its full significance. The paper read: "Thursday. 8 p.m.—Meeting of Seven Occult Sociates."

"Who are you?" demanded F.F. No. 1, realizing his master. The former smiled a maddening superior smile. "I," he said, "am your long lost Diogenes." Pansy Chirnside.

I cannot give you anything but a rainbow round my shoulder, Sonny Boy—they wear 'em up at Harvard, they wear 'em down at Yale—and it fits me like this, dahdahdah, dah, dah—get out and get under the moon for I don't mind the grey skies since you taught me how to love you, now teach me to do the racoon. Sad results, Dee, of a song writer's whoopee—Billie the Binger.

Speaking in the first person, we see that General Slaschoff, one-time general of White armies in Russia is now obit. Personally, we should hate to have had to serve in his army—somebody might get excited and lose their head.

Short Shots

UPTOWN—THE WOMAN IN DISPUTE

Good enough! Another war story, but Austrian, novel, intelligent and good. Norma Talmadge is still an appealing slip of a thing—in a soft light. And note—a soprano appears on the stage who can really sing. Millennium!

B. D. B.

EMPIRE: TOO MUCH FAMILY
This is sheer hokey! By far the worst comedy we have seen at the Empire! Its peak is reached when a boy rushes across stage with his trousers down—very funny if you think absence of clothing amusing.

R. H. L.

LOEW'S

"A Lady of Chance" is the old story of a scheming adventures and a young fellow rich in ambition but poor in money, with Norma Shearer at her best as the adventures. A solo by George du Lanne is the best of a rather poor stage bill.

G. G. B.

SHEA'S

Ken Murray is all over the show through three acts of vaudeville that contain some good dancing. He has the showmanship to handle the stage and carries the audience.

"Naughty Baby," the feature picture is the usual sweet daddy and sugar baby hokum but amusing enough.

Three Dimensions Picture Puzzle Solved

Special to the Varsity

Dallas, Tex.—A Dallas business man believes he has solved the problem of three dimension motion pictures—a problem that has puzzled picture technicians since the invention of the silent drama.

L. Elliott Randall, former instructor in physical chemistry at Rice Institute, Texas, is the inventor of the process by which he says motion pictures with "depth" or a third dimension, may be produced.

Randall already has several inventions in the field of mechanics and chemistry to his credit, and is the holder of several scientific degrees from Rice. His father before him also was an inventor.

Color photography and "talky" devices have contributed much to the realism of the screen art and Randall believes he holds the long-sought-for secret whereby screen enactments can be given "depth."

We read recently that deaf and dumb mutes are learning to sing by waving their arms and body in interpretation of music. We imagine an attempt to interpret a modern jazz song would closely resemble a severe case of St. Vitus dance.

Tuxedos and formal will be worn by members of the senior class at Oregon State college in taking pictures for college annual.

LIBRARY CLAIMS MANY STUDENTS

New Books, From Shaw to Buchan, Prove Delightful Snare

NEW HISTORICAL PICTURE

If January is here can May be far behind? "Not far enough to be pleasant!" say Varsity students, if we may judge by the large number of them found diligently studying in the Library reading rooms these days. Evidently one after-effect of the flu and Christmas is an active conscience and more work.

The Women's reading room still looks a little unfamiliar in its new garb of historical pictures. There are over one hundred and twenty-five of these, presented this fall by Lady Willson. Lady Willson, formerly Marjorie MacMurchy, was at one time an assistant in University Library.

The shelf for new books will always prove a delightful snare for those who have a weakness for its attractions. We noticed a new book by H. G. Wells and one by Shaw—for the "Intelligent Women" of Varsity? Those who saw Clemence Dane's "A Bill of Divorcement" at the Royal Alexandra last week are now on the trail of her latest "The Babyns" which the Library has now. C. H. Beard's "Whither Mankind", a study of modern thought in science, is growing popular as is Virginia Woolf's unusual novel "Orlando". Mrs. Bott and Dr. Blatz of the School for Child Study on St. George have recently written a book on their work with the pre-school child. Finally, John Buchan's latest "Montrose" is due to appear shortly to no doubt lure many a well meaning student from his notes.

Undergraduates of Princeton will establish a school in Labrador as a result of interest shown by students in the Grenfell Mission there during the past summer. The school will be supported both financially and in service by the students.

INTERMEDIATES DEFEAT OSHAWA SEXTET TO WIN FIRST GAME

SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-morrow night we shall see the Tricolour of Queen's under somewhat new conditions. This past fall while the crowded stands shouted their approbation the Red, Yellow and Blue clad warriors from the Limestone City trotted on the field to do battle for the honour and glory of their Alma Mater. Two old rivals meeting in Intercollegiate football. But to-morrow night's fixture will see the Blue and White and the Tricolour in a game of the O.H.A. Senior series. Queen's saw fit to withdraw from the Intercollegiate Hockey Union and this winter cast their hockey lot in the Ontario Association. This is the first meeting of the two institutions of learning under the new conditions and it should be colourful.

If the Blue and White seniors can pull down the bacon to-morrow night it will mean that they have defeated every team in the group. Varsity should in the very least find a place in the play-offs. The way the Blue are going at present it will take nothing short of a cyclone to stop them.

Coach "Red" Porter has some mighty good material at the start of the season and has certainly made good use of it. The regular forward line of Stewart, McMullen and Harley is working very well together. Murray and Marshall the Newmarket "gold-dust twins" provide a nice relief pair. The forwards have the necessary punch in the pinch and back-check like demons. Whitehead and Paul form a hard-checking defence with great offensive power. Both are good rushers and Whitehead packs a wicked shot. Paul, his side-kick behind the blue line, gives promise of developing into a sensational player. Snyder in goal, has been a fixture for several years and right now is playing a mighty sweet game.

To-night the Hart House Gymnasium will witness the play-off for the Women's Interfaculty Basketball Championship. This is a sudden-death game, necessitated by the postponement of the games by the "flu" last term. The girls play a smart game and there is plenty of material for the Intercollegiate team.

Basketball Players

Players on the Varsity Senior, Intermediate, or Junior Basketball teams are not permitted to play on their faculty basketball teams.

The University of Kansas has an official hostess to act as chaperone at college parties. This replaces the former custom of having faculty members and house chaperones to act as hostesses at social affairs.

Varsity Ahead at Finish After Close Game

Strengthened Line-up Shows To Good Advantage On Whitby Ice

Special to the Varsity
Whitby Jan. 13.—A greatly improved Varsity Intermediate team defeated the strong Oshawa aggregation here to-night in a tightly contested game by the score of 2-1. The closeness of the score only further indicates the tenacity of the struggle. The Blue and White boys were out to win after losing their first two games of the season and were on their toes every second.

The presence of Red Statham and Graham, who joined the "Seconds" for the first time to-night was felt and the students from the Queen City seemed imbued with new confidence. As usual Herb Little showed his technique as a goalie to great advantage and MacMillan and Smith worked hard.

Varsity's line-up was as follows: Centre, Statham; wings, Carrick and Smith; defence, MacMillan and Graham; goal, Little; alternates, Leak, Clancy and Evans.

FIRST LEAGUE GAME ON THURSDAY NIGHT

Varsity at Osgoode Hall Opens Intermediate League

BLUES HAVE STRONG TEAM

The first league fixture of the Intermediate Intercollegiate Basketball League will take place on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock. Varsity will be the guests of Osgoode Hall and the game looms up as an exciting one. The legalities have a real team this year and are not likely to be a door-mat for other teams to step on. It is understood that they have Turville from Western, two players from Windsor and others. Frank Turville is the former Western player who starred on the Argonaut Rugby backfield last fall.

Varsity will not be at full strength as several of their players have not signed their eligibility certificates. But they will have a strong team on hand

BOXING CLUB ARRANGES TOUR

Trials to be Held on Thursday and Friday Afternoon

TEAM LEAVES ON 25th

Mr. W. H. Hills, Intercollegiate Heavyweight Boxing Champion, holder of the Canadian Amateur Championship and president of the Boxing, Wrestling and Fencing Clubs, announces that the Varsity B.W. & F. Team leaves on the 25th to meet the champions of West Point on the 26th and two days later the stars of the New York Athletic Club in New York City, with sight-seeing in New York also on the program.

President Hills insists that there are places on the team for everyone. Trials are being held Thursday and Friday afternoon. The winner in each class goes on the New York trip while the runner-up in each class will be sent "down" to meet the Ontario Agriculture College Champions at Guelph. An extra man is being taken in one of the lighter classes on account of West Point not having a boxer in the 112 lb. class.

"We have the nucleus of a fine team with our experienced men," said the president. "But we need everyone out the next few nights to get the right man in the right place."

Chris Newton, Dr. Gossage and Joe Mahon are making wonderful progress with the boxers who have reported and many fast and furious bouts are on the card each afternoon. Coaches Martin and Durnan are getting good results with the wrestling squad and the elimination bouts will be keenly contested.

Miss Gladys Smith, vocalist, and Miss Ev. Felleis, pianist, were the artists at the Wymwood musicale on Sunday evening.

which can be depended upon to give a good account of themselves. The team that will likely represent Varsity will be chosen from the following: H. Devitt, G. Loughlin, G. Cook, A. Pasternak, E. Grainger, H. Riggs, J. Stevenson, H. Foxe and E. Davey. The team is one that is worthy of the support of the student body and a large crowd is expected out to lend their vocal support.

QUEENS AND VARSITY IN O.H.A. FIXTURE

Limestone City Squad Should Give Blue and White Acid Test

Varsity at Top of Heap

To-morrow night the Tricolour of Old Queen's will invade Varsity under somewhat new circumstances. For years Queen's and the University of Toronto have hooked-up in Intercollegiate duels but to-morrow will see them both taking the ice against each other as contenders for the Senior O.H.A. hockey championship.

The Queen's team is composed of players from the institution of learning bearing that name and added to these are star players who in past seasons have decorated the Intermediate and Junior O.H.A. teams in the Limestone City. These men have been welded together into a formidable machine, one which should give the strong Blue and White sextet the well-known acid test. The power of the Tricolour squad was very recently shown when they downed the fast Preston aggregation by a score of 5-2. The best that the Blue could do with the Prestonites was a two-goal victory. This indicates that to-morrow's game should furnish a real old-time battle.

Varsity is sitting pretty at the top of the heap by virtue of three wins and no losses. A win to-morrow night will put them well on the way for a play-off berth and will keep the other teams working hard to prevent the Blue from running away in a race for the top of the ladder.

ST. HILDA'S AND U.C. JR'S TO DECIDE CHAMPIONSHIP

Thrilling Game Expected When Rival Sextets Meet on Basketball Court

University College Junior Basketball team meet St. Hilda's to-morrow night at Hart House to decide who shall win the coveted Junior T's. This is a sudden death game and everything depends on it. Both teams have been playing good basketball this year and the game promises to be an exciting one. It is expected that Wilma Hazlett, Louise Crouch for U.C. and Sally Ballard, Bea Simmons and Fran Crooks for the "Saints" should star. The probable line up will be—U.C.—Wilma Hazlett, Jean Allen, Louise Crouch, Betty Thomas, Alice Grant, Grace Buck, Ester Breithaus, L. Harvey.

St. Hilda's—B. Burbridge, M. Lewis, B. Simmons, S. Ballard, F. Crooks, M. Johnson, R. Harrison, M. Dickinson, Slater.

MEDS DEFEAT VIC TO OPEN SEASON

First Inter-Faculty Basketball Game of Year a See Saw

MEDS' FINAL RUSHES WIN

Jr. Meds. defeated Jr. Vic. 22-13 in the first inter-faculty basketball game this year. Despite the final score the game was a continual see-saw and Meds' final rushes netted them enough baskets to clinch the game.

Vic started off with a bang with a field goal and a foul shot. Meds could not get going and resorted to pretty close checking which slowed up the game, and there was no scoring at all. The Meds suddenly came to life and with a little combination play sunk three baskets in quick order. Half-time ended 6-3 with the Physicians on the long end.

The second half saw some nice combination play by both teams. Implored by the rival camps of rooters, the teams took plenty of shots, some of which got through the baskets. First one team then another was on top, until Meds let loose and piled up the score just before the final whistle blew.

For Vic, Vaughan, Bowles and Barr were the best and for Meds, Carr, Garbe, Scott and Kasler stood out. Jr. Vic: Vaughan (5), Bowles (2), Clark, Barr (5), Barrett, Cowle, Davidson.

Jr. Meds: Carr (6), Connor, Scott, (4), Garbe (3), Heller (4), Kasler (3), Jessel (2), Elliott.

Purpose of Education is to Get One's Background, States Mr. Bunkley Shuter

By N. J. DeWitt
"What is the purpose of college?" we asked Mr. Bunkley Shuter gently. Bunkley, as you know, is one of the most promising young men in Aurora; he is willing to promise anything anybody. He goes to college and enlivens the columns of your paper, the Aurora Borealis, with his amazing insight into and keen perceptions of soul shaking problems which confront the young man of to-day.

"What is the purpose of college?" repeated Bunkley, shooting peas at the statue of Sir John A. Macdonald in the public square. "Why, Gregory, it is to get one's background."

"Mercy sakes!" we trembled, "how painful that sounds!"

"Are you getting simple?" asked Bunkley, sternly.
"No," we replied, "but what do they grind your back with? Sandpaper?"
"Stop it, or I'll call the bug wagon," said Bunkley, manly. "I refer to breadth of culture; to atmosphere, ideals, traditions. Why, I want to college to have my horizon opened."

"You should have gone to the hospital."

Gold Watch Lost 24 Years Found in Pawnshop

Special to the Varsity
St. Paul—Lost 24 years ago, a $400 diamond-studded gold watch was back in the possession of its owners here today and William Conway, pawnshop inspector, was hailed by his mates as the "man with the memory of an elephant."

The inspector while on his regular rounds of the pawnshops observed in the show case of J. S. Samuelson a woman's watch with a diamond crescent on the back. He consulted his record book and confirmed his conviction that it was the watch lost 24 years before by Miss Callihan.

Students of the Illinois College of Agriculture consumed ten bushels of peanuts, four kegs of cider and five bushels of apples at their annual peanut banquet.

The student court of Ohio State University shows no favoritism. Recently a pretty co-ed was suspended from the attendance at classes for one week because she sped her automobile 50 miles an hour over campus roads. She pleaded guilty to the charge of speeding, but denied she went that fast.

No Work for Discipline Committee at Seattle

Special to the Varsity
Seattle, Washington.—If the amount of work that the faculty discipline committee has to do is any gauge of the morality of University students, collegians at Washington must be raising wings, President M. Lyle Spencer revealed this morning.

It seems that the discipline committee met just once last quarter, and when the meeting had been called to order there was nothing on the docket. So, after exchanging felicitations and wise cracks about the "angelic" student body, the committee adjourned sine die.

"What?"
"You should have had it done at the hospital."

"What done?"
"You said you had your horizon opened."

"Well, a horizon in this case meant the limit to your scope of talent and observation; it refers to the length of your vision."

"Oh," we replied, "I understand."

"Not very much," said Bunkley. "But returning to our theme, college makes one broad-minded. If there's anything I can't stand, it's a narrow-minded person who can't get the other person's viewpoint. I can't see how they get that way at all."

"Bunkley," we said, "did you say college had increased your length and breadth of vision?"

"Yes," said Bunkley, proudly.

"The trouble with you Bunkley," we said, getting ready to run, in case our friend should get intolerant, "is that you need glasses."

Bunkley glared. "I'll show you how they do it, Knox," he cried. We ran for our life.

Swedish Bread Stops Squadron of Men-of-War

Special to the Varsity
Stockholm—How a package of Swedish "Knaekkebroed," a popular kind of thin, hard rye bread, caused a whole squadron of men-of-war, going at full speed, to stop far out at sea, is being told in Stockholm.

The admiral of a foreign naval detachment, visiting Stockholm, had taken a fancy to the palatable "knaekkebroed," and ordered a few packages. The bread was not delivered in time before the departure of the fleet. On learning this the manager of the bakery shop borrowed a racing boat, took the bread with him, set out at full speed, and caught up with the squadron.

He waved frantically with his bread and the ships were stopped. The bread was delivered to the laughing admiral, and the shop keeper contentedly and proudly raced back to Stockholm.

The contention of older graduates that the present generation of undergraduates pays little or no attention to books is scarcely borne out by the fact that seventeen hundred books in the University library have to be either renewed or replaced this year. Of this seventeen hundred, two hundred are permanently lost.

Women students at the University of Texas are given motor ability tests in the regular physical training classes to interest them in their own motor ability, to assist in grouping the students in classes and to assist the instructors in giving grades.

BY-GONE DAYS RECALLED AS GUNS BARK FORTH

Modern Methods of Warfare Prove Too Much for Lone Gunman in Encounter

Special to the Varsity
Denver, Colo.—This section of the West, once noted for its forthright method of settling disputes with pistols, is having its first experience with the modern practices of eastern gunmen.

The style of gun-play which originated in the mining camps—and still prevails to some degree—called for a face-to-face encounter. The honors usually went to the man who first wrapped his index finger about the trigger of his weapon.

Sometimes the verdict was a bloodless one, with the victim of the draw shuffling off his shamefacedly. But in many cases the contestants blazed away right heartily at each other, with fatal results.

Now Denver has the screened automobile, the hidden gunmen, the ambush and the deadly machine gun. All of these accoutrements of modern killing were brought into play against Eddie Diamond.

Eddie, a brother of Jack Diamond, involved in the Arnold Rothstein case in New York, is a fight promoter, according to his own description. He was fired upon by three men from a moving car. Two gangsters were arrested and a police check-up showed they had criminal records in eastern cities under various aliases.

Eddie Diamond cannot imagine, at least for publication, why anyone should want to kill him. He is a nervous, harassed-looking individual. He gives the impression that he is in constant fear.

Diamond is not lacking in bravery or whatever it is that sustains a man in a fight. When bullets rained about him he ducked, reached for a gun and fired back. Probably, if he had lived a half century ago, he would not have minded meeting his enemies in the open, shot for shot. But the modern machine-gun, automatic machine rifles and such equipment have him worried.

This modern type of gang warfare does not appeal to the west. The code of killers of the past seems always to have contained a concession that the victims should at least be allowed to see who was poking lead in their direction. Perhaps this was a bit of egotism, founded in pride of marksmanship, but the record of frontier duels and impromptu shootings show a strain of sportsmanship entirely lacking in the gangster methods.

girl, but at the same time there are those who are so opposed to a girl's receiving a grade on her personal attractions that they absolutely refuse to give a pretty girl a grade."

And while we are speaking of girls vamping grades, Dean Gaw points out that the opposite sex is not altogether guiltless. Frequently a clever boy will learn the likes and dislikes and hobbies of his professor and will seemingly become so interested in what the professor likes that the professor will find it impossible to give him a low mark.

had a real future for public service, and was not a "mare's nest." Mr. Sifton said that only the Liberal party in this province would stop the diversion. He defined Liberalism as "freeing the mind from superstition and prejudice."

At the conclusion of his address, Mr. Sifton answered the questions of several Club members in regard to points brought out therein.

IRISH BARDS SING OF FAITH AND IRELAND SAYS IRISH AUTHOR

Verse of National Poet Moore Embodies Spirit of Music For Irishmen

TWO SCHOOLS OF POETRY

Lennox Robinson, Celebrated Dublin Dramatist Delivers Interesting Address

"I do not intend to criticize Irish poetry closely because I believe that close criticism although it may stimulate an admiration for the technical perfection of the poem kills its spiritual value," said Lennox Robinson, noted Irish dramatist and playwright in Hart House Theatre last night.

Mr. Robinson went on to discuss the various groups and schools of Irish poets and quoted in his own charming style a poem or two from each. In the rendition of these one could not help but catch the Irish spirit and movement in every poem.

The Irish poets did not begin to write in English until the latter half of the eighteenth century. The first group was made up of Parnell, Goldsmith and Swift. These three although Irish by birth had lived most of their lives in England and their poetry had no distinctively Irish note.

The next group who lived about 1840 was perhaps the greatest Ireland had ever produced. They were Moore, Mangen and Ferguson. No true Irishman with an ear for music could forgive Moore's poetry dispassionately because for him it was associated with beautiful music. Ferguson's poetry had a distinctive Irish note in its movement and in its beautiful internal matching of consonants.

Ireland had two great poetical subjects, religion and patriotism. To the Irish the unseen world was always near and much of their religious verse was made up of fairy poetry. From the unrest and unhappiness of political defeat had come a strong stream of patriotic verse.

There were at present two schools of poetry in Ireland. One of these was engaged in writing poetic translations of early Gaelic verse, the other busy writing original poetry of Irish life.

MONTREAL EXPERIMENTERS SOLVE ICEBERG MENACE

McGill Savant Soon to Embark For North to Test Worth of New Flares

Special to the Varsity

Montreal—Conquest of the iceberg menace, long the concern of steamships in the north Atlantic, has been approached by scientific research, a product of which is a system of flares that have been demonstrated in the harbor of Montreal.

Although dangers of striking these floating islands of ice have been considerably minimized, vessels still encounter delay through stoppages in fog within the iceberg zone.

Professor Hoard T. Barnes, of McGill University, an authority on ice and its formations, will soon embark on a new scientific adventure to Newfoundland, Labrador and Greenland, utilizing flare-projection to solve his problem, and make of the St. Lawrence a more efficient water route.

Some eight or ten vivid flares were 5.30 o'clock recently, when Dr. Barnes's yacht had reached a dark area in the harbor.

MARRIAGE KILLS STUDY SAYS SOUTHERN DOCTOR

Rules Married Undergraduates No Longer Connected With College

Marriage and higher education are incompatible, thinks Dr. S. S. Baker of Washington and Jefferson College. Accordingly, he has decreed that from February 4 of this year, any student who contracts a marriage automatically ceases to belong to the institution.

He contends that a wife is a responsibility that detracts from a student's concentration on his studies. The new ruling may materially affect the career of Russell McMahon Smith, prominent Washington and Jefferson athlete, who is married to Miss Marjorie Jaquemin, a co-ed of the University of Kansas.

WOMEN UNDERGRADS PLAN THEATRE NIGHT

$1,000 Objective Sought by Sale of Candy and Programs at Theatre

OPPOSED TO DRIVE SYSTEM

The suggestion to hold a "Theatre Night" under the auspices of the Women's Undergraduate Association of University College, met with unanimous favour at the Mass Meeting held in the Union on Tuesday afternoon.

Discussion concerning the advisability of this method for earning shekels for the W.U.A. coffers, as opposed to a "Two Weeks Drive," followed. The latter suggestion was rejected because it was feared there would be lack of co-operation on the part of the women.

The President informed the meeting that the Empire Theatre offered the best features, and with the selling of candy and programmes in addition, the assets should total $1,000.00, which was the amount earned in 1928 at the Casa Loma Bridge.

An interesting suggestion was made that the University women union. Concerning programmes, it was moved by Miss Blanche Paterson that Miss Irvin Westerman take charge of this part of the business, thus relieving the executive of some of the responsibility. A vote of confidence to leave the arrangement of the remainder of the details to the executive was moved.

Two interesting activities of the W.U.A. will be the musicale to be held on Sunday at the Union from four to five o'clock, and the Oratorical Contest sponsored by Saint Margaret's College, offering a prize of $20, and to be held Wednesday, February 6th.

MINNESOTA STUDENTS VOTE ON 'COLLEGE HUMOUR'

Minneapolis, Minnesota—Because it is believed that College Humor has sensationalized its picture of school life to such an extent that much adverse criticism was levelled against the universities, and that it has also injured the financial standing of the student publications by misrepresenting them to the advertisers, questionnaires to determine what percentage of them read College Humor have been distributed among the students of the University of Minnesota.

This is being done also to refute the argument presented by College Humor to its advertisers that it enjoys a large circulation among college students, and to aid in selling advertising by college publications.

VARSI DONS DENY COEDS USE CHARMS TO EXTRACT MARKS

'Never Vamped Yet' Says One While Another Styles Idea 'Nonsense'

AMERICAN NOT CANADIAN

Charm Much Less Enlivening Than Female Intelligence in Classroom

"I have never been vamped by any designing co-ed myself, nor have I heard any member of the Faculty complain of being vamped," Professor Cochrane told "The Varsity" when interviewed as to the effect of feminine charm in the lecture-room. The Professor who was hurrying to attend a meeting stopped long enough to add, "The co-eds of the University of Toronto don't capitalize their charm and beauty. Such articles as printed in the 'Varsity' are decidedly American and have no application in Toronto."

Professor Lane of Victoria admitted that while there was a little fallacy in the article the statistics were striking. He thinks that a charming feminine presence in a class has an unconscious effect not only on the professor but on the class as a whole. There is no preference whatever when exams are the question, though Professor Lane thinks this is a matter entirely depending on the individual. Some professors deliberately steel themselves against charm and instead of marking leniently mark severely.

"This is mad, quite nonsense," exclaimed Professor Bennett as he read the article. Theoretically it may be true and working during the term but at the annual exams it is impossible. Personally intelligence makes a classroom less dreary than charm. During a lecture is no time to overflow with charm—such a thing belongs to the drawing-room.

"The article is ridiculous and I am surprised at 'The Varsity's' printing it. If there is any such thing as feminine charm influencing a professor it doesn't happen in Toronto though it may in the States where it also probably happens that a woman lecturer is more lenient to a handsome man student as a man lecturer to charming women students."

BELUCOSE MAIDENS STAGE REVOLUTION AT ARGYLL HOUSE

Fire Alarm Ushers in Deluge As Orators Inflammate Passions of Marauding Co-eds

EAR-SPLITTING SHREIKS

Fair Soph Hauled Downstairs Where Howling Mob Strips Room of Equipment

Sounds of raging revelry were heard at Argyll House last week-end, with a melodious accompaniment of clanging fire-alarms and sloshing water. Figures flitted hither and yon threatening helpless seniors who chanced to be in the vicinity of the charge. A revolution had occurred when the upper floor staged an attack on the lower floor, which resulted by locking its doors while freshettes out for vengeance raged up and down the halls.

It is rumored that provocation was given to a group from the upper floor by a quart of water poured over the stair-rail on their trustfully-upturned countenances. The situation was not bettered when this same group was blamed unjustly for ringing the fire-alarm.

Orators inflamed the rest of the upper floor while scouts pounced upon an unsuspecting but suspected soph and hauled her downstairs by the feet, thus causing various and painful effects and a limp.

Hostilities commenced with the ringing of the fire-bell. The upper floor rushed down, dragged in the Argyll fighting-garb, and armed with water, besieged the denizens of the lower regions, isolating them in two of the rooms. A rescue attempt by the "Wing" party was frustrated by will-power, superior force and water. The howling mob then descended on an important room, stripped it of equipment, which was borne off to the unholy upper regions, leaving dire ruin behind. Some late dancers coming in thought a cyclone had struck the place and journeyed upstairs with tokens of good-will, which were deposited at various doors. Ear-splitting shrieks were rendered in various keys to entertain the sleepers.

Shattered nerves were restored a few days later under the soothing influence of enforced law and order.

DEATH OF DR. MABEE LOSS TO MEDICINE

Loss of Eminent Torontonians Keenly Felt in Medical Circles of City

The Faculty of Medicine sustained another loss in the death recently of Dr. O. R. Mabey, Ph.D., M.D., C.M.M.C. He was well-known in local medical circles, being assistant surgeon in the General Hospital, chief medical officer of the Sun Life Assurance Co., and demonstrator in surgery at the University of Toronto.

Born in Victoria, Ontario, he was educated at Simcoe High School and McGill University. He graduated as a gold medalist in 1906. After acting as house surgeon and assistant pathologist at the Boston City Hospital, he came to Toronto. For some time he was assistant pathologist at the Toronto General Hospital.

During the war, Dr. Mabey was attached to the Canadian Army Medical Corps, serving in the capacity of captain. His death followed a short illness at his house, 419 Bloor St. W.

DR. DE WITT RETURNS TO VIC. IN AUTUMN

Acting Professor of Latin at Cornell During Year Leave of Absence

FAME HAS SPREAD

Dr. N. W. DeWitt, former Dean of Arts of Victoria College, who has been lecturing at Cornell University, will return to Toronto to resume his duties in September. Dr. DeWitt obtained leave of absence to go to the American University, as acting professor of Latin for one year.

He has been a prominent member of the staff of Victoria College for twenty years, and will be welcomed back by faculty and undergraduates alike. Dr. DeWitt has been head of the Latin Department since 1921, and under the old constitution of Victoria College was Dean of the Faculty of Arts for a number of years. Due to the reorganization of Victoria into separate Arts and Theological Colleges, this office has been discontinued, and in its place is the office of principal of Victoria College, now filled by Chancellor Bowles as acting principal.

Dr. DeWitt's ability to make even a dead language interesting is well-known. His fame has spread to the American colleges, and he has received special summer appointments at Iowa State University, University of Chicago and Cornell.

TARDY WOMEN DEBARRED FROM BREAKFAST AT U.C.

Women's Union Takes Drastic Step in Interests of Staff

The Women's Union of University College has not yet broken its New Year's resolution to instill the virtue of promptness into the co-ed. A sorry lesson was learned the first morning after Christmas when the dining-room doors remained closed to all cafeterias and pleas of tardy breakers-of-fast.

Miss S. Boyd, secretary of the Women's Union, explained to the Varsity yesterday that this move was taken out of consideration for the staff. It was impossible for them to get their work done when the breakfast hour was extended.

ENGINEER'S SOCIETY MAKES NOTED JURIST HONORARY MEMBER

Mr. Justice Riddell Receives Rare Token of Esteem From Schoolmen

OLDEST LIVING GRADUATE

Holds Many Degrees and Was Formerly Member Toronto University Senate

The Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, Justice of Appeal in the Supreme Court of Canada has been elected an honorary member of the Engineering Society in a meeting of that Society, Mr. J. D. Wright, the president stated to "The Varsity."

"This is quite an honor to be shown to any man," said Mr. Wright. "The Society is limited by its constitution to twenty honorary members. It is some years since any have been elected, and in fact I do not know of any living honorary members. The executive of the Society must have an unanimous vote, and the members in an open meeting must have a five-sixths majority in favor of the election of an honorary member."

Justice Riddell, who addressed the annual School dinner last Fall is said to be the oldest living graduate of a scientific or practical course from this University. He graduated from Victoria University with a B.A. in 1874, being a prize winner in Mathematics and Natural Science. In 1876 he obtained the B.Sc. degree and in 1878 the L.L.B. In addition Justice Riddell holds degrees from Syracuse University, Trinity University, Hartford, McMaster, Lafayette and Northwestern Universities. For a time he was Mathematics master at Ottawa Normal School.

Justice Riddell graduated from Ossage Hall as a Gold Medalist, and was called to the bar in 1883. He is a former member of the Senate of the University of Toronto, and also a former member of the Senate and Board of Regents of Victoria University, and was for some years examiner in Roman Constitutional and International Law.

TEMPERANCE PROPAGANDA UNEARTHED AT HARVARD

Dead River Time Table of '50 Seems Work of Pre-Volstead Wit

Special to the Varsity

Cambridge, Mass.—One of the earliest pieces of temperance propaganda in the "History of Liquor" collection of the Baker Library here is an interesting time-table of the Dead River Grand Trunk Railway, which was printed by Macdonald and Company of New York City about 1850. The following excerpts are explanatory notes following details of the route:

"All trains will stop at Reformationburg if passengers wish to leave at that station. But all persons so stopping will forfeit their through ticket to Perdition."

"Tickets are sold by all Sample Rooms and Rum Holes, they being our only authorized agents."

GRIT AND TORY

Four years ago in the heat of the Dominion election campaign of 1925 an editorial appeared in "The Varsity" entitled "Are University Students Muzzled?" The editorial noted that the University of Toronto Liberal Club had decided not to take any action, pass any motions, or express any opinions, as a club, upon the current election. The reason given for this attitude was that no university organization ought to express opinion of a partisan nature.

With this view "The Varsity" was inclined to disagree. It urged the University of Toronto Liberal Club to express freely the opinion of its members and went on to say that "there ought to be a Conservative Club doing likewise". At that time the latter organization did not exist but the founding of the Macdonald-Cartier Club supplied the need. It might have been thought that the delicacy of the Liberal Club during that famous election was due to the absence of a Conservative Club. But such apparently was not the case, for the Liberal Club is now much less energetic in its espousal of the party platform than the Macdonald-Cartier Club.

The difference between the two clubs seems to lie in the fact that the young Conservatives are more closely allied to the active party organization than the members of their sister club. Their meetings are frankly Conservative party meetings at which secret sessions may be held and people with pencils, paper and a pertinent expression are banished into exterior darkness. The Liberal Club, on the other hand, still claims that its meetings are in the nature of an open forum. As a matter of fact the speakers who have addressed this club during the year, the leader of the provincial opposition and Mr. Harry Sifton have both indicated a course of action to the members in which they might take a strong partisan line of conduct.

To us the policy of the Macdonald-Cartier Club seems much the more reasonable of the two. If we wished to have an open discussion club it would not be necessary to divide into party sections. If we are going to have partisan affiliations during our university course let us see to it that they are practical and of a healthy balance.

Too many students arrive at the time when they are expected to cast a vote without having considered for themselves the platforms of the candidates between whom they must choose. They may not know the candidates personally and when they come to consider their platforms they may not be able to find either one entirely satisfactory so that prior deliberation is essential to discovering the better of the two. Unfortunately, too, thousands of people vote only in response to local personal cries, so that they are unable to take the larger view which comes from previous study of the question.

The objection may be raised, and often is raised by students, that partisan alignment will contribute nothing to the broader political education of the young citizen. But we are confident that the experience gained therefrom will prove of more value than theoretical training. The great need is that those who do not intend to take an active part in politics should study political questions as sharply as those who do, in order that they may be able to check up on their leaders in the course. It is alarming to find the undue proportion of students in political science that take an interest in politics. It is only to be expected that these students should follow practical illustrations of their studies but it is desirable also that the other students should be equally interested.

A campaign therefore should be started among all the students of the university to recruit members for the Macdonald-Cartier Club and for the Liberal Club. Then let these clubs march forward, swelled by the hordes of neophytes, to the destiny worthy of the constitutional history, of Britain.

FRATRICIDE

The lifeless body of Algie Wootz, a big, fat man, has been discovered under the bed in his room at Moron Yodel Hi house.

Chapter 2

The captain of the city detectives turned to chief Thugg of the campus police, "and what leads you to believe that Wootz has been murdered?" he asked.

"We rolled him over and found a knife in his back," the other replied. The captain pondered for a moment. "By Gad, I think you are right! I had entertained the theory that death was due to colic, acute halitosis or some such malady. — Describe the knife."

"It was an ordinary silver plated table knife with the name Pluto Cafe inscribed on the handle," answered the chief. The captain snorted in triumph. "Find this man Pluto Cafe, apparently a foreigner, and you will have the murderer." He pressed a button on his desk and sprung a button on his vest and immediately the best sleuths of the city began donning false whiskers and watch fobs in preparation for the man hunt. "Let us wait," said the captain confidently. And they did.

Two days later they received a phone call. "No. 48 reporting," began the voice, "we find that Pluto Cafe is not a Frenchman but a Greek restaurant. What shall we do?" The captain sighed. "Make it a toasted ham," he replied sadly, hanging up the receiver. "Baffled! This must be the work of a fiend!"

Around the campus the murder of Moron house had been carefully hushed up, and no one knew about the affair except four of the daily newspapers. The brethren, it is true, began wearing their pins on the insides of their vests, but otherwise university life went on unchanged.

Meanwhile chief Thugg of the campus police worked continually on the case, and he was frequently seen by astonished homecomers at four o'clock in the morning, crawling up and down Fraternity Row on his hands and knees and shooting peas at the windows of Moron house. What was his motive? Or did he know?

Occult Socratic Replies

Editor, The Varsity:

Dear Sir:—

As one of the Seven Occult Socratics, I do beg to be allowed to remove the shroud of mystery from my person and refute and condemn the tabloid, yellow journal tactics of your paper in giving such an untrue and undignified account of the so-called Secret Society of Seven Occult Socratics. Why is it, Sir, that you allow such account to be published in your truth giving paper? It seems to me that you would have wished to keep the standard high instead of lowering it to the depths of rot and bunk.

What reporter or special feature writer allowed his imagination to run riot and give to the student body such a fabulous account of a mere conjectural happening? I might say that this Society has not met this year so how could a reporter gain admittance to one of our meetings? The reporter must feel that he is a worthy sire, for he states he was initiated into this society. Never fear, sir, any person who cannot stick to the truth will never lay claim to the title of philosopher. I might state that this society meets in no cell filled with ashes but in dignified quarters and subjects are discussed worthy of discussion by budding philosophers. This opportunity of talking over with one's fellow philosopher friends problems of current philosophical interest is one that will long be of benefit to the Seven members.

Where does "The Varsity" get the idea that we have a constitution? We have none, nor intend to have any. No written laws grace our abode. Each member knows the password, that is sufficient. Why be bothered with superfluous constitutions which are only dead letters? "The Varsity" says that the mystery is solved. (Big laugh) All the solving involves is finding out the members names, but "The Varsity" immediately begins to give an account of some length of absolute rot. One thing I will give the reporter great credit for a wonderful imagination. I hope "The Varsity" does not lose too much sleep over the matter or put too many reporters on our trail because the localization of reporters on one subject will greatly lessen the material quality of this otherwise truthful and useful paper.

Respectfully Submitted,

One of the Seven Occult Socratics.

WATER POLO FOR WOMEN

LATEST WHIM OF SEX

Wars and rumours of wars! Before long there may be at Toronto some women water-polo fiends. The Varsity had a sneaking suspicion that perhaps it was only another idle suggestion flung into the thin air. But on inquiring from the powers-that-be, it stems not at all out of the question. Miss Cochrane, swimming instructress at the Lillian Massey said, "If the girls can secure one of the two nights available a week, and are not afraid of confined quarters, there is no reason why they cannot have their fun." One of the regular swimmers was quite taken with the idea and could not see that close quarters would cool down the ardour. "It might just prevent the sweet young things from playing about too much and getting muscular."

Dr. Gordon, when the suggestion of this new fad was put to her, said, "If the girls want to play about in that tank they have, they certainly will never overdo themselves. As far as a girl's physical capability is concerned, she would not be ruled out of the game. Rowing is by far a more strenuous game."

One third year U.C. student, seemingly wary of the way of the world gave a word to the wise. "Another little howl will not do us any harm. Who knows but what a sudden fad for the game might not start the ball rolling for U.C.'s? The polo-fiends bring a bigger tank. The tank brings the long-sought gym and a U.C. residence thrown in." Although it is hardly to be expected that any such drastic measures will be taken—all for the sake of water-polo fiends—Torontois may have to set aside another page for some more conquering co-eds, who have waded into another game.

JR. U.C. DEFEATS ST. HILDA'S 20-8 IN BASKETBALL FINALS

ANGLICANS NO MATCH FOR RED AND WHITE

U.C. Forwards Give Brilliant Display Stoutly Backed by Cool Defence

GAME IS FAST

University College Juniors are the Basketball Cup holders for the year 1929. Last night at Hart House the St. Hilda's team went down to defeat when U.C. galloped their way to the final victory to the tune of 20-8. The play was fast and furious, the Saints putting up strong opposition, but the freshies were the superior team, holding the lead throughout the game. By steady and skilful checking, the U.C. guards managed to hold down their opponents' score but their forwards with speedy play made many baskets.

At the end of the first half the Saints had failed to make a count while the Red and White led by eight points. In the second half, however, the St. Hilda's team rallied and made eight points to the Juniors twelve.

Louise Crouch as a forward played an outstanding game for the Freshies, scoring nearly all their baskets. Wilma Hazlett, also a forward, ably helped her, and their combination was a treat. The defence also were on their toes! Betty Thomas, particularly, showed her skill as a cool, steady player.

Although all the Saints played well, B. Symons and B. Barbridge might be picked as their star players.

Line-up:
U.C. Juniors: W. Hazlett, A. Grant, L. Crouch, J. Allan, B. Thomas, I. Harvey, E. Breithaupt, G. Brick.
St. Hilda's: B. Symons, M. Lewis, S. Ballard, B. Barbridge, M. Johnson, F. Crooks, M. Dickinson, S. Slater, L. Harrison.

Scandinavian names outnumber all others in the directory of the University of Nebraska.

A freshman at Tulane University won the 23rd annual debate for the Carnot medal this year. This was the first time in the history of the annual contest that a freshman has been awarded the prize.

Seniors at the University of Colorado are not required to attend student assembly this year for the first time in the history of the university. All other students are assigned seats and are required to attend.

ARENA DOUBLE BILL SHOULD HOLD THRILL

Speedy Seniors Tilt Tricolour As Intermediates Tackle Richmond Hill

SHOULD JAM RINK

A large crowd should be on hand to-night to witness the double-header at the Varsity Arena. The first game which will start at 7:45 p.m. will be Queen's and the Blue and White in a Senior O.H.A. fixture.

As yet both the Blue and White and Tricolour have to taste defeat in their group. The Blue have won three straight, one from St. Michael's, one from Preston and another from the Double Blue of St. Michael's. Queen's have played only one game but in that made a good showing in taking a three-goal victory from Preston down in the Limestone City. The winner of this game will take undisputed lead of the group.

The Tricolour have yet to make an appearance in Toronto this season, but on their defeat of Preston have a real good team. Queen's made a good showing on their tour through the Maritime provinces but are facing tougher opposition in the O.H.A. "Bubs" Britton, the Tricolour football captain of last season, who was forced to remain on the bench through injuries, will be on the defence for the Kingston outfit. The Tricolour team has on its roster several players who have starred for some years in the intermediate O.H.A. That the Limestone City boys have plenty of power on the attack seems evident from the five shots they put past the Preston goaler. The battle between the two old rivals will be interesting and should be fast from start to finish.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Jr. U.C. showed their ability last night in defeating St. Hilda's so handily. The game was close at no time, as the score indicates, though the fighting was always furious. Perhaps the winners gained moral support from the large number of U.C. rooters present. The other interfaculty games were not graced by many spectators who favored the Red and White, but in the Big Gym yesterday there were many U.C. girls as St. Hildians. The U.C. men were conspicuous by their absence.

This game ends Women's Interfaculty Basketball for the season, but the Intercollegiate games are to be held at McGill in February. This struggle brought several possibilities to light. Wilma Hazlett, Louise Crouch, and B. Thomas, who starred for U.C. and B. Symons, from St. Hilda's are all promising material, and with a capable coach and last year's veterans, hope to snatch the "baby" from Western.

The people interviewed by the Varsity with respect to Women's Water Polo reacted in the logical manner. We note that they all agreed as to the diminutiveness of the Lillian Massey Pool. As one girl remarked, "When we get tired we can just stand on the bottom." But we should like to see such a team organized. It might hurry the construction of a Women's Building, and an interfaculty series would undoubtedly foster that sought-for college spirit.

We are agitating for that oft-mentioned reform, a twenty-five cent charge for a single swim at the L.M. Few girls are willing to pay the four dollar athletic fee for half a dozen plunges, and quite rightly. A nominal sum would encourage more swimming and eventually take in more money.

While on the subject of swimming, where was that U.C. swimming practice held which according to the notice on the Clock Room board, was to be at the L.M. on January 14? No college can justifiably expect interest, enthusiasm and Teams when their notices are incorrect and those who might turn out find they have wasted precious hours through someone else's carelessness.

The girls are as anxious as Ross Workman for more cold weather and ice. Both intercollegiate and interfaculty hockey are under way, though progress has been limited to practices. Each college has the nucleus of a strong team and the series should be lively.

Don't forget that there is a double-header at the Varsity Arena to-night at 7:45, Queen's Seniors vs. Varsity and after this Richmond Hill vs. Varsity Intermediates. This is the best hockey bill that has been offered this season. Turn out and pack the "White Elephant" to the roof and then try and lift that off with the old "Varsities."

FAIR BASKETEERS TO SHOW STYLE IN INTERCOLLEGIATE

Players From Four Colleges Strive for "Bronze Baby" In February Series

The Interfaculty Women's Basketball series having just been completed, the attention of basketball fans is now turned towards the Intercollegiate series. First practices have just begun and much promising material has already been discovered. Miss Marion Forward, who has played for three years with the Intercollegiate, and who coached the Victoria College Seniors this fall, has been chosen as coach. Miss Forward has a thorough knowledge of basketball and her speed and ability as a combination player should mean much in working the Varsity team into shape. Miss Eleanor Sedgewick of Victoria is manager of the team.

The Intercollegiate games will be played this year at McGill, and will likely be run off near the end of February as usual although no schedule has yet been received. McGill, Queen's, Western and Varsity are competing for the Intercollegiate trophy, usually known as the "Bronze Baby." Last year it was carried off by Western, but this year the Varsity girls hope to have such a team as to be able to bring home the "baby" themselves. The student support has always been good, and should be even better this year.

Following the Senior game Varsity Intermediates will take on Richmond Hill. The Blue and White will be fighting to remain in contention. A win will keep them right in the running while a loss will make their chances for the group rather poor.

SPEEDY WOMEN'S HOCKEY SESSION IS EXPECTED

Well-Attended Practices Predict Year of Brilliant Effort on Cushions

Gladys Martin, the new president of the Women's Hockey Club states that inter-collegiate hockey is getting under way. The "flu" before Christmas and postponed exams have held up hockey activities somewhat, but the prospects are good for a lively season.

The Medettes, St. Hilda's and Vic have all held several well-attended practices. This year the Medettes hope to put a strong team on the ice under the coaching of Dr. Marian Hilliard, of inter-collegiate hockey fame. Joyce Muirhead is the St. Hilda's captain and they have several experienced players and some promising material in the first year. Vic won the championship last winter and Bill Brunt is again coaching their first team while "Si" Birge is getting the second team into shape. The curator, Emma Wright, is right on the job.

O.C.E. have several seasoned hockey players in their midst, and with Flo Allen as their representative on the Hockey Club, the O.C.E. team should provide stiff opposition.

Hockey has been somewhat delayed at U.C. but the red and white team is always good and last year was defeated by only one goal in the finals. The hockey schedule has not yet been announced, so that the number of teams entering this year is not definitely known. But with a cold winter ahead and hockey enthusiasm growing every year among the Varsity co-eds, 1929 should be one of the best years for hockey players and their supporters.

It is to be hoped that the Varsity

Denizen of Dante's Resort Drones Doleful Dirge of Warped Mind

(By F. W. Burton.)

Lo, now we came where there was a deep groove in the hissing terrain of the Inferno, and therefrom issued shrieks and yells and the thud of Latin conjugations. "Who now are these, O Virgil?" I began. Mournfully he responded: "These are they that got into a groove when they were at Varsity, and behold! the groove is perpetuated. These are they that warped their minds by doing their work." "Fortunately they are exceedingly young," I responded; "truly it is sad to see young lives so blighted, young souls brought to such a pass!" "Truly it is sad," he said, "but here is one of them who will unfold to thee his story." Forthwith, as one used to repetition, a poor wretch thus began: "I was a student at the University of Toronto in its palmy days. Her motto was 'May she ever thrive-o', and verily she thrived. But I, fond youth, bore not in my mind the sayings of the wise men; for thou knowest it is written: 'Thy college days are the time to make friends; therefore give thyself plentifully to the society of thy jolly comrades.' And: 'Thou hast come to college to get a knowledge of men and nothing else is of moment.' And again:

"Thou hast come to college to get culture; professors are academically-minded and should be shunned." Or last: "The object of a university course is to learn to think for oneself; therefore be broad-minded; he that worketh too hard at one thing getteth his mind warped; eat, drink, and be merry."
"Alas, I, unhappy one, heeded not these words of the wise men. While others gained culture at the theatre, I buried my nose in Hebrew; while wiser youths and maids unworried their minds in tea-rooms, I twisted mine irretrievably in the direction of actuarial science. I gained no knowledge of men, but only a minute acquaintance with the duodecims of cats.

"So without even that precious power to think that marketh the successful student, I died, and came before the face of St. Peter. 'Hast thou culture?' he asked. 'I know Hebrew,' I said. 'Knowest thou then 'Abie's Irish Rose'?" he queried. "No." 'Hail him hence,' cried St. Peter. 'His mind is warped and he has no knowledge of men!' So here I lie in the groove of those that got else is of moment." And again:

Wayne, Penn.—A story in recent news told of a cub reporter who has inherited a vast estate, and whose income is thereby abruptly advanced from $18 a week to $1,000 a day. As it is but natural, numbers of people, almost as many as read the story, are wondering what he intends to do with all this money and what sort of difference it will make in his life. The first thing he did in all probability was to tender his resignation to the city editor who so often had indicated that his services might be dispensed with any moment. Then he tilted the old slouch hat, which all cub reporters wear, at an even more sanguinary angle and went out of the local room his own man. All this, of course, is sheer conjecture.

But what a later account of the matter does tell us is that he has decided to spend five years in Africa and New Zealand, seeing for himself these far places, strange peoples and curious beasts that every young man burns to behold, even though he may have been or is a cub reporter. But this period will be seriously spent, we take it, however happily, for he has chosen as his companion the curator of Santa Barbara museum. The young man really seems, on this evidence, to be the fit custodian of wealth, since his first impulse is to add to the knowledge of the world.

To visit the little known places of earth, and to map them, to bring back specimens of plant and animal life for classification and study, is really to play the benefactor of mankind. For you will realize that he might—very often mention this in passing—have chosen quite a different means of expenditure.

It will be long and long before, if ever, the wealth of the world is evenly distributed to the end that there shall be neither rich nor poor. Indeed, it has often been said that this is the most fantastic of dreams, since even if it came to fruition a year or so would suffice for the acquisitive ones to restore the old disproportion of material possessions—either in wealth or in power, it matters not which. But pending this Utopian day, and refusing to concede that it may not rest somewhere in the keeping of time, we can only hope that young men who inherit wealth, or older men who have amassed it, will expend it worthily. As many of them do.

Special to the Varsity

Stockton, Calif.—Too many research men are in the teaching field, and too many teachers are trying to do research work, according to an article by Dr. G. R. Pease, of the School of Education of the College of the Pacific, in "School and Society."

"It apparently has never dawned on the deans of the colleges of education that their men have individual differences," declared Dr. Pease. "One man is fitted by nature, and training for research, and another man is, by reason of his personality and inclination, an inspired teacher. But the system demands that the researcher teach and the teacher research."

"The second general student criticism bears upon the organization (or lack of organization) of the courses offered," said Dr. Pease. "The first undergraduate course in the field of

Grand Opera

We have tried to set a pretty high standard in our column; we never use the word "excellent" without a wince. But we can honestly say that by and large, we do not hope to hear better grand opera in Toronto than the American Opera Company. The voices are good, the singers enunciate and also act, the scenes run very smoothly, and most remarkable of all, the scenery, that high hurdle of the travelling opera company, is managed neatly and effectively—simple and futuristic.

It is not a bad idea, either, to sing translations. True, the words of an opera sound horribly commonplace when one can understand them and sometimes the important word falls on the weak beat of the bar with amazing results, but opera in the original is essentially for the musically educated man who also knows the score. It is almost impossible to keep pace with the thought from a libretto, and this was extremely clear and easy to follow.

We haven't the nerve to criticize "Carmen" as a work. We might say though, that it was written by Bizet from the story of Mérimé and that Bizet has caught the character of Carmen to perfection. The play is altogether built around Carmen, and the music around one simple rapid theme, which keeps recurring. There are many choruses in quick time, but no show may attempt at magnificence or slow passage. There are several very good arias, best known of which are the "Toreador Song" and the "Flower Song," but not much solo-pique recitative.

Brownie Peebles did the difficult part of Carmen with all the colour and verve which it demands to a good Don José by Patrick Killikelly. Maria Iacovino, who sang "Michaela" had the best voice. Escamillo was substituted and the voice was not quite deep enough, but it was well done. The chorus was good.

We don't think you will go to sleep at this opera.

HONOR SYSTEM GAINS MANY FRIENDS AT COLUMBUS

Practice Adopted in Law Course Meditated for Rest of College

Special to the Varsity
Columbus, Ohio—Permanent adoption of an honor system for use during examinations will be under consideration by members of the freshman law classes of this University.

This action comes as a result of granting to freshman students in the College of Law the voluntary choice of employing an honor system while offering the recent finals. Of the 135 offered the opportunity, only 11 declined it.

Establishment of the customary honor court in connection with the honor system was not included in the experiment made at that time. However, all participants signed a pledge of honesty and agreed to refrain from indications of cheating, such as talking in the classroom or corridors. No reporting was permitted.

Students taking final examinations under this method were allowed the freedom to leave the room when they wished. A smoke or short recess in the outdoors were popular means of rest.

"I certainly consider the test a successful one," exclaimed George B. Marshall, chief justice of the Student Court. "If the freshmen take up the scheme, I think it will only be a matter of time before the entire college responds to it."

Dean Herschel W. Arrant of the College of Law, while not the instigator of the plan, has encouraged and favored its developments since the beginning.

professional education is usually considered quite interesting. With the second course one begins to find large overlapping of material. The farther one goes the worse the overlapping becomes until after a few courses the work becomes a bugbear to the average student."

It was explained that flares could be fired ahead of a steamer and anything in its track would be illuminated, not by direct light but by means of the silhouette.

Those fired from a pistol rose 250 feet, when a parachute opened and allowed the flare to fall slowly towards the water, the flare shedding a brilliant light.

These had a candle power of 50,000 and the same flares could be fired a distance of a mile or a mile and a half, thereby giving an effective silhouette of anything that might lie between them and the ship.

These lights could be seen for a distance of ten miles.

HONOUR SYSTEM NOT LIKELY TO BE TRIED AT THIS UNIVERSITY

Lack of Success Shown by Its Discard in Many

SOME SUPERVISION GOOD

Majority of Students Are Satisfied With The Present System

"All right for honest men, that is all I have to say on the matter," was the comment of Professor Cochrane, Dean in Residence of University College, questioned by the "Varsity" as to the honor system of examinations now being adopted at Columbus, Ohio, as appeared in yesterday's Varsity. Prof. Cochrane was very unwilling to be quoted in the matter, but on being pressed for a further opinion stated that as he had had no opportunity of seeing the working of the system in an American University he could not pass upon the matter.

"I believe the students of the University to be honest, as a whole," said Prof. Cochrane. "But there are always a few people who have no honor upon which to base an honor system. Of course, the honor system would relieve supervision at examinations. Personally, I detest supervision as an undergraduate, but I believe a certain amount of it is a wise and good thing."

"There has never been anything of that nature tried out at the University of Toronto," said Dr. Brebner, Registrar of the University. Asked if there were any intention of adopting this system, Dr. Brebner stated that each faculty was responsible for its own examinations, and so the matter depended upon them.

"The fact that the system is being abandoned again by so many Universities would seem to indicate that it is not altogether a success. Of course we do not know how the system works out as it has never been tried out here."

"It appears to me, however," continued Dr. Brebner, "that is unfair to the student. There are some men whom we can trust under certain conditions but there are others of whom we might be more doubtful. The

HART HOUSE SEES WOMAN SPEAKER

MISS McPHAIL SPEAKS

Has the Emancipation of Women Fulfilled its Early Promise?

Women hitherto carefully excluded from Hart House debates will for the first time receive official recognition next Wednesday evening, January 23, when Miss Agnes Macphail will be a principal speaker on the subject, "That in the opinion of the house the emancipation of women has not lived up to its early promise."

This is the first occasion on which a woman has been allowed to be present on the floor of the House. It is understood that this invitation was only extended to Miss Macphail by the Debates Committee because she is a member of the House of Commons. R. W. Finlayson of University College will move the motion and Miss Macphail is expected to oppose it as a private member from the floor. Arrangements are expected to be the same as at previous debates.

Finance Excludes Varsity From Junior School Dance

It is a generally known fact that the Junior School Dance was held in the Pompeian Room of the King Edward Hotel last evening. Owing, however, to the desire of the Committee in charge to keep down expenses, "The Varsity" was able to learn no more about the success of the affair. It is surmised that the usual riotous time was had by all.

FRENCH PROFESSOR WILL LECTURE HERE

Authority on English to Inaugurate Alexander
Lectureship

SPEAKER IS ALSO AUTHOR

Louis Cazamian, professor of English Language and Literature at the Sorbonne, University of Paris, will deliver three lectures on "Parallelism in the Recent Development of English and French Literatures," in Convocation Hall, at 8.15 p.m., on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, Jan. 28, 29 and 30.

Professor Cazamian, who is a noted authority on the English language, and literature, was born in April, 1877. He was educated at the Henri IV High School, Paris and attended the University of Paris. At the High Schools of Brest, Nevers and Lyon, he was professor of English and he lectured at the Universities of Lyon, Bordeaux and Paris. Besides being an eminent Professor, Louis Cazamian is an author of merit. Some of his publications are "Moslem England"; "Great Britain and the War"; and a "History of English Literature" which he and Emile Legoux jointly published in 1924.

In giving this series of lectures, Professor Louis Cazamian is inaugurating the Alexander Lectureship. This lectureship has been established by the University of Toronto through the efforts of more than 750 graduates, as a tribute to the work of Professor W. J. Alexander, Professor Emeritus of English, University College. It provides for an annual series of lectures on English Literature by some eminent man of letters.

Cards of admission will not be required and all those who are interested are cordially invited to attend these lectures.

Miss Livesay

The University Senate announced last night the election of Francis B. Megan, B.A., 1903, to the Senate as one of the graduates in Arts of University College. Mr. Megan will replace the late George H. Kilmer, K.C., B.A.

Four new scholarships were established and seven scholarship awards approved at the same meeting. During the session the diploma in public health was awarded to Dr. L. R. Velina of Richmond, Que., and to Dr. Richard Felton of Victoria, B.C. The degree of Doctor of Dental Surgery was conferred upon H. M. McCaffrey. Diplomas in Public Health Nursing were awarded to Miss Z. Dobuska and Miss M. Pozdiboura.

Statutes were passed establishing the following scholarships:
First and Second James Branstion Wilmott Scholarship of the annual value of $150 and $100 respectively to be awarded to students in the first year of the faculty of Dentistry. For the present session these 2 scholarships were divided equally between J. E. Brody and A. N. Van Loon.

ST. MICHAEL'S COLLEGE STUDENT COUNCIL REPLACED FORMER STUDENT PARLIAMENT

THEATRE PARTY FOR W.U.A. DATE AS YET UNDECIDED

Sororities Contribute to Swell
Building Fund—Candy
Sale Planned

It is with dogged determination that the W.U.A. continue their efforts to swell the Building Fund. At the Mass Meeting last Monday, the motion was carried to put on a Theatre Night. Miss A. Harris, secretary of the Association, told the Varsity yesterday that the plans were left in the hands of the Executive. The date is not definitely decided as yet, but it will take place about the middle of February.

At a W.U.A. meeting last autumn it was decided to divide the women into two groups, each of which was to conduct its own money-making project. Apparently, this plan has not met with unqualified approval among the students, being now discarded.

This does not forbid the students from voluntarily, in groups or individually, raising money. The small group would not be so unwieldy as a large body and might meet with much success.

The Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity last term staged a theatre night, the proceeds, one hundred and fifty dollars, being given to the Building Fund.

To the same purpose, the Gamma Phi Beta Sorority now has a scheme on foot that should prove lucrative. That is the candy sale. Next Monday, sweet-toothed males will come a-begging for more home-made bon-bons. Every time the co-ed sins against the "slim silhouette" resolution, she will be so much closer to her Hart House.

MARRIAGE OF PERMANENCE IS A SACRAMENT

Dr. Thomas Says Marriage

Economic Situation To-day
Causes the Postponement
Of Marriage

"Marriage with no idea of permanence is freakishness; with an idea of semi-permanence is concubinage; but with the idea of full permanence is a sacrament," said Dr. Ernest Thomas, in his address on "Christian Marriage," in Hart House yesterday. "There is all the kick, thrill and innovation you want in marriage; no monotony in the adjustment process," said Dr. Thomas, "but you can't interpret the marriage except in terms of the home."

"The approach to the marriage question in the last thirty years has been unscientific," went on the speaker, "but the fundamental law of married life is the achieving of a joint personality—not the binding of two people by contract. Questions of little minor adjustments will break in on a romance, but marriage should become a discipline, and in the realization of its aims, discipline should become incidental."

That young folks should find in each other their complete life, was his contention. Love is a function of the whole organism, and the fullest of love requires full action.

Great Rivalry Between Resident Students and Day Scholars

HAD TWO-FOLD AIM

The St. Michael's Student Council was founded in 1918 to take the place of the Students' Parliament of the college that had lately died of inanition. The presidents of first, second and third years represented their respective classes. Fourth year was represented by its president and vice-president. By this scheme the framers of the constitution sought to utilize the existing class executives.

The aim of the Students' Parliament was two-fold. Activities within the college itself were under its direction and it also saw to the election of the college representatives to the various University organizations. Its success at the time of its founding was largely due to the ardent political feelings of that particular time which found out-let in the numerous debates which the Parliament held.

When this system was renewed under the name of Students' Council the chief factional sentiment made manifest was intense rivalry between the resident students and the day scholars for the positions on the council. Bitter indeed was the annual contest for the place of president. The first successful candidate for this office from the day scholar camp was Coach Joe McGahay.

A very important duty of the council at this time was the management of college athletics. A committee in charge of the coaching of the football

Hockey Fans Parade In Midnight Hours

Seeing Varsity outscore Queens at last night's senior O.H.A. fixture in the Arena by eight goals to two proved too much for the dignity of some scores of Blue supporters who paraded down St. George Street after the game and before midnight to relieve their feelings.

No damage was done by the revelers, nor did they disturb the district except for the inevitable raucous remarks of various fraternity houses as they passed. After proceeding only a few hundred yards the parade broke up.

SEVEN SOCRATICS EJECT DETECTIVE

Spy Detected at Meeting and Terribly Punished by Members

MORE NEWS TO COME

A misunderstanding of the motives of the "Varsity" by one of the members of the Seven Occult Societies has led to the accumulation of more information by another special reporter of the staff. Since mystical, metaphorical or poetic expression has failed to impress the members of the said society with its supreme degree of truth, the new reporter has adopted another medium of expression.

It is known on good authority that the Seven Occult Societies have ousted from their company the unfortunate detective, who, by a typographical error projected himself onto the scene in the place of a special reporter. It must be understood that the reporter got his information from the detective. It is known further that the society will hold an indignation meeting on Monday, January 21. The place, though known, cannot be told, but information will be forthcoming on the following morning. The details of the expulsion of the detective from the society are briefly set down here. It was generally felt by the Seven that the detective had broken his pledge to secrecy. At a convenient time when the Seven originals were discussing the matter, they heard a slight noise just outside their den of secrecy, and creeping quickly toward the door, they sprang furiously upon an unwitting object which happened to be the eighth member of the newly formed "Eight Occult Pendants." The detective raised vigorous cries of "Help, help," but he was soon choked off by the infuriated

Poets

Can you write poetry? If you can, or even if you only suspect a latent ability, why not send some such to "The Varsity"? The conductor of the "Table Round" is anxious to have contributions of student verse: sonnets, lyrics, triolets . . . Contributors are asked to write plainly on one side of the paper, type-write if possible, and address the "Table Round, care of "The Varsity". N.B.—Prospective contributors are assured of absolute secrecy if they should wish their real name protected from scoffers and philistines . . .

Opening For Reporters

There are several openings on the men's News staff of "The Varsity" for reporters. The News Editor will be in the office, Hart House, today from 1.30 to 2 p.m. to see those who wish to join the staff.

NEW CHRISTIAN UNION FORMED AT VARSITY

General Monthly Meetings To Be Addressed by Prominent Speakers

"To witness to the Lord Jesus Christ as Saviour and God and to seek to lead others to a personal faith in Him; to deepen the spiritual life of members and strengthen them in a life of faith in the study of the Bible and by worship," is the object of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union which held its organization meeting last night. The Union, which was founded by Dr. Howard Guinness of England, and which is not connected in any way with any institutions of similar purpose in the University of Toronto, is entirely undenominational, and is a branch of the international organization of the "Inter-Varsity Fellowship of Evangelical Unions." It is understood that Unions similar to the one here will be organized at other Canadian colleges.

The intention of the Union is to hold a general meeting once a month, that will be addressed by prominent visiting speakers, and to hold a prayer service every Tuesday at 5 p.m. in Room 22, University College.

Last night's meeting which commenced with a short service, a constitution and a Union motto were adopted, and the following officers elected by acclamation: Pres., Mr. J. D. Duncan, B.A., McMaster; Vice-Pres., Miss M. David, Victoria; Sec., Mr. Hart-Davies, Wycliffe; Treas., Mr. H. Bonsell, M.A., Knox.

REPUBLIC NOT FINAL ON ART

Plato Did not Reduce Beauty

To a Form of Something Else

SO SAYS MR. TAIT

"It is a mistake to take what Plato says in the Republic, where he displays a moralistic attitude towards all sensible beauty and to art, as his final utterance." So stated Mr. Tait in his paper on "The Platonic Theory of Beauty" given at the meeting of the University College Association, which was held last night at the home of Professor and Mrs. Owen. Plato did not reduce beauty to a form of something else, to a kind of reason or morality, and he regarded art as dangerous and possibly pernicious only to those who had no other standard of judgment.

The speaker went on to discuss two questions.—Plato's notion of beauty in general, and of art, which included literature, music, painting and sculpture. In connection with this Mr. Tait remarked that the Memorial Tower was more successful as an example of beauty than "Victoria College and the Albert Memorial. He compared the Republic with other dialogues, and showed how Plato took as aesthetic a view of reason and morals as a rational and moral view of art. The common element in all is the one of symmetry and proportion. After discussion and refreshments the meeting adjourned.

A NEW MOVEMENT

Last night witnessed the founding of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union which is an organization pledged to support evangelical Christian principles. Students from McMaster, Knox, Wycliffe and Victoria were elected to the executive and these are indicative of the composition of the new society.

The organizer of this club recently addressed Student Christian meetings and many of the charter members are said to have belonged formerly to the latter association. Why then did there arise the necessity for the new movement? It is significant that it is entirely separate from the Student Christian Movement. If there were not some difference of opinion then the members might better have worked out a common purpose within the older organization. But it is surmised that the pioneers are anxious to stress one aspect of religion more than those of the previously established society.

This aspect is the fundamentalist one. And if the expectations of close observers of religious movements on the campus are fulfilled there may be a new current in the stream of undergraduate religious opinion. It will be interesting to watch the flow of the two streams within the stream.

Art, Music and Drama

"Jolanthe"

The Victoria College Music Club is presenting the lovely Gilbert and Sullivan opera Jolanthe (by permission of D'Oyley Carte) at the Margaret Eaton Theatre on Wednesday, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of next week. This opera has a fascinating musical theme combined with delightful repartee and dialogue. The setting is England of the eighteenth century.

The club has again been exceptionally fortunate in securing the services of Mr. Thomas Crawford, Mus. Bac. F.R.C.O., who will direct the production. Mr. Crawford is director of the Eaton Choral Society. In the past four years the club has presented "The Wishing Cap" two Gilbert and Sullivan operas, "The Mikado" and "Patience" and last year "Merrie England" by Sir Edward German. This work met with popular acclaim and proved so successful that students are advised to secure their tickets for Jolanthe at an early date this year. The Box office is open now in Victoria College from 9 till 2 daily or tickets may be obtained at the Margaret Eaton Theatre on the nights of the performance. Ad. 7769.

CHAMPUS

Dear Champus:

In co-operation with yesterday's editorial we have decided to found a Rooter's Club, pardon, we meant Cheerleaders' Club, to expedite the campaign for recruits to the Macdonald-Carter Club and the Liberal Club. We have managed to compose two dandy songs so that there is no telling what we will accomplish after a trip to Cornell.

We suggest, first of all, that the Liberal Club should stand with bared heads at the beginning of every meeting and render, "Peace, perfect Peace River". And as for the Conservative Club we have written them a whole big anthem to themselves, with apologies to Thomas Hardy:

VERY CONVENTIONAL

When I went down to Winnipeg,
With all expenses paid
We weren't a bit afraid.
We had no need to steal or beg
When we went down to Winnipeg.
With all expenses paid.

And what befell at Winnipeg

No prophet durst declare

When I came back from Winnipeg
With rapture in my head
I said "You boys are dead
Up, Tories, up and shake a leg"
When I came back from Winnipeg
With rapture in my head.

Look here, Dee—remarks about my age are not in! Absolutely to be smitten down, dykeah? I try to cover up my innocence and inexperience as well as I can—but I will be 20 soon, real soon, and if you get sassy again I'll make you give me a present, so there! Rumours which have reached our ears 1 (a) (part 1) That some Meds are so doity that when they put their arms around their g.f.'s, they break the bliss by saying wisely, "My dear, that is your Scapula (with a capital S)—and—M.G.—what a funny curve your fifth rib has!"

II (f) (part 6) Schoolmen, (whose password and countersign is—"do you know the one about ...") are so dam practical! When you shed exquisite tears over a rustic bridge against the sun (you know) Mc S.P.S.T.T.C. etc., raves enthusiastically about cantilever arches, tension and compression members.

III (c) (part 5) That Trinity men don't like it (Hart House soup)! No indeed, they think it just too terrible that the isolated Victorians at the Deaconess Training School call their abode the "Deac" house. So lowering (is it possible?).

IV (h) (part 7) That the best resort of the year (AH, but it is young yet) was made by a young lady who was asked if they were acquainted with any Knox or Wycliffe men: Y.L. "No, I prefer not to."

V (x) (part 5) That the Champus Cat dips his toast in his tea and smacks his lips as divulged by a w.k. friend of his. Special to the Varsity

The Table Round

THE GODS

A shattering crash of thunder
Goes forth and, in its train,
Roused by the sight of plunder,
A violent burst of rain.

As if by plot, the blowing
Grows and with sudden strain
Does almost rend asunder
The oaks so tall and vain.

There are signs of sudden going,
But not without disdain.

AMBARVALIA

Ethereal Shepherd, view in gentle light
Our lone illustration as we pick our path

Across these grasses drenched with sleepy dew,
The plunderer, Winter, now has had his fill;

Assiduous Spring begins her suasive task
Nor does she fail to offer prophesies

That Summer will pour forth a melofuit, Differing not a jot from former years.

But who can see through the huge screen of to-day?

The hand of Desolation could descend,
As quick as Heaven's lightning wills to strike,

And scourge the earth with pestilence and ruin

While Death to life would call in wailing voice.

Against such a consumation do we pray

And in its place seek purifying force.
Thrice would we sacrifice our choice-
est flock

To cultivate such all-embracing love
Now May-day rays strike gladness in our heart.

An intimation of propitious eye,
As in adjacent fields the blossoming hosts

Open their petals to the outside world
Sending aloft an odour strong and sweet.

Encouraged thus, we pray for further aid

Just as they prayed and sang so long ago

With faith in Cato's prophylactic rule,
Bestow indigenous plenty through our land;

Confer a quiet, permeating peace
Upon our house, our household and ourselves.

buffet and valet service, are being constructed for service on the Trans-
Canada between Montreal and Tor-

Chicago and the Pacific Coast, it was learned here today.

These cars, which are being built to the company's own design, will be completed at the Cana-to be included in the train complement when the Trans-Canada makes its initial run on May 12, and the places, and is entirely enclosed with a specially processed glass which does not break up the beneficial light rays.

Tapestry covered chairs will seat 17 in the observation parlor adjoining.
An alcove with a writing desk and book case occupies a position in the centre of the car. Smoking and

McGILL UNIVERSITY GETS GRANT FOR SCHOLARSHIP

The faculty of Applied Science at McGill University have just received a gift of $5,000 to establish a graduate scholarship in civil engineering. The donor was Walter W. Colpitts of New York, a graduate of the faculty of Applied Science at McGill in 1899. The purpose of the gift is to perpetuate the memory of Dr. John Bonsall Porter, american professor of mining engineering at the University. Dr. Porter retired at the end of last year after having been associated with the University since 1896.

JANUARY CANADIAN BOOKMAN

This issue of the Canadian Bookman indicates that the magazine is growing, at least, materially, if not otherwise. It comes from the press with a page of larger dimensions and is decked with larger type. The first reformation is, no doubt, partly in recognition of a new tendency towards larger pages which is gaining among many magazines which have hitherto, had the smaller, more conventional, page. Another reason, according to the editor, is to facilitate publication in book form of articles devoted to "Who's Who in Canadian Literature."

The magazine is now published towards the first of the month. Since it was not received formerly, until the month had dwindled away, this decision will be most welcome.

In the editorial, a resume of its policy, the chief objective is stated to be "the further development of a medium of genuine Canadian expression."

Queen's Held Their Own for Two Periods but Cracked in Third

WAS EXCITING GAME

Smith and Boland Starred For Queen's and Paul For the Winners

Varsity swept into undisputed possession of first place in the Senior O.H.A. series by downing the Queens sextet at the Varsity Arena last night by a score of 8-2. Up to the last fifteen minutes of the third period it was a real tight game with Varsity leading by a one-goal margin. Then the Blue and White cut loose, increased the pressure and snowed the Tricolor under by scoring five straight goals to put the game beyond all doubt.

The Blue and White forwards maintained a sizzling pace for most of the game and Queen's after hanging on for two periods cracked pretty badly with the result that Varsity went on a scoring rampage. The winners worked more combination play than their rivals and had an edge in every department. The Varsity defence provided much tougher opposition than did the Tricolour's while Paul and Whitehead constantly relieved with brilliant rushes. "Red" was unable to dent the twine but Paul netted the boot-heel three times and along with Harley and McMullen was a standout. The Tricolour's sharpshooters had great difficulty in locating the mark and were unable to get around the Blue defence to any considerable degree. For Queen's Smith at left wing and Boland on the defence were good and Lawler did some neat checking at centre ice.

The game opened at a fast clip. Both goalies were tested and then Paul got through but Quinn saved. Then Lawler sunk the disc on a rebound from Smith. The Varsity defence looked bad in failing to clear the shot. From a scramble in front of the net Stuart batted in the equalizer. After this Queen's goal had several close calls. Whitehead's rushing and wicked shooting featured the rest of the period but no further scoring was done.

Play was even at the first of the second period. Then Paul broke away carried the puck into the corner and made Britton look bad by walking around him to flip the rubber past Quinn to put Varsity into a lead from which they were never headed. Harley and Paul went down together and on the former's pass Paul again made the red light flash. Play became ragged for a time and the boys milled the puck around in centre ice. Then Boland took the puck at his own goal and skated through the whole Blue team to score on a nice individual effort. Both teams then stepped on the gas but there was no further scoring in the period.

With only a one-goal lead Varsity assumed the offensive at the start of the last session. After some minutes of play McMullen scored on Harley's rebound and then the Blue got their fifth goal on the reverse flip. McMullen to Harley. "Bill" Stuart was penalized and then just to show what they can do on occasion the Blue ran in three goals in about as many minutes. McMullen got the first on a sally around the defence. Paul repeated this play and Harley got Varsity's eighth and last by driving one past Quinn as he was rounding the defence.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Blue and White Senior sextet seem headed for the O.H.A. championship. They have defeated every team in the group and with four victories and no losses to their credit have the imposing record of scoring eighteen goals against four by their opponents. This is hockey with a vengeance and a few weeks more at this rate will make second place the prize for Preston, St. Michael's and Queen's to decide among themselves.

Last night's game was a good one and showed the Blue and White as a real team. Queen's have a fair aggregation but lack the polish and finish around the nets that Coach "Red" Porter's boys display.

In spite of the doubleheader with the prospects of two good games the fans did not attend in any remarkable number. But it is a big improvement on last season although that doesn't mean much when last year's attendance is considered.

The Intermediates certainly put the skids under Richmond Hill. They must have had tough luck when they went up Yonge St.

This afternoon the competition in boxing and wrestling for the West Point trip will take place in Hart House. Some red-hot bouts will be provided and the boys will be going at top speed in the endeavour to make the team. Some good material is on hand and a good squad should be produced.

POLITY CLUB DISCUSSED ST. LAWRENCE WATERWAYS

Vexed Question to be Dealt With by Canadian Parliament Next Session

The St. Lawrence Waterways was the subject discussed by the Polity Club, meeting at Wymilwood last night. Owing to the general ignorance of the subject Miss Gwen Carter undertook to outline the history of the system. Since 1848 the United States had had the freedom of the waterways, though Canada had consistently refused to recognize any natural right.

The great questions under debate were the division of costs, the plan of construction, provincial and federal rights and public and private ownership. Miss Ada Brett tried to give the argument on both sides of the case. The motives influencing those interested were both economical and political. Most of those concerned had some hidden motive which experts easily revealed. vast sums had been spent in propaganda notably upon the part of Chicago, and estimates had been made that forty-two per cent. of the United States would be benefited. Commercial benefit was difficult to evaluate but the traffic upon the present canal had increased about nine-fold and had almost reached its maximum. Canada's problem was largely political, the Liberals being unable to take a stand since their supporters were divided. If their supporters were divided, it was before the next session of the Canadian Parliament.

IRISH CRITIC LECTURES ON FUTURE OF DRAMA

Mr. Ervine Says Only Hope of Legitimate Stage is Little Theatre Movement

Special to the Varsity—Montreal, January 14.—"The only hope of the legitimate stage is the establishment of the Little Theatre movement, along the lines of Hart House Theatre of the University of Toronto," stated Mr. St. John Ervine in his lecture in the Peoples' Forum last night.

Mr. Ervine's subject was "The Future of the Drama," and dealt very fully with modern business conditions, including the fierce competition of the movie, and other distractions which have made the theatre an "obsolete organization" almost dead as far as touring is concerned, and little better in metropolitan centres.

JENNINGS'S SERIES BEGINS WITH 17 TEAMS COMPETING

Opening Games To-day With Dents vs. Sr. S.P.S. and Sr. U.C. vs. Sr. S.P.S.

The Interfaculty hockey series gets under way this afternoon with two games being scheduled, Dents vs. Sr. S.P.S. and Sr. U.C. vs. Sr. S.P.S. If all goes well the schedule will be completed by Feb. 5 and the play-offs announced.

This year there are 17 teams divided into five groups in the series and there should be a lot of action and no little talent displayed before the Jennings Cup finds a final resting place. Victoria College won the cup last year for their third successive year downing the Dental College team. Pharmacy, St. Mike's, Jr. U.C. and Dents provided the chief opposition last year and are likely to be strong again this year with a number of other teams likely to produce strong contenders for the much-coveted Jennings' Cup.

Owing to the mildness of the winter last year winners in the various groups were declared only after the greatest difficulty. From present indications it looks as though the same trouble will not be experienced this year and that the original schedule will be able to be adhered to with very few changes.

The registrar of the University of Manitoba has had no less than six watches turned in which were found during the Christmas examinations.

"The theatre at present is doing little to remedy the situation," Mr. Ervine went on to say, "and the imagination of the present generation is being destroyed by the movie."

In dealing with drama, it was stated, one should attempt to recognize its connection with religion. In medieval times the only place to present the drama was the church or temple. It is readily seen by students of history that all drama has had a religious origin, and when drama becomes divorced from religion as it is today deterioration is certain.

"Of all forms of expression drama is the most natural. One of the first things a child does is to imitate others and dress up." This is drama, and it is most significant that a nation can be pretty accurately judged by the type of drama it prefers. A great nation prefers tragedy, but a weak, neurotic one prefers musical comedy and the movie," concluded Mr. Ervine.

RICHMOND HILL SWAMPED BY INTERMEDIATES

Varsity Team Had Scoring Bee Started by Leak in First Period

"RED" STATHAM STARRED

Leak and Carrick Also Good And Grainger Best For Hill

Following the lead of the Seniors the Varsity Intermediate O.H.A. team defeated Richmond Hill last night in the second game of the double header at the Varsity Arena by 10 to 2.

The Blue and White team had the edge on the Purple and Gold clad players throughout the whole game, and the score was really no indication of the play. Richmond Hill played a very weak game, Grainger doing most of the work for the team. Varsity led in the attack in the first period and the game looked like a rough one. Leak scored in the first 5 minutes and a minute later Graham rushed down the ice to register the second goal for Varsity.

Graham led the scoring in the second period when he shoved one in on a pass from Evans during the first 5 minutes. MacMillan registered again about halfway through the period and Statham and Carrick scored one each to bring the total up to 6.

At the beginning of this period the Richmond Hill goalie received a hard, fast shot in the face but pluckily stayed in his net. In an attempt to stop the deluge of shots rained in on him by the Varsity forwards.

Statham scored in the first 3 minutes of the final period and less than a minute later Smith tallied for Varsity. Simultaneously managed to beat Little, the Varsity goalie, 5 minutes later to register the first shot for Richmond Hill.

From then on the game was a comedy. Shot after shot was rained in upon the Richmond Hill goalie. Carrick scored again off Evans and then Little in blocking a shot from Cape accidentally shoved it into his own net to give Richmond Hill another goal. Carrick scored again and even Little came out of the Blue and White goal and rushed down the ice in a vain attempt to add a goal to his credit.

The Varsity sextet were all given a chance to distinguish themselves, and played a better brand of hockey than their opponents. "Red" Statham was the outstanding player for Varsity, while Leak and Carrick were good. MacMillan and Graham picked up well on defence. For Richmond Hill Grainger played a very good game, while Cape on defence worked hard.

Varsity:—Goal, Little; defence, MacMillan and Graham; centre, Statham; forwards, Smith and Leak; alternates, Carrick and Evans.

Richmond Hill—Goal, Cummings; defence, Cape and White; centre, Stonehouse; forwards, Grainger and Walker; alternates, Grant and Blancher.

Trial by jury is generally conceded to have originated with the Greeks. In Athens, a certain number of freemen, selected by lot, heard and decided under the direction of a judge every case to be tried at law, a different group of men hearing each case. A similar system was adopted in Rome. The Normans made use of a primitive form of jury when they conquered England in 1066, calling them "Inquests."

team for that year evolved a brilliant and original method. Deeming actual practice a dissipation of energy necessary for real games they held "theoretical" practice in the Irish Flat where the team assiduously worked out plays on paper in preparation for the big game. This plan was only given up after two years of consistent defeat and the coaching passed into other hands.

HONOUR SYSTEM NOT LIKELY TO BE TRIED

system would depend on the man." Campus opinion, as revealed to the Varsity, would seem to indicate that the majority of the students are quite satisfied with the present system, and that a change to the honor system would not be of any advantage.

"It wouldn't work here," said H. C. Dixon, of U.C. "Students who do not want to cheat do not need to be put on their honor, and as for those who do, it would be useless to put them on their honor. The fact that it is being abandoned right and left in favor of older systems shows its weakness."

MARRIAGE IS A SACRAMENT

"The economic situation to-day forces many into the postponement of marriage, the young people of today say. And modern literature and its movies accentuate the sense of frustration that comes when impulses that are at their strongest are denied. Jesus would not, said the speaker, censure their going through life on a companionship basis, but his answer would be, 'Are you quite sure you are not exploiting each other?'"

"Petting is a new institution," said Dr. Thomas, "but if we take for granted lesser degrees of intimacy, what do we do when we want to express fuller ones? After all, we must keep some language for superb and ultimate things." The code in the speaker's day was that no decent fellow would kiss any girl—if he did it meant he was seriously interested in her. But, the speaker affirmed, it is debasing the coinage of the soul, carelessly to use gestures that express the highest intimacies.

mystics, and his head was beaten into the shape of a stunted water-melon. Further purifications, edifications, and so forth were administered to the victim, and he was finally ejected in a most uncomfortable manner.

Going back to their cells, the seven drew up another constitution much along the lines of the original, and resolved to take the most extreme measures to maintain secrecy, but in spite of their difficulties the Seven intend to go on with their work on Monday, and the "Varsity" (it is whispered) will have authoritative information henceforth.

Laura Louise and Several Men Write Chic Notes to Aunt Mary

(By F. W. Burton.)

Wycliffe College, Jan. 10, 1929.

Dear Aunt Mary,

or may we call you Greta? Having read with interest your column in Thursday's "Varsity", we desire to express to you our heart-felt thanks for the interest you are taking in the men of our College.

Dear Aunt Mary we are not fooling; we still think women do not wear sufficient clothes, and we still believe the Stork to be the best kidnaper. We realize, however, that being out of touch with the modern girl there may be another side to the subject, i.e. petticoats, of which we know nothing.

The men of this college would appreciate therefore a talk from you on the adage, "Clothes make the man, and lack of them the woman." If however, you are a coy, shy maiden, which we presume you are not, the undersigned will be pleased to interview you personally.

Waiting an early reply.
Yours Sincerely,

(Signed)
Joe Hurley
Handley Perkins
A. Jackson.

ANS.—Of course you may call me Greta as long as you pronounce the e long like the k in zephyr and remember the G. It's much nicer than many of the names I have been called during my short journalistic career.

Despite your presumption, I really am a "coy, shy maiden." Had you read my article on "Pressing Electric Buttons" which appeared in the issue of Oct. 25, you would not have fallen into this general misconception. May I quote a few phrases? "We are—we admit it where thousands wouldn't—95.6 per cent. pure Being naturally of a shy and retiring disposition maidenly modesty So I must refuse to address your college on any subject whatever, much less the one of your choice. In any case, what chance would a poor lone female stand against a congregation of rabid theologs? As for petticoats—you may take the word of one who knows it these days—it has gone the way of the doublet and corset. Oh dear, perhaps you hadn't heard of the death of the late lamented latter! Of course there's many a slip, but not much to come of them.

Dear Aunt:

Allow me to extend my felicitations on the simply marvelous lyric effort of Thursday morning. It reminded me of Shelley's sublimity intermingled with Platonic supersaturation. It was so satisfying.

How I thrill and thrill when I realize that I have such a wonderful AUNT in the family. I do so hope that general. I awaken each morning in great expectation that my embroclic latencies is hereditary and not environmental. I have soared to heights like yours. Who knows? I am sure it will some day. But I hope it acts before Gabriel does the swan song on his tin whistle.

Again sincerest appreciations,

Your loving niece,
Laura Louise

P.S.—I am really 'Isobel', only Trinity used a non da plum for me. Thanks to your sage advice he shaved at once, and I can throw my cuticura soap away from now on. Mine is such a sensitive skin.

ANS.—Had I known that you were Isobel I fear I would not have been so impartial in my judgment. However I am awfully glad Trinity sacrificed Helen and the moustache for you even without my influence. Beware of Trinity men, my dear; they supply the C.O.T.C. with its best half-shots.

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Do you approve of College Humour?

Yours truly,
V. More.

ANS.—Absolutely! How could feature writers exist without Wycliffe Trinity and College Humour?

The Margaret Anna Brock Scholarship to the value of $100 to be awarded also to the student with the highest average in English and History, first class honors or better being necessary.

The Joseph Henderson Memorial Scholarship of an annual value of not less than $80 with free tuition for 4 years, likewise to be awarded in English and History under the same conditions.

These last three scholarships will be offered for competition in June of this year.

The S. R. Carsons Scholarship of the value of $250 for the years 1929 to 1932 inclusive to be awarded to a student who has completed the third year of the course in Commerce and Finance, the award to be based chiefly on the candidate's academic record throughout the first three years of the course.

The following awards were made: The Ash-Temple Scholarship of the value of $250 awarded equally to A. Buchanan and F. M. Roulston, third year Dents.

The Jardine Memorial Prize in English verse of the value of $100 awarded to Miss D. K. M. Livesey. Miss C. T. Shiell and Miss E. K. M. Sims received honourable mention.

Grand Frocks, N.D.—If co-eds would pay more attention to voice culture and less to care of the skin and planning of clothes, they would be infinitely more charming than they are now, Martin B. Ruud, professor of English, told students in his classes at the University of Minnesota.

It is more than disillusioning, Mr. Ruud said, to watch groups of well dressed girls strolling about the campus, and then to approach near enough to hear them speak. Most of them utter sounds which are a cross between the cawing of a crow and the shrieking of a hawk, he declared.

CAMPUS STUDENTS DO NOT THINK OF POLITICAL CLUBS

Embryo Politicians Air Views
On Question of Political Organizations

GRIT AND TORY

Local Clubs not Partisan
But Have Wider
Outlook

"I do not know quite enough about party organization to draw a comparison between the Macdonald-Carter Club and a political party," said B.D. Beamish, treasurer of the club, speaking about the editorial in Wednesday's issue of "The Varsity," headed "Grit and Tory." "We have," he stated, "an organization similar to that of many other societies. The executive is elected at a meeting of the club, and there is a small constitution, and a small fee. Meetings generally take the form of a discussion and are held whenever the executive sees fit, usually 4 or 5 times a year. Well-known Conservatives are invited in from time to time to speak on current topics, and papers are given on current events or political topics, with a discussion following. Membership is gained usually by an introduction from one of the members. It is not difficult to join, but members are generally required to be Conservatives. I have never heard of a waiting list."

When asked what campus students thought of political organizations, Mr. Beamish replied, "They don't. Lack of political expression in the University can be accounted for by the downtown theatres and the recent discovery of contract bridge."

"The editorial in Wednesday's issue was accurate in its attitude towards the Liberal," stated L. M. Gelber, an active member. "The Liberal Club tries to be non-partisan; it does not strictly follow party lines, but endeavours to have a broader outlook. The average student is indifferent to political organizations, but this feeling is only a part of a general indifference to intellectual affairs. This is perhaps due to the fact that we as a student body are not intellectually mature. We do not feel any problems keenly enough, whether they be political, literary, or spiritual. This condition is especially apparent in our literary channels. True, we have college magazines and journals covering athletics and social gossip but no real expression of opinion. And so it is in political activities. We belong to political clubs because our fathers belong to them, but there is a very apparent political indifference which, as I said before, is only a part of the general condition prevalent in student life."

The architecture of the two new dormitories at Princeton is under discussion, since the Medieval Gothic is becoming on the exterior but does not afford sufficient light for the students.

VALUABLE SCHOLARSHIPS

The offerings of Scholarships, Fellowships and Prizes announced by Universities at this time of the year is rather bewildering. Women graduates have many opportunities, about fifty-five of these ranging from $350.00 to $1,500.00. The Canadian Federation of University Women offers one of $1,250.00.

Great Britain offers an Exhibition of 40 pounds and a studentship of 300 pounds in Trinity College, Cambridge. There is the annual selection of the Beit Fellowships in Science of 250 pounds. Universities of the United States have a great many. Northwestern University, in the Department of Economics and Commerce, has thirty odd ranging from $200.00 to $1,500.00 with tuition. In their Faculty of Arts and Science they have over thirty ranging from $150.00 to $1,000.00 with tuition in whole or in part. Brown University has twenty-six Fellowships from $500.00 to $1,000.00, with thirty-five studentships of $750.00 and tuition. Syracuse has twenty Fellowships of $500.00 and tuition; Scholarships of $170.00 and studentships of $500.00, $750.00 and tuition.

Announcements regarding these may be seen in the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

SMOKERS FAIL TO IDENTIFY FAVOURITE WEED

Blindfold Test Reveals That Students Switch to Smoke That Tastes Best

Special to the Varsity
Minneapolis, Minnesota.—At last the widely-advertised cigarette test has proved its worth.

A number of campus smokers that have always smoked a particular brand of cigarette have switched to the one that tasted best to them when blindfolded, as the result of a test given to 50 students by F. R. Steggers, a graduate student in the Medical School.

It was found that confirmed smokers cannot consistently discriminate between their favourite cigarette and other popular brands, while those who smoke the least can pick out the different brands with much more accuracy.

Dr. J. S. Foster of the McGill department of physics has recently been honored by the Royal Society of London, when a series of three papers on the subject of "The Stark Effect," written by him as co-author with the Society. Another paper, on the same subject by J. K. L. MacDonald, a graduate student at McGill was also accepted.

PRETTY PH.D. WIFE AID TO STUDIES SAYS SCHOOL MAN

Opinion Divided on Question of Combining Married and College Life

SOME ARE SUCCESSFUL

One Married Co-Ed Claims Undergraduate Husband Has Improved

Opinion is divided at Toronto as to the effect of married life on studies.

When asked by "The Varsity": "Do you think that marriage would interfere with studies?" E. T. Nash II, Medicine said, "I've never tried it but I do not think it would work. You can only do one thing well at a time and when a college student marries and still continues his work he is trying to combine two different worlds."

J. B. Metzler, II Classics also proved adverse to the idea when he said, "Family and student affairs do not mix." "Well," asked "The Varsity," "Don't you think a wife might help one?" "No," answered Mr. Metzler, "I don't think a wife would be of any help at all. If a man cannot get his degree by himself he won't get it with a wife."

F. F. Dyer II S.P.S., took a more optimistic view of the matter, saying, "Provided I got a pretty girl with a Ph.D. who could write my essays and coach me for exams I think it might be done."

SCOTT PERSONALITY WORTH KNOWING

Says Professor Dale in Interesting Lecture on Modern Authors

AT HOME IN THE WORLD

"A man at home in the world"—thus did Professor Dale refer to Sir Walter Scott, in an intimate and informal lecture in the series on "Modern Authors" yesterday afternoon. The speaker stressed the personality of Scott as one well worth knowing. The heroic qualities of his novels were but a reflex of his own life, which was one brimming with activity, characterized by cheerfulness, humour, and termination and courage in facing the colossal task of reducing his debt, while he accomplished suicide through over-work.

In comparing Scott to Shakespeare, Professor Dale quoted the author as having sincerely said, "Oh, I am not fit to tie his shoe-strings." He did undoubtedly possess some of the universal Shakespearean qualities.

Scott was a great raconteur which implied the necessary possession of humour and the faculty of sustaining interest. His treatment of love was distinguished by its languor. In this matter, as in others, Scott was writing as a man capitalizing his art.

As regards his place in the development of the novel, Scott compared favourably with Fielding, Smollett and Richardson, possessing the robustness and vigour of Fielding tempered with a finer attitude, the vivacity and power of narrative of Smollett, but with more depth and reflection, and utterly refusing to submit to the strained sensibility of Richardson.

SCHOOL AND MEDS RENEW OLD FEUD AS SNOW FALLS

Snow-ball Fight Caused Broken Windows and Wind-shields

ARM OF LAW INTERVENES

Age-Old Quarrel is Renewed in Annual Snowball Fight

The whizz of snowballs, the crash of windshields and of windshields, and the uttering of appropriate yells marked the renewal of hostilities between School and Meds yesterday morning, when their old feud broke out in a genuine old-time snow-ball fight. From the steps of S.P.S. icy missiles shot skyward at the Meds perched on the roof, and the fire was returned with vengeance by the doctors-to-be, each side taking little rock of windows in the way.

Finally School made a determined Meds at the door, but they were forced to retreat by a return fire from the roof, and concentrated their barrage on two shirt-sleeved holders of the Medical fort. A relentless shelling by the Engineers that threatened a dozen fair damsels trying to enter the Medical building failed to dislodge the defenders, who, reinforced by their fellows from the roof, drove back the invaders to their steps amidst much hand-to-hand fighting and much peril to the windows of cars parked on both sides of the road.

The engagement was finally halted by a University policeman, who, doubtless horror-stricken at the sight of so much broken glass, shoed the belligerents indoors, and enforced an armed truce.

MEDS DOWN DENTS IN BASKET FIXTURE

Short Passing Proves Superior To Long Range Shots in Opening Game

FINAL SCORE 28-11

In the first Sifton Cup game of Group 3 in the Interfaculty Series, Sr. Meds had no difficulty in downing Sr. Dents by a score of 28-11.

Dents started off the game with an early lead but after the first few minutes the short passing attack of the Physicians scoring most of their points from beneath the baskets. The half time score showed Dents on the short end of a 13-4 score. In the latter stages of the game Dents resorted to long shooting tactics but with little success.

Goldenberg, on the Meds' defence was the best man on the floor and was a scoring threat throughout. Good, the Meds' centre, injured his hand in the first few minutes of the game and had to retire. For Dents Beesley was the best, while the whole Med team worked hard.

Line-up—Conn, Beesley, Mitchell, Safford, Vigers, Shaver and Merrell. Meds—Walker, Smith, Good, Goldchen, Anthony, Lewin, Shortt, McEabren and MacMillan.
Referee—"Don" Wood.

The University of Indiana will offer 318 courses in their summer school this year.

Co-eds Will Be Present At Hart House Debate

Women will be admitted to the Hart House debate next Wednesday night, when Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., will defend, from the floor of the House, the resolution, "That female emancipation has not justified its promises."

According to word received by the "Varsity," invitations have been issued for the admission of forty co-eds to the gallery of the House. It is understood that these invitations will be limited to prominent co-ed debaters and officials.

ITALIAN-SPANISH CLUB HEARS MR. BEAUDOIN

Tells of Gay Spaniards And Their Love For Bull Fights

SIESTA DUE TO HEAT

"In Spain the women do not bob their hair on account of the custom of wearing the large Spanish comb on festival days," declared Mr. Beaudoin at the meeting of the Italian-Spanish Club at the Women's Union last evening. Owing to the unavoidable absence of Senor Barranco, Mr. Beaudoin very kindly consented to address the Club in French on his experiences in Spain.

The speaker related many amusing incidents, among them the fact of having to obtain the key to one's house from the nightwatchman when returning home late at night. Owing to excessive heat in Spain, business and school hours are from nine until eleven and four until seven, the interval between the two being devoted to the siesta.

The bull fights were very graphically described. The Spaniards must have them or they would not be able to live. In the audience the men and women sit together and the gay Spanish shawls and fans of the women lend a picturesque effect to the picture. The old horses used in the bull fights are decorated in bright colours and the toreros are gaily dressed, the bull is infuriated before he is led into the ring by the process of having a nail stuck in its back. The purpose of the old horse is to tire the bull so he can be managed by the matador. The matador whose duty it is to play with the bull is very popular in Spain and risks his life for the pleasure of the people.

A vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Beaudoin and the meeting closed with a social half hour and the serving of refreshments.

Halderson Elected President Of U. of T. Rowing Club

Results of the annual elections of University of Toronto Rowing Club held Jan. 17, 1929, in Lecture Room, Hart House, are as follows:

President—O. G. Halderson, IV, Dents.

1st Vice-President—J. A. C. Thomson, III, Meds.

2nd Vice-President—J. Dawson, II, Meds.

Secretary—H. Thorburn, II Arts.
Committee—R. N. Starr, II Arts.; R. Sarjeant, IV Meds.; F. E. Harris, IV Dents.

An Ohio State fraternity was robbed recently for the fifth time. One hundred dollars, a suit, three kodaks, four watches, three slide rules, a brief case, a set of tools, and other small articles were taken.

NEW MOVEMENT IS FUNDAMENTALIST SAYS ORGANIZER

I.C.C.U. is Founded for Students Who Object to Modernistic Tendencies

MEMBERS PLEDGED

Organization Has Plans to Become Nation-wide in Scope

"The Student Christian Association affords no opportunity to testify to the reality and cause of Jesus Christ in our lives." This, according to one of the officers of the Inter-Collegiate Christian Union is the "raison d'etre" of that newly-formed association. It is generally understood that the members of the Union will be of fundamentalist convictions, and that it will work along evangelical lines. As far as can be found there is no restriction of membership except that members are expected to take a pledge which is formulated somewhat as the quoted sentence given above.

The Student Christian Association is known to be rather modernistic in its tendencies and being so, is objected to by some students. As for its development, communications have been made with McGill University, where it is expected a similar organization will be formed. Operations are under way also in Vancouver, and it is hoped that this Union will become nation-wide.

Rev. F. J. Moore, head of the Student Christian Association in the University of Toronto, expressed his opinion of the new organization as follows—"I do not see any real necessity for a new organization. Students of evangelical opinions are quite welcome in the Students' Christian Association, provided they are willing 'to live and let live.'" So far as I can gather, however, they are limiting their association to students whose opinions can thus be described as fundamentalist. The Student Christian Association is much wider than that, and no single term can describe it."

States Balzano's Work Had Profound Influence on Mathematics

MR TOVELL ON ICE CONTROL

Starting out in humorous vein when he stated that his original subject was to have been "Incidents in a School-Teacher's Life" but that he had changed it because he wished to forget such experiences as soon as possible, Mr. Wm. V. Tovell, III U.C. deftly outlined the problems which "Ice Control" has to be met with by man. Illustrating his address by slides and interesting experiments, he showed the manner in which ice is broken up, and gave definitions of Surface, Frazil and Anchor ice.

The second speaker, Professor S. Beatty, M.A., Ph.D., of the Department of Mathematics, University College, presented an admirable paper on Balzano, a very remarkable man from Prague, who published in 1854 "Paradoxes of the Infinite." Balzano's work had a profound influence in directing attention to the need for solid calculations in mathematics, particularly for care in operations where infinity is limited.

THE WOMAN-HATING FACULTY

Professors in the University of Toronto are not being vamped. They have never been "vamped", nor do they ever expect to be forced to protect themselves against the wiles of designing women students. These facts were gathered from a series of interviews with representative members of the faculty, most of whom were disposed to question the sanity of our reporter, and who, on consideration of the suggestion that they might be influenced by feminine charm, characterized the idea as ridiculous.

And yet—from a large University in the United States comes the astounding claim that attractive women students win grades which cannot, by any stretch of the imagination be related to their intelligence quotas, and that these grades are obtained by the simple process of "working" unsuspecting professors. That this condition may exist in American universities is admitted by Toronto men, but they refuse to tolerate the suggestion that the University of Toronto is not immune from such tactics. "Mad", "Ridiculous", "Nonsense", were some of their indignant exclamations.

But why should conditions which have nothing to do with climate or laws, but have reference only to the nature of man—and woman—be quite different on opposite sides of an imaginary line? Are we to infer that the Canadian woman student has less charm than her American sister? We can see the co-eds rising to protest. Then are the professors less susceptible? We cannot accept that theory either. Indeed the facts seem to indicate that just as Canadian professors and Canadian students are not different from the same groups in the United States, so the relations existing between professors and students are also similar.

There have been cases in Toronto, though we admit that they are infrequent, of professors marrying women who have been students in their classes. There have also been cases of professors accepting what an unprejudiced person might consider "no excuse at all" for the non-appearance of an essay, provided it was accompanied by bright eyes or an appealing look. This sort of thing could not possibly happen were it not for the susceptibility of professors to feminine charms.

For these occurrences we do not blame the professors; neither do we blame the co-ed. The former, though he is endowed with great intellect and much learning, is nevertheless a man, and men have always been enslaved by the feminine possessors of "it." As for the student, she is merely using intuitively the power which for centuries was her only weapon against the omnipotence of the other sex.

The truth of the matter seems to be that, though some professors have rightly denied the charge that they are influenced by feminine charm, other professors and their classes cannot avoid being affected by the presence of women, and that as long as professors are men, and co-eds are women, that effect will continue even to the extent that it might be termed "vamping".

Art, Music and Drama

Trinity Dramatics

This evening and to-morrow evening the Trinity Dramatic Club is going to produce Lady Gregory's "The Dragon." We have not read this but we believe it is an excellent play. It is a comedy of Irish folk-lore, about a king and queen, a beautiful princess and a chatty dragon. The style is rather charming.

We favour on the idea of a Dramatic Society concentrating all its energies on one grand must-up; it does not facilitate a study of the drama. But it certainly gives a good play to the audience. Remember "Cyrano."

Yale University, the founder of the Doctor of Philosophy degree in the United States, has conferred it upon 1,374 candidates since it was first given in 1861, according to statistics presented by Dean Wilbur L. Cross of the Yale Graduate School. His researches show that recipients of the degree include 32 college or university presidents, of whom 16 are still active, and that 712 of the degree holders are now teaching in colleges.

FAST, CLOSE GAME

Varsity Intermediate basketball team defeated Osgoode Hall in the first championship game for the intercollegiate title 27 to 24, in a fast, close game at Hart House last night. Varsity floored a faster and better conditioned squad and in all departments had an edge over their opponents. Devitt and Cook on the defence worked hard, smothering the rebounds. The latter contributed some nice long shots. Riggs, who is extremely fast, starred on the forward line while Pasternak at centre was also effective. Howell was easily the best for Osgoode.

Davies opened the scoring for Varsity but Howell countered two for the lawyers. After ten minutes of play it was 6 all and Varsity took advantage of a two minute rest. Cook put Varsity ahead with a pretty long shot and Howell retaliated with a field basket. Riggs tallied and at half time the teams were tied again.

Baskets by Riggs, Pasternak and Davies gave Varsity a comfortable lead. Turville potted a couple but the deadly foul shooting of Devitt and Riggs enabled the Blue and White boys to retain their advantage. Proulx, of Osgoode, was banished for Varsity Juniors have an important game at the Arena to-morrow night. The Blue and White meet Marlboros, the group leaders, and a victory is necessary for a chance at the play-offs. This promises to be a sparkling exhibition of hockey. The juniors go at top speed and each game of these doubleheaders provides real hockey. The juniors got a nice break by securing the Arena for Saturday night and a large crowd will probably witness the games.

This afternoon the finals of the West Point competition will be run off. These bouts are hard fought as every man is anxious to make the best showing possible.

Let's hope we don't have the same luck with the Jennings' Cup series as last year. Last season the weather was terrible for those wishing to play on the out-door rinks. As a result the schedules were all shot. And there was the Varsity Arena but not, of course, for Interfaculty Hockey.

BLUE AND WHITE MEET IRON DUKES TO-NIGHT

Varsity Juniors Have Good Chance of Emerging Victorious

To-morrow night's game with Marlboros is a very important event for the Blue and White Juniors. The Dukes are leading the Big Four hockey group and have yet to taste the cup of defeat, which means that Varsity will have to be playing its best brand of the winter pastime to pull out a win. The boys in Blue trounced the strong Toronto Canoe Club sextet last week, but the Dukes were even more impressive in their overwhelming onslaught against the Parkdale Canoe Club. If Varsity win tomorrow night and again next week against P.C.C., and Toronto Canoe Club wins its two remaining games, the Red Ringers will have a half game lead on the Blue and White. It seems altogether likely that both Varsity and T.C.C. will win their games against the lowly Paddlers, therefore the outcome of the Varsity-Marlboro and T.C.C.-Marlboro games will probably decide who will be Marlboros opponents in the play-offs for the Big Four title.

The Blue and White appear at last which, coupled with their already good defensive system should make them dangerous at all times.

MANY FINE BOUTS FEATURE ASSAULT

Jackson Defeats Longert in Best Bout of Day, but Both Are Rewarded

FINALS TO-DAY

Judging by the bouts on yesterday's elimination card, Varsity will send a pretty strong Assault-at-Arms team down to West Point this year. The boys showed ability as well as pluck, and were not averse to mixing it in good fashion. And this was only an indication of what is going to happen to-day when the finals will be decided. The finalists will travel to West Point, and the runners-up will show their wares next Wednesday at Guelph against O.A.C.

Robertson and Harding, both of U.C., weighing in at 125 pounds, met in the first number. Harding had a left that kept worrying his opponent in the first two rounds, but Robertson evened up the count in the last round to earn a draw. In the extra round Harding earned the bout.

Cook, U.C., engaged Wall, S.P.S., in the 145 pound class. Cook had the longer reach and Wall had to work in close to get anywhere but Cook's hard-hitting left soon weakened the School man, and he was declared the winner. Incidentally he seems right at home in the ring, able to take plenty of punishment and keep cool.

In the 135 pound division Steele, (Med), defeated Toll (Vic). Both were cautious at first and sparred around, but warmed up in a short time. Toll was forced to in-fight but Steele's long left jab wore him away. The victor had a weakness for rabbit punches and some of his pokes looked mighty like fouls.

In another 125 encounter, Howe (S.P.S.) won the decision over Clarkson (U.C.). The former took the offensive right from the start and his fast left followed by a hard-hitting right gave the loser no chance.

The best bout of the day was dish-ed up by Jackson (U.C.) and Longert (U.C.). Both boys have earned quite a reputation as fighters. They started off cautiously in the first round, mixing very little, but stepped right in the next round. Jackson packs a heavy right but Langert made a few impressions on the former's face with some nice uppercuts. This was beyond doubt the finest and cleanest number and pleased the fans. Jackson was given the decision but Longert is to make the trip to West Point also, for his fine display.

MacMillan (U.C.) defeated Keenan (School of Graduate Studies) in the light heavy-weight number. MacMillan had the reach but Keenan sailed right in and made things merry. The latter went down for the count of 8 but a little later MacMillan too, heard the ref. counting up to 7. The winner has a nice style, is aggressive and packs a good wallop.

To-day's bouts will take place at 4.30 in the boxing room. The draw is as follows:

Light Heavyweight — Smillie vs. MacMillan.
145 lbs.—Cook vs. MacLellan
125 lbs.—Howe vs. Bockes
Harding to meet the winner of this bout Saturday at 3 p.m. or in case of default at 5 p.m. to-day.
The Wrestling draw for to-day is as follows:
125 lbs.—Hilliard, Holden.
134 lbs.—Mainland, Fletcher.

Two Piano Recitals

Last evening an interesting recital of two piano music was given in the hall of the Toronto Conservatory by Naomi Granatstein and Etta Coles. The Programme opened with a delightful minuet by Seeböck (1859-1907), rendered with appropriately facile and unobtrusive technique. The Mozart Sonata in D Major was a trifle unconvincing but nevertheless truly Mozartian. The high point of the evening was the Cesar Franck (1822-1890) Prelude and rather unusual Fugue with variation. A note of lyrical devotion is sustained throughout this work whose pure emotion is never marred with sentimental banality. The Ravel "Mother Goose Suite" was an interesting piece of descriptive music, and the Saint-Saens "Carnival of the Animals" was given its first Toronto performance.

The two artists have developed an admirable technique and precision which is probably more difficult in a piano ensemble than any other. We could have wished for more numbers of the Cesar Franck quality, instead of the more popular and showy numbers which comprised too great a part of the programme.

Letters of Lovely Laura Louise The Ice Is Hard Despite Cushions

By D. Kendall

Upstairs,
Jan. 18th.

Dear Betty:

What simply putrid weather. I wish I were a chameleon to adapt myself to the environment. Why last Monday it was so cold that you could have skated on my new water waste. To-day I could go canoeing down University Avenue—that is if there was a moon. Well do you know what I am, my dear? I'm a real hot winter sport. The Doctor told that I suffered from lethargy, because of the vacation, and that I should take more exercise. So I tried hockey. I always thought that it was such a graceful game gliding, and shooting goals, but it isn't. Do you know that as soon as I stepped on the ice that I fell, so hard? I was simply thunder struck. And what is so terrible, Betty, I had that compass that Gid gave me in my pocket and I broke the mirror. Wasn't that awful? Why when the seven years are up, I'll be an old woman with a family. But I sure am't a quitter. No body can say that. I was going to try again but it rained. I went down town to get one of those hockey cushions that they talk about. I need some protection. But they didn't have any in the store, but the awfully good looking clerk told me that if I went and saw Teddy, he might give me one, as he has several that he isn't going to use any more in Toronto.

Gid broke his car, that is his room-mates? Isn't it awful? We were coming down University Avenue and then suddenly we skidded, and how we did skid. When we finished skidding we lost one wheel and part of the fender. I didn't even squeal once. Wasn't I brave? To be really honest I was too scared. But when I saw what I had been through I could have gargled a hypophosphate. It was kind of romantic just the same, just think we might have died in each others arms like Romeo and Cleopatra. Gid will have to pay for the car, just the same, that means I'll have to find another boy friend when he's broke.

Well Betty, that's all that I have to tell you this week. So right soon to your dearest friend

Laura Louise.

P.S.—I'm posting this letter on my way to the drug store for some more arnica. —L.L.

PRETTY PH.D. WIFE

F. Mallon II U.C. thought the project had its possibilities. He said, "It depends somewhat on the wife. However, when a fellow gets married he is supposed to settle down and if a man were serious and buckled down to his work he could do it."

J. Moyer, St. Mike's, was strongly opposed to the idea. "Too much time for family affairs," was his decision and he thought that a wife would be of no help. Furthermore he said the early marriage often led to divorce.

"Marriage has helped my husband in his work. His standing shows an improvement since we were married," was the reply of one married woman undergraduate whom "The Varsity" questioned as to whether marriage interfered with a college career. The reasons she gave for the improvement were logical and convincing. Before they were married her husband had to give her a good time, take her out nearly every night, and get to bed any time before morning. Occasionally they would stay in and try to do a little studying together, but somehow they wouldn't manage to do much.

Since being married, they did not go out as much, a couple of nights a week perhaps, or over the week-end. They went to bed earlier, and with the inducement of getting up for a breakfast prepared by his wife, he was able to get to a 9 o'clock much oftener than formerly.

Cases have been reported also, where a well-trained young wife helped her husband by copying his lecture notes, and assisting him in various other useful ways.

The general opinion about married co-eds seems to be that, for a woman to finish her college course, and at the same time give her attention to the serious business of housekeeping, is decidedly difficult, and also rather futile.

STOLEN OR LOANED MANY BOOKS VANISH FROM HART HOUSE

Curator Believes Most of Missing Volumes Will Be Returned

ONLY SIX ARE NOVELS

Had No Possible Bearing On Curricular Work as Library
Gets no "Text Books"

Questioned by "The Varsity" as to what books were missing from the shelves of the Hart House Library, Mr. B. D. Beamish, Curator of the Library, stated that on the last checking twenty-six volumes appeared to have been taken. He declared it as his conviction, however, that at least half a dozen of these had been returned since this checking, which had taken place during the Christmas holidays, and that many of the books had not been stolen—but in defiance of the strict rules of the Library—had been taken out, to be read and returned.

"I expect," said Mr. Beamish, "during this week to look over the shelves again. Some of the books may have been taken out during the Christmas holidays. From the assortment of books missing I expect to find many returned."

The notable feature of the situation is that of the errant volumes only six are listed as novels. The taste of the kleptomaniacal novel-readers runs all the way from Haggard's "King Solomon's Mines", and Jack London's "Burning Daylight", through W. J. Locke's "The Morals of Carcass Ordeyne", and A. E. W. Mason's "Winding Stair", to Van Vechten's "Blind Bow Boy" and "The Three Soldiers" of John Dos Passos—the latter a recent acquisition to the Library.

In the non-fiction class the twenty missing books seem quite unrelated. A "Life of Mussolini" appears to have taken the fancy of one, while a Shavian seems to have attached himself to "St. Joan". Upton Sinclair's "Brass Check" has also disappeared. Asked whether any of the volumes had any possible bearing on curricular work, Mr. Beamish replied that it was the policy of the Library not to get "text books".

FORESTERS' CLUB HOLD ANNUAL AT-HOME

Hart House Presents Gay,
Happy Aspect as Unconfined
Joy Prevails

Despite most unfavourable weather conditions the Annual At-Home of the Foresters' Club held at Hart House on Friday evening was exceedingly successful.

The Music Room with its softly-shaded lights formed an attractive setting in which the "woodmen" and their gaily clad partners glided to the strains of a snappy orchestra. A "Paul Jones" with half a dozen variations was one of the "high spots" of an interesting program. The Library with its sequestered corners provided a peaceful rendezvous for the devotees of the far-famed Mues.

Supper was served in the Great Hall where the silver gleams of the five fire-place aided in the contrast between the severe black and white of the mere male and the brilliant gowns of their partners.

The Committee in charge, Messrs. Bastock, Matthews, Buell and Beall, are to be congratulated for their share in making the evening a great success.

Hart House Elections

The House Committee of Hart House with the approval of the Board of Stewards announce that the election of members to the Standing Committees of the House will take place on Wednesday, March 6th.

All male undergraduates are cautioned to present their Hart House Fee Receipt and registration card to the Hall Porter as soon as possible and have their membership stamp affixed since this card must be shown when voting.

Notice

Certificates of attendance in connection with the payment of the second instalment of University of Toronto Scholarships are now ready and may be obtained at the Registrar's Office, Simcoe Hall.

FROSH DISOBEDIENCE CREATES A PROBLEM

Trinity Students Puzzled by Clash in Regulations and College Traditions

PROVOST TO DECIDE

Residents at Trinity House are finding it impossible to observe both the University regulations and college traditions. Regulations forbid any students of upper years from striking or doing physical injury to any first year man. Tradition says that first year men must tag for their seniors in particular for college executives and members of societies if requested to do so. But there is no provision to the legitimate course of action to be taken if the freshman refuses to do as he is asked.

Cases have occurred of this kind, and sometimes men of the upper years have resorted to force. The usual penalty for such an infringement of rules is suspension for several weeks from residence.

A deputa-tion is to see Provost Cosgrave this afternoon, in an effort to arrive at a solution of the problem. This is the result of another deadlock, which took place last week, when a freshman refused to obey his superiors.

CANADIAN DEBATING TEAM LOSE TWO ENCOUNTERS

Melvin Kenny, of the University of Toronto, and Bernard Alexander, of McGill University, who formed the debating team sent to England by the National Federation of Canadian University students, lost only two debates on their tour.

Alexander returned to Montreal a few days ago, while Kenny is remaining in Europe for some time. Considerable publicity followed one debate when one student in the audience rose and began to sing "Yankies Doodle" in a most unbecomingly manner. It was meant entirely as a joke, it was learned afterwards; scores of letters of apology were received by the two Canadians.

Meds See Unique Film

Medical students attended on Friday the showing of a unique film in the Mining Building. "Cell processes" was the subject of the film which is one of the only two of its kind in the world. It was brought here by Dr. C. G. Barlow, of the University of London, England. The showing of such effects as mitosis was vividly detailed.

SERIOUSLY INJURED DURING BOXING BOUT CONDITION IS GRAVE

Ed. J. How of S.P.S. Collapses
Shortly After Leaving Ring

DISTINGUISHED AS BOXER

Slight Concussion of Brain is Caused by Blow to The Temple

Edward J. How, 311 year S.P.S. student who collapsed after a boxing bout in the gym at Hart House on Friday night, is still in a critical condition. It was reported last night at the General Hospital that he was not out of danger yet, although he is somewhat improved.

How was boxing in the 125-lb. class in the finals to decide the West Point team. His opponent was J. L. Boehk, U.C. The bout was called in the third round. How was assisted from the ring and collapsed shortly after. Restoratives were applied without effect, and he was removed to the emergency department of the General Hospital, where he remained unconscious all night and part of Saturday. It was learned unofficially that he was in poor condition when he entered the ring.

Ted How is a popular student and athlete, and he distinguished himself in boxing for some years. He was champion of his class at Upper Canada College, which he left in 1924, and also at the Royal Military College, Kingston, where he has been for the past four years.

His condition is said to be due to a blow on the temple during the course of the bout. He incurred slight concussion of the brain. It is thought that paralysis resulted from the injury of a muscle.

CO-EDS HAVE NO FEAR OF CHORUS GIRL'S LIFE

Musical Comedy to be Presented Entirely by Varsity
Students

The life of a chorus girl has a strong appeal to some of the fair co-eds at Varsity since about fourteen would-be Anne Penningtons have responded to the "ad" in Wednesday's "Varsity" to take part in a musical comedy to be produced at Hart House.

Mr. Mosher, who is going to train the chorus and create the steps was quite enthusiastic about the production when interviewed by "The Varsity". He had little real information except that it is to be an original production done entirely by university students.

"The book, lyrics and score are," he said, "just corking and the dance ideas are the best any one could ask for to work on."

The dancing is to be of the standard musical comedy type with two especially snappy numbers including both men and girls.

FRATERNITY WINDOW SMASHED BY BULLET A LA CHICAGO

Malicious Conspiracy Against Organization by Unknown
Is Feared

POLICE INVESTIGATING

Gun Might Have Been Fired on Spadina Road as Force of Shot was Almost Spent

A bullet from the gun of some unknown person crashed through a window of a St. George St. fraternity house on Saturday at noon, and has given rise to fears that some person or persons unknown may have malicious designs upon the organization in question. The bullet, which was recovered, proved to be a .22, shot from a rifle, according to the police, and the rifle-barrel was poorly grooved.

The trajectory of the pellet, which was traced by the evidence of the hole in the window and the hole in the screen, would have brought the shot on a curve above the house on the opposite side of the street. The force of the shot was pretty well spent, according to the plainclothesmen, and, as a .22 could carry 1,000 yards, the gun might have been on Spadina Road.

The police have the case well in hand, according to a query on the part of "The Varsity" and spent Sunday afternoon making enquiries. The matter had not been brought to their attention until Sunday noon. Further evidence that the bullet was slowing up was afforded by the fact that it was not badly flattened by the impact with the window, and was flattened on one side as if wobbling. The hole in the window was large, and not clean-cut as a fast-travelling bullet should cut it.

VARSLTY PREFERRED TO OTHER COLLEGES

Lund Co-Ed. Lauds Athletics
And Honour Courses
For Women

"Your University is wonderful—it is so vital and alive" said Miss Charlotte Pearson, graduate of University of Lund, Sweden, when asked by "The Varsity" for her impressions of U. of T. "There is an atmosphere of friendliness towards each other, and so many activities and games. But what surprises me a little, is to hear people talk in the Library."

At the Swedish and other European Universities more people dedicate their lives to abstract scholarship, whereas in Canada we are more practical and wish to capitalize our education. But they do not encourage sports to the same degree. "I am sorry for that, because I feel that games build stamina and courage."

Miss Pearson is a great believer in Honour Courses for women.

Miss Pearson prefers the life of the University of Toronto to that of the American Universities.

"Poets"

Would you like to see your verse in print? One of the purposes of the Table Round, which appears on Thursdays, is to provide space for poems written by students. In past years some of the most brilliant of Canada's young poets have had selections of their work printed in "The Varsity", and this year, as before, contributions should reach "The Varsity" before 5 p.m., Wednesday evening, addressed to the Table Round.

HOCKEY TEAM POOR

Special to the Varsity
Montreal, Que.—When the Inter-collegiate basketball season opens here on February 2nd, McGill will send out onto the floor a team that appears to constitute their most promising bid for titular honors in the past few years. Western will oppose the Red players in the opening tilt. McGill is represented here by two senior basketball teams, the first team in the Intercollegiate and one in the Senior City League. Added to the four veterans of the Intercollegiate team are three valuable newcomers to McGill basketball and in exhibition games played here recently the Red team has defeated some of the strongest local senior squads.

The recent trip to New York saw the Intercollegiate defeated by Pratt Institute and West Point Military Academy but the players have redeemed themselves here by defeating Central Y and last night routing St. Mary's seniors by a fifty-six to twenty-seven score.

Among the veterans of last year's squad are Faulkner and Grossland, forwards, and Silverman and McLean, defense men.

Outstanding among the newcomers are Don Young, former Ottawa, star, who is making good at centre, Mel Rice, a former Mount Allison player and Al Pelker, complete the Intercollegiate squad.

University of Montreal and McGill Hockey squads are sharing the collar position in the senior group of the O.H.A. here. The two college entries in the local senior league have not distinguished themselves in the race that Victorias, last year's Allan Cup finalists, are leading by a wide margin. The University of Montreal sextet redeemed themselves to some extent last Monday by holding Victorias to a tie, the first that Vics failed to win this season. Elimination bouts are now being held in the boxing, wrestling and fencing club in preparation for the assault-arms at Kingston on February 15th and 16th.

WOMEN'S STAFF

There will be a meeting of the women's staff of "The Varsity" in the office to-day at 4.30. It is important that every member of the staff (including probationers) should be present.

Rev. Vincent Reath, a former member of the staff of St. Michael's College, died yesterday morning at St. Michael's Hospital. Ten days ago, he fell and fractured his hip. Complications developed and the best knowledge of the medical profession was not sufficient to save his life.

Father Reath has been attached to the staff of St. Michael's College for the past quarter of a century. During that time thousands of students in Canada and the United States have passed under his influence. No member of the staff has lived so long or so constantly the life of the college boy. An expert in dealing with boys and young men, he was for years Master of Discipline and was in close contact with them from morning till night. Though he was responsible for their conduct he regarded him rather as a friend than a guardian. He had a rare gift of sympathy and kindness which he used unsparringly to comfort and console those in sorrow and distress. Boys, since grown into manhood, returning to the college for a visit failed to remember oftentimes their professor of Latin or French, but were eager to see Father Reath and have a visit with him. The more trouble they were in while at college the more anxious they were to have a chat with him about the days of old.

His superiors, realizing the power he exercised over others, appointed him chaplain to the Mercer Reformatory and the Monastery of Our Lady of Charity. Souls scarred and seared by contact with a rough world, oftentimes more sinned against than sinning, found in Father Reath, a priest indeed.

"While we consign the body of Father Reath to the grave, we believe that the living Christ has already welcomed him into that Kingdom." (Continued on page 4)

VISITORS' BOOK REVEALS WELL-KNOWN NAMES

Cosmopolitanism is Evident

At Hart House

Hart House continues to be the Mosque of all the famous pilgrims that come to the Mecca of the University of Toronto. A glance at the Visitors' Book in Hart House Library never fails to reveal well known names from all parts of the globe. The list since the beginning of the year is interesting.

J. J. Seiderholm, Geological Survey of Finland, Helsingfors; Garnet Hughes, London, J. M. Cherry, University of Melbourne; Lennox Robinson, Manager, Abbey Theatre, Dublin; Friedrich Hujika, Jan Kovak, Prague Teachers' Chorus, Prague, Czechoslovakia.

Undergraduates who have not yet discovered this Visitors' Book, or the Library itself, have not yet seen the cosmopolitan aspect of University life.

Burwash Hall gave the second night of a series of musicals on Sunday night, with Madame de Kréas and Mr. Gordon Hallett as artists.

THE CONTRADICTION AGAIN

A certain amount of rumpus has been aroused at Trinity College because the men students there have encountered the same contradiction that has been bobbing up in other colleges and faculties for the past three years. The tradition at this college is that the freshmen may be required to "fag" by the executives of clubs and by committees. But there is in addition, the rule, of more recent origin, that physical force may not be employed against the same freshmen. What would be done if a freshman were to refuse?

One of them did this little thing the other day, and according to report, in brusque fashion. In such brusque fashion did he do it that the upper classmen were wrathful. To paraphrase Hamlet, they were irked at the law's decay, the freshman's contumely. Fines imposed by a discipline committee, many of them thought, were insufficient to punish such temerity. But they were faced by the rule prohibiting personal violence.

This rule happens to have been passed by the Corporation of Trinity College but it coincides with the rule passed by the Caput of the University. The rule therefore is not a local one and the infractions of it are not local matters, but repetitions of what has happened throughout the university. The contradiction is apparent, no matter where you choose to look.

Despite criticism this newspaper has been at some pains to point out the contradiction between certain passages in the Faculty calendars and certain practices which are not confined to one faculty or one residence, but are more or less common to all. This policy has seemed to some students and dons to be unfair to them. Students who feared the consequences of their acts thought that we were trying to expose them to the authorities. Dons thought that we were trying to show that they were inefficient. Students said that a subsidized newspaper should not tell them when they were breaking rules. Dons said that a subsidized newspaper should not tell them when they were not enforcing rules.

But the contradiction remains. And since that is a law and this is a newspaper we consider it our duty to point out such things instead of spending our time twiddling our thumbs. It is about time that somebody pointed it out because it is three years since initiations involving physical violence were abolished and the hearties of the second and third years do not seem to have forgotten the urge to smack. This is strange because they did not have to undergo any official initiation at the hands of the present fourth year, which had the wretched experience of receiving much and giving much less.

In forbidding violence the Caput acted on excellent grounds. In the first place there had been some fairly depraved initiation immediately before its decision, which were strong arguments in favour of drastic action. In the second place the authorities were of the opinion, doubtless, that an institution of learning could get along without displays of violence.

But apparently this is not altogether an institution of learning in the sense that the men that come here are here to attend strictly to learning and nothing else. Most of the men come here at an early age when they have not outgrown a natural desire for horseplay. So that the seniors may want to thump people on general principles or the freshmen may make themselves so objectionable as to require thumping.

In the meantime there is a rule against a tradition.

To Honour Orphans

In appreciation of their remarkable fight and final success in gaining the Ontario Rugby Football Union Senior Championship, Varsity Orphans are to be presented with sweeter coats and crests by the City of Toronto at a smoker to be held at Columbus Hall at 7.30 p.m. to-night.

WATER POLO NOTICE

The first game between Varsity "A" and "B" water polo teams for the City Championship will be played to-morrow night at 8.15 p.m. in Hart House pool. Will the following players please be out:

Varsity "A"—Bullen, Sinclair, Graham, Grant, Glass, Goss, Thwaites.
Varsity "B"—Ayers, Spence, Middleboro, Maconachie, Latchford, Pierdon, Alexander, Dyble, Fisher.

Art, Music and Drama

Art Gallery

It has been decided by the staff to keep the Art Gallery open to-morrow night for a special display of "Old Masters" in order to accommodate the crowds expected.

Friday Afternoon Recital

The Friday recital, given in Hart House last Friday evening was of particular interest to the regular attendants of such recitals in that the programme was given by an ensemble of string instruments—the Sumberg String Quartet. The Haydn Quartet, feature of the programme was treated by the quartet with fitting gaiety and played with a precision which was most commendable although in the slower movements, we felt that the accompaniment to the first violin, which was carrying the melody, might have been a little more adequately phrased by the lower instruments. A group of short attractive numbers chosen from the encore album of the Flonzaley quartet were received with much pleasure. Perhaps in arranging the programme it would have been wiser to have placed the Haydn in the middle of the group and kept the unity of the work. However, the work was given in its entirety and was distinctly a pleasure to the audience which was not niggardly of its praise.

Trinity Dramatics

Seldom has it been our lot to encounter a more elegant dragon. Its nose, its eyes, its teeth, its tongue, its scaly greenness, magnificent! Pure dragon.

As we have said before, we think that a University Society should look for out-of-the-way plays, and this one, by Lady Gregory, is certainly interesting, not only in itself, but as an example of a type. But though it is quite delightful and rather humorous it is certainly not a great play and only barely a good play. It is a fairy story pure and simple, without any "over-toned" of sophisticated thought or any striving after poetic or scenic effect, and depending for its charm on a peculiar Irish naïveté. At the close there is an encounter between the Dragon and various champions which is relayed to us by the window-watchers and sounds like the radio report of a prize fight.

Due to an unfortunate mistake in the copy on Friday we stated that we liked one dramatic society to concentrate on one play a year. We don't. And the error of this was clearly brought out in "The Dragon", for, though the acting was really very good, it was marred by a diction so fast that the audience missed much of the text, and by the actors forgetting their roles when they were not speaking. This may be the fault of poor direction, but it also indicates that the actors have more histrionic ability than experience.

It is hard to differentiate among the actors. Apart from the defects we have noted they were all good. They struggled manfully with the Irish accent, some laying it on more thickly than others, and the King achieving something pretty close to cockney, which sounded odd from a king, but the general effect was quite Irish.

Clarke made a very realistic astrologer, Dorothy Langley played the part of a dreadful queen with style and force and Erica Mundy made the rather poetic part of the Princess quite beautiful, though she had a tendency to overact.

On the whole no serious criticism can be levelled against this production; they seemed to get the most out of the play. But neither the play nor the production can hope to compare with "Cyrano".

W.U.A. Musicales

The second W.U.A. musicale was held yesterday afternoon at the Women's Union, with Frederick Winfield as the artist of the afternoon. Mr. Winfield, who was accompanied by Weidon Kilbourne is recognized as one of the coming young Canadian violinists.

The first three movements of Healey Willan's "Sonata in E Minor", were given a depth of sympathy in (Continued on page 4)

WOW WOW! Women are to be admitted to the next Hart House Debate and don't say that we are not giving it publicity. From what we have heard of the visitor of the evening, it will be the snappiest known for many a gussy meeting, and there will be the added novelty of a few palpable arguments. Verbosity and twaddle, as everyone knows, are not Agnes' MacPhailings.

C—C

And then, just as the debate "That female emancipation has not justified its rights," looms on the rhetorical horizon, darn if we don't have a symposium on the question of marriage in college, and what with the Dutch date biznis of last fall, the question of women's rights and the like will be well aired. Possibly, with easing discussion the co-eds of the varsity and the nation need a few Which, we fear, is where the begin to fly.

ing facts in Friday's issue: Interests. Nash, Meds, has never been married and Mr. J. B. Metzler, U.C., would like a pretty girl; Dyer, S.F.S., with his exams; Mallon, to help him; possibilities—who doesn't?—J. Moyet, S.C., seems to fear alimony.

When interviewed by "The Varsity", King Solomon says in his first had only about 40 years, but rose rapidly two years, but then he had 600. He and at commencement the Rhodes was awarded the Rhodes Count Bluebird, B.S. (Continued on page 4)

VARSITY JUNIORS SWEEP TO VICTORY OVER THE IRON DUKES

SR. U.C. BEATEN IN CLOSE BASKETBALL GAME BY O.A.C.

What was probably the hardest fought contest played this season in interfaculty basketball, took place Saturday night at Guelph when Sr. O.A.C. defeated Sr. U.C. to the tune of 39-31. The fast, but light, U.C. team, after battling valiantly on even terms with their heavier opponents finally succumbed; but only after two overtime periods had been necessary to determine the issue.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The unfortunate accident to Ted How of the third year S.P.S. in his bout with Boeckh in the 125 pound class is a serious one. He is still in danger but it is thought that he will recover. There has been some criticism of Jimmie Jackson, the referee of the bout, for not stopping it sooner but that criticism comes from those not present. At no time before the bout was stopped was How in distress and after the bout he went downstairs to the dressing room before he collapsed. It is to be hoped that there is not long illness involved for Ted How, who is a popular "School" man.

The Blue and White juniors performed the big trick on Saturday night. Their defeat of the famed Marlboros was the first suffered by that squad all year and the win puts Varsity definitely in the running for second place and a chance to play off for the Big Four honours. The game was a real win for the Frank Sullivan squad and they gained many friends by their great display against the almost unbeatable Dukes.

Brant and Laing were the two lads that did the scoring and every man on the Blue team knew that it meant elimination if they lost. They were in there fighting with all they had and the result was the first big upset in the junior series of the season.

The Blues are a light, young team with only one man, Hunnisset in goal, a veteran. They went into the game determined to win and they upset the Dukes. The same spirit should carry them into the playoffs. They have an advantage over the Toronto Canoe Club in the next game. At present a win for Varsity over the weak sisters Parkdale and a loss by the Toronto C.C. at the hands of the Iron Dukes which is very likely would put the University of Toronto team in the second place position. That double header will be on the boards on Friday at the downtown Arena and it is likely that the Blues will have a great turn-out to support them.

The eliminations held at Hart House in the boxing produced some good material for the trips to Guelph and West Point and New York. The list of the men taking the trips appears in the issue to-day, the first team is going to West Point and the second one will go to Guelph. In their trip to West Point the team will also take in New York and fight there on Monday.

One of the most successful tea was supplied by the Varsity Enterprises of the season was held at tainers' Orchestra, and a large crowd Newman Club on Saturday. Music attended.

VARSITY JUNIORS DOWN MARLBOROS

Big Crowd Present Witnesses Close and Thrilling Game

BROADCAST OVER RADIO

Varsity juniors realized their big ambition Saturday night at the Arena Gardens when they downed the previously unbeaten Marlboros. The score was 2 to 1 and the game was just as tightly contested as the score would indicate. In fact it was one of the hardest fought and most interesting struggles of the season. The game was witnessed by a large crowd and was broadcast over the radio.

Varsity took the lead early in the first period and were never headed although the Dukes tried with all they had to overcome that lead.

Near the start of the game Frank Sullivan's boys took the Dukes by surprise and scored their first goal on a long shot from Brant's stick. A few moments after the second stanza had commenced Laing let distend and the puck slipped in on the Marlboro goalies' chest and giving Varsity a comfortable lead. Marlboros' efforts at goal-getting bore no fruit until the final period when Convey batted the puck past Hunnisset from a scramble in front of the net for the final goal of the game.

Marlboros—Goal, Christie; defence, Levinsky and Pringle; centre, Convey; wings, Jackson and Hackett; alternates, Montgomery and Bradley.

Varsity—Goal, Hunnisset; defence, Smith and Williams; centre, Brant; wings, Laing and Hetherington; alternates, Bell and Bennett.

Summary

First Period

1 Varsity—Brant
Penalties—Laing, Convey, Levinsky

Second Period

2 Varsity—Laing
Penalties—Pringle, Brant, Montgomery, Jackson, Bell, Jackson, Williams.

Third Period

3 Marlboros—Convey Penalties—Jackson, Williams, Hackett, Jackson.

ALMOST A NEW TEAM TACKLE CADETS

Varsity Boxing Teams Chosen To Invade Guelph, New York and West Point

EXPECT KEEN COMPETITION

The men that will take the trip to West Point and Guelph are below. There were elimination bouts to decide some while in the other classes the representatives were chosen without taking part in contests. The trip to West Point is almost an annual one and the Blue and White team has always come off with prime honours. This year the team is almost a new one and the results will be interesting as the men will be initiated to real competition and their strength will be tested in preparation for the Intercollegiate assault held at Queen's this year. The trip to West Point will also include a series of bouts at the New York Athletic Club. The team will take part in West Point on Friday and in New York on Monday. Both the team for the Guelph and West Point must report to the coach personally at 4.30 p.m. to-day.

Team for West Point, first team—Heavy—Harry Hills. Light-heavy—MacMillan. Middle—Jackson and Longert. Welter—MacLennan. Light—Steele.

125 Pound—Boeckh. Team for Guelph, second team—Heavy—Keenan.

VARSITY AND M.A.A.A. TIE AT WATER POLO

Second Interprovincial Game Held at Montreal in Pool Strange to Varsity

SCORE WAS 4-ALL

The second Interprovincial water polo game between the Montreal Athletic Association and University of Toronto on Saturday night resulted in a 4-all tie.

Although the game was played in the M.A.A.A. pool the Varsity players gave a wonderful exhibition of water polo and held the Montreal City Champions to a well-deserved tie. Bulent, the Varsity goalie, certainly helped the team considerably as he was in stellar form and stopped innumerable shots.

University of Toronto—Goal, Bulen; Defence, Middleboro, Sinclair; Half, Spence; Centre, Goss; Forward, Armstrong, Latchford, Graham.

M.A.A.A.—Goal, Cornforth; Defence, Light, Clouston; Half, Scott; Centre, Gilday; Forwards, Henning, Warmington, Gross.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 18—Development of a "Sea Sense" among the inland population of Canada is a vital factor in future development of the country, according to Captain Frederick William Wallace, former Blue Note skipper and well-known Maritime author who has arrived in Vancouver to take part in direction of the sea music festival next week. "Canada, with huge seaboard and depending on export markets to dispose of much of what we produce, must look to her ports, ships and shipping as a predominant part of her development," he said in an interview. "With development of a sea consciousness growing slowly, it is important that we keep alive the glorious old British traditions. Many of these have been passed along in sea songs of various kinds and it is through revival of some of the old sea music here that much more may be accomplished in this respect." Captain Wallace referred to the fact that in the time of wooden ships, Canada had listed more than 3,700 ships and barks of 500 tons and over, and stood fourth in shipping among the nations, a condition that passed with the sailing ship. He is the author of many important maritime books and novels, among them "Blue Water," "The Viking Blood," "The Shack Locker," "Salt Seas and Sailormen," "Tea From China," "Captain Salvation," "Wooden Ships and Iron Men" and "In the Wake of the Wind Ships." He is editor of the Canadian Fisherman and writer of many technical articles on Maritime affairs. Captain Wallace has written a musical sketch, based on the old English Chanteys, for the sea music festival here.

Mere Slush Ball Did Not Decorate Eye Had Hunk of Coal in the Middle

(By N. J. DeWitt)

"Hello, Bunkley, I'm glad to see you're back," said ye scribe, to Mr. Bunkley Shuter who had just returned to spend a week-end at home from college.

"How can you see my back when I'm facing you and anyway, why are you glad to see it?" asked Bunkley, sourly.

"Bunkley," we said, "you misinterpret me. But where did you get the lamp?"

"The peeper? Oh, I got into a scrap. I got mixed up in the Meds-S.P.S. snow-ball fight. The Meds are the students who study medicine and hold discussion groups at the meal table in Hart House and the S.P.S. men are studying to be engineers."

"On donkey engines?"

"Not necessarily. Anyway, I got into this scrap and got hit in the eye with a slush ball."

"That wouldn't give you a black eye."

"Yes, but there was a hunk of coal in the middle of the ball."

"You don't need to tell me who threw it."

"You're right. It was a Med."

"What did you do?"

"Well, the President once told us to promote good-will between faculties, so I didn't want to hurt anybody and walked away."

"Well done! Your fellow citizens are proud of you. But when did the President tell you this?"

"In his address."

"Tell me, Bunkley, what is the President's Address?"

"He lives in Queen's Park."

"You misinterpret me again. But what are you doing these days?"

But the Meds stirred not nor flinched, as the mighty lion moves not nor runs when the fair featured youths best him with barking dogs, so did the Meds receive their onset with many a hard-packed snow-ball. And lo, many a School Man, smitten on the snueller with a pellet did pass down to the House of Hades on College Street, wailing fearfully that he should be deprived of life while so young and tough.

But not unscathed did the Meds pass, forsooth, but many a fast one did they take on the peeper, and many a one did say to his dear heart, "Ah, me, why did I leave the far-off Medical Building, plentiful with stiffs, both big and small, idioform-smelling, where I lived in peace. Alas, dearly I fear I may never see my sweet comrades again." Thus did he say to his heart.

But lo, Darco, the far-seeing, the omnipresent, espied the fray, and wrath he spoke to his henchman, flat-footed, "Ho, meseemeth the School Men and the Meds assay the dirlful scrap with one another. Get on thy the slow, opening recitative, contrasting exquisitely with the fiery allegro. The adagio movement, or "Romanza," silhouetted its liquid upper notes against the dissonances breaking in on the progression of the melody.

Borowski's well-known "Adoration" was followed by Cameron-White's arrangement of a negro spiritual, in which the double-stopping was startlingly reminiscent of the mingled richness of a negro chorus, interpreted by Mr. Winfield's perfect control of the resonant lower notes and quavering high, sweet tones. The airy lightness of Burleigh's "Fairy Falling" formed a delicate interlude.

Mr. Kilbourne showed an absolute mastery of the technical difference between the English and French moderns, portrayed by Scott's "Water Wagtail" and Jacques Ibert's "Le Petit Ane Blanc" and the Beethoven "Eccossaise."

The group of Kreisler's compositions which formed the latter half of the program was well-suited to the violinist's rich humanity and pearly lightness of tone. Kreisler's arrangement of the well-loved "Rosary," and his own "Old Refrain," were followed by the popular and fiery "Liedes-lic". These were so enthusiastically received that an encore in the "Frasquita's Serenade," by Lehar-Kreisler, an exquisitely modern love lyric, appealing to all with its rich emotionalism was given by Mr. Winfield. Above all, the deep, tender touch of the artist superimposed on every selection a surprisingly liquid effect, equalled only by his perfection of technique.

Haroun el Raschid, Caliph of Bagdad, told "The Varsity" that marriage in college was just the thing. "I was always rather harem-scarem at the Tigris Tech, and if I had been a better fraternity man..." The reporter guffawed here and in the excitement completely lost his head.

Rarius II, of Persia, refused an interview but said that as he never spoke for the press he could only say that he was Darius the devil and wanted a shot of something out of a flask. As for getting married in college, he was the bunk, as according to the laws of the Medes and Persians it had to be done in church.

WHEN Tom telephoned from college last week he promised he would call again to-night at nine o'clock. Mother can hardly wait for the telephone to ring. And Dad... he wants to say "hello" to the boy, too.

There is nothing like the telephone to keep you in close touch with home. The many little things which pertain to college life may be discussed... counsel and encouragement of parents enlisted.

The nearest thing to personal contact is voice contact over the telephone. A few minutes chat will banish loneliness and homesickness. Let the telephone connect you with Mother and Dad once every week of your college life. It is a habit you will never regret.

THEORY OF ACCIDENT MAY SOLVE RIDDLE OF FRAT SHOT

Officials Believe Bullet Not Intended for House but

A DUBIOUS HONOUR

Fraternity Shows Reluctance To Discuss Question
With Reporter

Members of the Phi Kappa Sigma fraternity at 94 St. George Street, were very reticent about the window-breaking shot which, it is alleged, disturbed the serenity of their household on Saturday last. When interviewed by the "Varsity" yesterday evening, Mr. G. D. Thompson, a member of the fraternity, stated that there was no information to be given out and appeared puzzled that anything should be known of the shooting. When asked if he had not read the account of it in yesterday's "Varsity" he replied that he had not even heard of its being in print. The house is evidently not desirous of publicity which puzzles us. It is not every fraternity which has the distinction of being shot at and hit.

The police after two days fruitless inquiry are inclined to believe that the bullet was not meant for the house but blighted there by mere chance. It is thought that some one on the next street had been toying with a gun which discharged at an unexpected moment. As for the theory that some one shot the bullet from the next street or farther with the intention of putting it in the window; it is manifestly absurd. It would need an artillery man of no mean ability to accomplish such a feat, and then success would be very dubious.

Evidently the shooting was one of those accidents which are liable to happen at any time in the whereabouts of firearms, and of which Phi Kappa Sigma were in this case, the victims. It is fortunate that no one was injured.

The origin of the shot appears to be about to go down among the unexplained mysteries of Toronto. The rumour that Dr. Langsner is going to be solicited to solve it is held to be groundless.

War waged again at Knox College about midnight last night when the participants were well soaked. After about fifteen minutes striving without making any headway, the invaders, outnumbering the defenders, and strengthened by reinforcements, began to gain ground. Before they had passed the first landing, however, a truce was declared owing to a slight injury to several of the men and the possibility of further damage.

The cause of the row was the tapping of a West House man by an unofficial discipline party from East House.

A woolly polar bear curled up on an ice-floe has been the subject of much comment in the lunch line-up at the U.C. Women's Union during the past week. Upon inquiry "The Varsity" found that the bear, which is really a hooked rug made by the fishermen's wives of Labrador, was procured for the Union by a graduate who is connected with the Y.W.C.A. in Newfoundland.

Among the curios which have found their way to the Union from various parts of the world are two brass trays which have a rather interesting history. A large round, curiously beaten brass came from far away Africa where a graduate living in Lagos, obtained it from the native women. The other is the gift of Mrs. Henry Burton Sharman, who brought it from Peking, where she and Dr. Sharman attended the World's Student Christian Conference. It is unusually unique in the fact that on the back of the tray is inscribed an exquisite poem entitled "Brasses" by the donor who is a poet of no mean order.

Then there are a number of brightly painted bowls, the work of another graduate, Dorothy Haines, who lectured in the Museum last year, while a women graduate in Architecture presented the Union with an odd pair of bellows from England. It is interesting to note that one pours one's

A number of professors find time to write books in intervals between lecturing and reading. Four have been recently published by men who are, or have been, associated with this university.

Maurice Hutton's "All the Rivers Run into the Sea," is a collection of addresses, like his former books. It contains diverse topics, and has been described as a "harmony of wit, wisdom, and epigram." Sir Robert Falconer has published three lectures given at Mount Allison University, under the Josiah Wood Lecture Foundation. SPEECH ON CHINA

"The world to-day, and the world as visualized by leading industrialists should be speeding through the years with the speed of an express train directed by the hand of Henry Ford at the throttle and other financial wizards composing the remainder of the crew," stated Mr. P. J. McAndrew at the weekly meeting of the Areopagus Club at St. Michael's College last evening. Mr. McAndrew took issue with the maxim that "This is a world of progress". The speaker advocated a return to medieval customs.

Mr. J. J. Collins, speaking on "Industrial China" pointed out to the club the gifts of ancient China to civilization. "In the first century B.C.," said Mr. Collins, "China made many valuable engineering discoveries. Later she gave to the world gunpowder and silk. Due to her isolated position however, China's progress has been retarded and it is only now that she is awakening to the possibilities that are hers." Mr. Collins pictured a rosy future for the country in the years to come.

The Rev. H. S. Bellisle acted as guest critic and gave a few comments on the subjects chosen by the speakers. Extemporaneous speeches were delivered by the following members: Mr. Panshock on "Working for a Living"; J. McCannan, "School Spirit at St. Michael's"; and J. S. Shannon on "Ingersoll".

As usual the Constitutional and the Nonconformists engaged in a merry going to the latter when they succeeded in rescinding one of the much maligned constitutional provisions.

HISTORY RELATED

Type of Armaments Needed
Is Perplexing Problem
At Present

"I have decided this evening to make some observations on a subject that constitutes the chief challenge to this generation, the necessity of laying foundations of peace in the future by reducing armaments in the present," stated the Hon. A. Meighan at a dinner given in Burwash Hall last night by the Faculty, Alumni and Alumni Associations of Victoria College in honour of the students awarded medals, scholarships and prizes last year.

Mr. Meighan then explained the great importance of the Anglo-French Compromise in the matter of naval disarmament. Its history was related and the stands taken by Great Britain, France, United States, Italy and Japan were clearly shown. In the light of this history no country can accuse another of not playing the international game and although an argument can be made for what the nation across the border desires, it cannot be made for a complaint of the way in which this Anglo-French Compromise has been arrived at.

In conclusion Mr. Meighan mentioned the necessity of a certain degree of armaments and the gordin knot which the representatives of the nations each with its own peculiar needs must untie before World Peace could be a reality.

After the toast to the King, the Hon. N. W. Rowell, Chairman of the Board of Regents, introduced the students who had won academic distinction. He remarked that the graduates had an opportunity to observe that these students were also physically fit and "reasonably good-looking". Industry and patience were also necessary in after life, he pointed out, and wished the students every success.

The response was made by Miss Mary Coleman, who spoke of the way scholarships enriched college life and Mr. J. R. Cragg, who mentioned Vic's contribution to the University. The Chancellor Bowles in his address said that the year which had gone by had been pleasant and happy and in it the new machinery of an Arts College, Victoria and a Theological one, Emmanuel had been tried out. The ambitious buildings plans for these colleges, their residences, and a new chapel were sketched in outline. Miss Lillian Andrew "Z", gave a solo; and at the close of proceedings, "The Old Ontario Strand" was sung.

Architecture

NEEDED IN TORONTO

Chair of Geography Also is Included in Plans Under Consideration

It was learned by "The Varsity" yesterday that plans for establishing a chair of Fine Arts and a chair of Geography at the University are being considered by the Senate. Sir Robert Falconer is particularly interested in the matter, and something definite will probably be done as soon as the necessary funds can be arranged for.

The chair of Fine Arts is not intended, as has been supposed, to give a course in sketching, or to compare in any way with either the extension course in Appreciation of Art or the Hart House Sketch Committee.

It will consist rather of lectures on the theoretical side of the art, and will be a requirement of the course in Architecture. The purpose of the lectures will be to teach the practical uses to which designs, such as old Gothic windows, could be put by a modern architect. There is a chair of this sort at the University of Edinburgh, and at many other fine old Universities.

Sir Robert also affirms the need for a chair of Geography, which has long been recognized by the Universities of Great Britain and Europe. Such a department would provide for scientific work of the sort done by the Geographical Survey of Ottawa. As yet, Canada has no adequate provision for such work.

COMMITTEE UNKNOWN BY TRINITY PROVOST

Is Not Aware That Any Trouble Exists With Freshmen

RULE OR TRADITION?

"I know nothing about the matter. It has not been brought to my attention," said Provost Cosgrave, when interviewed by "The Varsity", regarding the recent cases of refusal on the part of freshmen to obey their upper classmen. A deputation, mentioned in yesterday's issue of "The Varsity", as going to meet the Provost with a view to reaching an adjustment of the situation, does not seem to have materialized.

The situation has provoked a good deal of discussion, especially because the rules of the college and the University forbid students of upper years from doing any physical injury to any first year man. Tradition, however, has it that freshmen must "fag" for college societies, when called upon to do so.

One prominent third year man thought that there was no need to resort to physical force in enforcing obedience to the custom. He felt that many other means, not physical in character, could be employed quite as effectively. He was thoroughly in favour of the continuance of the tradition stating that it added much to the glamour of residence life. "It's a lot of fun for the seniors and quite desirable," he concluded.

IS BOXING BRUTAL WONDER UNDERGRADS MOST BELIEVE NOT

Week-end Accidents
To Boxers

SOME DISAGREE

How's Condition Improved and His Recovery is Looked For Soon

Is boxing a brutal sport? Should it be tolerated in college life? Such were the questions broadcasted by "The Varsity" yesterday. An indication of the undergraduate opinion may be gathered from the following typical replies.

E. V. Warren, 3rd year Vic.: "I do not believe boxing overly dangerous to a man well-trained and physically fit. I don't box."

Miss M. Crean III Moderns, S.M.C.: "Yes, I think boxing decidedly brutal. It's disgraceful to run around with broken noses and cauliflower ears. No, I don't attend the assaults."

Hylton Mann, III C. & F. Trinity: "I think boxing is a good sport. There is just one chance in a thousand for accidents like these to happen."

Miss Dickie, 2nd year Vic.: "No, boxing is not more brutal than any other sport. As long as there are enough people to box, let them go to it. But not for me, thank you!"

Sylvia M. Gelber, 1st year U.C.: "Life is still in a primitive stage. Look at Hart House wherein no woman may set foot! We must retain our old forms of self-expression. Why not boxing?"

J. H. Gringorten, III Philos. (E. & H), U.C.: "Boxing is a harmless game, when it's rules are observed properly; and it is no more brutal than rugby, soccer, hockey, or in fact, any of our college sports. Abolish it, and you abolish one of the cleanest sports in college athletics."

The great publicity given to boxing, is of course, a sequel to the two very unfortunate accidents which occurred over the week-end, the one in Toronto, the other at Ottawa. At the General Hospital yesterday, "The Varsity" was not permitted to visit Ted How, but it was learned that his condition is considerably improved and that the outlook is hopeful.

Dr. Porter, when interviewed by "The Varsity", yesterday afternoon, stated that he had seen Ted in the morning and that he was receiving the best of medical attention.

Music

To raise the standard of church music and singing is the aim of a lectureship which has been established by Mrs. Charles E. Doolittle, of Hamilton, at Trinity College. The lectureship is endowed by Mrs. Doolittle with the sum of ten thousand dollars.

According to the terms of the donation, all students of Trinity College who are going into the ministry shall receive instruction in church music and as far as possible be qualified to conduct the musical E. Doolittle, of the services in any churches or missions to which they may be appointed.

The lectureship, which has been gratefully acknowledged by the Corporation of Trinity College, is to be known as the Juliet E. Doolittle lectureship in Church Music and Singing.

TO PET OR NOT TO PET

Last week a prominent middle-aged clergyman told his hearers in genteel tones and with irrefutable logic that petting was dangerous and that it should not be practised. The divine claimed that petting was a new institution, that it exacted gestures intended only for the larger intimacies, and that it debased the coinage of the soul.

It is not for undergraduates to contradict a man whose experience of the world has been so much greater than their own, but in the light of our close connection with the younger generation who are thus accused of debasing their souls, we should like to attempt an explanation of our generation and of its actions.

In the first place we admit that although petting is a new institution it is a widely accepted one. We venture to say that, of those who have had opportunities for experimentation in the field, almost no one can deny some knowledge of the art. We shall go further and say that most of the so-called conscientious objectors are such because they have had no occasion to be otherwise, and that the other objectors do not pet simply because it does not appeal to them as a diversion,—not because they have any moral scruples. In fact petting as an institution has come to be recognized by all who are not willfully blind to existing conditions.

We confess that we cannot see in this situation any great cause for alarm, nor can we see that the generation so much in the spotlight is in danger of losing its moral sense entirely. The pathetic cry of the traditionalist is bound to remain unheard, for youth will go on trying, and, if it finds them pleasant, clinging to all the aspects of its new freedom. Just as standards of all kinds have changed, the standards of morality have also changed, and whatever may be the attitude of parents on the subject of petting, for those who indulge in it, the question of morality does not enter in at all. To them it is simply an exchange of amenities, in some cases quite casual, which make no difference (except perhaps of deftness in their dealing with the opposite sex) when the "grand passion" is experienced. Parents who realize this, and who wish to retain the confidence of their children, have long since given up decrying modern conditions but have submitted gracefully to them.

Whether the reverend gentleman was right in his contention that such conduct "debases the coinage of the soul" we shall not say, but we hesitate to believe that the soul traffics in kisses, or that a few of such, casually exchanged are going to have any permanent or devastating effect upon character.

Explains Christian Union

The Editor, The Varsity,
Dear Sir:

The motives for the formation of the Toronto Intercollegiate Christian Union have been misunderstood by some and misrepresented by others. For this season we submit this explanation, trusting that all difficulties will be removed.

We love and admire many individuals in the S.C.A., but we do not find in the official association any radiant witness to the power of our Lord to revolutionize lives in a practical way. There is seeking God but no finding Him in any radical way, as far as we have been able to observe. There is seeking truth, and many are earnest in the quest. But the way is strait and the gate narrow, and few there that find it. On the other hand, though we by no means claim to know everything, yet we have met Him Who is the Truth . . . and the Life, the vital force to cause us to walk in the Way. We find in Him abundant life; He is our satisfying portion, the One Altogether Lovely. "We cannot but speak the things which we have seen and heard." We simply say, without apology, "That which we have seen and heard declare unto you, that ye also may have fellowship with us."

We do not expect to indulge in controversy; we have seen too much of that sort of thing. Multiplication of words on a subject does not generally tend to clarify it. If any comments on this letter are forthcoming they will be the last word on the subject, as far as we can see at present.

Our earnest desire is that everyone in the University should have the chance to know that they may know the Lord Jesus and receive Him, not merely as a royal visitor on state occasions, but even as the King of their

MEDETTES ARE AROUSED OVER SUGGESTED LAZINESS

Labs, Sports, Drama, Dance
And Tea all Prove Opposite

The Medettes have been aroused by the accusation that they do not participate to any great extent in the life of the University and have hastened to raise the cudgels in their own behalf. They claim to be the busiest of all University women. They average thirty-five hours a week of lectures and labs, and yet are sporting enough to rise just a little earlier than the rest of the student world in order to practice hockey before lectures. Not many faculties can boast of such devotion! Teams are also entered in basketball, swimming and tennis, despite the fact that this faculty boasts a mere handful of women in comparison with the Arts college. However, probably the most delightful pastime which helps to blow away the cobwebs of confusion after innumerable weary labs, is the lure of the dance, which accounts for a number of tea dances held during the year. And just to prove that they are truly feminine—they are addicted to that most feminine of habits—the afternoon cup of tea.

WOMEN'S BUILDING FUND SWELLED BY SORORITY Gamma Phi Beta Donate—Come to Aid of Cause With Candy Sale

The women of University College are still persevering in their endeavours for a new building.

As a result of the candy sale yesterday, the Gamma Phi Beta sorority is able to donate the sum of $105.

Many thanks are due to the University as a whole, both Faculty and students. Their moral backing is shown by the remark of one persistent Professor. "At the age of sixteen I was buying gum drops for the Women's Building Fund, here I am at seventy still buying."

The arguments against the desired edifice may be feeble, but they certainly are caustic. "What do the women need a building for, they're on the street all the time anyway."

Scholarships and prize winners of last year were given a banquet at Burwash Hall on Monday night by the faculty of Victoria College. The Hon. Arthur Meighen gave an interesting address.

LOEW'S

INDOOR INTERFACULTY TRACK COMPETITION BEGINS TO-DAY

SPEAKING OF SPORT

There will be plenty of action this week for the various Blue and White teams. To-morrow night the senior hockey squad play the Queen's sextet in Kingston. On Friday night Queen's Senior Basketball Team invade Hart House to take on the McCutcheonites. The same night the Blue juniors will be engaged in a do-or-die battle for a place in the play-offs of group 4.

The interest in the junior group composing Marlboros, Varsity, Toronto Canoe Club and Parkdale Canoe Club is greatly picking up owing to the struggle for second place and a berth in the play-off. Marlboros have a safe lead and have the top rung cinched. The real scrap is that between T.C.C. and the Blue juniors. The speedy Red Ringers have half a game margin. Friday T.C.C. play Marlboros and Varsity meet Parkdale. A re-play of a tie game between the Red Ringers and the Iron Dukes seems imminent. This game will probably have a lot to do in deciding the issue.

Another unfortunate accident in Canadian boxing circles resulted in the death of a young Ottawa boxer. William Paul, in a bout with "Chuck" Agnew of Ottawa's football fame, received injuries resulting in his death. As far as is known faulty padding of the ring floor caused the fatal injuries. Paul was knocked down, striking the back of his head a severe blow.

MAT MEN ARE READY FOR WEST POINT TRIP

Coach Martin has Blue Mat Men All Set for Journey

SECOND TEAM TO O.A.C.

When the Assault-at-arms team journeys to West Point next Friday night among its number will be a strong wrestling squad. Of the twenty men who competed for a place on the team only seven survived the close competition, and these seven are of the best.

Coach Martin feels that if the boys on the wrestling team work down there as he did in order to make the team here they should come home with plenty of laurels. Only two men on the team have taken the trip before, Kickham and Diprose, the others are new men, and have yet to show their stuff. The team includes 4 of last year's Intercollegiate team, Hilliard, Diprose, Furbur and Wickham. Hilliard has advanced from the 118 lb. to the 125 lb. class this year. In the assault-at-arms at West Point next Saturday afternoon Varsity is conceded a good chance to win, though not much is known yet about the Army team. Kickham will have his hands full in the heavyweight class where he runs up against Hum-

Second Team Trip To Guelph Postponed

The trip of the second boxing and wrestling team that was to be to Guelph on Wednesday has been called off indefinitely.

Mock, star athlete at West Point Hummock as well as being fullback on the famous Army football team is champion heavyweight wrestler there, having only been defeated twice in four years.

Those who failed to make the first team are given a chance on the second team, which takes part in the assault-at-arms at O.A.C. The trip to Guelph on Wednesday next has been postponed owing to conflicting dates with hockey and other sports, and a further announcement regarding it will be made later.

Men who have qualified for the West Point trip are reminded that it is essential that they turn out at the wrestling room every night at 5 p.m. up to and including Thursday. The team leaves here at 6 p.m. Friday, arrives in West Point at 10 a.m. Saturday, and competes there Saturday afternoon.

The following were the winners in the different classes:—
125 lbs.—Hilliard (Dents).
135 lbs.—Mainland (Vic).
145 lbs.—Diprose (Dents), Campbell (Dents).
160 lbs.—Furbur (S.P.S.).
175 lbs.—Tyson (S.P.S.).
Heavyweight—Kickham (Dents).

SENIOR O.H.A. TEAM JOURNEY TO QUEEN'S

League Leaders Will Have Real Tussle With Fighting Tricolour Outfit

QUEEN'S MUST WIN

To-morrow evening the Blue and White senior sextet invade Kingston to take on the Tricolour squad in a game which means a lot to the Limestone City boys. Varsity are well away with four wins and no losses and seem sure of a place in the play-offs, but Queen's need a win to keep in the running. Preston seniors have won their last two games and are right in the contention.

The Queen's-Varsity game here last week was a real battle up to the last period, when the Red, Yellow and Blue caved in under the Blue's steady pressure. The Queen's outfit showed plenty of speed and lots of nice individual work but were unable to get by the Varsity second line with any great frequency. Fighting with their backs to the wall the Tricolour will be sure to put up a tough battle.

This game will be the first senior O.H.A. fixture between Varsity and Queen's to take place in Kingston. The Limestone City is a good hockey town and a large crowd should be on hand to witness the game. This encounter will carry with it much of the old intercollegiate glamour of the days when Queen's were a power in college hockey.

Varsity will probably ice the same team that have kept the Blue and White play at the top of the race. The Blue is going well from the goaler to relief men and if Queen's wish to knock down a victory the Tricolour squad will have to put up a mighty smart brand of hockey.

U.C. Players' Guild

Present Tennyson Play

Tuesday evening will see the revival of "The Promise of May", a play by Lord Tennyson, in which Sir Henry Irving and Dame Ellen Terry at one time appeared. Much of the play is in blank verse, and it contains many very dramatic scenes as well as much amusing comedy in Yorkshire dialect.

The production has been directed by Brownlow Card, and was presented recently by the Women's Art Association Dramatic Evening. It is being presented by the Players' Guild of U.C. as a guest production. The cast includes Mr. Newton, Mr. and Mrs. Dignam, Miss Jessamine Perkins, Miss Patricia Purdy, and Cecil DaCosta. The curtain will rise at 8.15; admission is open to all who are interested.

O.C.E. made Whoopoe on Friday night for the last time under the present executive. Following a theatre party, they assembled at U.T.S. for an informal program of games, songs, and speeches and enjoyed a novel cafeteria lunch.

BLUE BOXING MEN ALL HITTING HARD

Experts Expect Knock-outs When Varsity Men go to West Point

LEAVE ON FRIDAY

The Varsity Boxing team that will invade West Point this year is an all-around strong aggregation. The elimination bouts were hard fought and the finalists will make the Cadets step in the ring.

Perhaps one of the outstanding features of the team as a whole is the ability to hit and hit hard. The Army boys are going to be the recipients of plenty of feeling. And in addition the men feel right at home in the ring. The footwork and generalship on the canvas displayed in the elimination bouts, is of a high calibre.

Boeckh, the 125 pound representative, is a clever little boxer. He defeated How on Friday, and then Harding on Saturday to earn the trip. He has condition and his footwork keeps his opponent guessing.

In the 135 pound division, Steele seems a fast and shifty boxer. McLeellan's right mitt is going to keep any Cadet in the 147 pound class on the defensive as it has a habit of fooling his opponent.

Both Jackson, who won the 158 lb. class and Longert will represent Varsity at West Point. Jackson is beyond a doubt one of the best fighters up here. Longert put up a splendid fight to earn him a trip as the extra man on the team.

The light heavyweight title goes to MacMillan, a U.C. freshman, who disposed of Smille Saturday afternoon. MacMillan has a real defense that makes up for his comparative inexperience. And he has a wallop that might put his opponent to sleep for a few seconds on the canvas.

Harry Hills is undisputed holder of the heavyweight title. His condition and aggressiveness are bound to put him at an advantage in the Army ring.

MEDS GAIN VICTORY OVER SENIOR U.C.

U.C. Sextet Averts Whitewash To Make Score 4-1 in First Interfaculty Hockey

Sr. Meds. defeated Sr. U.C. in an Interfaculty hockey game yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 to 1. The Meds. were the masters of the contest throughout and it was near the end of the game that the 'Uni' men tallied their single tally.

The score stood one to nil at the end of the first session in favour of the Meds. In the second period they tallied another and in the last period the Meds counted a pair while the U.C. team scored their only tally of the game in this session.

Cock, the Meds centre, was the high scorer of the game with two goals to his credit. Hollendrake counted one, as did McIntyre. Arnold scored U.C.'s goal in a scramble in front of the net.

The line-ups—
U.C.—Goal, McTaggart; defence, Reid and Arnold; wings, Jackson and Gale; centre, Cunningham; alternate, Henry.

Meds.—Goal, Bennett; defence, Williamson and Sparrow; wings, Hollendrake and O'Connor; centre, Cock; alternates, Thompson and McIntyre.

DENTALS DEFEAT SCHOOL IN HOCKEY FIXTURE

Dents were victors in the fracas with Senior School in their hockey meeting in the Jennings' Cup series yesterday afternoon. The Dental men counted two goals and held their opponents scoreless.

Conn, right winger of the Dents, scored both goals for the winners and was well supported by the rest of the forwards.

WYCLIFFE CAGE MEN DOWN EMMANUEL 13-10

Wilks and Hunt Co-star in Court Battle for Winners

Wycliffe defeated the Emmanuel College cage team in their first basketball game last night by a score of 13-10.

Wilks scoring five baskets for the Wycliffe team, was the outstanding player on the floor, and Hunt played well for Wycliffe, scoring 3 points. The Emmanuel team lacked combination, and it was left to Thomson at right forward and Snell at centre position to drop in the baskets for the purple and gold team.

The line-ups were as follows:—
Wycliffe — R.T., Perkins; L.F., Boyd; centre, Wilks (10); R.G., Morrissey; L.G., Sage; Spares, James, Hunt (3), Cannon.

coffee from a Russian samovar and drinks it before a fire replenished by coal from a one-time maple syrup boiling pot, while on the mantle above, smoke curls from a Chinese incense burner, which was presented by graduate living in Shanghai. One often enjoys an after dinner chat sitting before the fire on a giant oak slab whose history is worth repeating. When Bay Street was opened workmen felled the mighty monarch which had witnessed many a hanging in the rebellion days of 1837.

The black and white etchings of the Group of Seven which line the corridor walls were presented by the Alumni, while to the publishers of the Forum may be attributed a collection of Thorold McDonald's work. Mr. Arthur Lisner, a member of the Group, has collected some samples of French Canadian work in wooden chairs of varied hue which also have found their way to the Union. A brass door knocker of Italian design brought by a graduate from Florence completes this motley array of curios.

Phonograph Needle Not a Lozenge Is Sad Discovery of Music Lover

M. R. Culbert

Special to the Varsity

Jan. 22—Further light was thrown upon the cause of the riot during the Sunday concert here some time ago. Although the matter has been hushed up, a private investigation by a Varsity staff member revealed the fact that one of the guests at the hectic party has been removed to a Pittsburgh hospital in an apparently serious condition.

When interviewed by the Varsity the patient gave his name as Otto Kroke, of this city. "I a mere," said Mr. Kroke, "as the result of an unpleasant accident at the recital. During Itchski's sonata I was seized with a fit of coughing which I tried in vain to suppress. And when I saw that I was drawing strains of disapproval from those around me I reached into my pocket for some cough lozenges which I always carry in a small tin box. In my confusion, however, I apparently opened the wrong box, and before I realized it I had swallowed a phonograph needle, medium tone. Imagine my embarrassment—the pain was excruciating and I could not refrain from howling. So you see here I am in the hospital."

"That is all very well," we said, "but where did you get that lump on your head?" "Ah, that is where someone hit me with the piano," he replied.

Dr. Hacker of the hospital stated that the patient was doing as well as could be expected in spite of the fact that the needle has not yet been located. "We believe that it is lodged in the south west wall of the pylorus, slightly posterior to the pinhole, although the two X-rays have failed to reveal it. Up until now radiographs, electro-magnets, and ouija boards have not given us any assistance in the case. We have put the patient on a restricted diet consisting of a glass of warm tar and two caraway seeds for each meal. And as a matter of fact," he concluded, "the patient may eventually recover."

Mr. Kroke, it may be said, is bearing up exceedingly well under the strain, and remains cheerful each day, as hundreds of bunches of flowers, letters of sympathy, plugs of chewing tobacco and mustard plasters continue to pour into his room from anxious and hopeful friends.

A Protest

Editor, "The Varsity"—

Dear Sir—Your latest issue confirms the rumor that when Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P., will speak on the failure of women's emancipation at the next Hart House Debate, Wednesday evening, January 23, some representative women undergraduates will be present in the gallery as spectators. Are the Rights of Man to be violated without protest?

Last year the men of University College debated with the co-eds over the outrageous proposal (as are all proposals) that the institution of afternoon tea in one of the common rooms of Hart House for members and the so-called "fairer sex" would enhance the gracious amenities of our University life. It was then wisely decided that it would do nothing of the kind. With a becoming and exemplary modesty the women themselves opposed their own entrance to the male

HART HOUSE DEBATE

Tomorrow night the members of Hart House who attend the debate in the Lecture Room on the Emancipation of Women will hear Miss Agnes Macphail. Early attendance to avoid the rush is advised.

THE ART GROUP

Mr. Lisner will meet the ART GROUP on Tuesday, January 22, at five o'clock in the ART GALLERY. An exhibition of the "OLD MASTERS" will be on view. All members are urged to be present.

U.C. PLAYERS' GUILD

At the regular meeting of the Players' Guild to-morrow afternoon, Miss Irmgard Westermann will present "The Proposal of Tchekoff." The meeting will be held at 4.15 in the auditorium of the Women's Union.

Holy of Holies. I would commend this attitude to the women of 1929. They have forgotten their place. Aware, oh so deeply aware, of the full gravity of my words, I hereby charge that the admission of women spectators to a Hart House Debate will be the result of a deep-seated conspiracy which holds the gentle Committee in thrall. The ravages of feminism in our debating circles have already been notorious this season. First the present Speaker of the House was forcibly and mysteriously carried away from the gray foundation, that citadel of manhood and celibacy. Now his immediate predecessor, bewitched, wavers on the verge of imminent marriage. I cannot continue the painful recital. It is the beginning of the end. Let it suffice that we must band ourselves together to resist this invasion and protect our undergraduates; to be on guard in case they should even capture our Warden and so make off with the very heart of Hart House.

By admitting women the committee is guilty of prejudicing the question before it is decided. Let Miss Macphail come—as usual some devil's advocate must be with us. We may even in a thoughtless moment, have the owner of the Financial Post. But women as spectators (a contradiction in terms anyway)—never! What will happen to the decorum of the House, the ties, the clothes, the talk, the attitudes struck; what will happen to the robust manly stories of unblinking and two-fisted derring-do? Perhaps all will be mistakenly decorous, proper and ladylike; perhaps, and more to this female generation's taste, all will be wholly irrational, excited, personal, unparliamentary and illogical. One thing sure, it will not be a real Hart House Debate. Be prepared, Sir, lest strenuous Amazons storming the gates of our last refuge and sanctuary will have it fall to their wiles, lest Hart House for men, by men and of men will perish off the face of the saddened earth.

Yours, L. M. G.

men and ideas by Professor F. C. Green. It bears the title "French Novelists" with "Dramas and Ideas from the Renaissance to the Revolution" as a sub-title. It is said that he has succeeded in portraying the novels with which he deals in the critical light of their own times. The comprehensiveness of the book is indicated by the fact that direct inference is made to some 150 novels.

The late Professor John Squair was widely known throughout the province for his service in the teaching of French. He accomplished this as President of the Modern Language Club, author of the High School French Grammar, in his fight for higher standing for the Modern Department, and in various other ways. The "Autobiography of a Teacher of French," was from his pen and besides detailing his own career has such sidelights as a description of early French art.

College Residences Subject For U.C. Lit. Debate

"Resolved that it would be in the best interests of the University if all students lived in University or College residences," will be the topic for debate this evening at a meeting of the University College Literary Society. Mr. Ted Martin will open the debate for the affirmative while Ross Anderson will lead the negative forces in their assault on the question.

The following members will also speak pro and con after which the debate will be thrown open to the house for discussion: A. Wood, J. Shepherd, L. Gelber, W. Martin, F. Burton, H. Appleton, and J. McKay.

"Is there anything to the rumour that How was not physically fit when he entered the ring?" "The Varsity" inquired.

"I asked him that very question this morning," Dr. Porter replied, "and he told me it was 'all the bunk'. Those were his exact words. He was in a bout the day before, you know, and won it. It certainly is a most regrettable accident," the Doctor continued, "and very unusual. Our bouts are all supervised, and every boxer is physically examined."

Dr. Porter further stated that, so far as he knew, no one was ever seriously injured in boxing at the University of Toronto.

Mr. Martin and Mr. Barton, the athletic instructors, had no comment to make regarding the accident in Ottawa. Both remarked, however, that in all matches at the U. of T., a felt mat is placed below the canvas.

The first game of the play-offs between Varsity "A" and "B" will take place on Wednesday night at 5.15 p.m. in Hart House pool, and not tonight as announced in yesterday's "Varsity."

Will the following players please be out—
Varsity "A"—Bullen, Sinclair, Graham, Goss, Grant, Glass, Poynton.
Varsity "B"—Ayers, Seely, Middleboro, Maconachie, Latchford, Pierdon, Armstrong, Alexander, Dyble, Fisher, Short.

VICTORIA COLLEGE ADDS TO PROPERTY ON BLOOR STREET

Several New Houses Procured
In Vicinity of College by Building Committee

FOR USE AS RESIDENCES

Many Plans are Suggested but Most of Them are Quite Indefinite

It has been generally broadcasted that the Lawrence Harris property, 63 Queen's Park, has been purchased by the Victoria College Building Committee. When interviewed by "The Varsity" on the subject, Mr. W. J. Little stated that the purchase of this property from Mr. Harris was made last year by St. Michael's College and it is only leased to Victoria, as a men's residence, until July next. After that time St. Mike's expects to use the house for themselves.

Mr. Little went on to say however, that the Massey property, 71 Queen's Park, and that of Dr. Sharman, 67 Queen's Park, have been bought by Victoria College Building Committee for residence purposes, to be used, it is hoped, in the near future. Two other houses have also been acquired recently for Victoria. They are, "Waldie House," 127 Bloor St. West, and the house formerly belonging to Mrs. Pugsley, 137 Bloor St. West. "Waldie House" is already equipped, and used as a co-ed habitation and Vic women are looking forward to occupying the other Bloor St. house next year.

The residence and building committee have many and sundry plans. Some are, as yet, entirely "in the air," others less remote, but none of these are at the present time, ready for publication.

MEDICAL AT HOME PLANS COMPLETED TO BE GAY EVENT

THREE HUNDRED PRESENT

Decorations and Lighting is Specially Arranged for Big GYM

Although several days will elapse before the evening set for the Senior Medical At-Home arrives, plans for that gala dance which the Medical Society annually sponsors, have already been completed and indications are that the function will be one of the gayest in the history of Hart House. The date for the party is Friday, February 1, and if the expectations of the committee in charge are justified, there will be over three hundred medical students and recent graduates present. The patrons and patronesses who will attend will be Dean Primrose and Mrs. Primrose; Dr. and Mrs. Rudolf; Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Gallie, Dr. and Mrs. E. S. Ryerson; Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Young. In addition to these there will be present representatives from McGill, Western and Queen's.

In recent years the Medical At-Home has been held in a downtown hotel, but this year the committee in charge decided that a much superior

ANOTHER CREST RING WILL BE CONSIDERED

Former Price not Possible
Since Value of Gems
Has Risen

Is there going to be a new University of Toronto Crest Ring? If so, why, when, and how much? The solution of this matter appears to rest largely with the students themselves, and there is a fond hope that they will express their opinion freely. The ring which has formerly meant eight dollars no longer may be bought at that price. Why? The sapphires are too costly. It is thought that perhaps a more expensive ring of higher quality would be popular. The matter is to be thoroughly discussed at the next meeting of the S.A.C.

PETTING JUSTIFIED SAY MOST STUDENTS

Women Believe They Get the Most Kick From This Practice

MEN DISAGREE

"Ninety-nine per cent. of the people pet, the other one per cent. are not worth petting," H. D. Branson, Trinity, told "The Varsity" to-day when questioned on his opinion as to the number of people who petted. He continued, "there is no reason why anyone should raise a moral objection unless they have a dirty and disgusting mind. Girls are more particular with whom they pet than men who start right off the bat."

John Fallon, VI Meds, said, "I rarely read 'The Varsity', but being a Med and of an investigative state of mind and taught to take the average of a set of experiments I don't think one person's ideas could be representative. If I say that 100 per cent. women pet my chances will be ruined next time. As for morals . . . I don't believe in them."

One co-ed in first year pass has the opinion that the majority of people pet, and that the ones that don't have probably done so at one time or another and don't like it. She thinks that there comes a time when it loses its flavour and that a limit can be reached but which some men overstep. It is usually the giddy girls who encourage it, she concluded.

Max Spence, IV Meds, said, "I am afraid of committing myself but I think that to pet or not to pet is a person's own business. Those who object do so from a moral viewpoint. But not being a girl I am not qualified to judge whether they are more in favour of it than men."

"I imagine that some people object morally to petting," said Irene Bernhardt, IV Pass, "but everyone doesn't pet who gets the chance. Women would rather pet than men—they get more kick out of it than men do." Helen Colvin II U.C., "No, everyone doesn't pet—it's against their morals. Whether it is immoral or not depends on the person. Men are more for it than women. Some spend a lot of money on a girl just to pet."

G. R. S., III S.P.S., "Everybody pets a little but I think the men are more in favour of it than the women." W. H. Spittel, II Meds, thought, "while they have no moral objection everyone doesn't pet when they get the chance but the men are decidedly more in favour of it than the women—it's human nature."

A fortune of nearly $10,000,000 was left to Fiske college, Nashville, by James Dallas Burnes, a member of the first graduating class, and the first Negro to receive the master of arts degree in America.

UNIVERSITY COLLEGE DECIDES TO REQUIRE NO COMPULSORY FEES

The First Debate is Held Under Newly Adopted Rules
Of Procedure

RESIDENCE LIFE DEBATED

Outside Interests of Students
Not in Residence is Prejudicial to Lit.

That the outside interests of the non-resident student interfere with his life within the University was the chief argument advanced by the affirmative, upholding a resolution that "it would be in the best interests of University life if all students lived in University or College residences" at the University College Literary and Athletic Society meeting last night. This meeting was the first held under the new semi-parliamentary rules of procedure.

T. Martin, opening the debate, admitted that he hadn't got all he might have from the University, and attributed this to the fact that he was not in residence. He felt that residence centred the interest of the student more definitely in the University and developed "esprit de corps." Lack of support to the Lit., he affirmed, was due to the predominance of non-resident students.

Ross Anderson, the first speaker for the negative, tried first to make clear what question was being debated, and in this connection dwelt rather on the residence as opposed to the fraternity, than on the residence as opposed to the home. He asserted that "the University exists for the sake of the students, not the students for the University," and extolled the spontaneous choice of company possible in the fraternity.

The residence system at Oxford and Cambridge was touched upon by L. Gelber, for the affirmative. G. A. Gale followed for the negative with some remarks on the cost of residences which would divert funds from other more important uses, "books, professors, and other incidentals." Lack of supervision and control, as exercised in residences, was a good, rather than a bad influence, according to the speaker.

Messrs. Bacon, Keith, MacKay, Appleton, and Sheppard also spoke on the resolution. The resolution was put to the house and lost by a vote of fourteen to thirteen.

On the resumption of business an amendment to the constitution adding one dollar to the compulsory fees of the Lit. was given its first reading unanimously. After some consideration, the house went into committee to facilitate discussion. In the course of this discussion, when it was remarked that there had been much said against the idea in the college and in "The Varsity," Ross Anderson, who sponsored the amendment, remarked "Anything that's said in 'The Varsity' doesn't count a rap." At the conclusion of the discussion the amendment was put for the second time, and defeated, thus postponing compulsory year fees for at least another year.

Snooker Tournament to Be Played on Thursday

The final round of the Hart House Snooker Tournament will take place at 4.00 p.m. Thursday the 24th. This year's finalists are Jack Crozier and D'Arcy Hilliard, last year's champion. The best three games out of five determines the winner and a closely fought match is expected.

Minister of Mines Speaks on Wealth of Canada in Forest Resources

Jovial fellowship and good cheer marked the occasion of the fourteenth annual banquet of the Foresters' Club of the University of Toronto held in Hart House last evening, at which about sixty members were present, in addition to graduates of forestry and guests of the evening. Mr. C. H. Bastock was chairman of the evening, the committee in charge of the banquet being R. Boulbée, A. P. Leslie and J. B. Miller.

After the banquet served in the Great Hall, the party adjourned to the Music Room where speeches were given by Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, Mr. J. B. Bickersteth and Canon Cody.

Mr. Bickersteth, the Warden of Hart House, spoke briefly, explaining his reasons for leaving the old land to throw in his lot with Canada.

"It is really because we can do something to build up this new land as we can never do in older civilizations," he said.

"Forestry is the most picturesque study in the university, there is nothing more attractive than forest scenes," said Hon. Wm. Finlayson, Minister of Lands and Forests, in the course of his address.

The speaker also stated that our forest wealth is the second source of wealth in the province, being second only to agriculture, a conservative estimate of the forest wealth being six hundred millions, divided amongst three million people.

"Existence in the southern parts is too monotonous, in Northern Ontario there is hope and prospects for the future, a national field for young Canadians; forestry is one of the chief industries in Northern Ontario."

Dr. Cody, speaking on the subject "Canada," dealt with some of the (Continued on page 4)

NEWLY FORMED UNION HOLDS PRAYER MEETING

Evangelical Statement has Been Signed by the Executive

"Ours is a belief in something more than fundamentalism," declared Miss M. David, vice-president of the new Intercollegiate Christian Union, at the Union's first weekly prayer meeting held yesterday at five o'clock in University College. Twenty-one men and three women were present, the president, Mr. J. Duncan of McMaster, in charge. Fifteen minutes of prayer, both silent and spoken, formed the heart of the meeting and there was much evidence of sincerity and faith in the public testimonies.

The possibility of membership cards at the short business period. It was clearly stated that "the basis of membership is not belief in the authority of the Bible but personal faith in Jesus Christ as Saviour and God." A complete evangelical statement has been signed by each member of the executive. The organization of daily prayer meetings under the auspices of the Union is now under way in every college.

Undergraduates are Selected
From Canadian Universities
By Federation

Three Canadian undergraduates have been selected by the National Federation of Canadian Students to form a debating team which will tour universities in the United States next month. They are: Gurney Evans, University of Manitoba; Albert Smith, McMaster University; and Fred McRae, University of Western Ontario. They will tour through New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, West Virginia, Ohio, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, and Wisconsin.

AFRICAN STUDENTS PAY A SHORT VISIT

Wonder is Expressed at an Undergraduate Daily Paper

AMERICA IN A HURRY

Tired but still smiling, thirty-seven South African students arrived in Toronto about 10.30 p.m. last night for a brief visit to the city and university. In the party were twenty-five women and twelve men, representatives of each of the six South African colleges.

Immediately on arrival the whole group was driven to the Women's Union of University College, where they were met by Mrs. Kirkwood, Miss Eleanor Barton, Mrs. G. A. McGillivray and other representatives of the S.A.C.

The visit of these students is, they declare, purely social in character. They have no purpose save to spend a pleasant three months' summer vacation. In South Africa the summer vacation begins in November and ends in March, so that the wintry weather of last night seemed anything but seasonable to some of the travellers.

Replying to what they acknowledged was the universal query asked by newspaper reporters, they declared that their impression of America was a place in a hurry and publicity hungry. One visitor expressed surprise at the fact that such a statement would be printed as appeared in one that there were two princesses in the party.

Wonder was freely expressed at the existence of an undergraduate daily paper. In South Africa each of the colleges has a magazine which appears three or four times a year, and in addition all unite to produce one monthly magazine representative of all universities. Even in Capetown there are only two daily papers.

Since their arrival in America life has been a constant round of touring and formal parties. Several expressed the need for time to buy such necessities as razor blades and handkerchiefs.

VALUABLE ANTIQUE RECENTLY SECURED BY COLLEGE STAFF

Beautiful Silver Service Was Formerly Property of Professor Croft

COMPRISES SIX PIECES

Will be Used Next Tuesday at Tea of English Staffs in Croft House

A beautiful silver service and salver, profuse with ornate carving and proclaiming itself a veritable antique, is now the permanent property of University College. The staff of the college subscribed and purchased it for $200.00, from the daughter of the late Professor H. H. Croft, who did not wish to lose trace of such a valuable gift and adopted this method of preserving it. Professor Croft, as Captain of the University Rifle Corps of the Queen's Own, was presented with this token by members of the company in 1883.

This service is of six pieces comprising a salver, spirit lamp, kettle, hot water jug, tea jug, and cake plate. It was used to grace the Autumn Tea of 1928. It will be used next Tuesday in the Croft Chapter House, when the combined English Staffs of the University of Toronto will entertain at tea in honour of Professor Casamian, Head of the Department of English Language and Literature at the Sorbonne.

Thus University College has acquired another relic of old associations, which will make her background of memory and tradition still more permanent.

HART HOUSE DEBATE TAKES PLACE TODAY

Miss Macphail is Guest Speaker
Comes with Interesting
Political History

TAUGHT FOR SOME YEARS

"Resolved that Feminine Emancipation has not justified its promises," is the subject to be debated on the floor of Hart House this evening. A feature of the evening will be the speech by Miss Agnes Macphail, who will be a guest of the house. Miss Macphail attributes her desire to become famous to Bolton's "Lives of Famous Women" which she read when early in her teens.

All through school she showed an independence of thought and action often losing popularity by championing the cause of the underdog. It is said that when conflicting stories reached the ears of the teachers it was always to Miss Macphail that they would apply for a just account.

After finishing her education she taught several years in Ontario and Alberta. It was the conditions of the Eastern and Western farmers which moved Miss Macphail to take a political career. The small remuneration for the great amount of labour expended impressed her and she set about to place herself in a position where, as representative of the farmers, she might better their lot.

It was September, 1921, that saw Miss Macphail after an eventual campaign, elected to the Federal House. Since that time she has been prominent in her fight for Free Trade, her defence of the Latter Day Saints, and her Anti-Cadet speeches.

SLANG AS AN INDICATOR

From time to time we are aroused to discussions as to how far we are influenced by American customs. The latest of the sort is the argument between the respective schools of thought as to the desirability of having international debates. French-Canadian delegates protested against the proposal to bring American debaters here as guests of the National Federation of Canadian University Students on the ground that the former were Americanizing influences. Their nationalist views are in turn adversely criticised by the Canadian Student in its present issue.

A much more interesting topic, in our opinion, is the extent to which our diction shows the impression of American habits of speech. If we listen carefully we shall find that the constant drift of books and newspapers from the south have had an enormous effect on our everyday language. American expressions certainly hold their own with English and Canadian.

We have been annoyed lately to note the vogue enjoyed by the slang phrase, "making whoopee". This was begun, apparently, by a New York columnist and it has been taken up so industriously by press and stage that even the most staid and respectable are allowing it to escape from their lips. To our mind this is a most objectionable expression and suggestive of the enjoyment without restraint which is the surest argument that we do not deserve our liberty. We even prefer the English "jolly" used as a substantive, as in the conversation of the more ebullient student journalists.

The devastations of the awful expression we have noted are well illustrated by a news article submitted to our own newspaper yesterday. It might better be described as a society item than as a news article and ran thus:

O.C.E. made whoopee Friday night

O tempora! O Mores! Tell it not in Gath but the men and women of the College of Education, just about to step out to their lofty task of educating the boys and girls of our province, are described, by some nameless muse, not as "spending an evening" or "having an enjoyable time" but as "making whoopee".

EDITORIAL COMMENT

In an adjoining column we print a ridiculous letter from a woman student censuring the recent snowball fight between certain of the students in the faculties of Medicine and Applied Science and Engineering. The writer of this letter is well known and the editor has a great regard for her personally but he regrets that she has sunk to the level of yellow journalism so completely as to claim that there ever was such a fight. It would be in consonance with the worst principles of tabloid journalism to claim that such things as glass and snow existed in the first place but our correspondent has actually suggested that snowballs have been known to crash through glass in our university. She fears that girl students might have had their eyes put out or might have been badly scarred as the result of window glass falling on them as they worked. For this reason she wants what she calls "a strong editorial". Although she has, like all other students, a claim to our attention and the right to give us orders, we deny her request and flout her commands. We shall not write any such editorial. We are not here to stir up discord between faculties by a silly concern for the possibility of some one having their eye put out or their face scarred. Let the event happen first and then we shall administer a rebuke to the offending parties. After all there is nothing like a motion of censure to give sight to the blind, to heal the deaf and whitewash the dumb. And if this young woman ever lets a peep out of her again we shall go to a big dance and let down an effigy of her from the wall, dressed in a green hat and light blue and dark blue colours, or in this case we shall alter the colour scheme to correspond with her particular brand of belief. In conclusion we assure her of our thorough co-operation.

Art, Music and Drama

Dr. Moure's Recital

Dr. Moure's sixth fortnightly organ recital was heartily received by a rather small audience.

The Mendelssohn Sonata was distinctly the feature of the afternoon opening with an excellent Choral, the first movement proceeded through a series of variations, differing widely in treatment, and a short fugue, to end with a delightful Andante movement.

The Bach Prelude and Fugue in G Major is quite a complicated creation, building to a climax by great intricacy of manual treatment, and subject on the pedals, which brings a most effective result.

The Franck Pastorale was to our taste rather unsuccessful owing to the heavy reed effects.

The divertimento was a charming Minuet nicely done except for more reeds between movements. Meyerbeer's Coronation March, in "the brass band" style, and Faure's Concert Overture were both pleasing.

The presence of an 8 foot stop in the pedal organ was very annoying in some softer movements but may be explained by the location of the console which is, from the organist's standpoint, rather unfortunate.

R. A. MCE.

A.C. Players' Guild

"The Promise of May," by Alfred, Lord Tennyson, was the production of the Women's Art Association Dramatic Guild at the Women's Union last night, under the auspices of the Players' Guild. This is essentially an average play of the period, and has little permanent interest outside of its location in the village near where Tennyson was brought up, and the typically modern attitude of the hero to marriage and socialism, upon which the action hinges. The story concerns a polished Londoner, Philip Edgar (Cecil DeCosta), who, influenced by advanced views, deserts his beloved Eva Steer (Evelyn Perkins); and who returns five years after, under an assumed name, to discover that Eva is (supposedly) dead, and to make love to her sister Dora. The denouement comes when Eva, dying in her sister's arms, forgives him and leaves him to suffer his well-merited remorse. The dramatically tragic climax, rather overdone by the players, brought fully into light the undercurrent of suffering, deception, and blind human passion. Against this there is the background of village life, as portrayed in the characters of old Farmer Steer, the schoolmaster, and the farm laborers. The production itself was tastefully staged, and although a trifle laboured at the start, became smoother as the actors absorbed themselves more in their parts. Special mention must also be made of Mr. H. M. Newton as Farmer Steer, of Hugh Dignam as Farmer Dobson, and of Patricia Purdy as Dora Steer, all of whom carried off their roles with a commendable sympathy of insight.

Chapter 3

The chief chancellor of Moron Yodel Hi rose to his feet. "Men," he said, "as you all know a horrible thing has happened. Our late lamented brother Algie Wootz was murdered in this house. Now while this crime remains unsolved a dark shadow of suspicion is cast over the house. So the quicker we get together on the matter the better it will be for us, and for the glorious name of the fraternity. Although I believe that it was an outside job, Chief Thug of the campus police is convinced that if it were not an outside job it must have been an inside job."

Outside the secret council chamber where the special meeting was taking place, the new steward listened attentively at the key hole while the Guard lay chloroformed at his feet. It was none other than chief Thug himself, in a false moustache, three days' growth of beard and a dirty white jacket—an excellent servant's disguise. The worthy officer had been working day and night on the case and had gradually gathered considerable evidence. In the first place the former steward had been questioned. Had he not discovered the body when he was sweeping the rooms? No, the rooms were never swept, except in the summer time when the rest of the house-cleaning was done. Did he not know where the fatal knife had come from? No, the silverware in the house was borrowed from restaurants all over the country. Did he know if any of the members frequented the establishment from which the knife had been stolen? Yes, now that the chief mentioned it he did recall the fact that the chief chancellor had re-

Editor, "The Varsity"

Dear Sir—

Much amusement has been caused by the snow fight last Thursday between Meds and S.P.S. and, in spite of much damage in the way of broken windows, no one has protested—hence this letter. I am the last person to interfere with those "Sports of children" which "satisfy the child", nevertheless I was one of the unfortunate occupants of a room in the Medical Building whose windows particularly suffered and I feel that attention should be called to the extreme damage.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The Varsity scholars invade Kingston to-day in an O.H.A. fixture and although the Blue team won decisively in their last engagement they are in for a tough battle. The Tricolour plays its best hockey on their own corner and although by no means certain of winning they feel that the Blue will have to extend themselves to gain the verdict.

The junior O.H.A. double header will be held on Thursday of this week instead of Friday. That means that there will be fireworks at the downtown Arena one day earlier. The Frank Sullivan team plays the cellar holding Parkdaks who are dangerous customers every time out. In their last encounter with the Blue and White they defeated the Blues when there was only seconds to go and then a week later lost to Marlboroughs 15 to 1 and then Varsity defeats the Iron Dukes. It is a series where anybody is liable to win. The teams give all they have in their games and there is none of the "kitty bar the door" tactics in the make up of any of the teams. The spirit has swung behind the Blue team after the win on Saturday and if they can repeat and get in the play-offs with the Dukes there will be a mighty crowd cheering them on to their battle.

The Intercollegiate basketball series opens on Friday at Hart House when the Queen's team invades the McCutcheon stronghold and then go to Western on Saturday. The game Friday night should be a fine set-to. Queen's have a number of their last year players back, the most prominent of whom are Sutton, Durham, Dickie and Elliott. That is a strong nucleus for any cage team and the Mo Mitchell captained quintet will have to be in rare form to send over a win.

The Interfaculty track contests started last night at the Hart House Gym and there will be further contests every Tuesday at the same hour, at 5.15. That will last about five weeks. These contests attract considerable attention and bring out some really good talent. There should not be any difference this year.

The West Point boxing and wrestling team leaves for that place and the New York A.C., where they will take part on Monday night. The Varsity team will be a new one but very likely will be a clever one. The West Pointers are usually the losers to the Blue and White team and the coaches of the B.W. team are anxious to repeat their victories of other years.

Intercollegiate Swimming Needs more Participants

Intercollegiate swimming practices are again in full swing this year as the Intercollegiate meet is now only a month away. The turnout however, has been very discouraging, only four or five appearing at the practices. There are two places to be filled on the team so the possibilities look good. Leo Latchford and A. S. Goss are coaching this year and the practice hours are Tuesday and Thursday, 5-6 p.m. and Saturday, 12-1.

JENNING'S CUP MATCH RESULT IS EVEN TIE

U.C. and S.P.S. Play Tie Game Each Making One Score During Meet

Jr. U.C. and Jr. S.P.S. tied at one goal apiece in a Jennings' Cup fixture yesterday afternoon.

The play was very even as the score would indicate. Each team obtained their lone counter in the second period. Jr. U.C. tallied first on a long shot from Little's stick. Crocker produced the School sextet's goal on another long range effort.

For U.C. Little and Thompson played well and Saunders showed some nice stick-handling. Martin, Anderson and Crocker were best for School. Jr. U.C.—Goal, McHugh and Richardson; defence, Durney and Little; centre, Shortly; wings, Saunders and Thompson; alternates, Robertson and Greer.

Jr. S.P.S.—Goal, Perrie; defence, McCullum and McKenzie; centre, Crocker; wings, Martin and Anderson; alternates, Humphries, Jones and Graham.

Senior Vic Defeats Dents In Fast Game of Basketball

In a snappy game of basketball, Sr. Vic defeated Sr. Dents. It was a fast, close checking game. At half time the score was 11 all. It was in the last half that the superiority of Sr. Vic was noticeable. Vic played a great defensive game, on the forward line. Bryden starred.

Line-up for Vic—Johnston c; Tilton r.f.; Bryden, L.f.; Searle and Ashton, guards; Dunn, Berry and Perkin, subs.

U.C. LEADS SCHOOL AFTER YESTERDAY'S INTERFACULTY MEET

Adams Wins the 50 yard Dash Easily Outclassing All The Other Sprinters

HALF MILE SPECTACULAR

Dennis Wins the High Jump For U.C. With Hyman Second for S.P.S.

Ralph Adams, a member of Canada's Olympic team at Amsterdam, won the 50 yds. dash, the opening event of the interfaculty indoor track championships at Hart House last night. Adams easily outclassed the large field of sprinters to win in 5 and 4-5 seconds. Jermyn of U.C. and O'Leary of St. Mike's tied for second place at 6 seconds flat but O'Leary secured second place in the next trial with 5-4-5 seconds.

The half mile run was featured by a large field and spectacular pace-making. Gilbert and Thompson both took turns at the front of the field and opened up huge leads. The pace was too hot, however, and both were unable to complete the course. Jermyn, the record holder, and Smith of U.C., who had stayed back during the early stages of the race moved up fast in the last lap and had a merry battle at the finish. Don Smith, a former Central Y star, bested Jermyn by four yards in the dash for the tape. Duffy Wilson of Meds finished a bang-up third. The time of 2:06 came near Gord Jermyn's record.

University College registered a second triumph when Dennis, a veteran Varsity track man, won the high jump with a leap of 5 feet, 4 inches. Hyman of S.P.S. gave him quite a battle for the laurels and Barratt of S.P.S. was third.

In team scores U.C. leads S.P.S. 14-9.

PLANETARY SYSTEMS SUBJECT OF SPEECH

Canon Rollo Speaks to Science Club of Trinity College Last Evening

MR. PERRIN ALSO SPEAKS

At the meeting of the Trinity College Science Club held last evening, Canon Rollo, the speaker, delivered an address on the subject of "The Planetary System." He spoke of the gropings of the mind of man in his search for the proper hypothesis of planetary motion. A great many of the pioneers, independently were convinced that the sun was the centre of our system of planets. However, lack of evidence, prevented the works of Anaximander as early as B.C. 250, and those of Copernicus as late as the 16th century from being accepted. Kepler, however, and Galileo brought forward such convincing proof that the Planetary System of the Heliocentric theory of Copernicus eventually displaced the earlier popular views of the earth as centre of the solar system.

Canon Rollo, pointed out the mathematical relationship existing between bodies circling about the sun. Their distances revealed the presence of a number of asteroids which represent the pre-existence of another planet between Mars and Jupiter. The power of mind over matter was well shown, he said, by knowledge of the presence and position of Neptune, before it had ever been found by the telescope.

Mr. Perrin gave a short talk on Cosmic Rays, X-rays of very low wave length discovered by Professor Millikan. These rays are continuously received on the earth and will penetrate several feet of lead.

During the discussion that followed, Messrs. H. H. Clarke and Thomas served refreshments.

Sigma Phi Journalistic Fraternity gave a bridge at rays rooms in the Women's Art Association, Prince Arthur Ave., on Saturday afternoon.

BASKETBALL TEAMS CONCLUDE WORKOUT BEFORE BIG GAMES

Seniors Play Friday Night Against Strong Quintette of Queens Players

JUNIORS MEET OSGOOD

Two Varsity Squads Meet To-day in Final Workout Of the Teams

Varsity senior basketball team engage the intermediates Wednesday in their final workout in preparation for the big game with Queens next Friday night. It will also conclude the training activities of the intermediates, who hook up with Osgood Hall for the preliminary fixture. The Varsity teams are in for a couple of hard struggles as the Kingston quintette is highly rated and Osgood was just nosed out of a win in their last engagement with the intermediates by the score of 27-24. Hence, followers of the cage game are in for a thrilling evening Friday, and many will take in the basketball carnival.

The match between the two Varsity squads is open to the fans and it will commence sharp at 5.15 and all are invited to see the boys in action.

Beaton is working in well with Capt. Mitchell of the seniors, and these two, together with Newman will likely be the starters on the offensive line in the game with Queens. The rough spots in the offence have been practically all ironed out and some smooth work is expected from this trio. Varsity's defence leaves little to be desired with the two stalwarts, Murray and Currie teaming. Earl Davey will likely fill the gap left by O'Leary, who fractured both his arms in the game with St. Bonaventure. His place will be hard to fill because the former Windsor Grad star was going great guns with the Blue and White. But Davey, a newcomer to senior ranks, played a sweet game when the intermediates met Broadway 'Y', scoring 20 of his team's 40 points. Saldor will work with Currie and Murray on the defence and should turn in his usual good game.

BLUE AND WHITE ENGAGE TONIGHT AGAINST QUEEN'S

Important Game in Kingston Will Decide Who Enter The Play-Offs

ELEVEN GAMES PLAYED

Several Games Were Played During American Trip And in O.H.A.

"Red" Porter's Blue and White seniors will take the ice in Kingston to-night, meeting the Tricolour of Queen's in a game that is very important for both teams. Varsity as yet has not clinched a berth in the play-offs which will be between the teams finishing first and second, but at the speed they are going are in a fair way to do so. A loss for Queen's will place them a game and a half behind the fast-moving Preston boys while a Red, Yellow and Blue win would put them right on the heels of the Queen's Parkers.

Varsity has already played eleven games this season, two in the S.P.A., five during the American trip and four in the O.H.A. That is some going but to add to that string there are eight games more before the regular O.H.A. schedule is completed. Also the Blue and White will play home and home games with McGill, bringing the list up to ten and a total of twenty-one.

When the Tricolour sextet was playing in the Intercollegiate series the Blue teams used to pull down victories with a regularity that must have been monotonous to Queen's. Now the Tricolour playing in the O.H.A. have a chance to set a precedent for future years by handing the Blue a set-back.

BOTH WATER POLO TEAMS EVENLY MATCHED TO-NIGHT

An Exciting Game Expected To Provide Onlookers With Thrills

The first game between Varsity "A" and "B" team tonight promises to be rather exciting. The City Championship is at stake and both teams are evenly matched. If you want to see one of the best water polo games of the season don't miss this one, at 5.15 p.m.

Will the following players please be on hand:—

Varsity "A"—Bullen, Sinclair, Graham, Goss, Glass, Poynton, Grant.

Varsity "B"—Ayers, Spence, Middleboro, Latchford, Macnamie, Armstrong, Pierdon, Alexander, Shortt, Fisher.

The extra men on the "B" team above are advised to come out as there may be several absences.

Anglican Divine Speaks at Wycliffe Literary Society

"Anything worth enduring centuries is worth reading today," was the tone of an interesting address delivered before the Wycliffe Literary Society by Dr. D. Hague of the Church of Epiphany.

Dr. Hague opened his address by eulogizing the choice of enduring books and passed on to consider the "peaks of literature."

Advocating biographies as the most inspirational literature, Dr. Hague pointed out the "effervescence of Maugham" in his "Warren Hastings," though implying that he sacrificed truth for style. He supported the cause of novels while suggesting that philosophy is greatly trash.

A Silly Student Stops Staid Studying To Join The Journalists' Joyful Jaunts

(By G. L. Brooks)

"Granny, do tell us a story," clamoured all the little freshmen and freshettes as the Chaplain Emeritus came into the room.

"All right, kiddies, but you must be very quiet, and not interrupt me." So all the little dears went into a huddle around the fire, and the C. E. began her story.

"Once upon a time, so they say there was a little boy who got ten firsts on his Honour Matriculation. And although he got high marks this little boy was not a plugger, but he always had a good time and never worked more than a half an hour each night. And he was elected Mayor of the Boy Council of his town, and felt that he had reached the pinnacle of success. And thinking this, he went to the University.

"Now, when he got to the University, he said to himself, 'If I work hard maybe I shall some day be a professor'. So he studied hard every moment he was not in lectures, and never went out to any dances or shows. And in the first year he led his year, and all the professors said 'He will be a Rhodes scholar'.

"But Oh! children, there are so many pitfalls that lie in the way of unsuspecting youth. In the second year he came back resolved to duplicate his first year's performance, and for a few weeks he did. But in an evil hour he was induced to join the staff of the student newspaper and from that time he began to turn from the narrow path of righteousness. Soon he began to feel that he had lowered himself, and he began to hide behind trees whenever a School man came along. In that evil condition he began to indulge in shows, and then his descent became more rapid, so that by the end of the year he was skipping lectures and smoking cigarettes.

"In the third year he followed the same heading course, and by now he was so far behind that he failed on some of his term exams. By April he was smoking a pipe, and going to dances every other week. Needless to say, he failed to get his year. But do you know, by now he was so depraved that he didn't want to be a professor any more, and he actually said, 'Fie on the examinations anyway'. Think of it, children!

"That was the end. The wretch never came back to college again. A horrible fate overtook him. He became a bond salesman, got rich, married, was divorced, and died from the effects of high life.

"That is the end of my story. And now dears, be sure and take a warning from his life, and never join the staff of 'The Varsity' for that was his first step on the primrose path that leads to everlasting—damnation."

turned late one night, in a very jovial mood, laden with articles from downtown. He had removed about four dozen sharp knives from his pockets, a potted palm from under his coat, and a piano stool from under his belt. "A real school man," muttered the chief, and he turned away and went downstairs to the basement, where he laid down among the empires to meditate.

ger of such a fracas. Before we realized what was happening we were covered with the glass—not fragments, but great slabs. It is a miracle no one was seriously hurt. The fact that several of the girls in that room might have had their eyes injured or might have had to bear a hideous scar through life as a result of that amusing little episode is something to think about. I think a strong editorial is in order.

Yours sincerely,

Another Protest

Editor, "The Varsity"

Dear Sir—
The time has arrived, Sir, for the undergraduates to realize just what the Debates Committee of this University is doing. We have listened to Premiers, to Judges, to Reds and now to Miss Agnes MacPhail. Their latest move in admitting women to Hart House is to say the least, peculiar. I have always been under the misapprehension—during six years here—that Hart House was for men only except on rare occasions. However the Board of Stewards must have given their permission. The undergraduates have no redress except to wait until March elections and then unfortunately most of those elected to the Board are carried over on their committee without appealing to the electorate. This latest high-handed autocracy is beyond words.

However, aside from this, the Debates Committee has made their debates a 'so-called' success through sheer sensationalism. We go to the debates just to see these celebrities, not to debate. Sooner or later their sensational debates will be all used up. The sooner the better. Then where will the Hart House debates be?

Another Protest

Editor, "The Varsity"

Dear Sir—
May I be allowed through your paper to congratulate L. M. G. for having the courage to throw the first stone? How long are we going to stand timidly back while women aggressively beard us in our own den? Hart House stands for masculine seclusion and yet we are allowing the powers that be to bring women into those sacred precincts. And now it is merely on the occasion of the forthcoming debate. It is impossible now to sit in the Music Room for a quiet smoke, in an unconventional attitude, without the Warden (whom I respect greatly) dragging in some women of ancient vintage, who exclaim—"And this is where the dear boys study", or something equally foolish.

Or again in the midst of a swim one is suddenly shoed into a discreet

AFRICAN STUDENTS ARE IN RAPTURES OVER CANADA

Hockey Game Proves Entirely
New and Exciting Experience

POSITIONS ARE RESTRICTED

Co-Education Very Popular
Among the South African Students

"Marvellous," "Gorgeous," "Too perfect" were the rapturous comments of the South African students yesterday, on the snow that covered the city. "Many of us have never seen snow before," said one of the party. The day was crammed with excitement and novelty. A visit to the Massey-Harris plant aroused memories of home. "I once drove a plough like that with oxen," exclaimed one co-ed. The party toured the city in buses and were interested in Sunnyside because a woman's residence at Johannesburg has the same name. Wymilwood, where tea was served, was much admired, but the crowning excitement of the day was the hockey game, an entirely new experience. "Shoot, you poor fish, shoot!" shouted one excited damsel who plays on the ground hockey team at Capetown University.

Both men and women were enthusiastic over their stay in the United States. "We expected a nation of big talkers, who chewed words of gum all the time," said one man, "but Americans are not a bit like that. Canadian students have American accents, all agreed, but otherwise are much more like South African students. 'People know so little about us, they thought we would be blacks,' said a graduate of Capetown.

"The choice of positions for women graduates is very restricted in South Africa," said Miss Schwartz of Johannesburg, when asked what she proposed doing she answered, "Teaching, there's nothing else to do." Dietitians are almost unknown. The visitors were surprised to learn that Canadian students worked during the holidays.

Co-education is popular in South Africa, "We have our own women's college, but no one goes there, it's no fun," said one girl. "Women may come wherever they please in the universities," she added. Toronto policemen were a source of amusement. "I'd love one of their hats—they are a scream!"

MANY PAY TRIBUTE TO MEMORY OF PORTER

Decease of Annesley Porter
Removes Familiar Figure
From Victoria

Thirteen years of devoted service to the residents of Annesley Hall when recognized one day this week when nearly a hundred, including a number of Orangemen, paid honour to Robert Lancashire's memory at his funeral in Lancashire's College Chapel, Victoria. Lancashire, who died of heart trouble last Saturday, was a familiar figure at the Victoria women's residence where since 1915 he had acted as head porter. His popularity was attested by the large crowd that was present to pay their final respects.

The simple and dignified service was conducted by Chancellor Bowles and Dr. Barker.

STILL EXPLODES IN MINING BUILDING

Blaze Quickly Extinguished
Before Fire Could do Much Damage

When a still exploded in the Mining Building yesterday afternoon at a quarter to five a small laboratory was wrapped in a sheet of flame. Prompt manning of hoses by third and fourth year men in the building prevented serious damage.

Two explosions followed each other in quick succession. Only one man was working in the room at the time. He was not injured and help was quickly summoned. The blaze was extinguished before the fire could spread.

The chief damage was to a large glass window and the door of the room. When "The Varsity" arrived on the scene within an hour of the accident, the glass was already being replaced. A number of glass tubes and retorts were in the room, but only a few of them were broken.

Water had trickled through the floor to class rooms below. The cause of the fire is not known. The fire reels were not summoned.

PRIMA DONNA PROUD TO BE A CANADIAN

Petting not Talked About in Olden Days But Went on Just the Same

BEGAN AS A TEACHER

Miss Brownie Peebles, prima donna of the American Open Company is a Canadian, and proud of her native land. In a special interview with "The Varsity" yesterday, she spoke of the kindness with which she was treated in Toronto, and said she was looking forward to the opportunity of singing again in the little church back home.

"I hail from the Royal City, New Westminster, B.C.," she said, "and I am very proud of it. The people from there are always very good to me. I began my career as a school teacher, and my first real experience on the stage was in a production of Tennyson's 'The Princess.' That was before I ever sang. I did not even know I could sing then."

Miss Peebles, who in private life is Mrs. Norman Oberg, thought that much dramatic ability could be found and developed in school and college dramatics. "I should be in favour of as large a number of presentations as possible," she said, "for there is no way of telling how a production is going over like getting it over the footlights."

"I should also advocate a yearly production of the same play—preferably with the same cast insofar as possible. It is an excellent plan, I believe, to pick out one good play, and present it year after year. Much good can be accomplished by it, and it becomes a tradition of the institution. At Columbia University, Barnard College is noted for its annual presentation of Greek games, which are a very important feature of the season's activities."

Commenting on the editorial in Tuesday's issue entitled "To Pet or Not to Pet," she remarked, "It is beautiful. We had an old saying at home regarding those who do not believe in petting parties, especially those 'unclaimed treasures' who look upon the world disapprovingly through spectacles at the end of their noses. 'Well they never were tempted,' I think that is the same as now, but people didn't talk about it. People don't change much after all."

IDEA IMPRACTICAL

Men Regard the Suggestion
As Lowering to the Dignity
Of Undergraduates

Co-ed barber shops such as are found in some American Universities find favour in no faculty except S.P.S. The girls are quite unanimous in their disapproval and abhorrence of the idea of trimming the average undergraduate whiskers. The majority of the men also ridicule the suggestion of such a proposition. They feel that it is not only impractical, but lowering to the dignity of undergraduate activity, and a foolish waste of energy and time.

Harry Berry III Victoria states—The idea is absolutely impractical. There are enough activities as it is to take our time and money without wasting them hanging around a pretty co-ed's barber shop."

Jean Dow IV U.C.—"I hope these modern Deliahs enjoy their jobs. Personally I think the Samsons of to-day prefer more subtle methods of attack."

Arch Wilson II Meds.—"Positively out. Not only a waste of time, but actually dangerous. I would be afraid that I'd have my neck cut—girls should keep away from such risky undertakings."

Mary Coleman IV Mod. Hist.—"They could all grow Santa Claus them, unless they were gentlemen janitors in women's residences."

George Oldham II S.P.S.—"Great! When do they start? Imagine a pretty girl... Best idea out so far and we're for it!"

Conditions in Spite Of Constitutions

"Canada is a by-product of the United States," were the opening words of Professor Munro, in giving the first of the Marlett lectures in Convocation Hall last evening.

The lecture, the subject of which was "Some Constitutional Analogies and Contrasts," consisted of a very interesting but technical survey of political conditions in Canada and the United States.

First, the speaker referred to the fact that the treaty of 1884 would be abolished and that further encroachments on Canada's property by the newly organized American Union would help in the move toward Confederation.

Professor Munro then stated that the fact that the ruling groups in both countries think along the same lines in regard to the union of their separate states is considered as more than a coincidence. Both countries favour a centralized form of government, but, since Canada's debut as a unit of the States, it was natural that she should pattern her constitution somewhat on that of her neighbour to the south.

The complete control which the Federal Government of Canada has over the divorce courts is a striking example of the way in which the Canadian constitution has improved upon that of the United States.

PARKING REGULATIONS AROUSE COMMENTS

Expected to Remain in Force
After Disappearance of Snowdrifts

Some comment has been elicited the past couple of days by the regulation which prohibits parking in front of Hart House from the East door to the Memorial Tower. Yesterday "The Varsity" accosted the University Policeman on duty, who said that the regulation came from the House Committee, and as far as he knew, was permanent. The man in blue remarked in passing that the first infringement of the new rule was made by a House Committee man himself.

In an interview with Mr. J. F. McCullough, of the House Committee, "The Varsity" learned that the regulation was brought into effect by the House Committee and that it was expected to remain in force even after the disappearance of the snowdrifts has facilitated the passing of cars. Mr. McCullough stated that the chief inconvenience caused by the line of cars in front of the building was suffered by those attending Hart House Theatre. There had been complaints two weeks ago against walking two hundred yards in a downpour of rain, because the road was blocked by cars which had in some way manoeuvred (Continued on page 3)

SERIES OF ADDRESSES PLANNED FOR TEAS

During the next few weeks, a series of short addresses is planned in connection with the informal gatherings at tea on Tuesday at the U.C. Women's Union. The first will be given on Tuesday, Jan. 29th, on "Women in Medicine". The speaker will be Dr. Helen MacMurphy, who after a distinguished professional career assumed the headship of the new Department of Child Welfare at Ottawa. There she has done a great work, and built with ideas of home and child care into the life of Canada.

Other subjects to be treated of will include "Women in Law", "Women in Education", "Women in Business Life", and "Women in Nursing". University College women who are approaching graduation will do well to hear as many of these addresses as possible.

VISITORS' DAY AT HART HOUSE

Sunday, 27th January, being the last Sunday the month will be Visitors' Day in Hart House when members may introduce visitors including ladies into the House between the hours of 2 and 4 p.m. MEMBERS WILL BE ASKED TO SHOW THEIR MEMBERSHIP CARDS AT THE DOOR. The whole building will be open for inspection.

Ten at 25c per person will be served in the Graduate Dining Room between 3 and 4.30 p.m.

To-day's Events

THURSDAY, JAN. 24

1.20 p.m.—JTI V. Class Meeting in Room 18.

1.30-1.55—Second Wymilwood Noon Hour Talk by Dr. W. H. Sedgwick on "The Meaning of Faith."

1.50 p.m.—Hart House Chapel.

4.30-5.30 p.m.—Household Science Tea.

8.15 p.m.—Meeting of U.C. French Society at Women's Union. Mile. Hays of Branksome Hall will be the speaker.

8 p.m.—Victoria College Music Club presents the Gilbert and Sullivan light opera "Iolanthe" at Margaret Eaton Theatre.

WOMEN FEATURE AT THE HART HOUSE DEBATE

Motion is Defeated Regarding Emancipation of Women

STRANGE PROPOSALS MADE

Suggestion That Fair Sex be Given Voice in Discussion
Is Quashed

At Hart House last night the motion "That in the opinion of this House the emancipation of Woman has not lived up to its early promise" was defeated by one hundred and twenty-seven votes to seventy-one.

An interesting and unprecedented feature of this debate was the presence of a body of the forensic lights among the women of the university. It was the cause of diverse and strange proposals from various members of the debate and their being given a voice in the discussion. These motions were finally quashed.

Visitors for the evening were Miss Agnes Macphail, M.P.; J. J. Morrison, Leader of the U.F.O. and ex-Alderman Simpson. Miss Macphail opposed the motion in a forceful address to great applause and much laughter.

The discussion was opened by Mr. R. W. Finlayson of University College, in a lengthy speech. Previous to the opening there was witty interchange regarding the presence of the fair sex.

Professor N. A. MacKenzie was in the chair and V. Kennedy was Clerk. Speakers—Messrs. R. W. Finlayson, A. W. Arrell, B. D. Beamish, F. W. Burton, L. M. Gelber, Miss Agnes C. Macphail, M.P.; T. Clayton, J. E. Wilson, Glen Brannerman, G. O. Murrell-Wright, J. A. Greengorton, J. J. Keenan, D. S. MacRae, R. Caldwell, J. Ord.

Tellers—Messrs. F. W. Burton, C. W. Woodside, J. Ord, S. D. Wilson. The consensus of feminine opinion concerning the debate seemed to be "not so hot" and "nothing to write home about." Helen Day III Vic, said, "I am very disappointed in the standard of debating as demonstrated to-night. The men failed to settle down to the subject and seemed to think that their so-called wit bore more weight than any convincing argument could afford."

Eleanor Clarke IV Trinity, declared that "It was not always certain which side the honourable members were supporting. I was inclined to agree with the affirmative in regretting the loss of the chivalry of the good old days since it has not been replaced by the courtesy accorded to equals. I enjoyed in particular the ready wit displayed by the speakers and could only regret that so little of it applied to the subject."

Mary Winspear II Trinity voiced the opinion of many when she declared that "The women have no need to be ashamed either of their representative in politics nor of the standard of their debates in the University."

"Miss Macphail certainly did show some of those men up!" said one senior with delight.

"Varsity" Staff Meeting

The men and women of the staff of "The Varsity" will meet at 4.30 on Friday at the Women's Union, 79 St. George Street.

The athletic department of the University of Ohio gave $500 for the best football song submitted in a recent contest.

THE CHAIR IN FINE ARTS

This week news items have appeared announcing the glad tidings that the establishment of a chair of Fine Arts and a chair of Geography was imminent. While such statements are very interesting and have served the useful purpose of bringing an important question regarding the future development of this university to the fore, they seem to be premature. These statements are not based, as the reader might suppose, upon information which has just come to light, but upon a comment made by Sir Robert Falconer, in his report for the year ending June 30th, 1928, which was issued several months ago. Owing to the size of the President's Report, the press did not notice the conservative remark made by the president; when, however, there was issued quite recently, Reprints from the President's Report in the form of a modest pamphlet, the papers immediately took up the remark.

That a department of Fine Arts should be established at the University of Toronto has long been conceded by university officials. Sir Robert Falconer crystallized the general sentiment when in his current report he voiced the opinion that, "Among other important developments which should be made in the university in addition to the chair of Fine Arts to which reference was made in my last report, is the assignment of a definite place to the teaching of and research in geography." Some four odd years ago, we understand on good authority, a motion was proposed in the university senate that a department of Fine Arts be founded here. An open discussion followed in which the questions arose as to just what field such a department should embrace and in the event that this could be decided upon who in all the world would be competent as head of the department. But although the motion was adopted, it was "shelved" finally, because each member had a difference of opinion as to what should constitute the pursuit of such a department; and, secondly, because the chair could not be filled adequately, it was considered on the one hand, by a man trained as a painter or sculptor; or, on the other, by the art critic or the philosophical aesthete.

We heartily agree with what Miss Agnes Macphail said during the Hart House debate last night, namely, that a study and appreciation of beauty should be one of man's most important pursuits. Perhaps a course in fine arts might not do better at the outset than to include lectures in the appreciation of the real beauty to be found in painting, sculpture, architecture and the various allied plastic arts. The art gallery and the museum would make excellent laboratories for the lecturer and his students. The gift to this university by the Carnegie Corporation in 1927 consisting of reproductions in photograph and colour facsimile of the greatest works in architecture, sculpture and painting; original prints representing different processes and schools from the sixteenth century to the present; a set of textiles dating from antiquity to the present day and illustrating all kinds of materials and designs characteristic of different races, and books on the art of every period and people, would be of inestimable value. One or two subjects—now given in the arts course might be incorporated. Such a course would in no sense clash with the Ontario College of Art (which institution is remotely affiliated with the university) but might in some cases complement it.

Students are often warned that to make the mere passing of examinations the be-all and the end-all of their university course is a great mistake. We think it would be a mistake of equal magnitude were the university to create a department of Fine Arts of which the raison d'être would be merely an ornament to the university. It is conceivable that some erudite person might be imported to give an optional course of lectures to Pass Arts students. This would be excellent as a feature of the arts course but only the semblance of a fine arts department. We should by all means scan the horizon for a most worthy man. With that man such a department properly organized would add a cultural aspect that might well be coveted by larger universities; and distinction would follow which would not be a shallow thing—a mere plume for our Alma Mater but a thing of genuine merit—alive and active.

"Iolanthe"

Last night the Victoria College Music Club gave the Gilbert and Sullivan opera "Iolanthe" its first performance at the Margaret Eaton Theatre as their annual production. This fantastic satire on the House of Lords, crying a few insinuations for the militant suffragette, too, while not the best of the G. & S. operettas, is worth going some distance to witness, and the company last night, though nervous at first, warmed up to give the production the swing that one expects. College societies do not have the volume and stage presence that is commanded by professionals, yet this absence is more than atoned for by the simplicity and enthusiasm of the acting. The V.C.M.C. has a notable reputation in the operetta field, and this newest production does nothing to lower it, though it falls below "The Mikado" of the hazy days of Wallace Surling, Mel Kenny et cie.

Yes, "Iolanthe" is worth seeing; the privilege alone of seeing and hearing Alice Strong as Phyllis is one to be

Answer to "Womanhater"

Editor "The Varsity"—

Dear Sir:

I wonder if "Womanhater" is one to stick to his ideas even when others agree with him.

I think, with him, that Hart House is essentially for men, and that its fast disappearing tradition should be tenaciously clung to. Most wise co-eds realize this and keep their noses out of the place. But—as long as we have no sanctuary in which to take refuge from the sterner sex we will be curious.

How many men helped to complete (Continued on page 4)

valued. Did you ever see a Dresden china shepherdess? One that sings? You certainly could not blame Strephon, a shepherd, played by Stanley Packham, for falling in love with her and Miss Strong's voice lacks power; Mr. Packham's manner is a little brusque for one who was a fairy from the waist up, yet the two duets "Good morning, good lover" and "Name shall part up," were enjoyable for tone and sweetness, and were accorded much applause.

Messrs. Wood and Graham handled the parts of the two self-praising peers, with law-abiding dignity and they sang interestingly. C. Ferguson, a private of the Guards, sang his "When all night long a chap remains," in a lovely bass, and became a fairy soldier at the end, marrying the Fairy Queen. The latter, played by Miss Kay MacMillan, was a militant and deep-eyed ruler. Iolanthe herself, Jean Evans, and the three fairies, Miles, Wilkinson, Wheatley, and Spaulding, acted somewhat unnaturally—first night uneasiness, doubtless—but sang with great appeal. The Chancellor, T. Manning, gave a professional polish to his role, which, we understand, he filled on the withdrawal of a Victoria student. "He who shies at such a prize" was encored repeatedly.

The choral work was below that of the principals. Stage movements were executed with self-consciousness and the singing with a reserve which marred the swing of the music. With the next performance, however, they should improve. The opera was produced under the direction of Thomas Crawford.

"Iolanthe" is decidedly worth while, and has an intimacy which atones for the lack of volume; a sweetness which balances precision, and an enthusiasm which is to be much preferred to the downtown off-hand manner.

QUEEN'S HOCKEYISTS DEFEAT VARSITY 4-2 IN CLOSE GAME

VARSITY B DEFEAT THE A TEAM 4-2

First Half Won in Last Minute of Play When Goal Scored by Latchford

SECOND HALF EXCITING

A close and exciting game of water polo took place in Hart House pool last night when Varsity "B" defeated the "A" team 4-2. The latter team although composed of the star University players used very little combination play and did not check their opponents closely enough. Latchford and Pierdon of "B" were given several free chances to score.

The "A" team started well, Glass making the first counter after one minute of play. Two minutes later Goss put the "A" team two up by an individual effort. After these two counters the "A" team players were checked closely and were not given any more chances. Latchford opened the scoring for Varsity "B" with a nice shot and made things a bit closer at 2-1. The next goal was scored by Pierdon on a nice combination play with Latchford. With one minute to go Latchford put Varsity "B" in the lead with a perfectly placed shot from the centre of the pool.

First half—Varsity "B" 3-2. The second half provided plenty of excitement but no scores were made until the period was nearly over. Pierdon received the ball in front of the Varsity "A" net and being unchecked had lots of time for the final counter, which slipped by Bullen.

Final score—Varsity "B" 4-2.

Teams—Varsity "A"—Bullen, Sinclair, Graham, Goss, Grant, Glass, Poyntz.

Varsity "B"—Ayers, Middleboro, Spence, Latchford, Pierdon, Alexander, Armstrong.

KE SUTTON QUEEN'S BEST IN BASKETBALL

Most of Queen's Men Played Senior Rugby and Should Be in Good Condition

HARD GAME EXPECTED

If the Varsity senior basketball five can produce the same brand of ball as they exhibited last night in their game with the intermediates when they met the much heralded Queen's quietest Friday night, the fans may safely look for a Blue and White win. Capt. Mo' Mitchell was at his best and garnered 15 of his team's total. Newman with 8 and Davey, Beaton and Currie with 6 displayed the scoring punch which the senior squad as a whole, possesses.

Bring on Queen's! 'Ike' Sutton seems to be their best bet. He was considered to be the best player in the intercollegiate series last year. He is very fast and a dead shot. Carter, the kicking half of the senior rugby team will team with Sutton on the forward line. Capt. Durham, Fenwick and Elliott form the defence of the invaders. Dickey, the pivot man, is a tireless worker who at all times is a cool and careful player. Most of these men played senior rugby and should be in excellent condition for 40 minutes of fast, strenuous basketball. They will extend the Varsity boys to the limit.

The fans should be on hand at 7:30 p.m. to see the Varsity intermediates give battle to Osgoode Hall. When these two aggregations met recently, it was anybody's game until the final whistle ended the match. Varsity managed a 27-24 victory but they will have to show an improved style of basketball if they hope to take the husky lawyers into camp again.

Only one-sixth of the total student enrollment of the University of Pennsylvania is participating in athletic activities, according to a survey by the Pennsylvania Gazette, the student publication. 1,582 of the 6,000 enrolled reported for action, and 919 participated in events.

Major league baseball clubs lost more than $30,000 last year when fans retained the balls batted into the grandstands.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

There is no truth in the rumour that the O.H.A. executive has appealed to Professor Einstein for chart of all the possible standings in the local Big Four junior group which may follow tonight's double header at the Arena. The fly in the ointment is the tie game between Marlboros and Toronto Canoe Club. Not only can this game affect second place but first place as well. According to the rules a tie game affecting the final standing must be replayed. The Blue and White juniors can make the second rung but Toronto Canoe Club have a chance to tie for first place.

To-morrow night Queen's seniors basketball team meet the Blue and White at Hart House. Varsity have been practicing hard and should be in good shape for this event. As usual there is the added attraction of a dance afterwards. Prior to the senior game the Intermediates play Osgoode Hall. This should certainly be a good night's entertainment.

To-morrow afternoon the boxing and wrestling team leave for the West Point trip. The Army usually has an experienced and finely conditioned squad but will find their equals. This trip ought to put the boys right in shape for the Senior Assault and Intercollegiate competition later. The boxers will also display their wares in New York.

Yesterday many eager searchers after truth invaded the office inquiring the whereabouts of the visitors from Africa. We finally made 'em all admit they were anxious for initiation into some of the finer points of African golf.

IMPORTANT O.H.A. GAME AT VARSITY

Win Entitles Varsity to Play Off for Group Honours
Loss is Tie for 2nd Place

WILLOWDALE LEADS GROUP

The Varsity intermediate hockey team entertain Oshawa in a regular O.H.A. fixture at the Varsity Arena to-morrow night. The game is an important one as a win for Varsity means that they will be entitled to play off with Willowdale for group honours. A loss means that they will be tied with Oshawa for second place in their group. Willowdale, with a strong team, is at present leading the group with 6 wins to their credit, with the Blue and White second team in the next position.

The team defeated Oshawa in Whitby by a score of 3 to 2 when they first met, and since then have downed the Richmond Hill sextet by 10 to 2. However, the game at the Arena last Friday night does not say much for the Blue and White team, as they had practically no opposition.

PHARMACY DOWN JR. DENTS IN EASY GAME

Rare Combination Work Shown on Pharmacy Front Line as Result of Smart Coaching

Pharmacy swamped Jr. Dents to the tune of 25-4 in a game that was theirs from start to finish. The forwards combined well and showed the effects of some smart coaching. Bridge, of Pharmacy, was high man with five baskets to his credit. At the half, the score was 8-0 in Pharmacy's favour. Dents came to life for a few minutes in the second half, when Conn scored four points.

The teams—Pharmacy (26)—Forwards, Emerson (6), Bridge, (10); centre, Creasy (4), guards, Cuthbert, Wolfe (4); Subs, Regan (2), Lake, Kidder, Altin, Becket.
Jr. Dents (4)—Forwards, Bessely, Conn (4); centre, Mitchell; guards, Connor, Stafford; Subs, Vignars, Shewer.

VIC JUNIORS DEFEATED JR. U.C. IN CLOSE GAME

Barr of Vic Dominated Play During the First Half and Scored Nine Points

Vic Jrs. defeated Jr. U.C. yesterday in a close game by a score of 17-11. Barr, in the first half, ran wild and scored nine points for Vic, who completely dominated the play in this period. At the half, the score was 11-2 in Vic's favour. In the second half, U.C., due to some fine work by Noyes, tied the score only to have Davidson and Vaughan tack on six more for Vic in the dying moments of the game. U.C. were not able to meet this spurt and passed out of the picture to the tune of 17-11 at full time.

Vic's main defence proved too much for U.C. in the first half and they were held to two points. U.C. started fast in the second period and had the score tied before Vic realized that the game had started. Vaughan, Davidson and Barr were best for Vic while Mayor and Noyes starred for U.C.

The Teams—Vic (17)—Forwards, Vaughan (4), Davidson (4); centre, Barr (9); guards, Barrett, Cowie; subs, Bowles, King, Clark.

U.C. (11)—Forwards, Mayor (1), Noyes (6); centre, Agnew; guards, Seccombe, McDonnell (2); subs, Cochrane (2), Upsprek, Filmore, Kingford, Wood.

Medettes Defeat St. Hilda's 2-1 in Fast Hockey Game

Varsity Medettes defeated St. Hilda's 2-1 in the first game of the women's Interfaculty Hockey schedule. The game was close and fast. Both teams were in good form and the Medettes fought hard for their victory. Dot James for Meds. was the star of the game while M. Winspear scored the Saint's goal.

Line-up—Medettes—Dot James, G. Mahon, B. McQuarrie, H. Crowe, E. Gee, K. Baldwin, Mary Smith, J. Mustard, V. Peters.

St. Hilda's—Joyce Muirhead, M. Winspear, E. McColl, T. Martin, F. Brystalk, E. Foster.

into a position from which they found it difficult to extricate themselves.

The general opinion of students approached by "The Varsity" seemed to favour a different solution to the problem, such as widening of the road; or leaving a clear space directly in front of the main door sufficient to allow the cars to pass. The University Policemen advocated angular parking on a widened road. It is possible that something of this nature may be done in the near future.

Aunt Mary Calls on S.P.S. For Help

In Solution of Student Problems

By Greta Reid

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Some of us have found that our desire to do no work which we are told is supposed to be proportional to our moment of inertia, has increased until it is about twenty-four hours a day. What shall we do about it?

Yours anxiously,

A Science student.

ANS.—Knowing slightly less than nights about matters scientific, we had to apply to S.P.S. for a solution of your problem. They insisted on drawing a diagram, but we explained that the line just wasn't that type.

"It is quite evident that your radius of gyration has no opportunity to co-operate with your section modulus, resulting in a serious weakening of the safety factor of your desire. This condition is very dangerous, as you are aware, but reinforcing by differential self-lubricating purins should prove of great help."

Dear Aunt Mary,—

Last night, believe it or not, I was waiting for a street car when a student in a coon coat and a Packard roadster drew up and asked if I wanted a lift. Should I have accepted his offer?

Yours sincerely,

Medette.

ANS.—Student? Coon coat??

Packard??? Oh, indubitably.

Dear Aunt Mary,—
"My newest weakness is a Dent whose only topics of conversation are molars, cavities, plates and bridges. Can you suggest any subjects we might discuss?"

Sincerely,

I. Yahn.

ANS.—Since conversation seems necessary, why not meet him on his own grounds? Read "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and be able to evince an intellectual interest in his conversation. It is really easier to warn you about what not to do. Never talk about clothes—only Wycliffe men would be interested, and never, never talk about the places you've gone and the things you've done with other people. For instance, when in the midst of a Garbo-Gilbert scene with A. it would be considered quite bad form to break in the clinch and say, "Oh, B's technique is much finer," or "C's kisses aren't so sticky!"

I really think your best bet would be to join "The Varsity" staff and you will always have something frothy to talk about.

Raps Petting

Editor, "The Varsity"—

Dear Sir:—
In your editorial "To Pet or not to Pet," you speak of your opinions on the subject as gleaned from your "close connection with the young generation." May I submit the attitude I have found in my connection with the younger generation, student and otherwise.

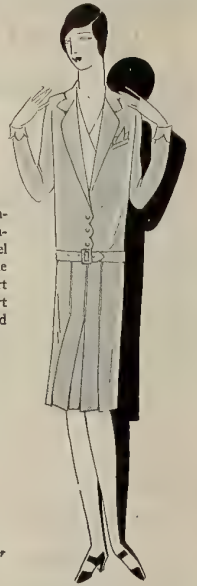

Never before have I heard anyone actually defend petting. All who indulge, freely or not, admit that it is a practice harmful to both parties, but that they indulge in spite of themselves—it is one of their "little sins." They say, "We know we shouldn't do it, but we're only young once." Of course, there are many degrees of license included in the term "petting," and probably one will say it all depends on the methods and the motives. However, the editorial quite plainly refers to the common variety, necking for what one gets out of it. And few young people will defend it, because it is absolutely selfish, a betrayal of one's emotions, and therefore harmful.

My own opinion, and thank goodness, that of many other people, is that ten times as much enjoyment can be derived from good, clean friendships, as from any such relationships as were referred to in the article. Trying to excuse necking by saying that the standards of morality have changed is an evasion, and not the way our generation regards the matter. If the rather sarcastic editorial expressed the viewpoint of the "Varsity" staff, let it not be thought that it is the opinion of the whole student body.

Yours truly,
A. E. S. D.

The Canadian Student is published by the members of the Student Christian Movement. Its aim is to foster Christian Student opinion. In accord with this aim, the present issue contains an editorial soliciting opinions on "personal religion." The question is put—"What is agitating the minds of students most?" Catholic and Protestant Worship is discussed by Ambrose Czako, a minister at Church of All Nations, Toronto. The material is written, for the most part, by graduates. Through the whole issue not an article could be found written by an undergraduate student.

FEAR IN LITERATURE

The particular emotion of fear has a majesty which is, invariably, appreciated but which even the Freudians cannot explain. The most cursory observation reveals that there are few great figures of literature who did not react to fear.

In the "Ancient Mariner", Coleridge shows how far such fear entered his poetic imagination in the lines—"Like one that on a lone some road Doth walk in fear and dread, And, having once turned round, walks on, And turns no more his head; Because he knows a frightful fiend Doth close behind him tread."

Such a mood moved Samuel Johnson to write—

"Oh! my friend, the approach of death is very dreadful. I am afraid to think on that which I know I cannot avoid. It is vain to look round and round for that help which cannot be had. Yet we hope and hope, and fancy that he who has lived to-day may live again to-morrow."

Such a mood, though in a different way, prompted Stevenson, another familiar figure, to write—

"I had a very violent and dangerous hemorrhage last spring. I am almost glad to have seen death so close. . . . Even thus clearly beheld, I find him not so terrible as we suppose."

There are ways, however, of arming oneself against the "frightful fiends". Robert Burns in "Tam O'Shanter" allows for the efficacy of drugs—

"Kings may be blessed but Tam was glorious O'er all the ills of life victorious."

Whereas Matthew Arnold's remedy is of sterner stuff—

"Once more read thine own breast aright

And thou hast done with fears."

PETTING CONDEMNED AS AN INSTITUTION TO EXCUSE ACTIONS

Censures Editorial Inasmuch as It has a Tremendous Influence Over Freshettes

OPINIONS "NAUSEATING"

'One Per Center' Objects From Moral and Intellectual Point of View

Petting is condemned by letters addressed to the editor. A student signing himself "Moral Punctitude" writes thus:

"It is with a feeling of mingled regret and surprise that I have read your editorial of the 22nd instant 'To Pet or not to Pet'. That anyone should condone such a practice is bad enough; that the Editor of the Varsity should do so is beyond comprehension. Surely, Sir, you realize that in your official position you exercise an influence over those young and innocent persons, especially of the feminine sex, in their first year at the University. That this influence should be used in such a way is a disgrace both to you and to the organ you represent.

"That petting is a widely accepted institution, as you admit can be attributed to the influence of persons like yourself who have refused to face the issue squarely. In inferring that the reason why the majority of the younger generation who refrain from this deplorable practice do so because they have never had the opportunity to indulge, you take a view of the morality of young men and women of today in which you are wholly unjustified.

"The majority of young people who refuse to pet do so because they realize that it most emphatically does 'debase the coinage of the soul' and leave a permanently detrimental effect upon character. You Sir, should not furnish an excuse for those weak individuals who though they well know the sin of petting are looking for any excuse to justify their actions."

A woman signing herself "Iceberg" speaks as follows:

"After first stating that I am young, feminine and fairly normal, that I am not so hopelessly unattractive as never to have had a 'chance' to pet—this is not necessarily a boast—and that I do not consider myself uniquely the possessor of a 'dirty and disgusting mind', I should like to express myself as bored and nauseated by various opinions reported in 'The Varsity' on this somewhat salacious subject."

"If I am to be spokesman for the slightly underrated one per cent. of non-petters, I may state that I object to petting from a moral and intellectual point of view. As far as moral point of view is concerned, petting goes it is obvious that petting is indulged in for two rational reasons, natural affection, and physical passion. The latter cause condemns itself to the decent minded. In the case of the former, I marvel at the great-heartedness of the multitude who can feel such tenderness to so many simultaneously or in swift succession."

"But the vulgar stupidity of the practice should condemn itself to us who are ostensibly the 'salt of the earth'. If the opinions expressed in

VIC CO-EDS SOLICIT BIDS BY AN EFFICIENT METHOD

Unique Method to Bring Two "Whoopie-Makers" Together For Event

The following notice appeared on the bulletin board of Victoria College recently re. the forthcoming Annesley Hall At-Home. "Attention! We, the undersigned, are disgusted for the night of February 1st. Kindly make applications early," followed by a formidable array of names.

This unique method of soliciting "bids" seems to have met with a considerable measure of success, judging from the hasty calls which went forth from Annesley in the next few days, and the invitation lists now drawn up. The enterprising young men in question, refusing however, to discuss the value of this form of publicity with "The Varsity".

REVOLUTION OUTLINE OF MODERN MEDICINE

Prof. Fay Speaks on Relation of Medicine to Industrial Revolution

ANNUAL CUSTOM OBSERVED

In accordance with their annual custom the Fellows of the Academy of Medicine, yesterday evening, entertained the members of the graduating class in Medicine. Prof. C. R. Fay of the department of Economics was the speaker of the evening and in dealing with his subject, the relation of Medicine to the Industrial Revolution, Prof. Fay presented an interesting story of the somewhat dark background of modern Medicine. Dr. W. W. Jones, in the absence of Dr. F. W. Marlow, president of the Academy, welcomed the students and introduced the speaker.

Prof. Fay's discourse was a very illuminating portrayal of the revolution which took place in medical methods at the time of the industrial revolution and after. In his introductory remarks the speaker referred to the fact that methods of treatment and teaching, imported from Holland and Italy, enabled the medical profession to meet the changing conditions which the revolution brought. The great factors in the rampant spread of disease processes and lack of control legislation which obtained in that era were discussed and Prof. Fay went on to mention the names of illustrious medical men of the time whose discoveries and teachings brought light to prevailing darkness.

Not the least interesting of the facts which Prof. Fay mentioned was his description of conditions leading up to the establishment of hospitals as places for the treatment of disease instead of places of refuge which they were originally. It was shown later how hospitals due to overcrowding became a menace rather than aid and how ultimately they became the boon to humanity which they now are. In concluding Prof. Fay declared it should be remembered that the industrial revolution could never have been the triumph it was had it not been accompanied by a marked advance in medical methods and knowledge.

Before the meeting adjourned for refreshments, Prof. Fay was tendered a double vote of thanks. The first from the students was moved by S. V. Raitton, president of the graduating class and seconded by O. L. Stanton. The second, from the Fellows of the Academy was proposed by Dean Primrose and seconded by Dr. A. J. McKenzie, both former presidents of the Academy.

THE PARTY SYSTEM IS 'DRIVE-WHEEL' IN OUR POLITICS

Problems of Government and Economics Essentially Same in U.S. and Canada

SECOND MARFLEET LECTURE

Differences Noted Between Britain and Canada in Choice Of Leaders and Policies

"In the government and politics of Canada most of what has been supposed is British; most of what has leaked in from the bottom is American." Such was the keynote of the second of the Marfleet lectures by Professor William Bennett Munroe of Harvard in Convocation Hall last night.

Stating that the party system is the 'drive-wheel in the political mechanism' and that no one has ever shown how a free country can do without party politics, Professor Munroe pointed out the basic difference between the two-party system of Britain, the United States, and Canada, and the bloc system of the continental countries.

"There is a New World flavour to Canadian problems," asserted Professor Munroe. Problems of government and economics were essentially the same in the U.S. and Canada, as was to be seen in the insurgency of the agrarian West of both countries, the disputes over water-power and natural resources, and the religious and racial feelings. A direct analogy was seen between the American "solid south" and the Liberalism of Quebec.

In party organization, the choosing of leaders, and the formulation of policies Professor Munroe demonstrated the radical differences between the British method on the one hand and the Canadian and American on the other. As for the civil service, the "spoils system"—"one of the most noxious weeds in the garden of politics"—had been eliminated in Great Britain many years ago but had not yet disappeared.

BALZAC VIEWED MAN AS SOCIAL ANIMAL

Great in Ability to Adapt Artistic Characteristics of Drama To Novel

IDEA ON STATE OF WOMAN

"Balzac was a profound student of life and an omnivorous reader," said Professor Green in his lecture in West Hall yesterday afternoon. The speaker gave a very full account of Balzac and a synopsis and discussion of many of his novels, among them "Modeste Mignon," "Eugenie Grandet" and "La Louisine Bette".

"Honore de Balzac had confidence in his own greatness." His novels and short stories brought him fame and money, but never enough to satisfy his appetite for glory. His productive power was enormous, having written as many as six novels in a year.

As for Balzac's description of feminine characters he particularly enjoyed writing about wicked women, and the young girl has but a minor part in the "Comedie Humaine". According to Balzac a woman must subordinate her will to that of her husband and lose her individuality. The greatness of Balzac consists in his being able to adapt the artistic characteristics of the drama to the novel.

SCHOOL MEN AGREE ON 'THE VARSITY' AS A GOOD PAPER

Generally Admitted that "The Varsity" was not all to Blame Last Fall

DISCUSSION ON EDITORIAL

Majority of Students Object to Reviving Half-dead Tradition Of Brawn

"We are not dealing with a lot of mad-cap fools, but intelligent people." This was the statement of Mr. McRae, President of the S.P.S. Debating Club, in opening a discussion of the merits and demerits of "The Varsity". The discussion centred largely around the editorial and the treatment of correspondence. Mr. Barnes stated that he did not think articles in "The Varsity" were written in the same spirit as they were taken. This point was also affirmed by Mr. Clifton, who added, however, that the Editor had resorted to tactics which were not at all complimentary. He said that, on the whole, the paper is a very good one, but that certain editorials were rather objectionable.

It was generally admitted that "The Varsity" was not all to blame for the "rough-house business in the fall", but that the Engineering students were reviving a half-dead tradition of brawn which was objected to by the majority of the undergraduates.

It was suggested that "The Varsity" should be published only twice a week owing to a decided lack of news. This suggestion, however, was thrown out, the majority of the members holding the opinion that it was "a valuable bulletin-board."

It was a very noticeable feature of the meeting, that, as the President pointed out, the loud-talkers, who objected so strenuously to "The Varsity" editorial policy were all absent. It seems that the puror of last fall has greatly abated, and the general feeling of the members present was that "The Varsity" was a good paper.

NEW PAPER AT TRINITY HOUSE

State of War at Trinity House As a Result of Series of Rows over Freshmen

FIRST ISSUE APPEARS

A newspaper called the "S.S.J. Record" is being issued by Seniors and graduates at Trinity House, which is in a state of war just at present, according to one of the seniors who, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday, said:

"The trouble began over a row with freshmen. The Sophomores were holding a meeting and certain Seniors swiped the Freshmen for a joke, locked them up. Then the Sophomores got mad and tore around as they are sort of guardians or police over the freshmen, while certain Juniors made themselves obnoxious to the graduates and Seniors. To quote one: 'Next year we will be seniors and then we will run the college.'"

A further row was precipitated after Friday night's performance of the Trinity College Dramatic Society. The next evening a Secret Society, meeting to see what they could do about the matter, decided to bring out the "S.S.J. Record"—a one sheet newspaper which will appear intermittently.

CENSORSHIP OF HOSIERY DISAPPROVED BY CO-EDS

"Ridiculous" Idea Impractical As Necessarily Changing Wearer's Life

"Ridiculous" was the unanimous opinion of Varsity co-eds when they read the note in yesterday's "Varsity" concerning an edict issued by the Dean of Women in Arizona, that all women should wear uniform hosiery. That it would be quite impractical up here in this land of changeable weather was agreed.

"It is bad enough as it is to begin a mild day with silk stockings, and be caught in a blizzard before you reach home again," ventured one maiden. That it would influence one's whole dress ensemble appears inevitable and Milady craves variety. "The Varsity" elicited the following comments concerning the subject.

Elija Tulleeen II.Pol. Sc.—"Why not uniform hosiery? And uniform legs, too!"

D.D. II Moderns—"Decidedly impossible. It wouldn't be artistic."

L. White II Modern Hist.—"The parents will agree—but will the boys?"

FARMERS CO-OPERATE FOR MUTUAL GOOD

Mr. J. J. Morrison Upholds Right of Farmer to Follow Labor and Capital

QUINDECIM CLUB MEETING

"If capital and labor co-operate for their own mutual benefit, then the farmer, who has always been an individualist has a right to co-operate for his own welfare," stated Mr. J. J. Morrison, president of the United Farmers of Ontario Movement in his address to the Quindecim Club of St. Michael's College last night. "The farmers have never organized until recently and quite naturally the first signs of co-operation come from the west," he continued in explaining the meaning and operation of the U.F.O.

Mr. Morrison strongly condemned the man who takes an unjust profit from a manufactured product, because such a person would be acting only for his own material gain.

In the discussion which followed his talk, the speaker advocated a feeding of the market to supply the existing demand for a product such as wheat. "This would wipe out the conditions arising from a shortage of a commodity and a surplus of the same." Mr. Morrison disagreed with the co-operative scheme now being considered at Baltimore, Md., as well as Henry Ford's Co-operative plan.

The speaker was introduced to the club by Mr. T. V. Kennedy, who described him as "The brains of the U.F.O." Mr. J. Hamilton, secretary of the educational department of the U.F.O., also attended as a guest of the club.

VARSITY JUNIORS STAY IN RUNNING DEFEATING P.C.C.

Blue and White Assert Their Superiority and Trim Parkdale Canoe Club

FINAL SCORE 4-3

Bell and Brant Showed up well Laing and Williams Add Punch to Game

In a rather slow moving game Varsity Juniors defeated Parkdale Canoe Club 4-3 at the Arena Gardens last night. The Blue and White were never behind, although early in the third session the score was two all. By virtue of this victory Varsity kept in the running for the Big Four title.

Varsity opened the scoring in the first period when Laing and Bell combined nicely the former scoring. There was no further scoring in this period and the play rather lagged. Each team chalked up a counter in the second stanza. The Blue and White scored first when Williams, big Varsity defence man, skated through the whole Parkdale team, to beat the Paddlers' goalie. The Canoe Club team retaliated shortly afterward, Gallardi scoring after a pretty solo effort.

The last period produced the best hockey of the evening. Right off the bat Parkdale evened the count on a lucky shot by Gallardi which Hunniett deflected into his own net. Varsity then revived and another Bell-Laing combination gave the Blue and White the lead. Laing was again the successful marksman. With less than a minute to go Hetherington broke clean away and drew the opposing goal-keeper out to score. With just a few seconds of play left Freeman scored for Parkdale.

Gallardi, diminutive Parkdale centre, displayed a lot of stick-handling ability and was by far the losers' best. Bell and Brant showed up well with some nice stick work and Laing was aggressive and packed a wicked shot. Williams made numerous speedy rushes to relieve the pressure on the forward line.

P.C.C.—Goal, Nemberger; defence, George and Botsford; centre, Gallardi; wings, Freeman and Adams; alternates, Howard and Oliver.

Varsity—Goal, Hunniett; defence, Smith and Williams; centre, Brant; wings, Laing and Hetherington; alternates, Bell and Laish.

ALTA. UNDERGRADS SEEK FRAT PLEDGE SURRENDER

Feel Pledge Required at Registration Prohibiting Membership to be Abolished

Special to The Varsity
Edmonton, Alta.—University of Alberta undergraduates are seeking the surrender of their pledge not to associate themselves with sororities or fraternities during their student life, and a sub-committee has taken up the matter to the committee on student affairs to this effect, but the matter is still hanging fire.

This was the resolution: "While the sub-committee looks with disfavor upon the establishment of fraternities and sororities in the universities, they nevertheless feel that the pledge required at registration, prohibiting membership in such societies, should be abolished. The committee also strongly recommends that in the event of this pledge being abolished regulations be drawn up by the senate and board of governors vesting full authority in the university to regulate and control such societies."

THE NON-PARTISAN AND POLITICS

The invitation of some forty outstanding women students to the Hart House Debate on Wednesday night was met with the response which was to be expected. From most of the men, who feared the encroachment of the feminine element upon the stronghold of masculinity, came violent protests; and from the women (we mean from those of them who were so fortunate as to get tickets) came an amount of delight and enthusiasm which seemed at first almost disproportionate to the importance of the occasion.

Very little reflection was needed however to show that the interest of the women in this Debate was not nearly keen enough. They wanted to penetrate into the fastnesses of Hart House unhampered by male escort, they wanted to study the parliamentary conduct of these famous debates, and they wanted to hear Canada's only woman Member of Parliament, (not because of her position, but simply for the sake of hearing a woman speak where a female voice had never been raised before.) But these interests would have been the same if the subject of the debate had referred to the scarcity of ink in Iceland or the over-population of rabbits in Australia. These women, all of them prominent in undergraduate activities and so representative of University women as a whole, cared nothing at all about a motion which ought to have affected them profoundly since it concerned them intimately. In fact their almost unanimous reaction to the debate was a feeling of pride in their own achievement in the debating field, and the only tribute paid Miss MacPhail was that she "showed up" some of the men. If all women are as these women showed themselves to be, incapable of rising above sex rivalry to engage in larger issues, the cause of feminism is indeed a hopeless one.

Women were accused, in Wednesday's debate, of taking no interest in politics, and of failing to exercise the franchise won for them by so much effort. The accusation, though a startling one, is almost true. The interests of most women are still found in the family and few of them are able to see beyond the four walls of their homes. It is to these emancipated beings, the University women, that the country must look, and it seems, look in vain, for leadership in the feminist movement.

Why are the women in our colleges so uninterested in things political? Is it simply because, as was suggested by a prominent third year man, all students are intellectually immature, or is it because their interests must be narrower and more self centred than those of men? We refuse to accept the latter implication, and must therefore conclude that the awakening of political consciousness, though long delayed, will come in time.

As a step in the right direction some suggest that women's branches of the Liberal Club and the Macdonald-Cartier Club be organized. "What matter," they say, "if they be partisan associations? Party politics are better than no politics at all." At any rate, in political clubs of this kind the women of this University would have opportunities to display their ability in the forensic field and would at the same time learn something of the issues which confuse the uninitiate in election campaigns. And as a result of the knowledge thus acquired they might be able when the occasion arrived, to vote intelligently.

But if they were once organized in this way, they would cease to co-operate as women for social reforms but would be divided as partisans. Women might accomplish more as members of parties and not as independents. We hope to discuss in a subsequent issue the question now as to what they have accomplished in politics since they gained representation.

S.C.A. HOLDS CONVERSAT NEXT WEEK AT THE UNION

Sir Robert and Lady Falconer will receive at the S.C.A. Conversat on Wednesday, January 30, at the Women's Union. The Victoria College Dramatic Society will present a play, Miss Eleanor Smith will give a piano solo and Harvey Dohney will sing. The Conversat's chief "raison d'être" is to give the students a chance to meet each other and their leaders and professors. It is to be quite informal and Miss Rowell hopes that it will achieve its purpose more successfully than the big formal dinner at Hart House last year.

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

This week's Recital in the Music Room at 5 p.m. will be given by Mr. Reginald Godden and Mr. Scott Malcolm, two pianos being used.

The following programme has been arranged:—

Suite No. 2 for Two Pianos—Rachmaninoff

March Romance Tarantelle III

Blue Danube Waltz Strauss
Danse Macabre Saint-Saens
Saccato Etude Rubenstein

Shakespearean Drama

Hart House Theatre has had a magnificent idea, one which was discussed on the news page of this paper some time ago, but which is now worked out. A troupe has been formed, mostly of undergraduates, to play the Matriculation Shakespeare plays in the modern art style, for the college students who are studying them. They have already played in a couple of collegiates about town and are going to play in Hart House twice tomorrow. After that they will go the rounds of Toronto collegiates and perhaps even out of town.

This we regard as the most sensible innovation in secondary education in some years. Shakespeare is magnificent literature for the educated man, but for a high school student who has never seen it acted, and who may never have seen any acting other than in movies, it is, to say the least, pretty tough stuff. Only an extraordinary teacher can really make his class enjoy the plays, and the average teacher inspires anything from mild apathy to positive loathing of them. We would not be surprised if much of the plain man's contempt for what he terms "highbrow" is a reaction from having Shakespeare stuffed down his throat at an age when only superb teaching could have led him to understand and appreciate it. But the point about Shakespeare is that it was written for average minds and, given even half a chance, it should be able to captivate the imagination of any schoolboy.

Perhaps the educated man would prefer to read the lines and imagine a stage, but what a difference the intelligent acting of the play makes to seventeen! The jokes are no longer laboured, the plot is no longer dull—the thing is alive. We would sooner see one gleam of real appreciation in the eyes of the student, than to have him know a thousand lines by heart or write forty essays on the character of Juliet.

"The Midsummer Night's Dream" is being produced in Hart House tomorrow and what we have said applies in some measure even to University students. The cast includes some of the best undergraduate actors and the production is being done in the modern art fashion which allows one to see the play and not a lot of second-rate scenery.

Dear Dee:

We are quite aware that there is nothing particularly subtle about this. It is the sort of thing that readily occurs to the vacant mind:

To pet or not to pet,—that is the question;

Whether 'tis nobler in the flesh to suffer

The dirty digs of Comstockery
Or clasp within your arms a sea of troubles

And drown in ecstasy. To fawn,—to kiss,—

No more (is't not enough?); and in that kiss

Obliviate the mean absurdities
The day provides,—it is a titillation

Devoutly to be wish'd. To neck,—no less,—

To neck! perchance to—... well, but there's the rub;

For in the amorous exercises who Can tell the ninety-nine they say that do

From the poor, starving frustrate one who won't?

Here's where we pause; for here's the very point

Where best laid plans are liable to get shot.

What silly ass would bear the wagging tongues

That thunder up upon the cold, gray dawn

JUNIORS DEFEAT PARKDALE 4-3 TO REMAIN IN BIG FOUR RACE

PRESTONITES OPPOSE LEADING BLUE TEAM

Health Town Men Win In Last Three Starts and May Upset Dope

O.H.A. RACE INTERESTING

To-morrow night the fast travelling Preston sextet will appear here at the Varsity Arena to wage battle with Red Porter's first-placers. Queen's victory over the Blue and White on Wednesday night has added much interest in the race. The same evening Preston smeared St. Michael's and are right on the heels of the local squad.

Preston have a well seasoned outfit and are rapidly acquiring the condition that was missing in their first few starts. Last season the Prestonites made a good showing in the early part of the O.H.A. series but faded towards the end, yielding play-off positions to Kitchener and Varsity. This year the men from the Health Town may reverse the process. After losing their first two games Preston have taken three straight.

"Gunner" Arnott, the veteran centre has been one of the greatest scoring threats in the O.H.A. for some years. He is a clever stick-handler and packs a nice shot, and is bound to give Murray Snyder plenty of work. Clark, on the wing, is very effective, denting the twine with some regularity. Varsity will probably regain their stride in this game. "Red" Whitehead is due for some counters and several of his bullet drives should find their mark.

Forestry basketball team defeated Weyliffe in their Sifton Cup engagement yesterday afternoon by the count of 17 to 4. The game, although fast was somewhat marred by very erratic shooting on the part of both teams.

BLUE AND WHITE SECONDS FIGHT FOR GROUP PLAY-OFF

Hockey fans should witness some good hockey to-night when the Varsity intermediates mix it up with the Oshawa team in a regular O.H.A. fixture at the Varsity Arena. A win for the Blue and White squad will give them a chance in the group play-offs, while a loss will mean a tie between the Blue and White seconds and Oshawa for second place.

After their decisive defeat over Richmond Hill last week, the Blue and White sextet are out to repeat their victory over Oshawa, while the boys from the "Motor Town" will be in there all the time after a place in the play-offs. Either team is bound to run up against stiff opposition against Willowdale intermediates, who hold six straight wins to their credit.

The probable line-up as announced by Manager Moran includes Little, in goal, with Graham and MacMillan behind the blue line. Carrick, Slatman and Smith will start off as forwards, assisted by Leak and Evans.

SENIOR U.C. GO DOWN BEFORE DENTS SIX 4-1

Dents defeated Senior U.C. in a lively Interfaculty Hockey game 4-1. U.C. played a good game throughout, especially on the defence-line, but the superior skill and neat combination of the Dents forwards made it their game from the start.

In the first period Dewar scored a goal for Dents. In the next period Dents got two more counters, but U.C.'s hopes were revived when Cunningham scored their sole tally in a rush from centre ice. Dents got their fourth goal in the last period, pressing U.C. hotly from the outset.

Sr. U.C.—Goal, McTaggart; defence, Reid and Cunningham; centre, Collingwood; wings, Henry and Jackson; alternates, Gale and McGibbon. Dents—Goal, McCartney; defence, Walden and Whittaker; centre, Mahaffy; wings, Dewar and Conn; alternate, Adams.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The race in the Senior O.H.A. is beginning to tighten up. Queen's flashy victory over the Blue and White in Kingston aided a great deal in complicating matters. Preston seniors gave St. Michael's another beating and now are only a game behind "Red" Porter's henchmen. The Tricolour sextet are in third place, a half game from Preston.

Of the four teams in the group St. Michael's alone seem to be out of the running. However a sudden spurt would give them a chance for a play-off berth. The Double Blue may yet give the other three teams a lot of trouble. Varsity, Preston and Queen's are closely bunched and the issue may not be decided until the last games.

To-morrow night Preston play the Blue here at the Varsity Arena. If the Health Town sextet win it will be them with Varsity in first place. A Varsity victory will stretch their lead nicely.

Senior Intercollegiate basketball gets under way to-night with the appearance of Queen's at Hart House. This should be a hard-fought struggle, with a good crowd on hand to watch the boys do their stuff.

VARSITY BASKETEERS TO MEET TRICOLOUR

Seniors in Shape to Defend Title and Intermediates Play Osgoode

TWO GAMES TO-NIGHT

Varsity seniors will defend their championship title in the first intercollegiate basketball match of the season with Queen's to-night in the Hart House gym. That's the dope in a nutshell. And an extra added attraction on the sporting menu is another championship fracas at 7.30 p.m., when the Varsity intermediates cross swords with the legal experts from Osgoode Hall. The lawyers made the Blue and White boys go the limit to win by a narrow margin in their last encounter.

Two classic exhibitions of how the cage-game should be played are in store for the fans and not many will pass up this basketball festival. Coach McCutcheon has his seniors in excellent shape for to-night's game and the team is fully prepared to defend its intercollegiate championship laurels. The squad has been well drilled and reveals a scoring punch that will stand it in good stead for the match with Queen's.

The Limestone City has a powerful five this year and the Queen's management are quite confident of gaining a victory even on Varsity's floor. The team is at full strength and much is expected from "Ike" Sutton, the brilliant Queen's forward.

Coach McCutcheon is also confident that the Blue and White will emerge on top but is taking nothing for granted.

The teams for to-night's games: Varsity—Beaton, R.F.; Mitchell, L.F.; Newman, C.; Currie, L.G.; Murray, R.G.; Spares, Sakler, Johnston, Hurwitz, Davey.

Queen's—McLaughlin, R.F.; Sutton, L.F.; Dickey, C.; Dunham, L.G.; Elliott, R.G.; Spares, Fenwick, Carter, Rose, Warren.

D'ARCY HILLIARD AGAIN CROWNED SNOOKER CHAMP

Amid the plaudits of a large crowd D'Arcy Hilliard was crowned Snooker champ of the university Thursday afternoon at Hart House. Jack Crozier, the runner-up, gave a very creditable showing, winning the first two games by a wide margin, playing his usual heady game. In the third game both men played brilliantly; but Hilliard pulled through with a win by

"Mo" Mitchell
Captain of the Varsity Basketball team, who will meet Queen's here to-night.

a lucky shot on the last ball. With the odds considerably against him, D'Arcy made a magnificent recovery to win the last two games and the championship. Hilliard now holds the distinction of winning the championship two years consecutively, having defeated R. Brockridge last year.

Lovely Laura Louise Discusses Some Important Questions Raging To-day

(By D. Kendell)

"Iolanthe" it should be some thing else. Say a spinster—no that wouldn't do, that's too old maidish. I think that they should make it Maiden of Arts, that's more artistic. They could leave the Master's degree as it is, I know who'll be boss in our chateau.

Dear Betty:

I almost forgot to write you this week. Wouldn't that have been just terrible. I was down at the show with Gid when I remembered that I forgot, so I'm writing this in the intermission. I simply adore the leading man. He's simply Apollon, I mean like Apollo. I hope that Gid isn't looking over my shoulder, he might be jealous.

Well Miss McPhail was in Hart House this week. I don't agree with her about the cadets. I think that they are the cutest things that ever were, especially when they have those dinky little hats perched on their heads. I agree with some things just the same. Femininity should be more up and at 'em. She sure can tell a carrot from a parsnip. That reminds me, dear, how is it that in three more years I will be a Bachelor of Arts. I think There's been a big discussion as to letting ladies into Hart House. Isn't that simply nonsense. No wonder they call it Hart House. I think it should be Bleak House. Why the only difference it would make if we were there would hardly be noticeable. It would still be Hart House.

I'm sorry Betty, but I haven't another second to write. The curtains going up and the plays starting. I'll write a longer letter next week.

PETTING CONDEMNED AS AN INSTITUTION

to-day's "Varsity", couched in the same terms, had been reported from factory workers we should feel pitying scorn for the minds and morals of the 'lower class'. Yet in University students, if in any body of people, the mind is supposed to triumph in some degree over matter, spirit over body. It is not quite credible either that conversation accompanying such actions (petting) is on a highly intellectual plane. The weak old excuse of human nature—reminiscent of the notorious 'double standard' of morals sometime condoned by society—should not appeal either to Christians, who know that since the fall, human nature has been sinful in tendency, or to evolutionists who believe that man is on the ascent and must fight against the animal in his nature.

P.S. I made the error of using the word 'Christians' in the above. Of course to followers of Christ such arguments are unnecessary."

appeared either from the American or Canadian political scene. He considered the civil service examinations in Canada more qualifying than competitive.

Referring to the veterans' preference—which he spoke of as having been instituted by the United States after the Civil War, having been adopted by Canada, but not by Britain—Professor Munroe declared: "Nothing has done more to demoralize the civil service. The breaking down of the morale and efficiency of the civil service is the most costly of ways to repay men who have served their country in war."

CITIZENSHIP END OF EDUCATION SAID PRESIDENT IN MONTREAL

TRINITY AND VICTORIA TO HOLD MIXED DEBATE

Precedent Established When Trinity Invites Victoria
To Mixed Debate

Trinity College has established a precedent by inviting Victoria to a mixed debate scheduled for Wednesday, February 6, at eight o'clock, in the Trinity College Library. The four speakers have not yet been chosen, but the leader of the affirmative will be a Victoria woman; the leader of the negative from St. Hilda's; the supporter of the affirmative a Trinity man, and of the negative a Victoria man. The debaters will select their own subject. Each will be allowed ten minutes to speak, and the leader of the affirmative five minutes in which to reply. Anyone may speak from the floor for five minutes in discussion.

The debate is sponsored by the Trinity College Literary Institute, whose president will be chairman. It will be an open-house meeting for all Trinity and Victoria men and women; the members of the other colleges are also invited. Refreshments will be served after the debate.

STAGE ALL SET FOR ANNUAL SCHOOL NITE

Skits, Supper and Drinks On Programme for Stunt
Nite

MANY TO ATTEND

To-morrow night will be a merry night at Hart House. From 8 p.m. till 1 a.m. the Stunt Nite of the year will take place under the auspices of the Engineering Society. The 1500 invited guests are reminded that it is not impolite to be on time for this event. The four skits, must start shortly after 8 o'clock in order to accommodate the large crowd who are desirous of seeing them.

These skits will take place in the Music Room, Reading Room, East and West Common Rooms. Drinks will be served by the Chemical Club in the east alcove.

There will be two suppers served in the Great Hall, the first at 9.30 and the second at 10 p.m. Guests are reminded to attend the supper marked on their programme, consideration will not be given to anyone not doing so. Supper will positively not be served after 10.30.

Dancing will start at 9.30 in the Big Gym; there will also be dancing in the East Common Room at 10.15, after the Skits are over. In order to disseminate the crowd somewhat it was decided this year to have dancing in the Music Room, following the Skits. This orchestra will move down to the Great Hall after supper for the rest of the evening.

Entrance to Hart House will be by the South West Door only, and no one will be admitted without a ticket. Once they have entered guests will not be allowed to leave and reenter.

School Nite will be held under the patronage of Dean and Mrs. C. H. Mitchell; Prof. and Mrs. T. R. Loudon; Prof. and Mrs. J. H. Parkin; Prof. and Mrs. R. Taylor.

PROGRESSIVE EDUCATION
Questioned if English Schools
Mould Student Character
To Any Great Extent

Special to "The Varsity" From the News Editor, McGill Daily
Montreal, Que., Jan. 27.—Leaving a message of hope in the future of education as a means towards international amity, Sir Robert Falconer, Principal of Toronto University, spoke before the Columbus Forum in Montreal yesterday afternoon. Sir Robert's lecture was entitled "Education as a Factor in Character".

"The underlying principles of democracy must be known to men and women today before they can hope to take their place in a civilization such as ours," said Sir Robert. "We are a part of this civilization and we must make the best of it."

"The vital question facing teachers today is whether or not modern education is sound in principle and progressive in character. This embraces the whole teaching field from the lowest to the highest of grade schools to the most modern of advanced universities. The problem is to find out what changes will make higher education more educative."

"In Grecian times education meant breeding—breeding for a particular end in view as a horse is bred for racing or a cow for milk; but has not man other and more nobler functions?" demanded Sir Robert. "Can he not be bred to be a citizen as well as a member of a class? To go further, cannot he be bred to the still wider dignity of citizens of the Dominion, of the Empire, and of the world?"

Sir Robert questioned whether English schools really mould the characters of the students as much as they were supposed to do, or whether they did too often merely afford practice in the fulfilling of a function. Problems which educationists have to solve, according to Sir Robert, are whether education should merely instill that form of good behavior which is local to the community, in other words, should the education of the American, the Englishman, and the Frenchman, differ as much as they do at the present time when the education lies largely along the lines of the traditions of these countries. How far is it advisable to educate people in the principles which underlie humanity rather than in those which merely underlie citizenship?

"If we are really to be bred to fulfill our function as universal citizens," concluded Sir Robert. "These virtues of love of justice, loyalty, determination and purposefulness must be bred into our characters. If this kind of good character is to be produced we must put ourselves into touch with the best that human beings have produced through the ages. Then when we have made the best of what has gone before we begin to lay down our opinions for posterity."

"Canada can learn a lot from the United States but not the art of government," said Professor William Bennett, Munro, speaking in the third and last of the Marfleet lectures on "The Influence of United States on Canadian Government," at Convocation Hall, last Friday evening.

Professor Munro, who is head of the Department of Government at Harvard University, pointed out that Canada is following the United States rather than England in her plan of municipal government. This he thought was a mistake as the United States have tried to improve city government through the machinery rather than the personnel of government. England, on the other hand has, disregarding the form of government, steadily sought to improve the calibre of the men in official positions. Professor Munro also approved of three year terms for (Continued on page 4)

KEEN CHESS BATTLE FOUGHT WITH DONS

Annual Staff Versus Students Match Takes Place at
Hart House

HARD FOUGHT STRUGGLE

Battling it away with pawn, King and Bishop, interspersed freely by Midway, the year's Chess Match versus Students Chess Match took place at Hart House Thursday night. Mighty professors, albeit learned in knowledge far above their opponents, lost to puny students, but only after terrific mathematical struggles had been undergone, with wit pitted against like wit, cunning against like cunning.

Five professors and five students faced each other at the beginning of the match, the former having forgotten for one night what might be the value of Brazilian nuts to the evolutionary theory, and the latter what might be the value of Brazilian nuts to the evolutionary theory. Hard-fought battles were in evidence as the evening wore on.

The keenest battle was that between Mr. V. G. Smith, B.A., Sc. lecturer at S.P.S., and Mr. R. G. Maitland, president of the Chess Club, which lasted long after the others had ceased, the former finally succumbing to the onslaught of the latter. Professor G. Norwood, M.A. Camb. of the Classics Department, U.C., was defeated by Mr. H. Goldhammer, IV U.C., who has been champion of the club for the past three years and incidentally will be played for this year's championship after the present tournament is over. A three-cornered deadlock is now on with Mr. R. G. Maitland having the most points. Mr. C. Warshaw, I U.C., won the decision over Mr. J. D. Leitch, B.Sc., Physics department. U.C. Mr. F. J. Farncombe, M.A., Department of Chemistry, U.C., and Dr. Young, with avenging spirit crushed their opponents, Mr. H. L. Welsh III U.C. and Mr. A. Boldeman I U.C. respectively.

Clad only in academic gown, one member of the Trinity College Literary Institute entered the common room in which the society was debating the question, resolved "that absurdity is the spice of life" last Friday evening. His claim that the rules which forbid academic nakedness or appearance in the house without a gown did not apply to any other kind of nakedness was disallowed by the speaker, and the offender was thrown out of the house by the Sergeant-at-arms and the freshmen.

This was only the first of numerous interruptions that disturbed the Institute during the meeting. Later in the evening alarm clocks began an alarm, and carefully hidden in various corners of the room ten clocks of divers kinds and sizes were discovered set to go off at five minute intervals. At the order of the speaker these clocks as they were gradually discovered, were confiscated by the government and held for sale.

Still later the house was again interrupted by the explosion of several cannon crackers fired from beneath (Continued on page 4)

STUDENTS DIFFER AS TO LABS AND ESSAYS

Query Reveals That Science
Upholds Labs, Arts
For Essays

WHICH IS WORSE?

Lab or essay—if it isn't one thing it's another, and on being asked which is worse, most students seem to think "Both are!" Large numbers of students in science courses complain, "The lab ye have always with ye, essays do get in finally"; while the English student in the throes of a stubborn essay that persists in being long over due, groans, "Give me a lab any day. At least you have something definite to work on."

A IV Pass co-ed, with the resignation of four years of both, says, "Labs are rather fun. Ours develops into a regular Old Ladies' tea-party, where we sit around and exchange all the latest gossip."

Jean Tudhope, 1st year Household Science, says, "There's nothing worse than standing all day over a stubborn amoeba that refuses to move."

Don Masters, III Eng. and Hist.: "On those chaps that have labs just burn. Stroll out and smoke a cigarette and think they're working!"
Non-science student, 3rd year, female: "I think labs would be much worse! Imagine the bore of having to be somewhere every afternoon of your life, whether you wanted to go to a matinee or not! You can do an essay any time, stay up till 5 o'clock in the morning to finish it if you like. And when you really put your soul into an essay, you learn such a lot from it."
Jean Hall, II H.Sc.—"Well, there's one thing about a lab—when it's over it's over. All the same I loathe bunnies."

PROMINENT LABORITE ADDRESSES STUDENTS

J. S. Woodsworth Will Speak
On "Capital and Labour"
At Wymilwood

VICTORIA COLLEGE GRAD

Student opinion on Capital and Labor Problems may be freely expressed on Tuesday night when Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., will speak at Open Forum in Wymilwood. Mr. Woodsworth is a graduate in Philosophy from Manitoba and in Theology from Victoria College with subsequent study at Oxford. At present he represents the Labor Party of Winnipeg in the Federal House.

Few men it is said, have had greater preparatory experience qualifying them to speak on Labor Problems, and few have had a more varied or unusual career. While receiving his early education in Manitoba, he made many trips by buck-board with his father, the Rev. James Woodsworth, thus gaining a knowledge of the North West in its earlier days. Later he spent several years as Assistant Pastor of Grace Methodist Church, Winnipeg, while Dr. Bowles was in charge. For nine months he was a longshoreman in Vancouver Port, where he made his first union with the Labor Party. In his work in the West he became interested in the so-called "Aliens and Foreigners" and started the "All Peoples' Mission" in northern Winnipeg.

During the War he opposed compulsory Registration, fully realizing it would mean the loss of his position as Director of the Bureau of Social Research of the Prairie Provinces. The crisis of his life came with the Winnipeg strike, when he took over the newspaper and was arrested along with the editor. The result was his nomination to parliament, where he and his colleagues now hold two of the four seats in the Federal House. His wife is prominent in the Movement for World Peace, and is a Victoria Graduate in Moderns. One daughter is studying in Paris and a son in the London School of Economics.

Varsity

The Varsity debating team that is to meet the team of the National Federation of Canadian University Students in Trinity College Library next Thursday will be made up of J. R. Wilson, Victoria College; Douglas McCrae, S.P.S., and J. T. Wilson, Trinity College, according to advice received by "The Varsity".

The western debaters, it is learned, will be in Toronto from Thursday morning until Sunday morning, instead of just one day as had been expected. Owing to a bereavement in the family of Mr. G. E. Britnell of the University of Alberta, his place is being filled by Mr. Bryce MacKenzie of the same University.

Blue, White Squad win Loosely

By Score of 2 to 2

FORWARDS COMBINE WELL

McMullen and Harley Each Score Trio of Goals

Varsity increased their lead in the Senior O.H.A. to two games by defeating Preston here Saturday night by a score of 8-2. The Blue and White play in Preston tonight and will have their hands full to repeat the victory.

The game was on the whole, fast and interesting, but at times play became ragged, Preston showing inability to maintain a steady pace. The Blue forwards had a distinct edge in speed on their rivals, frequently breaking away from their checks to rush down on the Preston citadel using snappy combination right into the goal mouth. Preston failed to backcheck to any great degree and this aided materially in their downfall.

The team-work of the Varsity front line stood out with the men passing the puck unselfishly. All three regulars played a great game and the results did nobly. McMullen and Harley netted two apiece and the other two counters came from Bruce Paul's stick. The Varsity defence men played a great game and continued his good work. Paul is setting up a mighty good scoring record and is punching the net consistently. Murray Snyder, in goal, turned in another nice effort and had no chance at all on the shots that beat him. "Red" Whitchard made some brilliant rushes but failed to pass the disc at opportune moments. For Preston "Gunner" Arnott at centre, Clark at left wing and Accura who relieved on the right boards, played good hockey. The "Gunner" showed plenty of attacking ability and clever checking but lacked speed.

The first period was hard fought. McMullen opened the scoring three minutes after the bell, ground around the defense and putting a pretty backhand shot past Schmalz. Both sides then gummed up some chances and (Continued on page 3)

West Point, Jan. 26.—The University of Toronto Assault-at-Arms team was defeated by the Army team here this afternoon in the annual assault-at-arms.

The Toronto boxers gave away about three pounds in eight in every class, and the losses sustained by the boxing team were due chiefly to superior physical strength rather than scientific boxing. Longert in his first major bout acquitted himself like a veteran and Jackson and Mahon turned in their usual stellar performance. These three men won the only points gained by the Canadian team.

The wrestling team furnished the Army with the strongest competition they have had this year and although they lost they were not damaged. The Varsity wrestlers extended the West Point squad to the limit and in the 135 pound class the Army man had (Continued on page 3)

FACT AND FANCY

In a speech recently given in our midst which was remarkable for its effectiveness and doubly welcome for its sincerity, Miss Agnes MacPhail attempted to show that women had justified thus far their admission into politics. To substantiate her argument she claimed that the women members of the British Commons had worked together on party lines when the interests of women and children ed together for social reform and had not allowed themselves to be at stake.

Before accepting this assertion we should reflect on the significance of a press cable from Great Britain describing a discussion in the Commons on a government bill, which according to Labour members, would curtail assistance to maternity and child welfare services. The bill was defended by the Countess of Iveagh (Conservative) who was thereupon described by Miss Ellen Wilkinson (Labour) as a millionaire who having the means to secure every possible care for her own children had no reason to block the extension in every possible way of maternity and child welfare services. Lady Astor came to the defence of her Conservative colleague and declared that it would be just as reasonable for her to attack the validity of Miss Wilkinson's criticism because the latter was not a mother as for the latter to attack the Countess as a millionaire.

All of this points to one conclusion that the women members are as likely to divide on class and party questions as are the men. The recrimination described above might well have been carried on by male members and is different in no respect from the clashes between the Tories on the Treasury Benches and the die-hards from the Clyde. Surely here is something to perturb such enthusiasts as Miss MacPhail when class and party distinctions can affect the attitude of the women representatives in the British parliament on a question relative to social reform.

These enthusiasts have always claimed that women would make a distinct contribution to politics and would surmount party barriers to obtain a higher status for humanity at large. We are often told that women hold the balance of power and can use it to force social betterment. The party politicians tell that to their women's auxiliaries. In the same way we are told that if the young were organized that they would bring about changes in things.

As a matter of fact nothing of the kind has occurred. Whether it is a good or a bad thing (and here opinions differ) the women have not yet learned to use politics but on the contrary have been used. They have been organized to uphold the customary ideas just as the young are organized. They have not revised political concepts but on the contrary have merely followed them. They may master political tricks in time and supply a large proportion of the leaders but there is no indication that they will ever change the rules of the game.

Women will put a stop to class warfare. Women will put a stop to warfare between countries. These things have been said so often that that many of us believe them. These are the hopes of the pioneers in the feminist movement and women such as Miss MacPhail have laboured earnestly for what they consider the cause of uplift and peace. But there is a second type of woman politician the conservative type who did nothing to help the pioneers of the movement but who is ready to use the results of their labour to advocate partisan measures, because they seem to her to be more practical than a wide movement based on humanitarian considerations. And her attitude to class war and to the warring of peoples will in no way differ from that of her male compeers. In the normal division of parties some women will advocate one course and some the other. In other words they will be just like men, after some years of practice. In which case we shall be able to interpret in its broad sense the subject of the poet's line, "Man's inhumanity to man makes countless thousands mourn."

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

A programme of two piano music featured the Friday recital given in Hart House Music Room last Friday. Mr. Scott Malcolm and Mr. Reginald Godden were the artists in this concert which was received with genuine enthusiasm by one of the largest audiences of the year.

The Bach prelude and fugue, which opened the programme, is an arrangement from an organ work of J. S. Bach done by Harold Bauer. Although it seems to demand in the opening measures the sustained power of heavy organ, as the work progresses it does become increasingly adaptable to the pianoforte until in the brilliant fugue in four parts, the arrangement contains all the interest and finish of Bach's own piano music.

Naturally a programme of this sort is confined in large measure to the composers of the last century and after the Bach came an orgy of Saint-Saens, Rubinstein and Rachmaninoff. To these numbers the artists gave a most finished rendering, and even the Strauss Blue Danube Waltzes became entrancing under their careful interpretation.

Rachmaninoff was represented by selected movements from his second suite for two pianos, a particularly interesting group since the suite was originally composed for this type of performance.

J. J. K.

Collegiate Shakespeare

For what it purports to be, our travelling troupe of Shakespeare is really excellent. While we could hardly class Saturday's Hart House production of the "Midsummer Night's Dream" as one of the finest things we have seen, we were most agreeably surprised. We expected to leave after the first act, but we stayed to the end and enjoyed it.

The production was done in green curtains without scenery, but with very pretty lighting effects and a pleasing costume ensemble.

But what we liked best about the whole thing was its spontaneity. There was no time lost between scenes and everyone gave as lively an interpretation as possible to his part, and appeared to be enjoying himself thoroughly. In fact, the production seemed designed especially, as probably it was, to combat the high school notion that Shakespeare is difficult and dreary.

The part of Puck was played especially well by Elaine Wodson, to a very good Orono by Murray Bonycastle, and Doris McKittick, and Frances Dockrill did very well as Hermia and Helena. The clowns were splendid and showed the results of clever direction. There were some lame ducks in the cast, but everybody knew his lines.

Woman Debater Replies

Editor "The Varsity".
Dear Sir—
Your editorial of January 25, with its flagrant misconstructions, demands an authoritative statement of our reactions to this last Hart House debate. First—the invitations owed us. Was it possible that we were to witness one of those far-famed debates where men set mind against mind in a battle of words, witty, entrancing, coherent and magical? The model, which we strived to imitate from afar, was to be unveiled before our very eyes. Then the evening came. And the first words which we heard from the floor were a protest against our presence! Had we ever sought the invitation? No!—neither officially nor unofficially.
The Hart House Debates Committee recognized that women too, are in search of truth. That night we found one truth. In discussing the emancipation of women the Honorable members contributed to the further emancipation of women in the University of Toronto. They freed us from the grip of a beautiful but deadly illusion, and we thank them. They showed us the truth about Hart House Debates. No longer are we climbing in our women's sessions up a steep hill toward the distant attainments of men. Rather men and women are side by side in Bernard Shaw's "John Bull's Other Island" with Maurice Colbourne has been chosen by the Toronto Society of Occupational Therapy for this year's theatre night at the Royal Alexandra on Feb. 4. This is the first time this play has been produced here, and the Society is most optimistic about its choice.

For funds are very necessary to carry on this splendid work being done at the workshop of Occupational Therapy at 331 Bloor St. W., and all that is gained through this theatre night will be devoted to it.

Great strides have been made in the last few years in Occupational Therapy, and there are now few homes and families in Toronto that have not benefited by its curative powers. Surgical, nervous, diabetic, and heart cases are among those that have made outstanding progress, and practically all hospitals now count it among their most valued treatments. One of the greatest forward steps made in this work was the establishment of the present two year course in Occupational Therapy at the University of Toronto.

Tickets for the theatre night may be obtained at the workshop, 331 Bloor St. West. —(Adv.)

VARSITY SENIOR SEXTET SWAMPS PRESTON RIVERSIDES 8 TO 2

SPEAKING OF SPORT

The boxers and wrestlers at West Point on Saturday afternoon were far from making a clean sweep. They lost all the wrestling and won three bouts in the boxing. Jimmie Jackson and Longert, both in the 160 pound class won their bouts and Mahon beat the heavyweight Army boxer. Either the West Point cadets are much stronger than in previous years or the Blue team which is a new one is not near the mark of the previous Blue teams that went down to the stronghold of the coming military men.

The Varsity team atoned for their defeat by the Queen's team on Wednesday by taking it out of the Preston Riversides to the wallowing of eight goals to two. There was no doubt about the better team. These same two teams meet again on Monday at Preston and the Riversides will be on their home ice where they expect to hold the Blues to a close score and have hopes of even beating the Porter squad.

The game at the Hart House gym last Friday night when the Blues defeated the Tricolour had a full house of spectators, every seat available being taken. Although the Queen's team made it close at the end they are nowhere near the calibre of the McCutcheon team. If the Blue and White cagers had played the basketball that they are capable of in the second period they would have piled up a 25 point lead without too much trouble. As a result of their lackadaisical work in the second half they were almost beaten. The Blues will win the Intercollegiate if they play the cage game they are capable of, but if they play as they did in the latter session of Friday's game they will be on the outside looking in when the laurels are handed around.

SENIOR CAGE SQUAD DEFEATS QUEENS

Queen's Last Minute Rally Brings Score Well Up To Varsity Mark

BEATON SCORES HEAVILY

The large crowd that occupied every available seat in the Hart House gym Friday night, cheered the Varsity senior basketball team to the echo as it staged off a last minute rally by the Queen's five to win 25 to 22 in the first championship intercollegiate match of the season. With 3 minutes to go, Queen's made a bold bid for victory when Sutton and Dickey sank three long shots in rapid succession to draw up to a 17-21 score. Varsity called a two minute rest in an attempt to check the Queen's rally. Sutton was fouled and made the free throw good. Beaton retaliated at the critical moment but with one minute left, Sutton and Elliott scored on two long-range, with-a-prayer shots to bring Queen's within a point of Varsity. 'Mo' Mitchell clinched the game for the Blue and White when he tipped the ball in as the boom of the timer's gun ended the struggle.

Varsity began with a fast pace which netted them 12 points before the invaders had found the basket. After 14 minutes of play Dickey counted for Queen's. At half time the Tri-color were on the lead side of an 18-7 score and during the first period were outclassed. The Blue and White players were working the ball in and all their points came from within the opposing defense. In the second half the Varsity players eased up and seemed content to rely upon their comfortable lead. This policy almost proved disastrous as the Tri-color made a thrilling come-back. Sutton and Dickey are two clever forwards and were always dangerous on the attack.

Beaton played a sensational game for the 'T' team, amassing a total of 13 points. He collected three field baskets and four foul shots in the first period and notched the deciding goal in the final session. He dribbled in fast and looped the ball into the cage for most of his counters, but for his initial 2 points. Big 'Johnny' Murray turned in a heady game on the defence and his absence was felt when ever he was off the floor. Currie and Newman were also effective. The game was marked by fast, clean, open basketball.

Varsity Forwards, Mitchell (2), Beaton (13); centre, Newman (2); defence, Currie (2), Murray (4); subs, Hurwitz, Johnston, Sakler, Davey, (2).

Queen's—Forwards, McLaughlin (2) Sutton (7); centre, Dickey (10); defence, Elliott (2), Durham; subs, Rose (1).

VARSITY INTERMEDIATES TROUNCE LAWYERS' TEAM

Large Number of Fouls Mars Basketball Fixture With Osgoode

Varsity intermediates, playing a much improved game, easily defeated Osgoode Hall 38-24 in the preliminary fixture which was marred by 33 personal fouls. The Blue team committed 17 fouls while Osgoode made 16, of which the 'T' players counted 14 to the lawyers' 6. That's superb marksmanship!

Riggs turned in another brilliant game, securing 11 points. Pasternak, Davey, Fox and Devitt are also especially worthy of mention. Turville and Cohn were the best for the losers.

Varsity—Forwards, Riggs (11), Davey, (7); centre, Pasternak (8); defense, Devitt (4), Cock; spares, Brady (1), Fox (6), Laughlin (1), Osgoode (4), Fox (4), Cohn (7), Hall (1); centre, Turville (9); defense, Howell (4), Prousky; spares, Kaplan (1), Hungerford (2), Robinson.

St. Michael's Win From Jr. S.P.S. in Overtime

After playing ten minutes overtime, St. Michael's defeated Junior S.P.S. by 19 to 15 in an interfacuity basketball game last Friday. Play was close all the way through, the score being six to six at the end of the first session. In the second half, the teams grew more aggressive giving an exhibition of speedy cage-work. With a half-a-minute to go, Hutcheon of School snapped in a field shot to even the score at 15 all. The Irishmen dominated the overtime, scoring four more points in as many minutes. The final tally was 19 to 15 in favour of the saints.

Quigley, Cassidy and Burns did good work for the Irishmen, while Hutcheon and Kirk played well for the Engineers.

The teams:

St. Mikes—Forwards, Quigley (6) and O'Hara; centre, Cassidy (3); guards, Hussey and McMahon (2); spares, Burns (4), Nolan (3), Daly, (1), Blather and Dwyer.

Jr. S.P.S.—Forwards, Hutcheon (5) and Mercer (1); centre, Ireland (2); guards, Kirk (3) and Britnell (2); spares, Whitton, Grant; Heck, Tait and Tennenbaum (1).

Knox Basketball Team Easy for Forestry

Forestry took a decisive fall out of Knox Basketball team Friday afternoon when they defeated the Theologians by the count of 34 to 5. The Woodmen displayed some fine combination plays while the losers showed the lack of practice and experience and made little effect on the organized attacks of their opponents.

The score at half time stood 14 to 2 in favour of Forestry while in the second half the winners chalked up 20 points to Knox's 3. The final score being 34 to 5.

Simpson and Start were the high scorers for Forestry. All of the Knox points were scored from free throws of wisner counted a pair.

The line-up:

Forestry, (3)—R.E. Timpon (17), L.E. Start (10); centre, Grey (4); R.G. Raeburn (1), L.G. MacBean, (2); sub, Malloy.

Knox (5)—R.E., Higgin, L.F., Loucks (1); centre, Wyse; R.G. Graham (1); L.G. Miller (1); subs, Wismer (2), Rayner, Davidson, McPhail, Dewar.

VARSITY LOSES TO OSHAWA IN INTERMEDIATE HOCKEY

Superior Weight of Visitors Proves Telling Force Against Varsity

Oshawa defeated the Blue and White team by 5 to 3 in an Intermediate hockey fixture at Varsity Arena on Friday night. It was a strenuous game but the superior weight behind the visitors' body-checking forced the home-team to slow up in the final canto.

Although play was fast with plenty of hard shots, neither team was able to score in the first period. Chartrand of Oshawa got the first goal, of the game when he drove a high one past Little in the second period. As a result of determined attacks both teams scored twice ending this frame with the tally at two all. In the final session the students were less aggressive allowing Oshawa to score three times. Carrick got one more for Varsity in the last five minutes but the visitors' defense prevented any further gains by the Blue and White squad.

Statham, Smith and Little played well for Varsity, while Chartrand and Crossett were best for Oshawa.

The teams:

Oshawa—Goal, Smith; defence, Johnson and Crossett; centre, Houck; wings, Rowden and Chartrand; alternates, Joyce and Bond.

U. of T.—Goal, Little; defence, McMillan and Graham; centre, Statham, wings, Leak and Smith; alternates, Carrick and Evans.

Fast Skating Featured Second Game of Women's Inter-Faculty Hockey League

U.C. beat O.C.E. Thursday night by a score of 4 to 1 in the second game of the Women's Interfacuity Hockey League. The game comprised some fast skating, but until the last period U.C. shot one goal. In the first period U.C. shot one goal but were unable to do more. The second period ended with the score still 1 to 0 but there were some tense moments for both teams as shots were piled in on the goalies. In the third period Adele Statton scored another goal for U.C. then made in the last few minutes of play their other two goals.

O.C.E. have so far had very little practice but they expect to get their wind and stride very shortly. The outstanding players were Florence Allen of O.C.E. and Adele Statton of U.C., both of whom are good shots and fast skaters.

Line-ups were:

O.C.E.—Goal, Peg Graham; Defence, Florence Allen and Eleanor McCubbin; Forwards, Mildred Waters, Jean Bateman and Marjorie Elliott.

U.C.—Goal, Helen McKinley; Defence, Adele Statton and Dot Sears; Forwards, Margaret Kerr, Dot Porter, and Ted Gray; Subs, Fritz Anderson, Boe Crocker and Betty Donaldson.

DEPLORES INFLUENCE OF AMERICAN IDEAS

municipal officials, as practiced in England, as it allowed a continuity of policy.

Professor Munro criticized the independent board system which he said did not make for efficient administration. He advocated the centralization of power in municipal government and in connection with this he spoke of the city-manager plan of government which had been adopted in many American cities.

By this plan boards are done away with and one man appoints all municipal officers. Thus all officials are responsible to one person and a city government becomes like a company with the council as directors and the city-manager as general manager.

In closing Professor Munro stressed the fact that the great trouble in municipal government in America is that very few of the voters realize that they are rate-payers. "Every smoker in the United States is a rate-payer," he said. "In fact smokers in America are mainly taxes not tobacco." Professor Munro then praised the English system whereby taxes are levied on rental value of land. "In this way," he stated, "the necessity of keeping down taxes is brought home to the tenant."

a large table, and two tall bottles were discovered filled with some coloured liquid. These were also confiscated by the government, but later in the evening were found empty. In spite of the disturbances the debate went forward as scheduled. G. E. Graham led for the government declaring that without absurdity life would not be worth living. A. V. Malone was the chief speaker for the opposition and brought forward several absurd things to show that there was nothing silly about them. Other speakers from the floor of the house included Messrs. Loosemore, Little, Seaborn, Walters, Wilson, Wilton, Murrell, Wright, and DeFenier.

The government supporting absurdity won by sixteen votes to thirteen. Before the close of the meeting the speaker and the house joined in expressing disapproval of those who had tried to upset the meeting.

Mr. Bunkley Shuter Sole Speaker In Introducing Debate System

(By N. J. Dewitt)

A rousing debate was held in the town hall under the new system introduced to our town by Mr. Bunkley Shuter. Ye Correspondent obtained an excellent audition of the whole proceedings from behind the piano. Unfortunately, the meeting broke up before any speeches besides Mr. Shuter had an opportunity to speak.

"Resolved that cows are more valuable than sheep," was the resolution. Mr. Bunkley Shuter led off with a snappy mat to the effect that if the opposition expected to cow him, they could guess again. As for the topic under discussion—"It doesn't matter rully," he said, aggressively, "as for speaking to the motion, it rully isn't done."

Supporters planted in the audience shouted "Hear! Hear!" while a few small boys in ignorance replied "Where? Where?" The same small urchins began to shoot paper wads over the piano at ye scribe. The fire was returned with vigour.

"Whither are we drifting?" asked Bunkley.

No one seemed to know.

Bunkley demanded: "There is just one thing I would like to know—just one thing, rully, and I think it is the most important of all—the crux, as it were, of the whole thing—I rully want to know, and I think it frightfully important, yes, in my mind, and I should be delighted if someone would tell me. Now I don't know, rully, I don't know, and I think it very important, I don't know."

"You don't know an awful lot, do you?" suggested the other side.

"Order!" shouted some, while others cried "Bang him, Bunkley!"

Bunkley looked at his critic severely. "The voice of my raucous opponent is distressing in the extreme. If the honourable gentleman would think before he speaks he might attain that knowledge whose lack he sees so perceptibly in myself."

"What does raucous mean?" asked the Opposition of ye scribe.

"I don't know, but it sounds funny," we said.

There ensued a melee in which Bunkley hit the piano and struck the best note of the evening. The meeting broke up with cheers and three arrests.

Correction

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir—

That infamously uncultured reference in "The Varsity" to "Making Whoopee" requires but the feeblest light from the least dilettante among us to show up, glaringly, the downright precocity in which it was written. "Making Whoopee" is the title of a very fine and modern popular song. Well might we echo, "O tempora", when classical allusions are mistaken for slang.

Yours truly,
Modern Culture.

Parliamentary Procedure

Editor "The Varsity".

Dear Sir—

In order to enlighten the members of the Debates Committee as to what is the proper parliamentary procedure in a situation such as we had at the debate of last evening, wherein a song and motion was brought before the house, namely, that our lady guests of the evening be allowed to speak from the gallery, the speaker ruled this motion out of order, which is correct if he so desires however when his decision was appealed, the proper procedure according to Robert's Rules of Parliamentary Procedure, Revised Edition, would have been to ask for a vote from the house as to whether the ruling of the chair should stand. If the appeal to the chair was won then the motion would be voted on. If it was lost the ruling of the Speaker would still stand. I believe that this was the form of procedure that the speaker was going to follow until one member, thinking that you could not have two motions before the house at once called attention to the fact that we were already debating a motion, namely that for which the meeting had been called. Evidently the rest of the members agreed with him because the appeal was not put to a vote. However the second motion was perfectly in order, according to Robert's rules, for it is classified as a motion of privilege and as such takes precedence over any motion that might be before the house at that time.

This motion of privilege has been used several times at Hart House Debates. It was used at the last debate when a motion of acceptance was brought forward, regarding the speaker's chair that was being presented that night.

It is unfortunate that we, men, showed ourselves so lacking in the knowledge of Parliamentary Procedure that we erred so noticeably at last evening's debate and that, espe-

M. C. Musicate

Mr. Godden, the artist of the Friday afternoon Hart House recital gave a Musicate at U.C. yesterday evening. He was hampered badly during the first part of the programme by cold hands, for he had come a long way, but after that he gave a forceful programme with vividness and considerable delicacy. His technique is excellent and he has an especially good feeling for music with a heavy rhythm. The best part of his programme was the movement of Schuman's "Fantasia." This is a beautiful creation, in fact Schuman's masterpiece, and Mr. Godden played it as if he had thought it through carefully many times. He also made us understand Rachmaninoff's Prelude in D minor.

MEDICAL PROFESSORS FAVOR CO-EDUCATION AS HELP TO CAREER

Women Medical Students Have Been Banned at University Of London, England

NO PROHIBITION HERE

Women Physicians Tend to Specialize in Fields of Public Health

Women medical students are banned at hospitals associated with the University of London, England. The prohibition has been in force for some years and according to a committee report which has looked into the matter, it ought to be lifted. It declares also, that in medicine women certainly gain by being educated side by side with the men and that it is not convinced that medical education for women is to a great extent thrown away by wastage through marriage.

Do the local medical professors approve of co-education? Dean Primrose of the Faculty of Medicine could not be got in touch with by "The Varsity".

Professor E. S. Ryerson, Secretary of the Faculty, in an interview with "The Varsity", said:

"Surely I do. There is no objection to co-education. Conditions are different here as far as co-education is concerned. In England, when Oxford refuses women, Cambridge takes them."

H. D. Branson, Fellow in the Department of Biochemistry, said: "Here there is no ban. But women must be intellectually keen and interested in their work. There may still be some prejudice against them. As for the

THE GENERAL STRIKE ANALYSED IN SPEECH

Court Cases of Previous century
Analysed by Dr.
Goodhart

DEFINITION OF TREASON

"A general strike in Canada would not of itself be illegal," said Dr. L. Goodhart, K.C., M.H., LL.M., editor of the "Law Quarterly Review" when speaking at Baldwin House on "Trade Unionism, The General Strike and The Law". Dr. Goodhart explained that his lecture would stress the Common Law rather than the Statutory Law aspects of strikes as he understood that interest in other countries was centred in the legal interpretation of the General Strike rather than in the great dramatic crisis which England had faced.

Reviewing the court cases of the previous century, which he characterized as "incorrect in principle", the speaker concluded with the statement that "During the 19th century the courts certainly took an attitude against the trade unions."

Considering the General Strike itself, Dr. Goodhart pointed out that it could be ruled as being "per se" illegal only on the ground that it was an act of treason, or act of sedition or a conspiracy to accomplish an unlawful purpose.

Treason was cited as being "If a man do levy war against my Lord the King." While the General Strike most certainly brought pressure to bear against the government it was no more treason than was the act of the Book-

LETTING DRUGS OUT FORCIBLY DENOUNCED BY VISITING SPEAKER

Legal Complications From A Breach of Drug Act
Are Exacting

MEDICAL SOCIETY MEETS

Differentiation Between Medically and Legally Insane Person

"Even if I do nothing else, if I prevent you from allowing dope to be taken out of your office I will consider my hour well spent. I cannot express too forcibly the danger of letting drugs out of your office for self-administration," said R. H. Greer, K.C., in a lecture to the Medical Society at their Open Meeting last evening.

Mr. Greer gave the Medical Students an idea of some of the exacting situations they would be required to meet in regard to the law courts. He cited a few interesting cases from his own experience and warned his audience particularly against allowing patients to take dope away with them. He said the Medical Society should have an accurate knowledge of Ontario by-laws, and recommended reading the Drug Act. "I have known so many who have been tricked into breaches of this Act," said Mr. Greer.

Mr. Greer then turned to the technicalities of insanity pleas in the courts, and in a humorous manner explained the problems of the doctor in such cases. He differentiated between a medically and a legally insane person, pointing out that at the time of the trial the accused person may claim he is not sufficiently in control of his mental faculties to defend himself properly. If this is proved so, the man would be adjudged "medically insane" and could not be sentenced, although he was fully in possession of his senses at the time of the crime and was legally convicted. A doctor in trying to decide whether a man was insane when he committed the crime should ask himself, "Did the accused man know he was wrong?" If so, he is responsible.

Judging by the applause the lawyer's speech was well received, and perceiving the enthusiasm Mr. Greer came back out remark "All my clients are not out of jail!"

Faculty members of the University of Kansas, in order to be eligible for the service of doctors of the student hospital, also must be students who have paid their health fees. The doctors are under full time employment by student funds, and it is their first and chief responsibility to serve the student body, it was explained.

Percy Williams Trains at Hart House

Percy Williams of Vancouver, famous double victor in the Olympic games and Jimmy Ball of Winnipeg, Olympic quarter miler have been training in Hart House during their visit to Toronto.

Williams and Ball are getting in shape for track meets in Boston and New York where the two Canadian flyers will display their wares in competition with the best runners in the States.

This fall Williams registered in an Arts course in the University of British Columbia but as various influences made it impossible for him to continue his studies without interruption he withdrew from the University.

The American trip of the two tracksters will be a contrast to the Olympic games of the past summer. This time there will not be the great tension and grind of the overseas events but rather a holiday attitude will prevail.

In spite of his fame as the "world's fastest human", Williams when questioned by "The Varsity" as to his views on "petting", blushing declined to make any statement replying with "that's the most original question I've ever been asked." On being informed of the recent controversy over the subject he seemed considerable interest but once again maintained a discreet silence.

ACETYLENE WELDING SUBJECT OF ADDRESS

Mr. Lloyd Addresses Engineering
Society on its Practical Uses

SPECIAL WELDING STEEL

"Oxy-acetylene welding and its use in repairing and in installation work," was the subject of Mr. Lloyd's address to the Engineering Society at its meeting yesterday afternoon. Mr. Lloyd, a graduate of School '25, is connected with a Toronto firm which is engaged in the manufacture of oxy-acetylene and welding tools, and is recognized as one of the best men in Canada in this line.

Three rolls of film, illustrating the different methods in which welding was used were shown by the speaker, who went on to demonstrate the fundamentals of welding and cutting.

The methods by which the different metals were used were then outlined, as well as the use of welding in practical work. In regard to the latter, special emphasis was laid on its use in installation work—in pipes, for structural work, manufacturing, and pairing machine castings, production and automobile industries.

The strength of welding which is superior to mere fittings, was set down by the speaker as due to a special kind of welding steel which contains a high percentage of silicon and carbon. When this is melted in the weld, the silicon and carbon forms a slag which comes close to the top of the weld and forms a protective coat which prevents oxidation.

At the conclusion of the address, there was presented to the Society a letter from the Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, accepting the invitation of the Engineering Society to become an honorary member of it.

One block would have a delectable insect attached to it, the other would have nothing. After a sufficient number of repetitions the frog would learn that one shape was associated with the idea of food, the other with the idea of remaining empty; and when both blocks were presented without the accustomed bait the frog would hop expectantly to the one that had hitherto served as his dinner-table.

A number of different species of frogs and toads were thus "educated."

FRIENDLY RIVALRY TO END WITH JOINT MEETING

Waterways, Tariff and Vol-

Gathering

It is expected that the friendly rivalry existing between the Arcopagus Club and the Iconoclast Society of St. Michael's College will be cemented next Monday evening, when the two forensic organizations will hold a joint meeting and debate. This question was decided last evening at the regular weekly meetings of the clubs. Messrs. W. O. Kendrick and J. McCann will represent the Arcopagus and will be opposed by Messrs. D. J. Sullivan and G. E. Cassidy of the Iconoclasts.

Mr. D. Sheppard acted as chairman and Mr. J. McCann as critic of the meeting of the Arcopagus at which the following rendered addresses. Mr. Walter Dunbar pointed out the intricacies of the constitution of Mexico from the founding of that nation as a sovereign state and discussed the present religious problem of the country.

Mr. Leo Slattery in his speech on the "Relationships existing between the United States and Canada" discussed the problems facing the two countries, particularly the St. Lawrence Waterway, tariff and the conditions brought about as a result of

Three New Chestfields For Women's Common Room

The Women's Common Room of University College is to be the recipient of three new chestfields. Col. Le Pan, Superintendent of Buildings and grounds, told "The Varsity" on Friday that "Principal Wallace some time ago urged the necessity, which I admitted."

When asked whether the chestfields were a donation, Mr. Le Pan replied, "No, they have been bought out of the regular university funds and we hope to get more of them later."

tries Tend to Draw

"Modern literature is characterized by endless variety, there is no clearly marked principle apparent," said Professor Louis Cazamian, professor of English Languages and Literature at the Sorbonne, speaking in the first of three lectures in Convocation Hall last evening on Parallelism in the recent development of English and French Literatures.

Principal Wallace introduced the speaker to the audience, describing him as "One of the most distinguished of living scholars and historians." Principal Wallace also paid a tribute to Prof. Alexander, in whose honor the efforts of 750 old students and friends had made it possible to have an annual lecture in the series.

"France and England played a predominant part in each other's histories, being two nations lying so closely together. France was to England the gate of the continent, England was to France the gate to the mysteries of the North," declared the speaker.

"During the eighteenth and nineteenth centuries France followed England in Romanticism, whereas England adopted the classical standards of beauty and art of France."

The speaker portrayed in detail the literary history of France and England from the seventeenth century, showing the emergence of definite forms of thought and opinion, out of the confusion and chaos which had in each of these two countries was compared by the speaker.

"All through the centuries their resemblances to one another were hardly less striking than their differences in literature, art and philosophy," Prof. Cazamian stated, comparing the two literatures and forms of thought. But of recent years the two countries are falling into line with one another, he went on to state, in giving the modern aspect. Browning, Tennyson and Arnold were compared with French poets. In the 20th century a new poetry and prose has sprung up, free and original.

"Maupassant was obsessed with the thrill of the supernatural," he stated, "whereas our poetry expresses only the inexpressible."

"The cynical drama of George Bernard Shaw, the soul of romance instilled into stories of reality by Robert Louis Stevenson, and such writers as Hardy, Kipling and H. G. Wells all combine to make English literature what it is," concluded Prof. Cazamian.

The next lecture of the series will be delivered this evening.

Preston, Jan. 28.—The University of Toronto seniors, starting the second half of the O.H.A. schedule, duplicated their performance of Saturday night, by running in three goals in the last period and defeating the local Riversides by 5 to 1. The victory practically gave the Blue and White a place in the play off series, no matter what are the results of the remaining five games on their schedule, to-night's victory giving them six wins in seven starts.

The game was the best played in Preston this year, and the largest crowd of the season was entertained by the sustained speed of the visitors and the aggressive play of the locals but the condition of the winners told in the final period and they were able to smash through for three goals which clinched the result. FRESHMEN DROP OUT FOR LACK OF FUNDS

Increasing Number of Scholarships and Fellowships
As Solution

DECREASE IN ARTS

Are the freshmen and freshettes of this university dropping out after completing their first year? This is a question that is discussed in the President's Report for last year.

The answer varies in different faculties. In Arts, Practical Science, and Household Science, there is a more or less marked tendency for the under graduates to decrease in number from the first to the second years. Especially is this true in Arts in which the first year of 1927-28 numbered 830, while the present second year includes but 730. University College accounting for about 90 of those failing to return.

Both Medicine and Dentistry however, show some increase in the Sophomore classes of this year over the Freshmen classes of last year.

Generally speaking however, there is a falling off in registration after the Freshman year, and this fact has led President Falconer to undertake an investigation of the causes.

As a result of his inquiry, he has found that half of those of the first year who returned after 1927, did so for financial reason. The chief reason for the poor condition of first year students in regard to monetary matters is to be found by examining the report compiled by the Registrar, of the occupations of the parents of the students, which shows that the 2 largest groups of first year students are sons and daughters of small retail merchants and of farmers, while a greater proportional number come from poorer parents than from the more prosperous districts.

Sir Robert looks to an increasing number of scholarships and fellowships contributed by friends of the University, as a solution of the problem.

THE WOMAN'S PLACE

The women of University College are taking themselves and their prospective new building seriously. The W.U.A. sponsors a Mile-of-Nickels campaign and a theatre party, several sororities are devoting the proceeds of dances, candy-sales and theatre nights to the cause, and each girl in Queen's Hall has pledged herself to raise one dollar to make sure that her successors will be well housed.

All of these efforts are very commendable, since most of them are quite voluntary and entirely disinterested. But while University College women are spending so much time and thought over money-raising schemes for a U.C. Women's Building, the larger question of a University Women's Building is being absolutely ignored. Indeed the two are being confused and men and women of all colleges and faculties have laid down nickels and bought candy with the thought that they were helping the women of the University to attain a Hart House of their own, instead of merely contributing towards a second Queen's Hall.

Why should this matter of a University Women's Building be shelved as it has been for years? It is some time now since even a faint flicker of enthusiasm has been aroused and one is reminded of it only occasionally by a pathetic sign "2 cents! For the Women's Building", which baulks the conscientious ink-seeker. But even the optimists who began to collect money by selling ink have become discouraged, and the little signs are seen less and less frequently. Only when one interviews those who are responsible for or interested in women's athletics, does one find that the desire for a Women's Building has not died entirely, with them it has become a ruling passion.

It does seem inconsistent that people who became eloquent about University spirit and harmony between all the factions in this University, are not enthusiastic workers for something which might have the greatest possible unifying effect. But such is undoubtedly the case. It is quite evident that for most people University spirit counts only during an Intercollegiate Rugby game and that with the suggested exception the college is first, last and all the time.

Why do not the authorities who fear the fusing of faculty loyalties say so frankly and declare that a University Women's Building (unless presented by some philanthropic person.— in which case it would have to be accepted) is an impossibility? Then the women of the University would give up longing for their own blue line almost down to a fine art and gives a forward a nice try to see that each college had its own gymnasium, swimming-pools and little theatre. Thus for the women at least, each college would become a self-contained unit, and the prospect of their ever being united in purely University interest would be quite dead.

Special to The Varsity
Moscow—In an effort to raise the cultural level of the peasant masses, the Russian government is to spend $100,000,000 on art in the next five years, it has been announced by Alexander Svidersky, newly appointed head of the government art department.

New theatres will be built in each county, while museums, drama and opera will be made available to the masses by lowest admission fees possible. The government is also to publish popular editions of all the world's classical works, to be sold to the people at minimum prices.

The Social Service Association of Toronto General Hospital held their annual meeting at Wymilwood on Friday afternoon.

Art, Music and Drama

Photography Salon

The seventh annual salon of photography arranged in the Sketch Room by the Camera Committee of Hart House is arousing considerable interest amongst the students. This may be partly due to the fact that the work on view represents the efforts of members of Hart House. However, if numbers could be taken as any criterion of the merit of the exhibit, then this year's display would rank high since, of the photographs submitted, thirty were rejected by the hanging committee, yet even so the number of photographs hung exceeds that of other years.

It is the opinion of the judge, Mr. K. B. Jackson, that though the best of the work of former photographic exhibits in Hart House may not have been surpassed, certainly the lower grade work is this year of a much higher standard than formerly.

The Camera Committee for purposes of judging divided the work of the members into two main divisions, namely Senior and Junior. Each of these divisions were divided into the following six classes: Landscape and Marine, Portraiture and Figure Study, Genre and Still Life, Scientific and Nature, High Speed and Press, Architecture and Colour Photography.

From a hasty glance at the various pictures entered in each class, one might be inclined to disagree with the choice of those selected for prizes, but upon closer examination the merit of the prize-winner is manifest. For example, the landscape awarded first prize in the junior division outclasses those about it in point of unity of composition and effective subordination and relevancy of the scenery seemingly arranged to naturally about the main tree. That such photographic examples of artistry are rarely the result of haphazard snap shots is also borne out by the fact that a distance of ten miles was covered three times in order to obtain the interesting sky to be seen in this picture.

"Peggy" is an excellent portrait in which the lighting is arranged so that the real shape of the girl's face is at once evident. The other girl whose reproduction figures so prominently in the exhibit is quite as attractive but does not display the sculptural roundness of "Peggy".

Space precludes much detail mention but it would indeed be an oversight not to emphasize the quality of some of the colour work. "Freed from Winter" comes close to perfection, while "The Lone Harvester" is an admirable piece of craftsmanship.

EXAMS AND ESSAYS CAUSE RUSH AT LIBRARY

The average undergraduate does not take a chance on getting the book he wants at the last minute but signs it out during the day—according to Miss M. L. Newton, head of Circulation Department in the University Library. There is not usually a rush to sign early unless an examination or essay has been set, or unless a certain book has been specially mentioned in a lecture. "Of course," added Miss Newton, "there are always exams and essays."

However, some students sign up in plenty of time. At 10.30 yesterday morning some seventy books had already been signed out. Of them economic texts were in the majority, with history a close second, and the remainder divided between French, English, Zoology, Latin and Philosophy.

Collegiate humour comes in for a good many raps these days; but on analysis nothing much can be found to be wrong with it and most of its errors can be laid to enthusiasm.

But it certainly does not please those whose viewpoint has progressed to a stage where youth and spontaneity become slightly alarming.

The first college joke in America ran this wise, Time, 1890. Algy—"Is your wife entertaining this winter?" Marmaduke—"Not very."

A favourite one involves this trick. A—"Where do you come from?" B—"I come from Manononquemanonque." A—"Isn't that funny! I thought you said you came from Manononquemanonque."

Or the repeat trick. A—"Where are you from?" B—"I come from Walla-Walla." A—"I heard you the first time." Also used with Agar-Agar, Sing-Sing, and Honk-Honk, Wis.

Absent-minded professor who blew the choker on his car and pulled his nose; who shaved the cat and kicked himself in the face and so on ad infinitum.

We also like a peculiarly obvious type of joke found in German papers. Matters "Heinrich, how many times have I told you to stop shrieking?" Heinies "Eight times, mother."

"Grandpa, were you ever a little boy?" "Yes, grandson."

"What a wow you must have been with those whiskers!"

I don't trust my teacher. Yesterday she said 8 plus 4 made 12, now she says 10 plus 2 makes 12.

And then, of course, there is the pun, which some claim to be a vice peculiar to this year's Cat. It is also prevalent in most college papers. The last to come to our attention is the one using the word "event".

Well, event but he came back.

As Leon Errol said in the midst of a stagger—"That's my weakness now!"

Employing Senior. I haven't senior for some time.

Editor, "The Varsity".

Without casting any criticism whatever on the very active and energetic Music Club at Hart House, there seems to be contained therein a missing link. Doubtless all readers of "The Varsity", who are interested in music, turn with enthusiasm to the critic's report on the programs arranged by the Club. (In particular I have reference to the last two Friday afternoon recitals in Hart House Music Room). Disillusionment must surely follow in many cases.

Mr. J. K. certainly has not been showing a very appreciative attitude towards visiting artists, who offer their talent and valuable time voluntarily. His "write up" does not voice the sentiment prevailing amongst the audience, especially the "Musicals" of Friday, Jan. 25, which was utterly lacking in any descriptive evidence of a meritorious program.

This gives a poor representation of the excellent standard of music sponsored by the Hart House Music Club. Sincerely yours, L. G. A.

PRESS UNION PLANNED FOR SPEEDIER SERVICE

Special to "The Varsity"

Saskatoon, Sask.—Plans are being made for the formation of an inter-collegiate press union involving The Manitoban, The Gateway, and The Sheaf for the purpose of facilitating exchange service. The details of the organization have not yet been settled but it is expected that all material will be handled by a central office and that considerable use will be made of telegraph lines for which special arrangements are being made.

The new service will mean that each of these publications will be able to publish news of events at the other universities in the issue following their occurrence. It will enable speedier service with respect to inter-varsity athletic events, and in general it is expected to provide a means whereby students of the universities of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan may be able to keep in touch with the activities of the others.

BLUE SENIOR SEXTET BEATS PRESTON 5-1 AND LEADS GROUP

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity Juniors will certainly have more than a luke-warm interest in to-night's battle between Marlboros and Toronto Canoe Club. This is a replay of the tie game which has caused such a mix-up. If the Red Ringers win the Blue and White are out of the running but if the Iron Dukes pull down the works, Varsity and T.T.C. will be tied and obliged to play a sudden death game to decide who will meet Marlboros in the group play-offs.

According to reports Marlboros will be very much below full strength when they take the ice to-night. On the dope T.T.C. should win but the Marlboro subs may turn the trick.

The work of Murray Snyder in goal for the Blue senior sextet has been one of the bright spots of the present campaign. Murray is blocking them in great style and shows a clear head and steady hand in his clearing. Snyder has his pass-out from goal to the blue line almost down to a fine art and gives a forward a nice chance to break away on a clear sally down on the opposing goal.

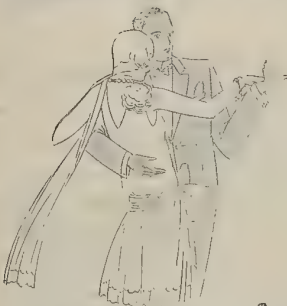

The defeat of the Blue and White in Kingston last week stamps the Tricolour outfit as dangerous. Kingston is giving the team great support and the team is apparently appreciating it.

Educated Dog Sniffs at "Varsity" Offered as Bribes

A wire-haired terrier or perhaps a dog of even less imposing lineage, caused a commotion and some unseemly laughter in the Women's Common Room of University College on Monday morning. Passing from one girl to another, greeting all affectionately (this supplemented by enthusiastic tail-wagging), he was finally enticed to the other side of the room by prospects of fresh fields to conquer. The charmer was heard to coo, "You'd be a nice doggie if you had someone to look after you." But when "the bastie" began to dine on her perfectly good coon coat and could not be separated from it, even by the offer of such succulent fodder as the Monday edition of "The Varsity," the same dog-fancier was heard to exclaim: "If this pup belongs to anyone, come and strangle him."

Beginning in October, Sunday dates at the University of Idaho ended at 7 p.m. as prescribed by the dean of women. In the spring, the hour will be changed to 9 o'clock.

VARSITY SENIORS ENTER PLAYOFFS

Two periods produced the most excitement as for this forty minute stretch the locals held the Blue and White fairly well in check and Snyder had to make a number of sensational saves to keep his team in front. Stewart scored the only goal of the first period after a combination effort with McMullen. Towards the end of the period the Riversides staged a determined attack and as a result Snyder was kept busy and Schmalz did not touch the rubber for the space of five minutes.

The students increased their lead in the second period when McMullen shoved home the rebound after an individual rush by Paul but this counter only served to increase the vigor of the Riversides' attacks and they were finally rewarded when Arnott and Clark worked a double passing play that enabled the former to score from close in.

The pace, both fast and constant and the heavy body checking of the Collegians' defense told in the final period and when the winners unleashed a faster and more dazzling attack the locals could not respond and went through to get three goals. The first was by Marshall on a pass from McMullen and five minutes later Whitehead back handed one in from an assist by Harley. Five minutes from the end Harley went in to beat Schmalz on the rebound from McMullen's shot.

The Blue showed lots of combination efforts and it was this, coupled with their speed and condition, which brought them victory. Every member of the local squad turned in a great effort with Arnott playing his best game this season. Talbot and Ashley were always dangerous while Clark and Cicurio had the speed to cope with the visitors. Schmalz turned in a great game in the nets but could not turn aside the five shots that beat him. Stewart at centre for the Students was the best man on the ice, his slick handling, speed and back checking being features of the game. McMullen was the best of the remainder of the forwards while Paul and Whitehead were strong in front of Snyder who was also at his best.

The teams:—

Varsity—Snyder, goal; Paul and Whitehead, defense; Stewart, centre; Harley and McMullen, wings; Murray and Marshall, alternates.

Preston—Schmalz, goal; Ashley and Skelly, defense; Arnott, centre; Clark and Talbot, wings; Cicurio and Johnson, alternates.

Referee—Jack Humpfull, Waterloo

The summary:—

- First period
1.—Varsity—Stewart (McMullen) 8.00
Second period
2.—Varsity—McMullen (Paul)7.00
3.—Preston—Arnott (Clark)8.00
Third period
4.—Varsity—Marshall (McMullen) 3.00
5.—Varsity—Whitehead (Harley) 5.00
6 Varsity—Harley (McMullen) 7.00
Final score—Varsity 5, Preston 1.

Saint Hilda's Win by 3-1 From Vic Senior Sextet

St. Hilda's girls defeated Senior Victoria team, 3-1, in a snappy game of hockey Monday evening at Little Vic rink. At the end of the first half the score was 2-1, but in the third quarter the Vic goalie dropped the puck into her own net, raising the score for St. Hilda's. Ev. Watson scored the only goal for Vic, while Frances Crooks, backed by F. Briggs, scored for St. Hilda's.

The line-ups were:
Vic—Goal, Aura Graham; defence, Milly Jarrett, Anne Wingfield; centre, Ev. Watson; wings, Marrie Rieder, Agnes Vanstone; subs, Esther Trewartha, Lois Reynolds, Marie Lonson.
St. Hilda's—Goal, Ursula Foster; defence, Gladys Martin, Frances Briggs; centre, centre, Frances Crooks; wings, Joyce Muirhead, Marjorie Winsky; subs, Naomi Slater, Enid McColl, Helen McCaul.

The Household Science Club gave a very successful tea last week. The second year students did the catering.

INTERFACULTY MEET TAKES PLACE TODAY

Gym Club Set to Should Feature Trinity Opposition to Last Year's Winners

KEEN RIVALRY DISPLAYED

To-night the Interfaculty Gym Meet will take place in the Big Gym at 5.15 o'clock. The members of the Gym Club have been practicing for this event since last October and as a result competition should be keen. Last year Jack Williamson, captain of the Intercollegiate team led his S.P.S. team to victory in this competition, himself placing second for the individual honours. School have their entire team back again this year, and are expected to repeat their victory and again win the right to have their names on the Harold A. Wilson Cup, emblematic of the Interfaculty Gym Championship. Since it was donated in 1926, this cup has been won once by Meds and once by School.

To-night, the engineers will probably receive their greatest opposition from Trinity. This latter faculty has an excellent Intercollegiate prospect in Alf Malone, a former Ridley College lad. Malone has been showing good form in practice, and with a little hard work should make the grade this year. U.C. will also have a team entered and although they are all first year men they are doing very well in practice, especially Leo Warshaw, who has great possibilities as a gymnast. He has had European training and an excellent grounding in this most difficult of sports. Another freshman who is doing well is Bob Wilkinson of School, who comes from Windsor, where he has been coached by Gene Cherdelsky, a former Intercollegiate Champion, and captain of the Varsity Gym Team.

Five members of last year's Intercollegiate team remain, although but four will compete in the interfaculty meet. Darrel Campbell, who went to West Point with the mat men, may not enter, but Jack Williamson, Eliot Heslop, Wilf Heslop and Don Gunn are entered and are expected to show real intercollegiate style. Last year Gunn won this meet, with Williamson second. The competition was very close and the standing may easily be reversed in the coming trials. On the whole, an excellent display of gymnastics is indicated, as rivalry is keen among the various teams and the personnel of the Intercollegiate team largely depends upon the showing of the individual men. Mr. Frank Hays, Mr. Nat Keefe, and W. H. Greenwood, all accomplished gymnasts themselves, have consented to act as judges, and all that is needed for a highly successful competition is a large entry.

SCHOOL OVERCOME LEAD TO TIE U.C. PUCK MEN

Score 3-3 at End of Hard Game—No Overtime Allowed

Sr. School of Science tied Senior U.C. last night with a score of 3-3. The game took place on the hockey cushion behind the Varsity Stadium yesterday at 5.15. The reason for the delay in starting, which seems to predominate most inter-faculty matches is unknown, but when the puck was dropped both teams got off to a very creditable start. The first part of the game undoubtedly belonged to U.C. Starting with a neat goal by Henry and ending with two goals from Collingwood. The only interruption being when Reid scored one for School. With the score 3-1 in U.C.'s favour School came to the fore and with the help of Irwin and Haggard managed to tie the things up. No overtime being allowed the game was forced to stop in this uncertain condition and matters between School and U.C. are at a standstill.

Sr. U.C.—Goal, McTaggart; defence, Reid, Cunningham; forwards, Henry Collingwood, Jackson; subs, Arnold, McGibbon.

Sr. S.P.S.—Goal, Allan; defence, Irwin, Crerar; forwards, Higgins, Grosvenor, Haggard; subs, Reid, Sniffin.

EMMANUEL BY 25-8 BEAT KNOX BASKETEERS

Snell Scores Thirteen for Winners in Easy Victory Yesterday

Emmanuel handed Knox a severe beating when they defeated the Blue and White squad by 25 to 9 in an interfaculty basketball fixture yesterday. It was an easy victory, the ministers leading from the first blast of the whistle. In the opening session Emmanuel was just getting under way, the period ending with a score of 5 to 2 in their favour.

During the second half, Knox blew up completely, allowing their opponents to rush down on their basket and take shot after shot. Snell, the Emmanuel centre, tallied thirteen points in the final frame, which ended with a score of 25 to 9 in favour of the Blue and Gold.

The teams:—

Emmanuel—Forwards, Harris (2), and Thomson (4); centre, Snell (14); guards, Beacon (2) and Shepley (3); subs, Smith, Henderson, Walkinshaw, Kendall and Danard.

Knox—Forwards, Higgin (1) and Loucks; centre, Wyse (4); guards, Wismer (4) and Davidson; subs, Rayner and McPhail.

Varsity Rowers Working On Hart House Machines

Varsity oarsmen are getting their muscles warmed up on the rowing machines at Hart House every day at 5 p.m. Some very promising new material has been turning out, but the club needs more "six-footers" as there will be one or two more crews on the water this summer than there were last.

From the interest shown around the University it looks as if the annual Intercollegiate Rowing is going to become very popular. The proposed development of the Humber river course, which will be one of the finest in North America and along with an up-to-date club-house will make the annual Varsity-McGill race as well known and as popular as the Oxford-Cambridge title meet.

Rifle Association Sweepstake Results

The Rifle Association announces the following results of Sweepstakes for week of Jan. 20, 1929:

- Group A—(1) Withrow 94; (2) Sherwood, 91; (3) Bass, 90.
Group B—(1) MacNab, 96; (2) Collier, 83; (3) Freeman, 77.
Group C—(1) Hendrick, 75.
Group D—(1) Elliott.

This week is reserved entirely for match shooting. Every member is allowed one score of ten shots with two sighters. The high score in each group wins an association spoon. The five best scores in each faculty constitute the faculty team.

Toronto, Ont., Jan. 20—A summer school to be held in three sessions at Oxford, Stratford-upon-Avon and London, England, is announced at the local offices of the Overseas Education League. The tours arranged from Canada in connection with this school will be organized by Major Fred J. Ney, M.C., founder of the League and will be conducted on a non-profit basis. An estimate of the cost will be given, it is announced, and a refund will be made if the cost is less than estimated. Present plans call for the party sailing from Quebec on the Canadian Pacific liner The Empress of Australia on July 2, and returning from England on The Duchess of Richmond on August 21st.

Hairpin Dreams of M.P.'s Tooth And Wanders Over Face of Earth

Florence McLean

My I'm so happy! After six years of idleness and darkness, I once more saw light a short time ago. A young lady took me and my brothers in exchange for a piece of silver. From then on I've had some wonderful experiences.

I think my name is "Oh hang the luck," because one day my mistress dropped me whereupon she called this at the top of her voice.

I was later picked up by a girl whom I judged from her use of big words, to be a student. I was right. Regularly I went to college with her but one day during an English lecture I quietly slipped out and crept under some bright pink silky material. While there I kept her in agony and was so glad when I dropped out before she caught me. But I was severely punished for one of the students walked on me and put a kink in my side. Being useless now, I was knocked about. I was crying aloud at such treatment when a fat woman heard me—lifted me—straightened my side then used me for a button hook. My feelings were hurt. I was humiliated but thanked my stars that none of my friends were in sight. How I escaped would take too long to tell but I did and travelled quietly from one to another. By this trip which was interesting and educating I learned many new and striking coiffures.

I'm now in the possession of a brunette. Every night as I lie here in her hairpin box, I dream of the time I picked the tooth of an M.P. (Member of Parliament). Perhaps some day I'll tell you about it.

NATIONALISM IS POISON FACED BY ALL YOUTH

decade has been exposed. In the exaggerated emphasis which many wish to place upon it will be found the seeds of future wars." Father McCorkell went on to say that a specimen result of nationalism is the average English speaking person's opinion of things Spanish. Although the Spanish have been our co-partners and co-partners with the Americans in the civilization of this continent and South America with perhaps the most creditable record of the three the idea inculcated in the school books of history is that the history of Spain is a record of the sheerest incompetency.

On this same question of English education, Mr. J. C. P. Proby of the Department of History, said: "English public school education in the past has been too much designed for the training of a governing and officer class. I should think that it was a passing phase due to the intense international competition of the pre-war period. It is to be hoped that in future education will be more designed to develop the character and powers of the individual. There are already in England modern educationists who are working toward this end."

statement. The editorial goes on to say that "The Medical Societies in other countries will have to copy this movement. The reason for this is because the advances which are being made in Medicine and surgery, are probably more rapid than have ever been made before. New treatments and systems are being constantly brought out, that in their successfulness supersede the treatment that were considered as perfect as possible a few years ago. It is for that reason, in particular that we deem this action of the Canadian Medical Society such a forward step."

MEN SAY MOST WOMEN DO NOT CARRY WEIGHT

But Professor Deprecates Snap Judgments on Subject

DO MEN FEAR TO SPEAK?

"Do you think that woman's suffrage and their so-called emancipation has justified itself? Do women carry any weight in politics or do any thinking?" These and like questions were propounded by "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon. The result:

R. G. Maitland, III U.C.: "The wife always votes opposite to her husband on general principles, so the emancipation of women has given the deciding vote to the bachelors and spinsters."

E. Mulcahy, II U.C.: "Do they think? I would say 'No' if for no other reason than that Agnes MacPhail says 'Yes'."

E. Carson, Philos., II Vic: "With the price of paper-pulp constantly on the ascent, it seems an unpardonable waste of paper to allow woman suffrage."

Tony Wright, II U.C.: "Women are too prone to judge a male candidate's physical attributes, rather than his mental accomplishments."

A. L. Chute, II Vic: "Personally I don't think. Nor do most women." Prof. Smith at Baldwin House, stated that he approved of woman's suffrage, but that he had made no special study of its effect, and would therefore offer no opinion. He further remarked that, incidentally, he had no great faith in snap judgments of hastily interviewed people.

A certain graduate remarked, that on this question, all men held one and the same opinion but that they dare not express it, especially if they chance to be married. The women, on the other hand, appeared to have great faith in women as political bulwarks. But all did not agree.

PROFESSOR W. H. GREAVES TO GO TO YALE IN FALL

Victoria Public Speaking Lecturer Appointed to Chair in States

Professor W. H. Greaves, Special Lecturer in Public Speaking, at Victoria College, has been appointed Professor of Public Speaking at Yale, according to a recent announcement. He will take up his duties there next October.

In addition to conducting his lectures at Victoria College, Professor Greaves has organized evening classes, acted as instructor in oratory at S.P.S. and has recently demonstrated elocution to telephone girls of this city. Professor Greaves is an American by birth and obtained his M.A. at Boston.

Miss Nancy Murray of Branksome Hall was the pianist at Wymilwood's Sunday evening musicale.

makers Association, which had brought pressure against the government by refusing to accept any wagers in protest against the Betting Act. However, if a general strike were called during war time with the intention of helping the enemy to overthrow the government, it would be treason.

The General Strike not being an act of treason, the case for sedition was outlined on the basis of whether or not it had been certain to lead to disorder, on which basis strikes have been ruled to be illegal in the United States. However, the speaker pointed out that in England the police force were held to be responsible and capable of suppressing disorder that was simply incidental to the strike. The case was cited of the Salvation Army Parade which was certain to clash with the "Skeleton Army" of the public houses, which clash had been averted by the arrest of the Salvation Army leaders by the police whose action had not been upheld by the courts.

The 1927 Trade Disputes Act was quoted as giving a maximum penalty of three months in jail for a sympathetic strike or a political strike with the object of government coercion whereas death is the penalty for treason.

The provisions of the 1927 Act were outlined showing how the legal aspects of strikes had been made more clear.

question of medical women wasting their education and career through marriage—that is emphatically incorrect. There are well-known married doctors and their wives practicing together and making a success of it.

"Of course the sensibilities of some people have been shocked by the idea of co-education in medicine. Nothing need be said on that subject—let them be shocked."

Professor H. Wastneys, Department of Biochemistry, asserts himself in reply to the above question, emphatically in favour of it.

THIRD ALEXANDER LECTURE

A United States of Europe
Viewed as Possibility by Sorbonne Savant

Movements toward a United States of Europe influenced by English and French Literature were reflected by Louis Cazamian, of the Sorbonne in his second lecture delivered at Convocation Hall last evening on "The Parallels in the Recent Development of English and French Literature". "Few countries unite in the way in which France and England have united in the intellectual world," stated the speaker in stressing the theme of his talk, which dealt for the greater part with the years extending from 1875 to 1914, and the reciprocity of the two nations during that period. "Books succeed because they strike an easy response or answer a curiosity," continued Professor Cazamian in pointing out to his audience the reasons for the widespread reading of English novels in France and vice-versa.

Joseph Conrad, Robert Louis Stevenson and Rudyard Kipling were a few of the English writers, mentioned by the speaker, who have been influenced by and have taken models from the French writers of the century. "Realistic truth was held back for years and even as late as 1896 there was a board of censorship existing in England. We find however, that the strict discipline of the Victorian age was being upset at the end of the nineteenth century and a new generation coming to the fore," Professor Cazamian stated while he emphasized the adoption of realism by English writers who had its beginning in France. "Byron, Moore, Scott, and Wordsworth were widely read in France while the spell of Shelly and Keats was felt even before they attained their present position in England. Kipling enjoys wide popularity in the nation across the Channel because of the thrill of his stories and the mystery of new worlds, while the flashing genius of Marlow provides a feeling of romance and imagery to the English reader," added the professor of the Sorbonne. Among others mentioned who have awakened thought in France are Wells, Galsworthy and Chesterton.

The wireless, telegraph and telephone were some of the causes which have brought about a closer relationship between the two nations since the war. That individuality and isolation of nations has vanished and civilization is being unified to a cosmopolitan likeness, was one of the causes given by Professor Cazamian for the unity of England and France in the intellectual world.

The third lecture of the series will be delivered in Convocation Hall this evening.

RARE POSTAGE STAMP RESULTS FROM BLUNDER

Special to "The Varsity"
Paris—The rarest postage stamp in France is due to the carelessness of a government printer who tore a roll of blank stamp paper.

To avoid explanations, he mended the paper with a strip of red paper and when the green 20-centime stamps came out of the machine 10 of them were printed on a red background.

VICTORIA LIBRARY CLOCK GOES FOR NEEDED REPAIRS

Donated Sixteen Years Ago in Honour of Popular Janitor

Absence induced caused an increase of affection! The frequenters of Victoria College Library never realized how much they cherished their familiar library clock until its sudden disappearance a week ago. Eyes now look inquiringly but in vain to discover if it is five minutes before or after lecture-time. It appears that this made bronze face, periodically decided to run irregularly and so of necessity must be sent to a clock-doctor and cured of its perversity.

This teller of time is rather unique in history and appearance. Few V.C. students are aware that it was donated by the "Bob" Committee of 1911, '12 and '13, and placed in the library in honour of Robert Bear, the popular janitor of the College in its earlier days. Translated from the Latin the clock's inscription reads "In memory of Robert—the gift of the 'Committee for the extermination of greenness' for the years 1911, '12 and '13". The reference being to the "Bob" Committee which exists each fall to execute harassing skits for freshmen.

COMPARES SORBONNE WITH THE U. OF T.

Professor Cazamian Impressed
With Material Advantages
Of Varsity

PARIS CULTURE CENTRE

"The Sorbonne is not comparable with the University of Toronto, as regards material advantages," declared Prof. Louis Cazamian, professor in English at the Sorbonne, University of Paris, in an interview with "The Varsity" last evening. Prof. Cazamian is visiting Toronto and is delivering the inaugural series of the "Alexander Lecture". "I am very favorably impressed with your university, as a whole," said Prof. Cazamian, "and especially with the material advantages which it enjoys. I have seen Hart House and several of the other buildings here, and my only regret is that we have not some like them at the Sorbonne."

Questioned regarding the University of Paris, Prof. Cazamian described its outer form as "A varied collection of lecture rooms and buildings."

"At the Sorbonne, students are expected to have a life of their own apart from the university. There has been, until recently, no university life as you know it here. Students are not in residence there, but live just wherever they please."

But regarding the intellectual development, Prof. Cazamian had a high opinion of the Sorbonne.

"The intellectual plane of the Sorbonne is unequalled throughout Europe," he said, "as a centre of culture and learning it is unexcelled."

Asked to give his opinion of Canadian Literature, Prof. Cazamian declined; he had met Dr. Roberts, he said, and had seen many new aspects of Canadian Literature.

Prof. Cazamian speaks very correct and fluent English, and has made four trips to America, this being his third trip to Canada.

On January 24th, Professor William Bennett Munro, Marllet lecturer to the University spoke to the Library School students and the students of the College of Education on the Widener Library, Harvard University.

HART HOUSE OFFICER WELCOMES CRITICISM WHEN CONSTRUCTIVE

Small Profit From Tuck Shop
Used to Improve Service
To Students

HALL COMMITTEE LAUDED

Denies Overcharging, Saying Standard Commodities Sold
At Fixed Prices

"We welcome constructive criticism and the Hall Committee have never failed to handle suggestions," said Mr. J. R. Gilley, B.Sc., Comptroller of Hart House, when interviewed by "The Varsity" regarding a letter appearing in this issue charging that Tuck Shop prices were too high.

"Of course," said Mr. Gilley, "there are many things, such as chocolate bars which are sold at more or less standard prices. On tobacco and cigarettes there is too narrow a margin of profit to attempt reduction of regular prices. As to sandwiches, they can hardly be sold for five cents and so we charge a dime and put a dime's worth of meat into them."

When asked if the Tuck Shop were run at a profit, Mr. Gilley said, "Yes there is a surplus from the Tuck Shop, the Billiard Rooms, and the Barber Shop, and this helps out on other items. We used two hundred dollars of the Tuck Shop surplus to fix up that room for the men with lunches."

Mr. Gilley spoke highly of the work of the Hall Committee and the real personal attention which they have this year given to the Tuck Shop. "Our conscience is clear on this matter. There are the figures," said Mr. Gilley waving his hand toward his filing cabinet, "I would be glad to take them up with any members interested."

Regarding the matter of selling for less than retail prices, Mr. Gilley said that he was not so much interested in what down town prices might be. The Tuck Shop was run at a small margin that it might be of greatest service.

WOMEN'S OPPORTUNITIES GREATER IN MEDICINE

Dr. McMurphy Stresses Place
For Women in Field
Of Research

"There is plenty of room and plenty of work in the medical profession for women," stated Dr. McMurphy in her address at the tea given by Mrs. Kirkwood in the Women's Union yesterday. "The opportunities are tremendous, especially in the field of research, but success depends upon the worker."

"The Great War had more to do with the increased importance of women."

VISAGES HARDEN

Chemical Club Drinks Follow
Apache, Bar-room, Marathon
Houdini

Hart House was taxed to capacity last night when 1,500 odd School men took possession and in the gentle fashion characteristic of engineers proceeded to entertain themselves. The few from the so-called "softer faculties" who were observed shyly intermingling in the crowds seemed somewhat pale at first but after witnessing the skits staged by the various clubs of the Applied Science men, took on hardened visages.

The term "Whoopie," seems best to characterize the calibre of the skits, which were carried off with great gusto in various parts of the House. The Mechanical and Electrical club played to a full house when it burlesqued "The Varsity" staff in the process of producing its clean, optimistic undergraduate newspaper. A small "press" in a short time printed several hundred copies of "Red Ryan's Rag" on yellow paper. An article therein giving the last word in "necking" technique was, as someone remarked, "designed as an advanced course in the gentle art for the benefit of the university Laura Louise's". The last named was also featured in this special edition of the R.R.R. A difference of opinion arose amongst "The Varsity" staff which ended in a minor revolution.

The three other skits depicted an apache scene in a bar-room, the "Wriggling Marathon", and a master magician stunt in which the spirit of Houdini returned to grace School Nite with its presence.

A polo game in real earnest was a source of interest to many in the gallery of the tank room. This was followed by fancy diving.

At 9:30 p.m. dancing commenced in grand style, the Chemical Club dispensing drinks between dances.

AMERICAN SCIENTISTS ACT IN EFFORT TO SAVE WHALE

Special to "The Varsity"
Baltimore—International action to save the whale from extermination is the plan of the American Society of Mammalogists.

Dr. A. Brazier Howell, of Johns Hopkins University, secretary of the society, says that the demand for whales is greater today than it has ever been, and some species are threatened with being wiped out.

RECOVERING LOST ARTICLE DEPENDS ON ITS UTILITY

Meds and Schoolmen Miss
Notes While Women Lose
Personal Effects

Careful investigation on the subject tends to prove the chances of recovering a lost article as being about fifty per cent, depending upon whether the article is a bill fold or a Spanish text, as much as upon the efforts of the loser.

Evidently the undergraduate men suffer from a lack of "feminine touch". How else can we explain the crowded Hart House notice board with its cluttered array of lost and found? True, the co-eds seem little better if we observe correctly the numerous ear rings, compacts, shoe buckles and fraternity pins; but these notices of loss alone are equalled by the S.P.S. and Med's advertisements for sets of complete notes and lab. reports. Obviously the co-eds and "rival schools" both miss companionship to equal degrees, while the less distinguished continue in their habit of absent mindedness unless obliged to face a maternal catechism periodically. In fact, they seem to have the habit of losing everything; dressing gowns, bracelets, and car tickets (a complete troussau) not to mention overcoats, books on "Interest and Bond Values" and a few dozen silver rings. In fact, it only remains for someone to advertise the loss of an overcoat to attain the ridiculous.

CANADIAN CAPITAL SUPPLANTS FOREIGN

Proportion of Domestic Money
In Investment Decreasing
Says Professor Taylor

WAR CHANGED SITUATION

"The proportion of foreign capital to Canadian capital in Canadian industries is growing less and less," said Mr. K. W. Taylor of the Department of Political Science of McMaster University speaking before the Commerce Club in Hart House yesterday. The speaker's general subject was "Foreign Investment of Capital in Canada."

Large amounts of foreign capital are necessary for the development of a new country, particularly for the building of railways and canals," said Mr. Taylor, "and the largest part of the earlier investment was for these purposes. In these days, with improved standards of public service, it costs a great deal to establish a new settler. Much of the necessary money is supplied by foreign agencies through trust companies and so on, which have a large proportion of foreign capital."

"The war changed the whole situation with regard to capital in Canada," said the speaker, "for Britain's available capital for investment was much reduced, and American capital of necessity took its place, but there is no necessity to worry about Americans gaining control of our industries, as so many people seem to fear. Control, is a rather vague thing anyway. A block of shares amounting to far less than fifty per cent. of the total capitalization of a company may exercise a very real control. For instance, although the C.P.R. stock is held to the extent of forty per cent. in England, twenty five per cent. in the U.S., and twenty per cent. in Canada, and yet I would say that the control lies in Canada. There are many other factors, and besides Canadians control about sixty-six per cent of the capitalization of Canadian industries."

RED SOCIETY FORMED ON VARSITY CAMPUS TO FIGHT LASSITUDE

Fabian Society Is Organized
After Talk on Capital
And Labour

MR. J. S. WOODSWORTH

Emphasizes Government Failure
To Fulfill Obligations
Of Versailles

The University Reds are organizing a Fabian Society! Following the talk given by Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., on "Capital and Labour" at Wyilmwood last night, a group of radical enthusiasts are forming a society for the discussion of labor problems and outstanding Labour leaders will speak at their meetings. As a proof of high seriousness a committee of four was chosen to commence action. Mr. Woodsworth explained that in England it was the intellectuals who organized labor and trade unions into the ILabor party and he could see no reason why if a small group of intelligent people set about it with determination, they should be unsuccessful here.

"We are developing a situation that may be known as 'Industrial Serfdom'. The full effect of the Industrial Revolution has been experienced here in a very short time; the industrial chain and departmental stores and banks are all concentrated in the hands of a few."

The Treaty of Versailles dealt with the labor problem ten years ago and that it should not be regarded as a mere commodity. Certain rights were specified, discussed at Washington, and adopted in Canada. But the Federal Government shifted the responsibility to the individual provinces—and the provinces have not acted. The labor provisions of the Versailles Treaty have not been carried out."

Mr. Woodsworth illustrated these statements with examples: The right to organize was granted but this has become so limited that only certain industries now have that privilege. There is a minimum wage, but that is so minimum that it is remarkable how men are able to support themselves and their families. The eight-hour day in the mining districts of Nova Scotia and even up in Algoma is an unknown quantity. And there is no such thing as unemployment insurance. If a man is out of work it is his own business and not that of his country.

The chief factors leading to bad labor conditions are that we have not a trade union organization strong enough to force action, and what is worse public opinion is against it.

PRAIRIE TREES REAPPEAR SAYS FOREST DEPARTMENT

Special to "The Varsity"
Ottawa, Ont.—The Tree Planting division of the Forest Service, Department of the Interior, reports that there are now about 55,000 flourishing plantations scattered over the Canadian prairies where in former times one could travel for miles without seeing a tree. Besides affording shelter for homesteads and crops and preventing soil-drifting, these plantations have made it possible to establish orchards, vegetable gardens, and plantings of bush fruits such as raspberries and currants, all of which were practically unknown on the prairies a few years ago.

"Is that a bulldog?"
"Oh, my, no; it's a female!"

MORE ABOUT AMERICANIZATION

"Canada can learn much from the United States but not the art of government" was the statement credited to William Bennett Munro of Harvard University who gave the Marfield lectures here last week. This authority condemned in particular Canada's importations from the south in the way of municipal administration. He preferred the English method of centralizing the power in the council. And he was undoubtedly right in his claim that Canadian cities were being governed more in the American than in the British manner.

But there is no probability that Canadian municipal bodies are likely to change their ways simply in order to be in line with the British tradition. As must often be pointed out, arguments that work effectively on the other side of the line have exactly the same appeal here. And in municipal matters, as in other things, we are closer in our experience to the United States than to the mother country. The arguments which we have said apply to both Canada and the United States are ones that reveal a comparative lack of trust in the idea of self government as compared with England.

It is this lack of trust that constitutes the basis for the alterations Americans and Canadians have made in the system of city government. They have introduced boards to do the work because they think that if it were left to the Council that it would not be done properly. This applies particularly to public ownership projects, the experts in charge of which report, not directly to the body of Council, but to commissions appointed especially for the purpose. If these concerns were left directly under the popular body many fear that they would be hampered by the elected representatives. In other words they are afraid that the men whom they have chosen are incapable of running all parts of the business without an increase in inefficiency and delay. It is a truism in both countries that all those interested in obtaining municipal office are "politicians" and must from time to time be aided in their efforts to rule the city by "business men", the supposition being that the latter are a much more useful class than the former. Thus instead of attempting to develop men capable of managing a scheme of direct popular government the people attempt to solve the problem by diverting the powers of council to special boards which are supposed to act as buffers. They do this at the instigation of professional experts in government and business interests, both of which become impatient with the idea that occasionally we must pay the price for popular government in the inexperience of our representatives.

To call a man a "politician" should be the highest form of praise and yet we need only look to popular art, popular music and popular literature to see the reflection of the popular idea that the politician is not an admirable figure. Our cynical attitude to municipal politicians is not much more unfortunate. In Greece the highest form of democracy was reached in the city state. Perhaps because there is a closer relation between the municipal and federal governments in England and because of the absence of provincial and state governments the civic councils have succeeded in holding their ground to a greater extent than on this continent.

SINCERITY MARKS MEETING OF INTERCOLLEGIATE C.U.

Fervency and sincerity marked the second of the Tuesday prayer meetings of the T.I.C.C.U., which was held as usual in Room 22 in U.C. Fifteen men and seven women assembled together at five p.m., "in the quietness of the evening hour," as one of those present expressed it, to join in prayer. This number shows a decrease of two from the preceding week, but a marked increase in the percentage of women. J. D. Duncan of McMaster, President of the Union, opened the meeting by a reading from the Scripture, after which it was devoted to prayer "as the spirit moves", but probably for not more than twenty minutes. About half a dozen men and two women were moved to prayer, after which the President made inquiries about the representatives chosen from the various colleges. Judging from those present, few women other than those of Victoria are evincing enthusiasm. Men came, however, from various colleges, including Wycliffe, Knox, McMaster, and S.P.S., the member of the latter taking an active part in the proceedings. In addition to the Tuesday meetings, noon prayer

Art, Music and Drama

Vic. Dramatics

Yesterday afternoon the Victoria Dramatic Society gave a very good presentation of a play called "An Emergency Case" by Martin Plain, under the direction of Miss Grace Irwin. The play itself, though interesting could hardly be considered excellent. It is built on one idea, only the devotion of a good surgeon to his professional ethics, and though this idea is extremely well presented, the working of the plot is crude and the conclusion is too soon obvious. Even a one-act play needs more than one thought, unless the language is particularly good, and the language of this play is common place or jargon. The presentation, on the other hand, was quite good. The director managed very well with an operating-room scene, and the action looked realistic even to one who knows the details from experience. Also the actors did well with long silences and lines that from their weakness, required good acting. Best among them was Miss Helen Wickett as instrument nurse.

Before the play the director apologized for lack of finish to the production as she had only had a week in which to prepare it. This was unnecessary. The mere fact that plays are undertaken as frequently as this argues real interest in drama which is sufficient excuse for any lack of finish, and besides there was mighty little to excuse. The play had a better production than it merited.

The actors were:
The Surgeon—Howe Robinson.
Dr. Russell—Ralph Spencer.
Police Officer—Al Dyan.
Nurses—Helen Wickett, Doris Vanderbilt.

FRATRICIDE

Another Chapter

A busy world soon forgets. As the days grew into weeks and the weeks into months, the memory of the murder at Moron House faded from men's minds as they went about their habitual tasks. So by the end of the term all had forgotten the hideous details of the death of Algiv Wootz the fratman—This is all but two. One was Chief Thugg of the Campus police. Many weary months he had spent in his search and now he had discovered everything but the murderer. It was this, and only this that prevented him from clearing up the case. All the other evidence had long since been gathered and preserved. He had even recorded every thumb print in the fraternity butter dishes and added it to his collection.

Who was the other?—None less than the murderer himself. He could not forget. Each familiar object, each piece of furniture in the house recalled the vision of his victim, and the memories burned like white hot waffle irons into his very soul. In the night he would cry out, bruise his toes kicking against the bed posts, and swallow mouthfuls of pillow feathers, but it was no use, he could not escape his conscience.

At first he had sensed that he was being watched and then later he had discovered Chief Thugg beneath the disguise of the new steward. At last he felt that he would be mad. And one morning after the rest of the brethren had gone he dashed up to the steward and confessed all. "I killed Algiv Wootz," he cried desperately to the astonished detective, "yes I, the chief chancellor and highest official of the chapter have murdered him because he tried to borrow my tux. every time there was a dance, I couldn't stand it so finally one night when he was snatching a bite in the small of his back with a table knife that I had handed to him I tickled his funny bone and he stabbed himself. There," he sobbed, "I have finished. Do what you like with me."

"Great Heavens," exclaimed the Chief, "do you realize that you have destroyed the good name of your fraternity, and what is worse, by your untimely confession you have destroyed the plot of a promising murder story? But I feel sorry for you. Here—sneak out the back door."

So the chief chancellor disappeared from the eyes of men; but if you wish you may find him in Room 31 of the insane asylum where he spends all his time writing letters of indignation about the policy of "The Varsity."

meetings are being conducted for the men at McMaster; and it is hoped both that the women will follow this example and that more of the five thousand college students will take advantage of the meetings.

Correspondence

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

Petting

Editor, "The Varsity".

Having read your editorial on Petting and its consequent letters I'm dashing off a few words to express my approval of your moderate stand on the subject. While not given over to great indulgence I must admit I do enjoy it when the opportune conditions and circumstances prevail.

I maintain it is an institution as old as life not just one of the "new freedoms".

Your correspondent shrieks with horror at the indulgence of human passion. Hunger is a human passion and we eat. (Blessings on the Great Hall and a lesser but generous blessing on the Tuck shop too!)

Religion is a passion common to all the races, civilized and primitive—a beautiful helpful passion when indulged in private. (And deliver us forever from hell-damning evangelists.)

Art is a passion. Life is the more delightful as a result of some of the efforts—but only some.

The same correspondent will likely hold its (sexless) ears in horror when I say that Love is a passion—the passion without which we would not be.

Our present civilization is too much given to suppression—note the low birth rate among the educated classes. I hate to be gloomy but it sure looks like race suicide.

H. A. Smith.

Tuck Shop

Editor, "The Varsity".

It is the boast (or rather the advertisement) of the Hart House Tuck Shop that articles and refreshments are for sale at "special student rates". As long as I have been in the Hart House I can assure you I have seen not the slightest fractional decrease on usual retail prices. I should very much like to know if the attractive term "special student rates" is at all warranted. As far as I can see, it is on the very surface a gross misrepresentation.

Yours very sincerely,
Edward Parsons

Hart House Library

Editor, "The Varsity".

Dear Sir:—

For almost four years I have managed to keep clear of the correspondence column, but I find that my feelings can no longer be suppressed. As one whose spare time is almost wholly spent in the Library of Hart House, allow me to protest against certain matters concerning the use, or abuse, of the Library.

Although of late notices have appeared requesting members to refrain from using the Library as a work room, certain members still do so. As long as the work consists of merely reading, nothing can be said, but when it takes the form of scribbling notes, seemingly endless, with a scratchy pen, it becomes distinctly annoying. This may seem a small matter, but such a scribbling, in an otherwise silent room, becomes most irritating. Can not something be done, even if it means removing all the tables, to stop this sort of thing? There are plenty of other rooms much better suited for work, than the Library.

And now for the immediate cause of this outbreak. Yesterday was Visitors' Day in Hart House and anyone attempting to read in the Library was made unpleasantly aware of the fact by an almost continuous parade of sightseers. The one redeeming feature was the undeniable attractiveness of the fair visitors. Members were continually disturbed in their reading, or rudely awakened from delightful day dreams, by feminine voices asking unbelievably silly questions, and (Continued on page 4)

O.C.E. DEFEATS JUNIOR VIC. 3 TO 1 IN WOMEN'S HOCKEY

JR. VIC DEFEATED BY O.C.E. WOMEN'S TEAM

Fast Hockey Game Served up In Women's Interfaculty Hockey Series

A. BRICKNELL VIC'S SCORER

O.C.E. defeated Jr. Vic 3-1 in the Women's Interfaculty Hockey Series. The game was fast and close, but Intercollegiate veterans on the Teachers' team proved too much for their plucky opponents. Both showed good combination work and swift plays. Anne Bicknell scored for Victoria.

Vic started off rather uncertainly but gained confidence as the game progressed and were waging a merry old struggle before the contest terminated. O.C.E. took the lead early in the first period and were never seriously threatened thereafter. It was a tribute to Vic's defensive system that only three goals were registered against them by their faster-skating and more experienced rivals. L. Briggs, in goal for Vic, played well, if unorthodoxly, and was ably supported by the heady work of Betty Doyle on the defence. The whole O.C.E. team played a good game and all deserve praise.

The line up was as follows:— Jr. Vic.—Goal, Landon Briggs; Mary Lewis, Betty Doyle, G. Lloyd, Marie Urstait, Sheila Sissons, Anne Bicknell.

O.C.E.—Goal, Peg Graham; defence, Florence Allen and Elinor McCubbin; forwards, Mildred Waters, Jean Bateman and Marjorie Elliot.

WARNING

Interfaculty hockey teams have of late been making it a practice to come late for their scheduled games which greatly inconveniences the succeeding teams' practice hours. It has come to such a pass that Mr. Ross Workman, manager of the University risks, has issued a warning that he will have to cancel a team's playing hour if they are not ready to start on time.

SPEAKING OF SPORT

THE WOMEN'S BUILDING

Psychologists maintain that the mind eventually accepts as true statements that are repeated often enough. Therefore we return to that almost hackneyed subject,—the undoubted need of the women for an Athletic Building. According to the latest information, this Women's Building is to be purely athletic, containing gymnasium, swimming-pool, locker-rooms and executive offices.

Anyone who has seen, or experienced, the over-crowded quarters at Lillian Massey, will realize the absolute necessity of a larger gymnasium. Apparently managers do, for they arrange for their teams to practice anywhere rather than there, and no one can blame them. But it is most unfortunate that girls should have to spend precious energy and time going to and from a gymnasium that at times has been north of St. Clair.

The compulsory P.T. classes are inevitably dreaded when at times hundreds of girls are exercised in a room adequate for fifty. No instructor could possibly hold, for a whole year, the interest of that number of girls when their attention is distracted by their own discomfort. We venture to say that, given adequate equipment, the teachers would find little need of the compulsion that must now be enforced.

The subject of the swimming pool arouses painful memories of efforts that were brought to an untimely end by contact with the bottom or side of the tank. This week, for the first time since we have come to college to the best of our knowledge, the air in the pool room has been heated. Previous to this intrepid swimmers, who were in a cold room, and the water is often chilling enough to train "marathoners", for there is no way of keeping it heated. Hot water is put in the tank on Monday, and gradually cools till it is fairly unbearable. It is dogged perseverance and sheer bravery that has kept alive any interest in swimming among women in the face of such discouragement.

That such conditions should prevail in a leading university on the continent, and in an age when athletics play an extremely important part, is disgraceful. But at present the general attitude among the women seems to be that if we talk enough our daughters may have adequate athletic quarters.

GOOD PROSPECTS FOR A FINE HOCKEY TEAM

Intercollegiate Team Loses Three Regulars But Good Material Good

This year's women's Intercollegiate hockey team suffers greatly in the loss of three good players. E. Powell, A. Ditchburn, and J. Mooney graduated last year and their places will be hard to fill. The regulars from last year's team who are out again this year are as follows: Centre, Norma Bateman; left wing, Dot Langley; right wing, Helen Hilliard; goal, Pat Tilston. The newcomers who have been out to practice so far seem to be shaping up well and give promise of upholding the reputation which last year's team made.

The probable line-up of these newcomers is of course, subject to change, but will likely be. Regular defence, Fran Crooks, Adele Statten, sub defence, Gladys Martin; sub goal, Helen McKinley; sub forward, Dot Starr. Under the able coaching of W. F. Dewar this team should go far toward winning laurels for their Alma Mater. Mary Gardner is a capable manager and arranges practices and practice games and gets the girls out to them—than which there is no greater praise.

There is a practice game against Aura Lee scheduled for to-night from 6 to 7 on the outdoor cushion behind the stadium. Those who are interested in seeing good hockey will be quite welcome to come around and watch.

The intercollegiate games have been arranged, the first to take place as the leader in a double-header here in the Arena against Queen's on Feb. 15. The return game will be played in Kingston on Feb. 22nd.

GOOD TURNOUTS FOR WOMEN'S BASKETBALL

Opportunities For Newcomers On the Intercollegiate Quintet

Only one month until the girls of the Varsity Intercollegiate Basketball team will entrain for Montreal. There, on March 1-2 McGill, Queen's, Western and Toronto will strive for the basketball trophy.

In the meantime there is work—hard steady practice which demands the entire concentration of all those aspiring to honours. It means turning out, three times a week at meal hours, and casting aside all thoughts of saucy dinners.

Yet, in spite of the handicap of having no gym, there is a great turn out. They have enough for two teams and some extras for good measure. Every player is showing good form and the coaches are highly optimistic about their material. Marion Forward is whipping the team into fine shape, ably abetted by Ede Blackwell, who is concentrating her attention on the forwards.

Although there are some old stars back again, yet there is a good opportunity for new material, especially the plucky freshmen. With their ardent enthusiasm, steady practice and a "bound-to-win" spirit, the Varsity girls hope to snatch the Bronze Baby from the Western team.

U.C. WOMEN'S BADMINTON CLUB IS GOING CONCERN

Next Week Tournaments to be Staged To Give Members Chance to Show Skill

If broken and battered birds are any expression of the club's success, the University College Women's Badminton Club has had a thriving time. It has not taken much persuasion to show the U.C. women that even one small club can aim at being a miniature Hart House—open to one and all to make merry after a long weary day.

It has flourished under the principles of supplying the most people with the best enjoyment for the least money. Next week tournaments will give the members an opportunity to try out their proficiency, and to get acquainted with the strangers in their midst. Possibly a tea will be arranged to fix

SMALL SWIMMING FEE PER SWIM IS URGED

Opinions Favour Small Fee To Stimulate More Interest In This Sport

FINE INTERFACULTY MEETS

"The Women's Interfaculty Swimming Meet is just as popular, if not more so, than the men's Intercollegiate Swimming Meet, and is put on with little or no preparation. Not more than one or two men in the history of the university have won the highest award of the Royal Life Saving Society, while at least one dozen women have achieved it. The girls have the ability, courage and perseverance and while not equal to the men in speed, are superior in ornamental swimming. With these proofs and qualifications, why not make the most of them?" Such was the statement of Mr. Cochrane, swimming instructor for University Women, when interviewed concerning the burning issue: How to arouse more interest in swimming.

It has been advocated that a fee of 25c per swim be charged, in preference to the straight $4.00 fee which covers all athletic expenses. Swimmers and non-swimmers of various colleges have been approached about the matter. The following opinions are very revealing:

S. M. Goode (II yr. St. Hilda's), who broke the long plunge record last year—"A 25c fee would be wonderful especially for those in years other than first—much greater interest in the sport would result."

M. E. Armour (III U.C.)—"The present system is advisable, because anyone who is keen on swimming, and especially resident students, get more than $4.00 value."

F. Dale (III U.C.)—"So many paying $4.00, are unable to go often, do not get full value and their $4.00 is gone to the dogs."

B. MacQuarrie (I Meds.)—"A 25c fee would be better, because more would enjoy the sport, who can't afford a straight $4.00 fee."

I. O. Taylor (IV U.C.)—"A 25c fee would be preferable because there would be more swimmers and more interest."

O. B. Straight (IV U.C.)—"Speaking on behalf of non-resident students, who have various activities in conjunction with college affairs, they are unable to get the value of $4.00. I would advocate a $1.00 fee for 1st year students for whom physical training is compulsory."

Those in authority in women's sport were of divided opinion, but agreed that they would favour any method to arouse greater interest.

Miss Cochrane stated that only 300 odd, out of a body almost 10 times that size took advantage of the swimming facilities. This included students in compulsory training and those in the Diploma Course. While those in that comparison to other sports, such as basketball, which no one plays unless she hopes to make a team, swimming is most popular. Mr. Cochrane deplored the lack of general interest.

Young Tories are to have the opportunity to thrash out the policy of the MacDonald-Carter Club at its annual business meeting this evening, at which the recent mention of the political clubs by "The Varsity" will be discussed. A new executive will be elected and a permanent speaker is expected, too.

Correction

The Vic referee for Interfaculty hockey is Hagel, not Nagel as was previously printed.

The matches and incidentally, to scurry up enough money to keep a bird in the air.

The spirit pushing ahead a club of this kind will soon make the hackneyed U.C. "Building Fund" a thing of the past. The more the women appreciate the value of being one body together, the less difficulty there will be in prodding them on to realize their want.

ADAMS CAPTURES 220 SMITH WINS IN MILE

U.C. Has Earned a Commanding Lead Over S.P.S. in Team Scores

SHOTPUT POSTPONED WEEK

Ralph Adams, of S.P.S., who captured the 50 yds. dash in the interfaculty championships last week, added the 220 yds. title to his string of victories by romping away with an easy win in the 220 yds. dash in the Interfaculty Meet at the Hart House track last night. His time was 24 1-5 which easily outclassed the other competitors. Jermyon of U.C. was second in 24 3-5 sec. and Smith and Thompson, both of S.P.S., tied for third at 24 4-5.

Don Smith of U.C. also emerged a double winner. Last week he won the half-mile and to this he added the mile crown. Smith followed the pace-maker, the smooth striding Vila of U.C., until the last lap when he passed him to hit the tape about ten yards ahead. Nimmo of S.P.S. was always well up and finished a good third.

Merritt of U.C. surprised the fans by holding the lead on even terms until the final lap. The time was 5:06.

Smith, Jermyon and Vila gave University College a commanding lead in the team scores which stand at 25-16 for U.C. against S.P.S.

The shotput was postponed until next Tuesday.

SWIMMING MEET AGAINST MCGILL TWO WEEKS AWAY

The Intercollegiate Swimming Meet is being held in Hart House Pool on February 15th. As this event is only two weeks distant the coaches wish to have all swimmers out every night from 5-5:30 p.m. and Saturdays at noon.

Although the meet with McGill will be held in such a short time the turnout to practices has been very vigorous, and the coaches earnestly request that anyone interested in swimming make an effort to be on hand for the practices each night.

Tortured Arts Students Philosophize While Plain Devil is Plainly Puzzled

(By F. W. Burton.)

Presently thereafter we came where there was a great gabbling of tongues. "What is this, most excellent Virgil?" I asked. "This, my dear Dante," he replied, "is the eternal prison of Arts students." "Why more peculiarly of Arts students?" I asked. "Because," he said, "it would be superfluous to send the other faculties to Hell after death, seeing that they raised it unceasingly on earth. For them is prepared a place, not of fire, but of everlasting suavity." "Most truly true, my good preceptor," I replied; "but show me now the unfortunate Art students."

Thus speaking we entered a lower deep than any yet visited; but not lower than any that can be conceived by the mind of man, for what deep is there so low that the mind of man cannot conceive it? Here lay in the boiling slime many women, and divers men, retaining their human aspect, save that they had been given the beaks of ducks, that they might gabble the more effectively. And the gabbling rose even into the vault of the Inferno.

Near by us sat certain girls, of whom one cried to me as we approached: "Hast thou a philosophy of life? If not, thou must get one with speed, for none may join our company that hath not a philosophy of life?" "Nay, my dear girl," I protested, "of what use is a philosophy of life when thou art dead?" "Tut," she said, "thou quibbles! Behold me: I am an Epicurean; and dost see you damsels? She is a Hedonist!" "Ah me!" I said; "alack that one so beautiful should be so brainy!" And we passed on, amid the cries of the Arts students, who besought me much that I should sit down with them and discuss their philosophies of life. And far off on the horizon a young man cried to me to come and plan with the proper constitution of a socialist state.

But now a devil came to meet us, a short one with stubby horns and a shabby pickfork; but he had honest eyes and the practical face of a business man. "O aid me," I said to him, "for I am overwhelmed by this mass of braininess." "Been talking to the students, eh?" said the short devil. "Ain't they the limit?" "O friendly fiend," I continued, "If I read thy meaning aright, thou also marvellest at the volubility of the students, at the adroitness with which they spin their gossamer-webs of abstruse theories, totally unchained by the cold bondage of facts." "I don't quite get your meaning, sir," he said, "but I guess that's about it." "Give me thy hand," I said, extending mine. "Thou art not beautiful, but thou art a plain man, and I like thee."

If the Library must remain open on Visitors' Day, could not the north doors be opened. Ninety per cent. of those passing these doors attempted noisily to open them. Of course any one familiar with the House knows that these doors are always closed, but for the sake of the others, and more especially for the sake of those within the Library, could not these doors be opened?

This epistle seems to have accumulated momentum and has grown far beyond its intended length, and I must apologize for its windiness. I trust however, that the Committee will give it some consideration.

men in medicine than is generally thought," said Dr. McMurphy. "The suffragette 'war-chest,' formed for the purpose of helping the suffragette cause was put into hospitals in France which were conducted with such success and efficiency by the women doctors that the British War Office organized hospitals in London for administration by these women doctors."

Furthermore, the work of the women doctors in research, both during and after the war in the prevention of disease helped more than is generally known in minimizing the loss of life by disease. It was Dr. Harriet Child of the Lister Institute in London, who in her work among the Viennese children demonstrated that rickets was a deficiency disease, and not infectious.

"The call to research is like a call to war, no truce or peace being granted," emphasized Dr. McMurphy. "The medical profession is a profession of peace and war alike. Many eminent professional men agree that women are especially adapted to research, even more so than men, and with this particular field opening up for women, the increasing number of women in the profession is not to be wondered at."

ST. MIKE'S DOWN FORESTRY JR. SCHOOL PLAY GOALLESS IN JENNINGS' CUP GAME

St. Michael's defeated Forestry 1 to 0 in a Jennings' Cup fixture yesterday afternoon. The play was fast all through the game and both goalkeepers turned in good efforts to keep the score so low.

The Saints registered their lone counter in the second period when Bergeron battered the puck past Christie. The St. Mike's forward line had the jump on Forestry's, outskating and outshooting them continually. It was superiority in this division which gave the Saints victory.

Bergeron and Quinn, wing players for St. Mike's, turned in nice efforts and the playing of the Forestry defence pair, Leslie and Simpson, was the bright spot of the losers' game.

The teams:

Forestry—Goal, Christie; defence, Leslie and Simpson; centre, Flatt; wings, Walkom and McDonald; alternates, McNutt and Francis.

St. Michael's—Goal, Harrison; defence, Young and Haffey; centre, Dillon; wings, Quinn and Bergeron; alternates, Flahiff, Payne and Mallon.

ed, and it was seen that intermarriage was most common when Jews had been living in one location for several generations, and had acquired the characteristics of the peoples among whom they lived. The natural or perhaps inevitable result of intermarriage, if carried to a great enough degree, is complete assimilation of the Jew; for it has been found that the children of such marriages are brought up as belonging to the religion and race of the country of their birth, rather than as Jews.

In the discussion that followed, intermarriage was discussed from various viewpoints—biologically, religiously, socially, racially and psychologically.

MISTAKEN IDEA REGARDING U.C. 'MILE OF NICKLES'

University Women's Building Proposal is Confused With U.C. Residence

"Is that what the Mile-of-Nickles was for?" inquired one of a group of students whom "The Varsity" accosted to ask their opinion of the idea of a University Women's Building. The reporter then hastened to explain that it most decidedly was not. There is no fund raised or being raised for the suggested women's building. The Mile-of-Nickles was for the University College Women's Residence extension fund.

The University Women's Building is as yet a proposal strongly sponsored by Athletic Societies and after various enquiries "The Varsity" concluded it was little thought about by any one else. This building would be for the use of all women at the University.

There has been an effort for a number of years to procure a Women's Athletic Building as the facilities at the Household Science Building are quite inadequate for the numbers who are registered at the University. Some of the college Alumni organizations have taken a definite interest in this project; however, no real steps have been made.

Miss Parkes, Secretary of the Women's Athletic Association, when asked about this building said, "What the Women's Athletic Association has worked for is a building containing two large gymnasiums and a swimming pool with adequate showers and locker accommodations and various small rooms for corrective work, and administration offices. The latter would include a Women's S.A.C. office and a Varsity office." She went on to point out that if those who finally decide upon the plans see fit to include equipment for social activities the Athletic Association would not consider this in their department. The plan which was submitted three years ago was to build it on the corner of Hoskin Ave. and Devonshire Place opposite the men's residences.

In some quarters there is the feeling that the women should not have a place like Hart House but that the social life should be centred in the separate colleges. There is some enthusiasm for a women's Athletic Building and it remains for the money to be provided for this building to become a fact.

After lights and walks have been placed about the campus, the cafeteria at Butler university will remain open all night.

PLAN FOR FORMATION OF FABIAN SOCIETY AMONG UNDERGRADS

English Universities All Have Student Labour Organizations

OPINION HERE DUBIOUS

Students Interviewed Show No Enthusiasm For Such a Project

Actual movement towards organization of a Fabian Society here has followed Mr. J. S. Woodworth's speech in Wymilwood on Tuesday night, has been ascertained by "The Varsity".

These four, Miss A. S. M. Brett, Trinity, 370; T. J. Keenan, Graduate Studies, J. R. M. Wilson, Victoria, 219; Miss M. Jackson, Victoria 279, have volunteered to act as organizers of the society. They will endeavor to arouse interest among the student body and a notice of a meeting is expected shortly.

The Rev. F. J. Moore, guiding spirit of the S.C.A., when interviewed by "The Varsity" stated, "Such organizations as these are common in English Universities. The younger labour leaders in England today, are university graduates. Furthermore, there is no reason why the future leaders of Canadian labour should not come from our universities. To brand such men as 'Reds' is a huge mistake. There is a wide distinction between 'reds' and labour, as all should know."

Student opinion when solicited as to the effectiveness of a labour organization within the university, indicated that the undergraduates were very dubious as to its success.

Newman Mallon, IV U.C., delivered himself of the following dictum: There is very little need of such an organization here. Labor conditions are not sufficiently aggravated to warrant intervention. Furthermore, university labour leaders usually are political leadership which may be obtained thereby.

J. McCarthy, II Osgoode: Such an organization is meaningless here. Canadian university students are not interested in such projects as are their brethren in England.

P. Scollard, St. Michael's 279: I am opposed to labour in all forms. There is no part in university life for it. Graduates are expected to aim at higher things than a life of toil, so why identify themselves with labour interests while at university.

The general undergraduate view is opposed to this new organization. No favourable enthusiasm was discovered and those interviewed seemed to think that this branch of the Fabian Society would have many difficulties to surmount.

Heavenly Thoughts of a Theolog Lead Him Astray

A certain theologian on the campus decided to have his graduation picture taken. It was his first subjective photographic effort. He wandered to the photographers and trotted upstairs. A charming young lady was in attendance. The next day at two was the appointed hour. Unfortunately the parson-to-be had his eyes fixed on the heavens and the material things of life escaped him. The portrait studio was downstairs: upstairs was a hairdresser's. He had gone upstairs.

Next day at two the embryo sky-pilot arrived on time in his best suit. With much ceremony the charming lady ushered him into a booth. A towel was tied about his neck. An attendant began to gently massage his ministerial locks. Still no thought of error entered that noble brow. Picture-taking was evidently a matter of grave preparation.

The appearance of a shampoo however started strange doubts. The appearance of the same climaxed them. "Is this the photographer's?" he quavered.

The shampoo opened her mouth, grinned and then snickered. Professional balance restored her equilibrium.

"No sir, that's downstairs," she replied.

Torontonensis will show one theologian with neatly combed, well shampooed glossy hair.

FLYING FRATERNITIES ARE IMPRACTICAL

Enthusiasm of Students Is Quelled by Expense Of Project

C.O.T.C. LECTURES POPULAR

"Flying fraternities," clubs organized for the study of flying outside of the regular curriculum, now exist in 24 of the foremost universities on this continent. Student opinion varies as to the possibility of forming a similar organization in Toronto. The lure of flying seems to appeal to men as a whole. "The Varsity" found, but many are the obstacles which prevent their indulging in it. "Flying is still a rich man's sport, unless it is taken up as a profession, and even then openings are few," said one student, who felt (Continued on page 4)

It has come to the ears of "The Varsity" recently that strange and unusual things are being done by the students in fourth year Household Science, each one of whom is spending six or eight weeks on an original research problem, then tabulating and typing the results in thesis form. Dr. Willard, Professor of Household Science, who says this work is her pet hobby, explained that while it was done primarily for experience, valuable discoveries were sometimes made. Frozen fish have recently been packed and put on the market by the Government, and several students have worked out ways of taking these fish in their frozen form, and making them palatable in only ten minutes longer than it takes to cook ordinary fish.

Several are working in connection with Mr. Hugh Branson, Fellow in Biochemistry, who is carrying on investigations to make the ling, that useless denizen of the waters of Lake Ontario, an economic asset. For this purpose cages of little white rats are fed on a diet lacking in Vitamin A, until they develop sore eyes and a disease called ophthalmia. Then they are cured with the oil of the ling, which is very much like cod liver oil, and may some day replace it on the market.

Liver, which is now used so much as a cure for anaemia, is said to be a valuable item of normal diet as well, and one of the research workers reports some twenty-four new and appetizing ways of cooking it. For example it can be disguised in ice-cream, or in fudge, and can be combined quite delightfully with some other foods such as tomatoes.

Some of the problems show results which obviously no young house-wife should be without. Biscuits, cakes, (Continued on page 4)

CHRIST CONDITIONS CHRISTIAN RELIGION STATES DR. SCLATER

First Element of Faith Is Belief in Christ Love Follows

CONFUSION PREVALENT

Upholds The Definition of Dr. Gore in Answer To Question

"Christianity is the religion which Christ conditioned," said Dr. J. R. P. Sclater in a lecture in the Music Room Hart House, yesterday afternoon on the subject "What is Christianity?"

In answering the question Dr. Sclater upheld Dr. Gore's definition: "Christianity is faith in a certain person, Jesus Christ." "By faith," said Dr. Sclater, "I mean personal trust in the morals proposed by Christ. There is a great difference between 'belief in' and 'belief about.' The first element of faith is that we believe in Him. The natural development of that is love, also obedience, then comes the larger attitude of 'belief about'."

"From the very derivation of the word, no religion has the right to designate itself 'Christian' which does not centre about Christ, does not believe implicitly in Him, nor has not His teachings as its basis. Christianity is Christo-centric, not that Christ is the ultimate object of our worship, for that can only be God, but that everything in our religion is relative to Christ."

Dr. Sclater also distinguished between the religion of Christ and that which he instituted. "Religion is the attitude in which we stand to God, and I cannot conceive myself standing to God in the same way in which Christ did. He did not die to save Himself, but to save us, and a different relation subsists between God and Him than subsists between God and us apart from Him." By Christianity the church means the religion conditioned by Christ. Thus the religion taught in the church today is not the religion which Christ had, but that formed by the following of Christ's ideals.

Women Will Hold Debate To Return Compliment

Have men one-track minds? Upon this question the women will display their debating prowess at an Inter-Collegiate debate next Monday, before an audience of thirty men summoned by special invitation. The exclusion of all save a chosen thirty seems quite in keeping with the subject, which refers, said Miss Helen Spence, when questioned by "The Varsity", not to the race in general, but to the masculine portion in particular.

Mae Rousselet of Loretto and Eleanor Clark of St. Hilda's will uphold the affirmative, and will be opposed by Helen Day of Victoria and Sylvia Gelber of U.C.

BAN ON STUDY IN HART HOUSE LIBRARY

Prevalent Fashion of Sleeping On Chesterfield Must Be Stopped

DOORS NOT TO BE OPENED

"We have posted typewritten notices proclaiming a ban on studying in the library," said B. D. Beamish, curator of Hart House Library, interviewed regarding the letter, signed "Booklover" appearing in yesterday's "Varsity".

"Beyond these notices we can do nothing. Of course if a member of the committee sees a student studying he may ask him to stop, but that is all we can do."

Questioned as to the annoyance of Sunday visitors Mr. Beamish stated, the matter had never been discussed by the Library Committee, and he could say nothing about the matter.

"I am in entire agreement with the letter in today's 'Varsity,'" said Mr. J. B. Bickersteth, in referring to the matter. The subject of students studying in the Library has been fully discussed by the Committee, and the notices posted."

Asked concerning Sunday visitors, the Warden said, "I am in hearty agreement with the sentiments expressed in the letter. I believe that if visitors are allowed to look in through the windows of the two doors that it should be sufficient."

The Warden showed "The Varsity" some of the minutes of the Library Committee's past meetings. In par- (Continued on page 4)

MACDONALD CARTIER CLUB EXISTS FOR YOUNG POLITICIANS

Old War-Horse Tories Should Have Ropes Around Their Necks

NEW EXECUTIVE ELECTED

The Club Has Achieved a Reputation It Does Not Deserve

Informal discussion of the Club's aims, of prominent Conservative issues, and of practical plans for Conservative propaganda among similar organizations in Ontario was the order of the evening at the meeting of the MacDonald-Cartier Club held last night in Hart House.

Pointing out that it is difficult to stimulate political interest in the University, the President, Mr. Aiken, averred that a small but keenly interested group was the best possible organization. As to its aims Mr. Beamish, the treasurer, said that the Club was essentially for young men, and that, while its policy should be distinctly Conservative it should keep its mind open to criticize the Conservative party, and should be the melting pot for new ideas. "See which way the cat jumps, and jump with it," was Mr. Beamish's idea of what the Conservative policy should be.

"The best thing to do with all the war-horse Tories who still rave about the old national policy is to tie a rope around their necks and draw it tight," said Mr. Lou Golden. It was (Continued on page 4)

SUGGEST GOWNS AS MARK OF DISTINCTION

Vic Student Parliament Wishes To Improve Common Room To Promote School Unity

GATE-CRASHERS DISCUSSED

That gowns be worn as a distinction, either by freshmen, as a sign of inferiority, or by seniors, as a mark of superiority, or by the women, so that they might be recognized as such, was one of the suggestions offered at the meeting of the Victoria College Students' Parliament held last evening in Burwash.

There were some forty undergraduates present, and the meeting opened with a sing-song followed by various reports. The secretary-treasurer reported a balance brought over from last year, a net profit from the sale of freshmen's ties, plus $1.50 contributed by the Victoria "Bob", the last item, however, being an incomplete report.

The director of debates reported that the Parliament had found it too expensive to send a debating team to the University of Colorado. Plans for the Victoria College at-home, including the question of gate-crashers, and official announcements concerning dress for the function, were thoroughly discussed. The question was raised of possibilities for making the common-room in the College more attractive to non-residents, so that it would be, as in University College, a place where undergraduates might meet and college unky might be promoted.

Suggestions were given as to periodicals and daily newspapers to which they might subscribe. Messrs. Cormack, Robinson, Martin and Reinken, were named as a committee to deal with this matter.

BYRCE MACKENZIE

"That all forms of censorship should be abolished" is the position which a debating team representing Western Canada universities in the National Federation of Canadian University Students will uphold in to-night's debate in Trinity College Library. The visiting team is made up of Bryce Mackenzie of the University of Saskatchewan; Nelson Chappel of the University of Alberta, who is leader of the team; and W. T. Masterson of the University of British Columbia. The Toronto speakers are J. R. Wilson, Victoria College; J. T. Wilson, Trinity College; and Douglas MacCrae, S.P.S.

THE FABIANS

A group of enthusiasts who heard Mr. J. S. Woodsworth, M.P., of Winnipeg, speak at the Student Christian Movement Open Forum the other night at Wymilwood have formed a Fabian Society. We now have in our midst a Liberal club, a Conservative club and an organization which will devote itself to the consideration of the Labour movement, from a sympathetic point of view. The application of the term "Red" to the movement which originated with certain more ebullient spirits of the company was incorrect in that it gives the impression that the members have communistic views and are exponents of direct action whereas they plan to follow the idea of the English Fabians who vary in their opinions from Liberalism to Socialism and whose name indicates their method.

Quintus Fabius Maximus Verrucosus Ovicola Cuctator was a Roman general who did well for his country and himself by refusing to risk a general engagement with Hannibal and by pursuing the method of watchful waiting in his defence of Rome. Certainly the distinguished Fabius elected to follow a plan of campaign infinitely less spectacular and brilliant than that of the great Carthaginian but at any rate things turned out well for Rome and Ennius the poet afterwards composed the following bouquet in his honour:

Unus homo nokis cunctaulo restituit rem,
Nos enim rumores ponebat ante salutem.
Ergo postque magisque viri nunc gloria claret.

This was the inspiration of an English group which was organized about thirty years ago to study Labour problems and to give to the Labour movement an intellectual impetus parallel to that of the trades union movement. Prominent among the members were George Bernard Shaw and Sidney and Beatrice Webb, the latter two being the authors of the monumental history of trades unionism in Britain and prominent in the party which took office under Ramsay MacDonald. The aim of the Fabians was to obtain by gradual and intellectual processes what they considered to be best for the social uplift of the people.

Their views as to what was best did not necessarily coincide and to this day there is no particular unanimity among the members as to means although in the matter of ends they share what are known as progressive opinions. In Henderson's "Table Talk of G. B. Shaw" the latter is quoted as stressing the divergent notions of the members. He instances the case of Doctor Clifford who belonged to the society but who voted Liberal at elections.

The young people here, then, are imitating a league which has the two main points: first, the intellectual concentration on the claims of the labouring classes; second, no exact distinctions as to party affiliation. This first proviso makes such an organization suitable for the atmosphere of a university but it is doubtful whether the second can be carried out as successfully. The movement here will at any rate supply a vent for people to let off steam, in which it will be by no means alone among university organizations. As to whether it will produce, as has its prototype in England, any active socialists is a subject for conjecture.

H.C. Players' Guild

Yesterday's presentation of the Players' Guild was quite good. It was a smart sophisticated little play called "Our Kind" by Louise Saunderson.

We had numerous spies at Schoolmote, the annual scamper of our most manly faculty, yet only one returned to give us the low-down, which in this case was a dodger purporting to represent a certain university daily. We were disappointed to note that the self-styled "rag" was not printed on the material indicated by advance information, yet, even so, it was a very creditable publication, containing a joke which, doubtless, was too elevated for the regular S.P.S. production, Toike-Oike.

"Our mutual friend, the Cat, has been worse, but we don't remember just when." Now, on the other hand, we desire to compliment those responsible for the Rag; it was interesting, and while we did not understand all the allusions, which were doubtless scientific, a spirit of all-too-rare cleverness pervaded it. However, we do wish they would not attribute stuff to us for which we were not responsible; unlike the editors of the Rag, we know nothing about "the vagaries of our friend who sailed the seas" in 1492 and do not know what they are talking about.

Clever people than we are too prone to attribute to the Cat meanings and statements which are too subtle for the perceptions of the average mind.

More courageous than we, Laura Louise (not a moving picture) attended in person. See back page. Notice that Laura Louise as represented in the Rag considers "The Varsity" to be a U.C. publication. We doubt that the editors consulted Messrs. Bell, Anderson and Miller before making that statement.

Now and again we suspect that our readers do not like puns.

Parlour red and parlour pink Organizing Fabians; Trying awfully hard to think Like the hottest Shavians.

It is encouraging to think that the influence of so advanced and earnest a thinker as Mr. J. S. Woodsworth can stir a number of students into forming a society to deal with current problems of capital and labour.

Yet we are unpleasantly impressed by a statement of H. L. Mencken, which, though expressed in the Baltimore Oracle's derisive manner, has elements of truth. Id est: "The Cambridge Nietzsche, at the age of thirty, has already begun to feel the suction of Rotary," or words similar, "and by the time he is forty, he has become a sound Mellon man (i.e. Republican)." — C—C

Who made the remark about puns being an inferior type of humour? The fact that the great majority are terrible shows how intellectual one must be to make good ones.

And if so, how inferior?

ders, a la Michael Arlen. An attempt to draw the characters very delicately resulted, it is true, in their being a bit hazy, and the point of the plot was sometimes obscured, but there were some pretty epigrams and the whole was put together with considerable art and finesse.

Mr. Paul Gardner acted the part of a blasé playwright better than we have ever seen him act before, and Miss Ruth Orr gave quite a presentable interpretation of the extremely difficult part of a great actress who proposes to the playwright so as to be married and not have to settle down. Mr. Usher hardly brought out all the colour of his very amusing role, but he did it quite well. The director, Miss Constance Schiell, also deserves to be congratulated on a very good set.

The Table Round

BEAUTY AND THE BEAST

One requires but the barest acquaintance with modern American prize-works and those listed among the best-sellers to realize how hodge-podge, if these books of the moment are representative, our contemporary literature really is. History assures us, however, that in due time, out of this state which might almost be called chaotic, one definite trend will predominate. In the meantime, in the mad scramble, a sinister class has arisen.

To create this class, such writers as James Joyce, Eugene O'Neill and Theodore Dreiser have herded together in obedience to an instinct which is very characteristic of them when you consider the tone of their work. Definitions of literature generally revolve about the central ideas of beauty and art. But, what happens when such men as these choose to write? What must happen to art when it is submerged in a pool of sordidness?

Their books are written in very ordinary language as to style and construction and the rest; but what they do excel in is detail of sordidness and unblushing or only slightly veiled lewdness. Virtue, for them, seems to be as out of date as last year's airplane.

Is it prudery to expect or look for cleanness in literature? Is it "goody-goody" to think that a story need not contain profanity, vulgarity, and obscenity to be realistic? Does realism involve the description, the featuring of the sordid, vulgar and mean in the lives of degenerates and perverts and of the naturally vicious and immoral?

After playing with psycho-analysis, these Joyces and O'Neills come to the conclusion that it is exceedingly difficult to think of man as in any way heroic.

"The human race has been debunked," they pronounce. "There is so little life in that is credible and that little is disagreeable." They choose to portray the unpleasantness of life and to portray them in an unpleasant way. The casual look-oner is forced to assume "that the basis of their doctrine is that only the unpleasant can be true. Hypochondria, for them, is a sort of god to whom all homage is paid. James Branch Cabell only would take his little god and seek refuge in imaginary lands.

If, as this group contends, their literature is an attempt "to wring beauty from a world in which nothing but ugliness exists," it is a vain endeavour, one which implies defeat from the very outset. How illogical it is to try to get something from nothing! If, on the other hand, they would be logical, they would not write a word of what they are now offering. Either modern literature is being subjected to contamination at their hands or else it is only an illusion that ought to be done away with.

Considerable discussion has been recently made about the Pulitzer awards. Little dissatisfaction is expressed at the latest awards of the novel prize to Thornton Wilder but the judges, in awarding the drama prize to Eugene O'Neill are conceded to have disregarded the conditions that the drama "shall best represent the educational value and power of the stage in raising the standard of good morals, good taste, and good manners."

In the midst of such poison, the works of true genius are made all the more distinctive. In this regard, "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" and "The Way It Was With Them" are, it is thought, destined to live. Of the former, Harry Hansen in the New York World writes:

"Everywhere I hear much favorable comment on the award of the Pulitzer Prize to Thornton Wilder for the 'Bridge of San Luis Rey'. Its appearance on the American literary horizon is most fortuitous. It comes at a time when the American genius but with notable exceptions, has been expressing itself entirely in naturalism and iconoclasm, highly seasoned with propaganda, into which scholarship and subtlety do not enter."

JACK WILLIAMSON WINS CHAMPIONSHIP IN GYM COMPETITION

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Toronto Canoe Club's victory over Marlboros meant the elimination of Varsity juniors from the championship race. The juniors were preceded by the Intermediates who some time ago had the "kibosh" put on their aspirations for an O.H.A. championship. The Blue and White Intermediates however, are still going strong in the Intermediate Intercollegiate section.

Coach "Red" Porter's senior team are almost certain of a play-off berth in the O.H.A. senior series. Queen's are coming strong and look like the other team in the group play-off.

Right now Varsity seniors are playing mighty smart hockey. The team is well-balanced and is working together smoothly. The Blue sextet compares very favourably with some of the O.H.A.'s winners of past years. Varsity should win the O.H.A., but will face some tough going before the mug is won. The intermediate winners this year are bound to give the higher series champs plenty of action before the Ontario champion is decided. The strongest senior team between here and the Atlantic seems to be Montreal Victorias, last year's Allan Cup finalists. The Vics are cutting quite a swath in Q.A.H.A. and should qualify to meet the Ontario survivor.

This Saturday afternoon McGill will take the ice at the Varsity Arena in the first of home and home games in the Intercollegiate Championship. The withdrawal of the University of Montreal following that of Queen's was unfortunate but the University of Toronto and McGill are holding the fort. On advance dope the Blue and White should give the Red a beating but McGill may snap out of it and upset the works.

Durnan Cup Events To Be Held Next Week

The "Durnan" Cup events will be held next week on Monday, Wednesday and Friday nights. The cup, emblematic of the individual swimming championship of the University, was won last year by Lloyd Boddy II Jr. U.C. We hope to have a big line-up this year and would like to see a few more swimmers out to the practices held every Monday to Friday nights 5-5:30 p.m. and Saturdays at noon.

Postponement of Water Polo Game

The game between Varsity "B" and Central "Y" arranged for to-night has been postponed until next Tuesday night at 8:15 p.m. This game will be played in Hart House Pool and not at Central "Y" as previously announced.

SCHOOL AGAIN WINS GYM COMPETITION

Jack Williamson is Champion
Don Gunn Second
Heslop Third

U.C. SECOND IN TOTAL

The annual Interfaculty Gym Competition which was held in the big gym at Hart House yesterday afternoon, was won by School for the second year in succession. U. C. placed second with Trinity third. S.P.S. had their team of last year intact and led by Williamson they had little difficulty in retaining the Wilson Cup. The U.C. team of Warshaw and Johnston, both freshmen, did remarkably well and both these men are excellent prospects for the Intercollegiate team this year. Trinity were handicapped by the loss of Garth MacDonald who is suffering from injuries sustained in practice.

Jack Williamson of fourth year School was the individual high scorer, and won the University Championship with 356.5 points. Don Gunn, Meds IV, was second with 348, and Wilf Heslop, S.P.S. III, third with 317 points. After the contest Williamson was unanimously re-elected captain of the Intercollegiate Team. Don Gunn is manager and the team is coached by Mr. D. M. Barton.

The work on the high bar and the parallels was judged by Mr. Frank Halbus and Mr. Nat Keefe. After the meet Mr. Halbus complimented the gymnasts on the high quality of their performances. It was notable that whereas the freshmen did well on the bars, they were very weak on the horse and the mats.

The Intercollegiate Gym Meet is in Toronto this year, and will be held in Hart House on February the twenty-third. As each man on the team will be required to do two movements on each piece of apparatus, instead of one as in the interfaculty, there is much work still to be done before the Varsity squad meets McGill in this annual encounter.

Results—Individual
Williamson, S.P.S. IV, 356.5; Gunn, Meds IV, 348; Wilf Heslop, S.P.S. III, 317; Warshaw, U.C. I, 286; Johnston, U.C. I, 284.5; E. Heslop, S.P.S. III, 279.5; Wilkinson, S.P.S. I, 272; Malone, Trinity II, 262; O'Flynn, Trinity I, 242.

Interfaculty Results
First, S.P.S.; second, University College; third, Trinity.

TORONTO AND MCGILL ARE SOLE ENTRANTS

Victor Will Not Be Eligible For Competition In Allan Cup Finals

ST. GERMAIN CANNOT PLAY

Senior Intercollegiate Hockey is still in existence. If you don't believe it just drop around at the Varsity Arena this Saturday afternoon. Old McGill are coming to town to sustain the glory of the Red and White in a contest with Varsity.

The Intercollegiate Series consists of but two teams, Toronto and McGill, and as three teams are necessary in a league in order that the league winner qualify for the Allan Cup play downs the victor in this series will not be eligible as such for further competition. Nevertheless the Intercollegiate Championship is at stake and this will provide the necessary excitement.

McGill have made a rather poor showing this winter and the team Association will be minus their star player, Ralph St. Germain, who is ineligible for Intercollegiate competition.

Varsity should take the game here and the return in Montreal and add another to their long list of championships in this series.

SR. MEDS AND DENTS COME TO DEADLOCK

Aggressive Hockey Played in Jennings' Cup Match
To Scoreless Tie

BENNETT STARS FOR MEDS

Sr. Meds and Dents battled away to a scoreless tie in a postponed Jennings Cup match yesterday afternoon. Fast aggressive hockey was played by both teams with the result that the fixture was one of the best so far this season.

With possible elimination facing them if defeated the Meds played desperate hockey. The Dents equally determined to chalk up another win on their side of the score sheet, pressed their opponents hard and only the stellar work of Bennett, the Med goalie, kept the Dental men from annexing the game.

The forward lines of both teams played fine hockey, the Dents backchecking a little more effectively than the Medical front line men. The Meds defence were given a busy session but proved equal to anything their opponents could offer.

The Dents' entire squad turned in a fine game with each player giving his utmost in an attempt to bulge the tides defended by the Meds. Bennett stood out for the Meds, making saves which looked like sure goals. The other members of the Med sextet played fine hockey and it would be very difficult to pick a star on their squad.

The line-up—
Sr. Meds—Goal, Bennett; defence, Williams and McIntyre; wings, O'Connor and Hollingdrake; centre, Cox; alternates, Thompson and Perras.

Dents—Goal, McCartney; defence, Whaldeen and Whittaker; wings, Dewar and Conn; centre, Mahaffey; alternates, Adams, Mutchmore and Herron.

CARR SCORES 10 POINTS

Junior Meds defeated Junior Vic 25 to 16 in their interfaculty league game yesterday. An air-tight defence composed of Sniderman and Sinclair turned back the attacks of Victoria, while Carr, with 10 points, turned in a brilliant game on the offensive line.

Meds worked the ball in close to the basket while Vic resorted to long shots. Vaughan was the most successful in this style of play, netting 8 points and was the outstanding player for the losers.

Line-up—
Vic—Forwards, Vaughan (8), Davidson (4); centre, Barr; defence, Barrett, Cowie (1); subs, Clarke, Bowles (3).

Jr. Meds—Forwards, Jessel (2), Carr (10); centre, Scott (4); defence, Sniderman (5), Sinclair (1); subs, Hiller (2), Kassler, Matthews, Elliott.

VARSITY WOMEN PLAY AURA LEE IN PRACTICE HOCKEY

Slow Game Gives Good Practice
And Tie Score of 2-2 In Thirty Minutes Play

Last night the Intercollegiate Women's hockey team played a practice game against Aura Lee, with a final score of 2 all. The game was good practice for both teams, but was rather unexciting, as there was no official referee or time-keeper, and the teams were tired out by thirty minutes of continuous play. Playing for Aura Lee were: Goal, Athol Wesley; defence, T. Buckley, L. Braden; forward, G. Minett, M. Trinnell and B. Barr.

Varsity: Goal, Pat Tilton; defence, Fran Crookes, Adele Stratton; for-

"Perfect Party"

Horns for the ladies, and paste-board pipes for the men! A new slogan in favours was established at the St. Joseph's College At-Home held at Columbus Hall last night. A station dance was another interesting novelty, which was enjoyed by from seventy-five to a hundred couples, who attended the formal affair. Coloured lights playing upon the dances added glamour to the music dispensed by Droszy's orchestra. Supper was served by Coles.

The patronesses were: Lady Windle, Dr. Gertrude Lawlor, Mrs. Halligan, and Mrs. Kernahan. Misses Kay Kernahan, Theresa Macdonald, Margaret Downey, Maribel Quinn and Pauline Bondy were the committee in charge of the evening's entertainment.

"Juno and the Paycock", by Sean O'Casey, will be presented at Hart House Theatre from the fourth to the sixteenth of February, with matinees on both Saturdays. This play had a sensational first production at the Abbey Theatre in Dublin, and the social and political questions roused by its theme caused nation-wide discussion. The Hart House performance will be the first production of the play in Canada.

"Juno and the Paycock" is under the direction of Carroll Aikins, and included in the cast are Ivor Lewis, Agnes Muldrew, Eric Stangroom, Margaret Wilson, Geoffrey Hutton, Margaret Tytler, H. P. Coles, Dora McMillan, Ernest Paul, John Brockie, Brendan Mulholland, Percy Schulte, Helen Parsons and Kathleen Irwin.

Laura Louise Philosophizes On Architecture, Skids and School

(By D. Kendall.)

The Residence, Jan. 31st.

Dear Betty:

I had a simply wonderful time. I was at School-nite. That isn't anything like a nice school, but just the same I learned an awful lot. You know dear, that I thought the Engineers did nothing but, "drink rum, drink rum, put themselves on the tummy and say come-ome". It isn't, not nearly like it. Why they're educated and are no closer to the preolythic man than we are. They put on a wonderful party and I'm awfully obliged to the School man that took me. I'd even go again—that is if I'm asked.

You know dear that there was a girl in one of the skits that had exactly that same name that I have. Wasn't that a coincidence. It was so unique. Of course, she didn't look like me and had skids where I curve, and wasn't a perfect thirty-six, so she's no relation. She was supposed to be on the Varsity—that's a paper that they publish at Varsity. Its awfully handy to read in lectures, and I keep mine to light the fire in the grate in the evening, though my roommate says its too wet to burn.

I've just been thinking that next year, I might go to School. Of course,

I couldn't very well take up Civil engineering. They have to walk too far and you know Betty, I never walk. I couldn't go into electrical, as I'm simply no good at machines. Do you remember the time I caught my finger when I tried to set the mouse trap? I suppose I could go in architect lecture. You make churches and garages and hotels there. You only do them on paper of course, but it must be thrilling. Just think, all those men and me. I wonder if Daddy'd let me.

By the way Betty, someone wrote me an anonymous letter asking what I think about petting. Isn't that a strange question to ask me? Why petting is perfectly alright. Why at home we have two cats and Rover and I never think of passing them without petting them. I think that everyone should have a pet. I want Gid to get me a Pekinese for my birthday.

Now Betty, I have absolutely got to go and keep my New Year's resolution about working every night. I am only keeping it till nine-thirty to-night, but every little counts doesn't it?

Your dearest friend,

Laura Louise.

P.S.—Don't forget that my birthday is on the ninth. But please, don't send me a present this year. L.L.

that even a club with a common purse would not solve the problem. The men students questioned by "The Varsity" were almost all enthusiastic over the idea of a flying club, but seemed to consider it an intriguing vision rather than a practical possibility. The C.O.T.C. course in aeronautics provides instruction for a limited number and flying has not become sufficiently popular in Canada to make further provision imperative or even necessary.

The interest of co-eds in the proposition was, for the most part, decidedly lukewarm, although an occasional pioneering spirit welcomed the idea of a flying club.

A. Barnes, Forestry: "I think there would be a great deal of interest in such a club. When the C.O.T.C. lectures started, so many people came that some had to be turned away."

L. Bell, U.C.: "Every interest has its club. I see no reason why there should not be one for flying."

Fourth year Med: "Too expensive!"

Cramming for finals is efficacious, according to the recent report of Dr. Glen Pease of the University of California. Dr. Pease experimented with two groups of students, and the results showed that the group which crammed had an average of 11.1 points higher than the one to which surprise tests were given.

BAN ON STUDY IN H. LIBRARY

Committee had discussed the prevalent fashion of sleeping in Hart House chesterfields. A member of the Committee remarked that he had noted two such recumbent persons but since one was a member of the Library Committee himself, and the other a big man he had refrained from saying anything.

It is said that the Library Committee have discussed the matter of Sunday visitors without, however, taking any action.

"The Varsity" also attempted to ascertain student opinion on the subject.

D. S. R. of the School of Graduate Studies, "Students working in the Library, at times usurp room that other students might just as well have, since work can be done equally well in other places. There are plenty of quiet places in Hart House besides the library."

As to the visitors' Sunday affair, surely we can put up with a little disturbance when it is only once a month."

H. C. D. I. U.C., "I think that visitors should be allowed in the Library once a month at any rate, especially since it is such an interesting place for visitors to look over."

A movement for total abstinence from the use of cosmetics and razors by the students of the University of Arizona has been staged.

MacDONALD-CARTIER CLUB FOR STUDENTS

pointed out by Mr. Bell that the Conservatives would have to have other ideas for a party policy than the tariff, which was regarded as being different in Ontario and Western Canada and as one which was incapable of solution by the older members of the party. Any new issues should be made essentially Conservative, in the same way that the Liberals appropriated the foreign farm labor quotas in Western Canada and made an issue of them. Such an issue was suggested by Mr. Bell in the clearing of war debts by a government investment trust.

"The MacDonald-Cartier Club has a reputation it doesn't entirely deserve," said the President, in reference to the Club's plans for the future. Criticizing the tendency of town or village clubs to become party social in being limited to the local "400," Mr. Beamish suggested that editorial papers on prominent Conservative issues be sent to leading members of the party, to be used for propaganda and education purposes in the smaller centres. These were, it was suggested, to be original in execution, as, according to a popular charge, students are too academic and gather their information second hand.

The following executive was elected for 1929-30: President, Mr. W. Finlayson; 1st Vice-President, Mr. H. R. Perkins; 2nd Vice-President, Mr. Bert Tyson; 3rd Vice-President, Mr. W. Palmer, and Secretary-Treasurer, Mr. D. Beamish.

PLAY IN THE DARK AT S.C.A. CONVERSAZIONE

Welsh Music and Singing Were Original Features Of the Program

A medley of song, dance and theatricals rang through the Women's Union last evening as the annual S.C.A. entertainment for all students was held in the form of a Conversation which took the place of the usual dinner.

"Danger", a one-act mystery play by Richard Hughes, was the hit of the evening with "Romeo" McCullough, IV Victoria, as master of ceremonies. That, shrieks and muffled cries broke out on the ornery air, as it was staged throughout in complete darkness. Jack Clough, III Trinity, "sang, and Barry Davey, II Victoria, accompanied by J. Mahoney, Victoria, played two selections on the violin. Mr. Murray Brooks, General Secretary, S.C.M. of Canada, of which the S.C.A. is a part, sang, accompanied by his wife. A Welsh Quartet gave a rendering of music.

FLOATING UNIVERSITY PRESENTS MUSICAL SHOW

Special to "The Varsity"

According to radio despatches received in New York, a musical comedy "Floating Around" has just been successfully presented by students of the Floating university before an audience of students of Doshisha university in Kyoto, Japan, who enjoyed it hugely. It is a burlesque on student life aboard the Floating university. The music and lyrics were written by two undergraduates, George Buzza, Jr., and Ayres Compton, who also directed its production. It has a cast of thirty, including an attractive chorus of singing and dancing girls. It is to be presented before various other student groups in Asia and in Europe.

A debating team has just been formed to debate with students of many lands on international problems. A dramatic club has already produced on shipboard an American play, and is now busy on one dealing with Oriental life. This group has been haunting the Japanese theatres and accessories around for costumes and scenery in its fascinating little Kyoto and Tokyo shops.

Due to a mistake, it was announced in Wednesday's "Varsity" in the Coming Events column that Mrs. Kirkwood's weekly tea would be held to-day. This tea was held on Tuesday, Jan. 29.

This model, a perfect working miniature of one of the Canadian National Railways' giant locomotives, is now on its way to London, England, where it will be exhibited in the European offices of the National system. John E. Wood, of Winnipeg, constructed it in his spare time, and it took him four teen months of diligence and skill. The main frames and some of the other parts were made by apprentices in the Fort Rouge and Transcan shops. The model is correct in all external details and will work under its own power. The boiler has been tested to 150 pounds pressure. For the purposes of exhibition a motor was placed in the oak base to drive the wheels through a worm gear on the main driving axle. The over-all length of the model is eight feet, six inches, while the over-all length of the original 6100 is 94 feet, six inches. The model weighs approximately 275 pounds and the super-locomotive 328 tons.—(Adv.)

CENSORSHIP BEATEN BY 42 VOTES TO 30 IN SERIOUS DEBATE

Western Debaters Supported
Affirmative Side of Issue

LAWS DON'T MAKE MORALS

Every Man Should Have Right
To Choose What is Fit
For Him

"Any board of censors cannot do what it sets out to do, and it may do, and often does, considerable harm," stated Nelson Chappel, B.A., member for University of Alberta, speaking for the affirmative in the University of Toronto Debate held in Trinity College Library last night.

The House agreed with the Westerners in deprecating censorship and at the close of the debate voted up the motion by 42-30.

"They try to censor movies for indecency," continued the speaker. "There is no such thing as indecency. One may see in a certain type of picture great beauty, another what arouses the lowest passion of his being. In Kansas they have a law limiting any kissing scene to 5 feet of film. This is ridiculous. It spoils the picture, and the first thing we know it will be carried into real life. Soon they will be trying to censor talking films to prevent the audience from getting halitosis."

Douglas McRae, member for the School of Applied Science, in opposing the motion, pointed out that to censor meant to condemn as wrong. "One of the fundamental differences

CASH PRIZE OFFERED FOR GIRL'S ORATORY

Open to University College
Women Undergraduates
Only

TO BE HELD NEXT TUESDAY

The Annual Oratorical Contest, open to University College women undergraduates, shows some new developments this year. Miss Eleanor Barton told "The Varsity" yesterday. "The ultimate aim of the Women's Undergraduate Association in these contests is, as soon as funds permit, to establish a yearly scholarship in oratory." To this end the prize offered this year is to be twenty-five dollars in cash. Formerly, the prize was in the form of books, to the value of twenty dollars.

"This money prize," Miss Barton went on to say, "seems to be more attractive, judging from the number of very good entries." Last year, the first in four years, there were not sufficient entries to carry through the contest.

The contest is to take place in the auditorium of the Women's Union next Tuesday evening. There is still, this week, an opportunity to make entries. Each contestant is to speak for fifteen minutes, on any subject she chooses.

The judges are to be, Mrs. Creighton of the English Department of University College, Mr. Munro Grier, a well known speaker and the third, a member of the St. Margaret's College Alumnae, to be chosen by that Association.

Miss Barton expects an interesting evening and expressed a desire that there should be a large attendance.

ORGANIZERS OF FABIAN SOCIETY CALL MEETING

Membership Expected to Be Based on Scholarly Merit

The Committee of Four who were appointed Tuesday evening to arrange the formation of the proposed Fabian Society will meet at two o'clock Friday afternoon in the Green Room at Wymilwood to discuss plans for the new organization. It is expected that membership in the Fabian Society will be limited and will be to a large degree based on standing made in courses taken. Indeed in many ways the new society will be an honour club for those interested in current social and economic problems.

The committee will, in Monday's issue of "The Varsity," announce a general organization meeting to which those interested will be invited.

PARKING ARRANGEMENTS

Hart House will be en fete to-night when fortunate holders of tickets for the Senior Medical At-Home will revel from nine until two o'clock. Decorated gaily in the colors of the faculty and with a special lighting arrangement, the big gymnasium will be a scene of merry frivolity in a picturesque setting.

Parking arrangements for the convenience of those attending have been made as follows: All cars must enter the University grounds by the east gate and proceed thence to the south west door of Hart House. Privately owned cars may be parked on and around the campus. Traffic under the tower will not be permitted.

After entering the building the ladies will turn to the right and descend to the Ladies' cloak room which will be in the Billiard room. Gentlemen will leave their coats and hats in the Sketch room.

By special arrangement the gallery surrounding the swimming pool has been obtained as sitting out place. It is respectfully brought to the attention of those who will attend that smoking will not be permitted in the sitting-out place.

Dancing will start at nine o'clock and supper will be at eleven thirty. The program is as follows:

"THE VARSITY" WILL NOT BE BANNED IN SPITE OF NEWSPAPER STORIES; BOARD OF GOVERNORS DOES NOT ACT

At Yesterday's Meeting Board of Governors Denies Demanding Editor's Resignation and Washes Hands of Entire Connection With Matter

DECLARES THAT IT IS NOT WORK OF BOARD TO INTERFERE

In spite of statements appearing in the downtown papers, and opinions widely current in all university circles, the Board of Governors meeting last night took no action in connection with "The Varsity". One week ago yesterday the Board held a meeting, in which "The Varsity" was discussed. As a result a strong recommendation was sent to the Joint Committee of the S.A.C., demanding that the Editor-in-Chief be fired. The Joint Executive refused to take action and referred the matter back.

Yesterday afternoon the Board of Governors stated that they had not intended their recommendation to be delivered to the S.A.C. in the stringent form in which it was received. They are taking no further action in the matter.

NEWMAN CLUB OF TORONTO ESTABLISHED BY HIS GRACE ARCHBISHOP McNEIL IN 1913

DR. SEDGWICK SPEAKS ON MEANING OF PRAYER

Deepest Instinct in Soul of Man Says Eminent
Divine

Speaking on "The Meaning of Prayer" at Wymilwood yesterday, Dr. Sedgewick stated that "prayer is and remains the native and deepest instinct in the human heart. Modern cynicism denies everything," he went on, "but in spite of this attitude, man never outgrows the instinct and practical progress has ever interfered with it."

Dr. Sedgewick also stated that the elementary idea of prayer was one of petition alone; the child is taught that prayer is a medium for petition only. "Neither this idea nor the idea of self communion is correct, although both these elements enter into our consideration. Prayer should not be a monologue, but a dialogue, not soliloquy but friendship. It is the loftiest expression of which human nature is capable, and for which explanation is unnecessary, since it must always remain mystical and mysterious."

That it was outside their sphere of activities to take any action against "The Varsity", regarding the editorial policy and in particular an editorial entitled "To Pet or Not To Pet", was the decision arrived at by the Board of Governors.

At the close of the meeting, Mr. W. J. Danlop, Director of Publicity for the Extension Department, issued the following official statement to the press:

"The Board of Governors held a special meeting and discussed thoroughly the matter that had arisen, and unanimously stated its desire that "The Varsity" should be in every way worthy of the university and a reflection of the feelings of the undergraduates. It was felt that recently this had not been the case. After a full discussion with members of the joint executive of the Students' Administrative Council, the Board of Governors unanimously adopted the attitude that the solution of the present problem is not at all a matter that needs to be dealt with by the Board, but that it should be left entirely to the joint executive of the Students' Administrative Council. The situation was dealt with in this manner."

Asked the reason of the Board of Governors' action.

Original Club Founded at Oxford University in Last Century

RELIGIOUS AND SOCIAL AIMS

The Newman Club is an organization for Catholic students attendant at institutions of higher learning in the city of Toronto. The club was founded by His Grace Archbishop McNeil, D.D., in 1913. The intentions of the founder and patrons of Newman Club was the union of Catholic students for their common helpfulness in promoting their religious, intellectual, and social welfare. The original Newman Club was founded by Cardinal John Henry Newman at the University of Oxford, and since that time many other branches have been formed in various parts of the world.

Since its inception in Toronto, the Newman Club has made rapid advances, and it has grown into a powerful organization. The first club house on St. Joseph St., served admirably for a few years, but the large increase in membership demanded larger quarters. Consequently, the directors purchased a residence at St. George St. and Hoskin Ave. This former home has made a palatial club

CRAMMING NO BENEFIT TO SERIOUS STUDENTS

But of Practical Advantage to Students in Some Cases

"The students in science aren't so prone to cram as those in Arts," Professor W. J. K. Harkness of Biology, told "The Varsity". He continued, "In science courses it is the term work that counts. I find that those of my students who cram at the end of the year and get through know nothing the next year."

Professor Fennell, when questioned, explained that the Chemistry department had adopted an unique method of examinations—a series of monthly tests and that it is necessary that the students get through on these. "In a subject such as Chemistry, the lab work must be understood as taken up. One may recite a thing without understanding it, for such a feat memory only is needed. Education is not the accumulation of a large number of facts but the understanding of them and therefore," ended the Professor, "cramming is no good."

Viola Harris, IV year Moderns: "Cramming certainly has helped me a lot but facts which are crammed cannot be retained and are of no value after."

L. B. Plewes, III year Meds.: "Theoretically—no good. Practically—the only way."

And two co-eds when stopped exclaimed in unison, "do we cram? We sure do. If we didn't we'd still be in the kindergarten."

TELEVISION LECTURE AT M. AND P. SOCIETY

Like Movietone Is Still in Experimental Stage
To-day

HAS GREAT FUTURE

The Mathematics and Physics Society yesterday heard two lectures. Mr. W. E. Lehman (4th year) explained the applications of television and movietone and Prof. L. Gilchrist drew a distinction between bio-physics and geo-physics and illustrated his talk with two series of lantern slides—the one, a pictorial account of a scientific trip around Belle Isle Strait, and the other, a graphic illustration of scientific prospecting and its relation to geology.

Mr. Lehman in the process of his explanations, pointed out the fact that both the movietone and telephoto were relatively in an experimental stage, and that we might expect as great an improvement in the movietone as has been the case of "movies" since 1920. He then emphasized the value of both these developments for such everyday utility as advertising, and passed on to a description of such discoveries as the photo-electric cell which had made such interpretation between light and sound possible.

Prof. Gilchrist confined himself to treating his subject as little as possible as a usual lecture. His talk was most interesting and he brought out the desirability of a few students entering biology and geology from an "M. and P." course.

house and affords excellent accommodation for twenty men as well. The Saint Thomas Aquinas or Newman Chapel has been erected on Hoskin Ave., where the spiritual exercises of the members are directed by the resident chaplain, Rev. Father McMahon. The chapel follows strictly Gothic lines and may be compared with many small churches of the same type in England.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH OUGHT TO BE FOUND IN ALL UNIVERSITIES

Debaters Representing Western Colleges

IMPRESSED WITH TORONTO

Claim Student overnment Given

"If there is any place on earth where there should be free speech, it is in the university. The university is the clearing house of ideas." This was the opinion of Mr. Bryce MacKenzie of the University of Saskatchewan, in Toronto with the debating team representing Western Canada universities in the National Federation of Canadian University Students, when interviewed by "The Varsity" yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Nelson Chappel of the University of Alberta, and leader of the visiting team, corroborated the opinion of his colleague by stating: "The sooner one gets some of these peurile ideas out of one's system, the better." The university was the place to work out of one's peccatoriness, thought Mr. Chappel. Suppression robbed the university of this important function.

"Lack of free speech is the last thing one would expect to find at a university," declared Mr. W. J. Masterson of the University of British Columbia, the third member of the team. Mr. Masterson recalled an episode at U.B.C. last year when much talk of suppression and censorship had been heard because a prominent author had been asked to address the students on companionate marriage.

In reply to a question as to their impressions of Toronto and the University of Toronto, Mr. Masterson said: "It is like a rich Christmas pudding. One should take it a little at a time. It is tremendous—rich. There is so much here." He declared he had been at the University of Southern California at Berkeley, but that even there he had not been so impressed

Professor Smith

AN INDIVIDUALIST

In his own age, Thackeray was regarded as cynical and pessimistic, and in our age he is regarded as sentimental and "squashy," stated Professor Smith in his lecture on Thackeray in West Hall on Thursday afternoon. He continued, "We have ourselves become sentimental in posing as not being sentimental."

Influenced by the great writers of the 18th century, his style is graceful and balanced. His work is excellent but not grand, showing a keen observation of men, displaying the use of suitable dialogue, and the apt presentation of vivid scenes.

His presentation of a story varied from the ironical autobiography and ordinary narrative to the modified autobiography. He is unlike Hardy or Bronte whose tales concentrate on a limited field as in the drama where there are limits of time and space.

Thackeray regards society as being separate from the individual. He is an individualist but does not

WHOSE ONE-TRACK MIND?

The endeavour to assure themselves to their own satisfaction and to the discomfort of their audience that man has a one-track mind will occupy the attention of most of the prominent women of the University next Monday night. The occasion is a Women's Interfaculty debate at which four women representing Loretto, St. Hilda's, Victoria and University College will consider the motion, "Resolved that man has a one-track mind." Women from all faculties will be welcomed at the debate, but for men admission will be "by invitation only". Thirty men are being invited.

This debate is something quite new in the history of women's debating at the University of Toronto. Intercollegiate and Interfaculty debates have been yearly features and in most of the colleges there have been small informal debates, but it has not been customary to exclude men,—from the larger affairs at any rate. This being so it is obvious that the action of the Debating Union in admitting only thirty men to the forthcoming battle of wits is an attempt (and a very feeble one) to imitate the tactics of the Debates Committee on the occasion of Miss MacPhail's visit to Hart House.

At that time, due to a generous wish to allow the women of the University to hear the distinguished visitor, the rule which excludes women from Hart House except on social occasions, was temporarily suspended, and a number of them were invited to be present. The number was restricted to forty, not because of a snobbish desire to award favours to a privileged few, but because no more than forty could be comfortably accommodated. Now, having profited by the kindness of the Debates Committee, these women, (for we are sure the debate was arranged by those who were invited to Hart House) have planned a debate on a subject which can only be regarded as a mockery of the resolution against which Miss MacPhail spoke, and have added insult to injury by inviting a number of men so small that it could not possibly represent the male students at this University.

By this plan (inspiration as it doubtless seemed) the women who want to impress men with their own independence and ingenuity are defeating their own ends. The men will not take them seriously, and will probably regard the whole thing as childish. Just as long as women continue to act in so childish a fashion, so long will men regard them as inferior and so long will the cause of feminism be retarded.

Perhaps, though, the women of the Debating Union do not mean to be taken seriously. It may be that they are at last becoming aware that the lack of interest in women's debating is due in part to dull statistical subjects which allow no scope for the ready wit inherent in most women, and that they are trying to revive a struggling organization by introducing a little light and air into the room. Hence the choice of subject. And doubtless they realize that one of the surest ways to become popular, or at least well known, is to do something sensational, so to attract attention they are adopting the novel means of limiting the masculine attendance. If we can rightly attribute these motives to the Women's Debating Union, we congratulate them. We know they will succeed.

THACKERAY FORMERLY CONSIDERED A CYNIC

spend time analysing his characters. He has been charged with not being sufficiently psychological, and with being too moral. "Too damned moral", Professor Rawley has said. He has an amazing power in depicting society, but his scope, in comparison to Balzac, Scott, or Tolstoy, is limited.

"His characters are said to be static, but this is not so," said Professor Smith. "His characters are consistent, but not unchangeable." He possessed discernment in their portrayal, as the most undesirable ones had redeeming qualities. "While we laugh, we respect them." Thackeray treated aristocratic society which he understood, and was more in sympathy with the eighteenth century than with the nineteenth.

There is not much use trying to conceal it now; someone with unusual perceptions has managed to discover that this paper, and the Cat, too, is low in tone, and the tale has reached the downtown papers, who with their usual zeal for university upshots, have been splashing streamer heads and fancy lay-outs in a manner just as low as any college paper.

Honi soit qui... up, up, ye intellectuals! And yet... Aux pures tous... Retro, Satane!

C—C

Well, we shall have to reform. From now on all references to the infernal regions will be carefully veiled, and we offer a prize consisting of one copy of the Boys' Own Annual to any person detecting one in recognition of that individual's exceptional intellectual accomplishments.

And contributors who use any expression stronger than "Oh Splash!" will be forced to wear boxing mitts and typewrite six pages of the constitution of Great Britain, and as for ourselves, lest we should seem unduly harsh to others, we set as penance the task of reading for one year a clean, bright, optimistic undergraduate paper.

C—C

Contributors are warned not to give any space or publicity to the deity, not even by abbreviation. If this and preceding rules are adhered to, we may hope for better things from what the Star kindly calls "the funny column".

C—C

It is surprising for otherwise harmless individuals to suddenly find themselves pointed out as low, base persons.

C—C

Well, enough, better days may dawn, though in the process we may have to fall back on puns again.

C—C

These be perilous times. We suggest sprinkling this paper with chloride of lime or something, just for safety's sake.

Governors' action, Mr. Dunlop replied that the general tone of "The Varsity" had recently not been just what the people of the province would desire, mentioning specifically the editorial on petting and other articles dealing with that subject, as not being what might be expected of a university publication.

"The Board has not made any specific recommendations to the Students' Administrative Council," said Mr. Dunlop.

"Assurance was also given by the members of the joint executive present that every effort would be made to see that there should be in future no cause for complaint," said Mr. Dunlop, adding, "I feel sure that the joint executive will take pains to see that there will be nothing objectionable."

"There has been no discussion with regard to a change of personnel on the staff of 'The Varsity,'" Mr. Dunlop concluded, "nor did the discussion reach the point where the Board of Governors considered the refusing of financial aid to the publication."

The representative of the Students' Administrative Council present at the meeting was Mr. G. McGillivray, President of the Council.

SENIOR ASSAULT SET TO START MONDAY

Winners of Bouts at New York And West Point Expected To Compete

KEEN CONTESTS ASSURED

The Senior Intercollegiate Assault-at-Arms to be held Monday and Tuesday promises to be a real meet with keen competition for each title. Several of last year's winners are expected to fight in order to retain their titles as well as a host of promising new men who anxiously seek a place on the Interfaculty team.

A team of Blue and White boxers and wrestlers have just returned after engaging the Army team at West Point and a picked district team at New York. The Varsity fighters acquitted themselves very creditably at New York where they won four out of six events. The team which the local men met in New York was made up of several of the district champions of their respective classes. Jimmy Jackson, the Varsity light heavyweight, was matched against one of the cleverest boxers in New York State, and only after a terrific battle was the American awarded the decision. The winner, who is expected to turn professional early next month, had very little over Jackson so that the veteran is prepared to meet all comers. Geo. Boeck, 125 lb. Varsity man, demonstrated the art of boxing to be very keenly contested both in boxing and wrestling. Jimmy Jackson and Longert in the 160 lb. division will provide plenty of real boxing. In the light heavyweight class McMillan, the present title holder will meet plenty of stiff opposition to retain his title. Tommy Keenan is expected to battle with McMillan for the crown. SPEAKING OF SPORT

To-morrow afternoon McGill will play Varsity at the University Arena here in the first game of a two-game series for the Intercollegiate Hockey title. This should be a fast and interesting game well worthy of a good crowd. The return game of this series will be played in Montreal on the 12th of the month. McGill recently defeated the University of Montreal to win the city college championship and the Beaubien Cup. If the two teams live up to advance "dope" Varsity should hand the Red and White a beating.

St. Michael's gave Queen's a nice set back by defeating them down in the Limestone City on Wednesday night. The Tricolour were stepping along in second place but this loss helped Preston's cause considerably. There is a possibility that St. Michael's may reach a play off berth.

Varsity juniors are leaving this morning for Owen Sound where they will take on the local juniors to-night. The Blue and White had tough luck in their group and made a garrison finish which just placed them short of a berth in the group play-off. There is considerable opinion that the Blue juniors have at least as good a team as the Red Ringers who qualified to meet Marlboros and some of their supporters claim they are better. But the schedule is finished and the team hope to put a fitting climax to the season by downing the Greys right on their home ice.

The Senior Assault commences early next week and we are handing out the straight "dope" not to miss these bouts. The competition has been extremely close this year and some red-hot stuff is on the cards.

Varsity Intermediates MEET WILLOWDALE

Still Have Chance to Capture Honours in O.H.A. Group

The Varsity Intermediate Hockey team meets Willowdale in a scheduled O.H.A. fixture at Willowdale to-night. The Blue and White second team still has two chances to capture group honours. A win to-night means they tie with Oshawa for second place and a chance in the play-offs, even if Oshawa win the Oshawa at Richmond Hill game. Even a loss for Varsity and a win for Richmond Hill gives the students a chance, and a Richmond Hill and Varsity double victory assures the Blue team of second place in the group.

With the opportunity of capturing group honours this late in the season, the Intermediates can be counted on to give all they have to-night at Willowdale, despite the fact that they face strong opposition when they run up against the group leaders.

A slightly changed line-up will take the ice to-night. Little will guard the nets, with Graham and MacMillan on defence. Carrick, Statham and Smith will start on the forward line, with Leak and Clute as alternates. Clute is a new man on the Intermediate squad, replacing Evans.

Hills, heavyweight title holder, and member of the Senior team for several years, will be out to retain his title which he has successfully defended by smart, heady, fighting. The 112 lb. division is short of men and is open to anyone of that weight.

The wrestling team is as strong if not stronger than last year and competition in the Assault will be very keen. D'Arcy Hilliard and Furber will be out to defend their titles and competition in the other divisions will provide interesting and exciting matches. As in boxing the lighter weight divisions in the wrestling meet several men and places in the classes are open for newcomers.

DENTS VICTORIOUS OVER SR. SCHOOL IN CLOSE GAME

Dents defeated Sr. School 2 to 0 last night in a Jennings' Cup fixture. The game was close and interesting all the way with Dents superior team play telling the tale.

The game was marred by a vicious fist fight between Whittaker and Irwin. The former, resenting a trip by Irwin, sailed in a la Dempsey and the two combatants had to be separated two or three times by their comrades before peace reigned.

Dents scored their first goal in the first period on a shot from Mutchmore's stick. In the second stanza Conn shot the Dentsists' other corner.

The game was a close checking affair with Dents getting through often for close-in shots. Higgins and Haggart played well for Sr. School; the Dents had a balanced line-up and all turned in a nice game.

Sr. School—Goal, Allen; defence, Grear and Reid; centre, Irwin; wings, Higgins and Haggart, alternate. Sniffen.

Dents—Goal, McCartney; defence, Walden and Wittaker; centre, MacHaffey; wings, Conn and Mutchmore; alternates, Herron and Adams.

MEDETTES TIE SENIOR VIC IN OVERTIME HOCKEY

Another Game Necessary To Decide Winner Of Group

Varsity Medettes played Senior Victoria last night in a tied game 1-1. Ten minutes overtime failed to decide the score and another game will be necessary to decide the winning team. Dot James, Medette, scored for her team and was the star of the game. Both teams were in top form and the playing was fast and furious. Notice of the play-off will be given later.

Medettes—D. James, T. Mahon, M. Patterson, H. Crow, E. Yhe, K. Baldwin, B. McQuary, V. Peters, M. Smith.

Senior Vics—M. Reider, R. Vantone, A. Winfield, E. Watson, M. Jarrett, E. Terwertha, L. Reynolds, M. Ineson.

Varsity Junior Five Win First Tilt in T. & D. Schedule

Varsity Junior Basketball team defeated Xebecs 37-26. This is the juniors first game in the T. & D. schedule. The game was fast throughout, the teams showing the effects of coach McCutcheon's tutoring during the past two months.

Captain Don Wood, Sullivan, Burns and Humphrey played a sterling offensive game. Dawson was particularly good on defense. For Xebecs Vaughan, Smith and McDonnell played well, this being their first appearance against the Blue and White.

SITS ON TRACK; HURT BUT WINS BET ALL SAME

Oberlin Girl Bets She Will Not Move From Path of Train Till Man Does

Special to "The Varsity" Oberlin, O.—Miss Lillian Ramsey, 18, of Struthers, O., a freshman at Oberlin College, lies in Allen hospital here, seriously injured, because she won a bet Monday night that she could sit on a railroad track longer than William B. Robinson of West Newton, Pa., a sophomore in the college.

Because Miss Ramsey sat the longest, she has a broken collar bone, several fractured ribs, and severe bruises on her body, received when she was struck by a train while she remained voluntarily on the track to win the bet.

Details of the unusual wager, which has set the whole college talking, were learned today after officials conducted the investigation.

According to the story told by Robinson, the two were returning from a college dance and stopped at the New York Central Railroad crossing on E. College street when they saw a train approaching.

In a spirit of jest, Robinson said the two entered into a bet as to who dared to sit on the track the longest while the train approached.

Robinson jumped first and attempted to pull the girl away with him, he said, but he was not quick enough to prevent her from being struck by the engine.

The Trinity College Literary Institute has just purchased a new piano, and is considering purchasing a radio set and furnishing a new common room.

SENIOR MCGILL TEAM SHOWS IMPROVEMENT

Have Strong Line-up Though St. Germaine Will Be Missing

BLUE TEAM SMART

Fresh from their victory over the University of Montreal and the winning of the Beaubien Cup, McGill open here to-morrow afternoon the series for the Intercollegiate Hockey Championship.

The Red and White squad have been travelling at a fast clip the last week and have improved greatly over their early showing. Unfortunately McGill will be unable to use St. Germaine, their best player, who is ineligible for Intercollegiate competition. This will weaken the Red team but the reserve players will likely fill the gap.

Varsity will use the same team that is wearing the Blue in the O.H.A. and probabilities are good for a Blue and White victory. The Varsity forward line with their speedy passing attack will keep the McGill goaler working hard and if he can shut out the Blue will have accomplished something that has not been done this season.

CHICAGO GANG-MEN ADD TO THE KING'S ENGLISH

Words Are Full-Blooded, Live And Kicking Things Says Poet

Special to "The Varsity" Middlebury, Vt.—Speaking at the Bread Loaf conference here recently, Joseph Auslander, poet and critic, declared that the gangster and racketeer have enriched the English language.

"It may be painful to Bill Thompson," he said, "that Chicago is thus adding to the King's English, but it is a fact that they are doing so. 'Mall, sticking them up, going after the ice, taking a man for a ride, frisking someone, all are picturesque terms making a new and vivid language which it is the province of the poet to employ."

"They show us that words are full-blooded, live and kicking things, and that their meanings migrate from one significance to another."

SR. MEDS GAIN DECISIVE VICTORY OVER SENIOR U.C.

Gord Cock Leads Meds as They Run Wild in Final Period To Score Five

Sr. Meds swamped Sr. U.C. by a score of 7 to 1 in an interfaculty hockey league game last night. U.C. held the Medicals to a 2 to 1 score until the final session when the Med sextet waged a scoring her which netted them five counters.

The game was fast and U.C., who were playing without any subs, made things interesting for two-thirds of the game. Cock was Meds' most successful marksman, getting four goals, all on nice individual efforts. O'Connor was next with two to his credit and McIntyre got the other. U.C.'s lone counter was scored by Reid, after a nice play, in the first period.

Gord Cock was Meds' best man and he gave Meds the jump at the centre position. O'Connor and Paris were also effective and Bennett was good in goal. Reid and Arnold were probably the losers' best bets.

Sr. U.C.—Goal, McCallum; defence, Reid and Anderson; centre, Collingwood; wings, Jackson and Arnold.

Sr. Meds—Goal, Bennett; defence, Williams and McIntyre; centre, Cock; wings, O'Connor and Hollidrake; alternates, Paris and Allen.

President Joined Fraternity
Because there were no Bills

Special to "The Varsity"
Madison, Wis.—President Glenn Frank of the University of Wisconsin revealed why he joined a fraternity, during a discussion of fraternities at a meeting of the Board of Regents here recently. While he was in New York a representative of his father's fraternity came to him and asked why he had joined the group.

Upon being told by the reporter that he expected a truthful answer, President Frank said, "I joined a fraternity because I was short of money, and I found that I could run a boarding bill longer in a fraternity than in a boarding house." The interview never appeared.

LANDSCAPING COURSE NOT ON CURRICULUM

Increasing Opportunities In This Field For Men And Women

CHAIR MAY BE FOUNDED

University of Toronto women, if they would learn the ways and means of landscape gardening design, must hire themselves to the Department of Architecture in S.P.S. A note in yesterday's issue read that landscape designing courses have been opened to women in the University of Michigan. On investigation, "The Varsity" found that there is but remote chance of such happening here. The little time that is given to landscape design at the University of Toronto comes strictly under the Department of Architecture, where it is included in the curriculum of each of the five year study there. Mr. H. B. Dunington-Grubb is the Special lecturer in this subject to the embryo architects, and is himself a landscape designer of note. It is he who has designed the landscape for the new McMaster University building in Hamilton. Their model in clay is the work of Mr. Coates, instructor in Modelling at S.P.S.

Landscape gardening to the uninitiated might suggest rakes and spades and planting. The term signifies, however, the designing of the formation which makes the landscape, at the same time suggesting what should be planted therein. There are increasing opportunities in this field for both men and women. In the States there are more and more women becoming supervisors of the designing and planting of large estates, with a staff of gardeners under them.

CENSORSHIP BEATEN BY 42 VOTES TO 30

between man and animal," he said, "is the ability to judge between right and wrong. The need of censorship is due to lack of education, and not until the great masses of the people are sufficiently educated to sympathize with art and to discriminate between right and wrong, can we abandon censorship of movies, or any form of art."

"The Question of censorship is essentially a moral problem," said Bryce Mackenzie, member for University of Saskatchewan, speaking for the motion. "Words such as 'obscene,' 'indecent,' and 'lewd' cannot be defined because their meaning depends on their interpretation, on the emotional reaction they cause."

J. T. Wilson, member for Trinity College, upholding the negative side, argued that although a free press was essential to a free state, and every man should be free to think, speak or write what he liked, nevertheless when the state felt he was in so doing, injuring himself and his fellows then that right should be taken away. "As long as there is more money in smut on the stage," he said, "some producer will go a step farther, and a man should be curbed in an effort to do wrong."

"There can be no virtue where there is no free choice," declared W. J. Masterson, member for University of British Columbia. "Censorship is an attempt to impose the view of a few upon many. Why should we as individuals let politicians select our mental food, or to regulate our thought by law? We shall have the whole truth and with the whole truth we shall be free."

"If a child is brought up to hold to the opinions of his parents on questions of politics, religion, or social conditions, that child is not free," said J. R. Wilson, member for Victoria College, and final speaker for the Opposition. "We are not advocating that the government become the sole custodian of opinion, but we have tried to point out that people are really freer where censorship is in force."

Trotsky Club Meets Sewing Society In Fatal Debate Ending in Death

(By G. G. Brooks)

Into the first year party walked the Chaperone Emeritus, and immediately the youngsters left off dancing and came and begged for another story. "But I don't want to spoil your dance!" said she.

"We'd rather listen to you than dance any time," spoke up one little fresquette sweetly—and honestly. So the dear old lady began:

"Once upon a time there were two clubs here, my dears; the Lenin-Trotsky Club and the University Sewing Circle. The membership was entirely men in both clubs and both were very select. But the members of each club had a very strong 'esprit de corps' which showed itself principally in great disdain for the members of the other. Yet, while they despised each other, they always tried to get each other's members—especially if they were able to talk at length, as most of them were."

"All this led to much hard feeling, and finally the two clubs decided to have a final test of superiority. Accordingly, a debate was arranged, and all the members of both clubs prepared to take part. The Lecture Room was decorated for the occasion, on one side with crimson, and on the other with all sorts of new patch-work quilts and pinafors. When the Clubs assembled at the appointed time, the Chairman, who belonged to neither, announced the question: 'Resolved, that the Opposition is of more value to the country than the government.' "The Lenin-Trotsky Club took the affirmative, and the first speaker started like this: 'Mr. Chairman, there are many arguments which might be advanced, but they would be far over the heads of my opponents, therefore—' The Sewing Circle speaker replied 'Such arguments as have been advanced by my worthy opponent may seem plausible to persons of his mental capacity, but—'

"At the end of the first ten minutes the Chairman struggled, gasping, to the door, but no one noticed his absence, and the debate went merrily on. To listeners in the corridor came echoes full of invective and scorn, but as the evening wore on the voices became weaker and weaker, and finally no more could be heard."

"At the end of some hours a party opened the door, and immediately clouds of heavy gas belched forth. The crowd retired, and after half an hour came back to the room. It had cleared by now, and as they went in they were met by a feeble voice, 'No decision!' as the judge succumbed at their feet. But none was necessary, for all the members lay sprawled about with the glow of death already on their cheeks. They had been suffocated."

"Now there is a moral to this sad story, and here it is: 'If you must join societies, don't debate.'"

And all, with tears in their eyes, promised that they wouldn't.

584 COLLEGES EXIST IN AMERICAN STATES

Columbia Has 34,997 Enrolled But Buena Vista Only 21

HARVARD IS OLDEST

Special to "The Varsity"
New York—American universities, colleges and technical institutions numbered 584 in the years 1927-28, according to a census in the 1928 World Almanac. Of this number, 382 were co-educational, 109 were men's colleges, and 93 were women's. Summer sessions were conducted in 355 colleges and extension courses were given in 216.

Harvard was the first university. It was founded in 1636. The next were William and Mary and Yale in 1701. The most recently established halls of learning are Mississippi College at Clinton, Miss., and the Municipal University at Wichita, Kansas. Both were founded in 1926.

Columbia has the largest enrollment with 34,997 students. New York University with 22,882 students and the University of California with 18,658 come next on the lists. Buena Vista College was the smallest institution, with 21 students and 16 instructors. Last year, Syracuse University having 8,348 students and 589 instructors, was listed as sixteenth in size in comparison with other universities.

There are 1,640 instructors at the University of California, or about one instructor for 11.3 students, while Columbia has 1,487 instructors, which is one for 23.5 students. Cornell, however, has one instructor for 5.5 students; 14.1 students for each instructor is the average at Syracuse.

C. V. Pilcher of Wycliffe College. All men and women students cordially invited.

CRIBBERS AND CHEATERS STUDIED AT COLGATE Found to be Unintelligent And Below The Campus Average

Special to "The Varsity"
Colgate University—A study of 30 successful cribbers and cheaters during examinations at Colgate university by Herbert C. Brownell has resulted in his labelling them "a psychological type contrasted with the student body."

Information about the 30 was obtained unknown to them and by unofficial and underground methods, and they were used as laboratory specimens to show the mental and emotional traits of college students who cheat at examinations and get by with it. None of the 30 cheaters were officially caught even though Colgate has a severe proctoring system.

More than half of the group fell below the campus average in intelligence and the majority belonged to the psychological type known as extroverts, another name for a "good boy" and one more inclined to activity than thinking. Eighty per cent. were more emotionally unstable than the campus average.

GEOLOGICAL SURVEY EMPLOYS MANY STUDENTS

About one hundred students are employed each year on Geological Survey field parties engaged in geological and topographical mapping. Opportunity is thus afforded for remunerative work during the summer holidays that is of a practical nature and is closely related to courses in geology, civil engineering and mining engineering. With parties engaged in topographical mapping experience is acquired in methods of surveying and in the use of instruments.

NEWMAN CLUB FOUNDED IN TORONTO IN 1913

One of the main features of the Newman Club is its sponsorship of many social functions such as teas, dances, smokers, and so forth, while intellectual advancement is fostered by debates, public speaking contests, and addresses by leaders in political and social spheres. The congenial associations afforded by this club are regarded by the members as invaluable for intellectual and social achievement.

Last year, under the leadership of the chaplain, the executive of the Club worked to ensure the most successful year in its history, signified by the greatest membership the institution has known, and the introduction of many novel features both educational and social.

FREEDOM OF SPEECH IN UNIVERSITIES

as he had here. "Toronto is a fine place and the University a fine place, too," was Mr. Chappel's opinion. He revealed that he himself had been a freshman at Victoria five years ago.

Student government, it was revealed, existed in the West to a notable extent. There was a greater degree of centralization than obtains here. In Saskatchewan the system was very "closely knit," with proportional representation, according to faculties, to the Students' Administrative Council, and to the various Directorates—one each for debating, social, dramatics, athletics, and so forth.

Students' Sick Benefit and Insurance existed in the Western universities, whereby students paid a small, fixed sum every year—receiving in return a payment of all medical bills, in case either of accident or sickness, over five dollars and up to two hundred and fifty dollars, or over that at the discretion of the Council.

The Western universities, being smaller, had more of a group feeling than seemed to hold at the University of Toronto. But they were growing, as was shown by the fact that more buildings were being required. Within the next few years the University of Saskatchewan would erect a new two-and-one-half-million-dollar arts building.

OUR VERSION OF IT

We had intended not to embarrass the cause of peace by any editorial pronouncement about this business but rather to depart in our usual manner for the Elysian fields of discussion about the League of Nations and the St. Lawrence Waterways. However, since a certain amount of interest has been aroused we think an explanation is expected.

Disapproval of the Governors resulted apparently from our discussion of a certain social custom of pleasure or sin. According to an official statement this was the matter discussed and the discussion of another matter which has provided much space for the downtown press was not under review. Our explanation, then, must deal with two points: first, the stand of the paper on "petting" and second, the result of that stand.

A prominent clergyman was reported in our news columns as having stated that "Petting is a new institution", and as having criticized this new institution adversely. It is significant that he made this statement in a lecture under the auspices of the Student Christian Movement and delivered in the Music Room of Hart House. He was evidently of the opinion that what he referred to was fairly formidable and worthy of his consideration. A large crowd of men heard him and this and other opinions that he expressed were the subject of conversation and naturally the matter was taken up by those who are supposed to write editorials about what the students are thinking. An editorial was published which expressed the opinion that the practice was condoned among most students.

The next step in our enquiry is "Did the editorial misrepresent the students?" A news story followed which showed that none of the students interviewed had condemned the editorial or scored us for misrepresentation. The tone of the answers shows that of those interviewed none were surprised at the question and all had some views as to the character and extent of the practice. This news story was written to obtain student opinion and to check up the editorial. Letters were subsequently published opposing the view that petting was permissible and the strongest of these was not an attack on the editorial but on the opinions expressed by the students interviewed. In other words the paper was serving its function, that of being a medium of expression for student opinion.

That in doing this, the paper was "immoral", "abominable", "an example of the gutter press" etcetera is not our opinion and we are confident that the majority of the students are of the same mind with us on this question. But since certain of the authorities believe that the discussion was in bad taste we are willing to ban forthwith from this column any mention of "petting", "vamping" and kindred topics and to give specific instructions that in the other departments of the paper direct or indirect references to any such topics are scrupulously to be avoided. This statement is made without our having received any official communication from any body giving any instructions or advice as to our conduct of the editorial column. This is indeed a tiny concession to make to preserve our paper from the systematic throttling that threatens it and that would prevent "inconvenient" discussions of all sorts, whether moral or intellectual or political. When this particular discussion allowed the downtown press to be filled with talk about the "immorality" of the student newspaper we could almost hear, with Bright, "the beating of the wings of the angel of death", for the paper to which we have given all of our time, after our studies.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

We should be glad to publish Mr. Carl Strang's letter if he would send us his name and address and faculty.

Art, Music and Drama

Friday Afternoon Recital

A very interesting recital was given on Friday by two members of University College, Mr. J. J. Knights, violinist, and Mr. R. D. C. Finch, pianist; a very laudable precedent in the use of home talent. The program consisting of four eighteenth century sonatas, was an agreeable change from the sentimental fare which is, alas, too usual even in Hart House, even though, at times, it did seem a trifle ambitious. The beautiful melodies of the Handel were best received by the audience, while the Haydn formed a delightful contrast, which did not pass unappreciated.

Sunday Evening Concert

Mme. Norah Drewett de Kresz, pianist, and Mr. Erwin Haris, violinist, appeared in joint recital in Hart House last night and their programme undoubtedly marks the climax of this season in Sunday concerts. Mr. Haris who made his first appearance as a soloist at the Sunday concerts proved himself an artist of the first rank in his brilliant solo work and in the opening Sonata both artists played with such sympathy and feeling as to give the Frankl masterpiece increased sublimity.

This sonata for violin and piano is one of the very great works of violin literature and as it was played last night, all its varied beauties were increased a hundred fold.

We could have been contented had the Cesar Franck been the complete programme and yet the latter half of the programme was equally attractive. Mr. Haris played four violin solos, among which the Chopin Nocturne illustrated all the stirring emotional qualities of his instrument and the Hubay Scene afforded him an opportunity of displaying a facile technique which found no difficulty in overcoming the most intricate passages.

We enjoyed the stately gaiety of the Handel minuet and wished that it might have been repeated.

One almost hesitates to comment upon the superb playing of Mme. de Kresz, who gave her usual charming rendering of Chopin. Her Etude had brilliance, her Barcarolle all the entrancing beauty which it is possible to give Chopin, and the Berceuse was played with most attractive tenderness and delicacy. Mme. de Kresz made a short illustrative comment upon the final List group, which added considerably to the pleasure of the audience.

Both Mme. de Kresz and Mr. Haris were recalled for encores and the Ysaye lullaby played by Mr. Haris was most pleasing. The audience would have been only too pleased to have continued the programme indefinitely.

BLUE INTERCOLLEGIATE SEXTET DEFEAT RED AND WHITE 6 TO 1

SPEAKING OF SPORT

Varsity seniors showed plenty of class Saturday when they defeated the McGill sextet 6-1. The Blue and White will carry a five goal lead into the second game which will be played in Montreal on the 12th. It seems a fairly safe thing that the Intercollegiate championship will remain in the Queen City for another season.

Saturday's game was fast and interesting but the Blue were just a little too good for the Montreals. The presence of St. Germaine on the forward line would doubtless add a much needed scoring punch to the Red team.

St. Michael's defeat of Queen's on Saturday night places them in a tie with the Tricolour for third place. Preston are but a step ahead in second. The race for second place is going to be red hot. Varsity appear to have the first rung already cinched. St. Michael's have found their stride and will make the going tough for the others from now on.

The Senior Assault starts to-night and should attract a good crowd. Several men who made the trip to West Point are ill but there will be some mighty good bouts on the card.

Duncan Cup Events

The Duncan Cup events will be run off on Tuesday and Thursday nights at 5.15 p.m. and next Saturday at noon. The events staged on the different nights will be as follows:—

Tuesday 5.15 p.m.—50 yards, 200 yards, free style.

Thursday, 5.15 p.m.—100 yards breast stroke; 100 yards back stroke.

Saturday, 12.00 noon—Diving, 440 yards free style.

The following men have entered the contest for the University swimming championship:—

SCARCITY OF BOXING FOR SENIOR ASSAULT

Wrestling and Fencing to be Main Attraction Among To-night's Events

FINALS TO-MORROW

Boxing, wrestling, and fencing enthusiasts will be provided with thrills and excitement at the Senior Assault-at-Arms in Hart House to-night and to-morrow night. The semi-final events are to be held to-night while the finals are scheduled for to-morrow evening. Wrestling and fencing will be the main attraction of the Assault-to-night while the boxing bouts will come to the fore in the finals. Sickness and the lack of entrants necessitate that the boxing be held over until Tuesday.

The draw shows that there are to be only five boxing bouts. Crisp will meet Cooke in the 145 lb. division with Wall getting a bye. The 160 lb. fight will doubtless be one of the best bouts of the assault, Jimmy Jackson, Intercollegiate Champion, will meet Longert, a first year U.C. man. Although Jackson will be severely handicapped by an injured nose it is expected that he will provide the spectators with his usually steady, heady, fighting. Longert, who met Jackson in the West Point tryouts gave the veteran a real battle and will again attempt to dethrone the champ. Tyson and Keenan will meet in the light heavyweight division and it will be a fight worth while. As yet Harry Hills has no challenger for the heavyweight title.

The competition in the wrestling bouts will be somewhat keener than in the boxing events. Every weight will be contested and some real excitement will be provided for the spectators. D'Arcy Hilliard will be called upon to defend his title in the 117 lb. division when he meets Smith of O.A.C. Holden, Mainland and Diprose will meet plenty of opposition in their respective weights. Further and Kickham both draw opponents from O.A.C.

Nine men will contest for the fencing title.

SCORE 32-31

The University of Toronto Intermediate Basketball Team were defeated in an Intercollegiate game with McMaster University by a score of 32-31. The game took place at Broadview Y.M.C.A. on Saturday afternoon and was a clean and close struggle. McMaster, having 2 fouls called on them and Varsity 6. The game started slowly, first one team being ahead and then the other until half time, when Varsity led by the score of 20-17. The first half was featured by the smart work of Riggs, Stevenson and Davey, for Varsity and Leamen and Haebler for McMaster.

The second half found McMaster overtaking the Varsity lead and then going ahead and leading by 6 points at one time and it wasn't until near the end of the game that Varsity were outlucked in their shooting, many of their shots rolling around the ring.

McMaster deserved their victory on the play, as they worked the ball in to the basket, time after time. Varsity seemed to lack the fight of their previous games, but should have no trouble defeating McMaster in the return game.

For McMaster, Leamen and Haebler were always dangerous with their shooting while B. Whidden played a strong defensive game. For Varsity Riggs, Stevenson and Davey were the best.

Line up—

Varsity II—Forwards, Riggs (12), Stevenson (7); centre, Pasternak; guards, H. Devitt (capt.) (2); Cook (4); alternates, Davey (6), Grainger, Brady.

McMaster—Forwards, Reynolds (2), Leamen (12); centre, Haebler (13); guards, B. Whidden (1), Andoff (2); alternates, H. Whidden (2), Main, Little.

Varsity Juniors Superior To Owen Sound Hockey Team

Varsity juniors excursion to Owen Sound on Friday last resulted in a 3-1 victory for the Blue over the local hopefuls. After a scoreless first period the Blue and White rang up three counters in the second stanza without a reply from the orange and black. In the last period the Greys got one counter but were unable to beat Hunnisset again.

WATER POLO CHAMPIONSHIP AT HART HOUSE

The City Water Polo Championship will be determined in Hart House Pool on Tuesday night when Central "Y" meets the Varsity "B" team.

Owing to the fact that the senior Assault-at-Arms begins at 8 p.m., it has been deemed necessary to begin the water polo game at 7.30 u.m. sharp, on this night.

In spite of the early hour a good crowd is expected and water polo enthusiasts will be allowed to take in the boxing and wrestling events at 8 p.m. if they so wish.

An admission for the water polo game will be charged.
A cup donated by the Daily Star will be presented to the winning team at the end of the game.

The Varsity "B" team will be composed of the following players:—

Ayers, Spencer, Middleboro, Latchford, Armstrong, Pierdon, Alexander, Dyble. As the game begins at 7.30 the above players are requested to be on hand by 7.15 p.m.

Annual Retreat at Loretto

The annual retreat at Loretto College opened on Saturday evening and will close Wednesday with High Mass and a solemn Benediction. These three days are set aside for a special study of the truths of religion. The retreat is being conducted by Rev. Father John Collins, C.S.S.R.

WILLOWDALE DEFEATS VARSITY "SECONDS"

Overtime Necessary For Win To Be Gained At 3 to 2

Invading Willowdale on Friday night the Blue and White intermediates forced Willowdale, the group leaders, to go ten minutes overtime to grab a 3-2 win. Willowdale were without the services of four of their regular players but managed to put a strong team on the ice to face the Blue. The men from North Toronto have an exceptionally strong outfit and have been hailed as the coming O.H.A. champions. Their roster contains four former senior O.H.A. players and several seasoned juniors.

Varsity have made a good showing in one of the fastest groups in the league and although out the running in this series are showing the way in their section of the Intermediate Intercollegiate.

Willowdale got the jump in the first period when Barnett drove the puck past Little after six minutes of play.

In the second frame McMillan evened it up but Collins, the former Pererboro star, put the suburbanites in the lead again. In the last period Graham knotted the count by beating Harris with a hard drive from outside the defence. Willowdale settled the issue in overtime when Frank Collins stickhandled his way through and beat the Blue goalies.

O.C.E. BASKETBALL TEAM DEFEATED BY ST. MIKES

Saints Have Superior Ability And Edge Of Play In Game

St. Mike's Basketball team defeated Ontario College of Education 21 to 11 in an interfaculty league fixture last Friday. The winners had a big margin of the play and should have won by a larger score.

At one time early in the second half St. Mike's were only leading by one point but the Saints soon pulled away and were going strong at the close of the game.

Quigley and Sammons led the Saints' shooters with six points apiece. Freeman led the O.C.E. scorers, having five points to his credit. Thompson also put up a good game for O.C.E.

St. Mike's—Forwards, Quigley (6), Burns; centre Cassidy (2); guards, McMahon (1), Hussey; spares, Blattner (2), Sammons (6), Nolan, Riley (4), Coll.

O.C.E.—Forwards, Weaver, Dean; centre, Freeman (4); guards, Thompson (2), Allen (2); spares, Elliot (2), Partridge, Wilson.

SCHOOL-MED FIGHT AMONG TRADITIONS

Sophs and Frosh to attain the greatest volume of sound.

The annual School-Med snow fight and general row, takes place traditionally after the first snow-fall in the new year, and the breaking of a few windows seems to be an intrinsic part of the affair.

At Trinity the wearing of gowns is a tradition to which all who are registered in Trinity are compelled to adhere, and the procession from University College across the campus to Convocation Hall on Graduation Day is one of the few traditional ceremonies which prevail at the University.

A quartette from the Lillian Crossley studio played in Wymilwood on Sunday evening.

CANADIAN IDEAS IN JAPAN

When K. Hashima, superintendent of rolling stock and machinery of the Sapporo District, Japanese Government Railways, was in Canada recently studying the operations of the Canadian National Railways for the benefit of the people of his own country, he was particularly interested in the methods used in clearing snow from the track. In a letter to W. A. Kingsland, general manager of the National system's western region, Mr. Hashima expressed his thanks for the co-operation given him by A. H. Eager, general superintendent, motive power and car equipment, Winnipeg, and A. McCowan, assistant general superintendent. He went on to describe a new type of snow-high-lift machine which he had devised from ideas given him by K. D. McLeay, bridge and building master of the Canadian National Railways, Calgary division. The machine, which is the most successful of all the types tried on the Japanese railways, has been named McLeay. The plow is seen here in action and the inset is a photograph of Mr. McLeay.—ADVT.

THIRD CONSECUTIVE GAME TIED BY SCHOOL MEN

Juniors of Both S.P.S. and U.C. Try in Vain to Break Deadlock

S.P.S. juniors tied junior U.C. in an Interfaculty hockey fixture last Friday with a score of 3 all, this being the third consecutive game in which the school men have tied their opponents.

In the first period Martin of School got the only goal scored by either team on a pass from MacCallum. School easily dominated and it was only bad luck which kept them from getting at least one more tally. Little of U.C. carried the rubber from his black line to score the only counter of the middle stanza. Both teams tried so hard to break the tie that in the last frame each scored. The game ended with a score of three all.

Martin and Crocker excelled for the bridge-builders, while Little and Greer were outstanding for the red and white team. It might be observed that U.C. only had one alternate.

The teams:—

Jr. S.P.S.—Goal, Price; forwards, Martin and Anderson; centre, Crocker; defence, MacCallum and Walkom; alternates, Jones and Porter.

Jr. U.C.—Goal, Richardson; forwards, Robinson and Little; centre, Shortley; defence, Thomson and Greer; alternate, Saunders.

EMMANUEL COL. SWAMPS WYCLIFFE AT HOCKEY

Emmanuel college had it all their own way last Friday when they defeated Wycliffe by 7 to 0 in an Interfaculty hockey game. Neither sextet was very proficient and they were both woefully lacking in any sort of team work.

The first session was a furious scramble with everyone skating here and there. Emmanuel managed to poke the rubber in during one of their wild rushes. The next canto was about the same though Emmanuel players co-operated a little better with the result that they got two more counters. The last stage was a mad race around the rink in which the Wycliffe defence men lost four times. When the tumult had subsided it was seen that Emmanuel had won by a score of 7 to 0.

The teams:—

Emmanuel—Goal, Walkinshaw; defence, Cox and Lockhart; centre, Brees; wings, Fennell and Houston; alternates, Armstrong, Birmingham and Rogers.

Wycliffe—Goal, Watkins; defence, R. Perkins and Morrissey; centre, Draper; wings, H. Perkins and Boone; alternates, Sage and Cannon.

"Call Me Stanley, After My Uncle's Brother-in-Law's Cousin's Nice Dog"

By Dorothy Fleming

"Aho, there, Larry," panted Looey as he gambolled into the latter's room one frosty day in January. "We have to change our jolly little names. There are objections!"

Larry, who was sunk in a rosate trance, removed his eleven and a half double E widths from the piano and gazed at his roommate with the pleasant bovine stare which he had acquired from his constant association with his fellow passengers on the cattle boat across the big pond and back.

"Who objects?" he inquired pleasantly. With a crash the door burst open, and Lionel, much delapidated, scuttled in and ascended the piano lamp.

They were quite accustomed to Lionel's caprices by this time, but this seemed a bit more quixotic than usual. "Meds after you?" anxiously asked Looey.

"There's a man—out—there," gasped the exalted one, "who says you're taking his name in vain. I think it's Lou Marsh;—there's somebody after you, too, Larry."

"Ah, well, a rose by any other name—" quoted Larry dreamily. "Who objects to my innocently chosen appellation? The only other Larry I've ever heard of is Larry Gains. Is it? Larry Gains is it?" with a shudder of apprehension.

"This fellow," murmured Lionel, ruefully surveying a bullet hole in his best bowler, "meant business." "You might call me Stanley," ruminated Larry. "My uncle's brother-in-law's cousin had an awfully nice dog named Stanley."

"I shouldn't, if I were you," Lionel said earnestly, abandoning his chapeau, and beginning to examine the alarm clock which had developed a rather alarming carbon knock. "The Prime Minister of England might be a straighter shot."

"That's true," mourned Looey lugubriously. "I suppose it will have to be something impersonal like Epitaxis or—" He got no further, as the spring of the now dismembered alarm clock struck him a none too glancing blow on the cranium.

"You might be Archimedes, he was a sort of engineer," Larry doubtfully told the irate one, in a spreading-oil-on-the-troubled-waters sort of tone. "Eureka!" shrieked Lionel, receding into the vital parts of the alarm clock.

During this time, Looey had been scribbling on a sheet of paper at a furious rate, and now with a sigh of satisfaction, he cleared his throat and announced:

"Felix for Larry, he always was a happy little soul. Filbert for Lionel and Florian for me. And," he added with a menacing scowl, "if there are any newspaper editors or anything of that sort named Felix, Florian or Filbert, they will simply have to accept the philosophy of Horace, who says: 'Levius fit patientia quid quid corrigere nefast'!"

U.C. GIRLS BEAT JR. VIC AT HOCKEY

Condition of Rink Produces Slow Game at Little Vic Rink

U.C. girls beat Jr. Vic 4 to 0 in a hockey game played last night on Little Vic Rink. The whole game was rather slow but this was at least partially due to the fact that the ice at the boards was very badly cut up, thus practically prohibiting the use of the boards. In the first period U.C. scored one goal; second period: Vic girls held them, but the last period U.C., playing a one-man defence, scored three. Those who scored were: Jed Gray, Adele Stratten and Dot Starr.

The play was mostly down at Vic's end and praise is certainly due to the Vic goalie who stopped shot after shot, some of them even lifted against her chest.

The line-ups were:

Jr. Vic—Goal, Landon Briggs; defence, Betty Doyle, Georgie Lloyd; forwards, Sheila Sissons, Marie Bicknell, Marie Urstadt; sub, Florence Wright.

U.C.—Goal, Helen McKinley; defence, Adele Stratten, Bert Reade; forwards, Dot Porter, Marg Kerr, Dot Starr; subs, Kay Bean, Jed Gray, Marg Robb.

As the S.C.A. Wednesday group is at five fifteen the West Hall organization meeting will start promptly at four thirty.

On Saturday evening the Delta Sigma fraternity held a subscription dance in the Alexandra room of the King Edward Hotel.

'WHOOPEE' DEFINED AT TRINITY MEETING

Is a Sentiment of Exultation Used as Method of Salvation

CLOCKS DISCUSSED

"Whoopee!" at last it's defined. The noble exclamation is, "a sentiment of exultation, made use of by the followers of Aimee Semple McPherson as a method of obtaining salvation." This information came from a member of the Trinity College Literary Institute at its weekly meeting last Friday night.

The retiring government was victorious in the final debate held under its jurisdiction and one of the most interesting during the year. The motion, "Resolved, that in the opinion of this house American influence is detrimental to the rising growth of Canadian Nationalism" was passed by a vote of 12-9. Mr. W. Wong, leader for the Government stated that, "Canada from Halifax to Vancouver has 3,000 miles of border open to American influence, which influence is being exerted to a great extent upon Canada as a whole." The speaker referred to the Marfleet Lectures given here a short time ago and cited the "spoils system" of politics as one of the influences which has crept in from the south. The wide influences of American motion pictures and colloquialisms were also given by the Government leader as detrimental influences.

Mr. H. H. Clark, in leading the opposition to the attack, informed the house that, "Canada is a nation of North Americans. Its conditions quite naturally are the same as those of the United States." He explained this statement by showing the similarity in many ways between the two countries.

firmative by pointing out the difficulty of getting a jury to convict in cases where death would beat the sentence. He indulged in a few sophistries and ended by a convincing stand that capital punishment was a "poor man's law."

N. Newby, M.A., closed for the negative. He laid the blame of the pacifist movement upon "yellow journalism" and drew a comparison between England and the U.S. to illustrate the necessity of stringent laws. At the close of the debate discussion was open to the house. A motion was moved to allow the women visitors a right to the floor. The president declared this motion unconstitutional. A second motion was passed to waive the constitution, and was passed unanimously. Needless to say no woman had the temerity to speak, and after a short discussion the meeting adjourned to refreshments.

One of the main reasons for Canada's rapid development given by the opposition spokesman was the amount of United States capital invested in Canada. That Canada has profited by the mistakes of the United States was another of Mr. Clark's explanations of Canadian progress.

CLOSE DECISION

Joint Debate Finds in Favour Of Modern World Not Medieval

Modern times encountered medieval times in the open-house debate of the Areopagus and Iconoclast Clubs at St. Michael's College last night in a battle of words, and lost the decision by 17 to 14.

The resolution, "That in the opinion of this House conditions of the Modern Age are more desirable than those of the Middle Ages," was upheld by Messrs. W. O. Kendrick and T. J. McCann, and opposed by G. L. Cassidy and D. J. Sullivan.

"Medical science to-day with its modern and advanced methods has rid the world of famine, pestilence, and plague," said Mr. Kendrick, in opening the argument. "Our modern hospitals render a service to men in all walks of life." The speaker contrasted the home of the higher class of society in the middle ages, with the home of the average worker of to-day, and went on to deal with modern education, the advantages of the modern jury system, and the enslavement of medieval serfdom.

"The undesirability of modern times lies in the slavery of capitalism and paganism," said Mr. Cassidy for the negative. In capitalism, which was a concentration on wealth and power, the workman was displaced by the machine, and forced by emulation of the rich to live beyond his means. "Does modern civilization satisfy the needs of a real civilization?" demanded the speaker, in deprecating the present predominance of science and atheism.

The difficulty of maintaining high moral conditions on account of the feudal system was stressed by Mr. McCann, who deplored the lack of free will, but Mr. Sullivan, for the negative, maintained that "the Middle Ages had the idea of spiritual society, the backbone of which was serfdom." The Middle Ages constituted a period of charity, submission to authority, and could truly be called the golden age of mankind.

The House was then thrown open for general discussion, and the speeches that followed were marked by wit, knowledge of history, and good-natured raillery. The following took part in the argument: for the Government, Messrs. R. Hilborne, P. Flynn; and for the Opposition, Messrs. P. Bergeron, L. Levey, R. McCabe, W. Radley, and E. Sheehan.

ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND HOURS OF STUDYING

Time Spent on Finals Estimated At Ohio State
Varsity

Special to "The Varsity"
Columbus, Ohio—It costs Ohio State University more than six thousand dollars a year for paper for examinations, according to figures obtained at the receiving department. Stencils used in printing the examination papers cost about $2,400 per year.

These figures do not include the cost of incidentals, pencils, erasers, and other classroom supplies used in examinations. If these costs, together with the instructor's fees and the cost of stenciling and cleaning the typewriters were added in, it would cost the University about nine thousand dollars a year for the examinations.

It has been estimated that 10,412 students spend eight hours each day studying for and writing finals. Averaging three courses each, a total of 249,888 hours per quarter or 999,552 hours in four quarters are spent.

DENTS AND O.A.C. TIE IN ASSAULT PRELIMS

Wrestlers of West Point Team
Go Down to Defeat
In Two Cases

FINALS TO-NIGHT

A fair crowd, including a few lady spectators, turned out at the Big Gym, Hart House, last night to witness the semi-finals in the Senior Assault-at-Arms.

The list was headed by one boxing match, in the 145 lb. class, when McCann (Meds.) in a fast bout, won a close decision over Wall, of School. The large number of wrestling bouts on the card last evening were well contested, with plenty of excitement throughout.

In the 145 lb. class Taylor of S.P.S. sprung a surprise when he defeated Campbell (Dents), of the West Point team, by a close decision. Mainland, (Vic), also a member of the West Point team, was defeated by Rudd, (S.P.S.), in the 134 lb. class. Dents and O.A.C. each with three bouts to their credit, are well in the lead for faculty honours in the Senior Assault. From the appearance of the material last night, the bouts in the finals to-morrow night should be well worth watching.

The following are the results of the bouts held last night:—

- Boxing—
145 lb.—McCann (Meds.) defeated Wall (S.P.S.)
Wrestling—
117 lb.—Hilliard (Dents) defeated McLaughlin (O.A.C.)
123 lb.—La Pointe (O.A.C.) defeated Harkness (Meds.)
Burnett (Dents) defeated Smith (O.A.C.)
134 lb.—Rudd (S.P.S.) defeated Mainland (Vic)
Walker (Vic) defeated Dempsey (O.A.C.)
McKinney (Vic) defeated Jenner (Vic)
145 lb.—Watt (O.A.C.) defeated Fletcher (Vic)
Taylor (S.P.S.) defeated Campbell (Dents)
Diprose (Dents) defeated Hadley (O.A.C.)
174 lb.—Hall (O.A.C.) defeated Mervyn (Trin.)

WORLD HAS LOST HIGH OPINION OF OXFORD DECLARES "THE ISIS"

Special to "The Varsity"
Oxford University, Eng.—That Oxford is rapidly losing its historic and age-old glamour is the fear expressed by various of its undergraduates who were interviewed by a correspondent of the London Star. "The Isis," the organ of undergraduate opinion lately in mock despair the departing glory. "The world, we fear, has no more a high opinion of Oxford University," it says. "It regards us, its initiates, with sentiments varying from the spacious disapproval of the elderly Anglo-Indian to the whimsical tolerance of the society paragraphists. 'The expression, 'a young man of Oxford,' it continues, 'now implies a sneer. An Oxford man is looked upon as a potential devotee of the red flag or the green carnation. 'We do not, in fact, go down but our habitat most emphatically does.'"

The world believes in the traditional Oxford of old world charm and academic calm and it is irresistibly attracted towards Oxford because of these qualities. That these actually exist "The Isis" does not deny but it maintains that in the supply of glamour is at last beginning to give out. "Civilization sweeps on and soon there will be little glamour left to believe in, eventually perhaps, none. It is comforting to reflect 'The Isis' adds in conclusion, "that by that time we shall be too civilized to mind."

PROPOSED DANCE FACULTY UNDER DISCUSSION TO-DAY

Miss Sternberg to Speak On Dancing and Drama At Players' Guild

The proposal that a Faculty of Aesthetic Dancing be established in the University, a suggestion that has aroused considerable interest recently, will receive unofficial consideration to-morrow afternoon, when Miss Amy Sternberg, who is well-known as an instructor in interpretative dancing, will address the Players' Guild of University College on "The Dance as a Form of Dramatic Expression."

In Greek Tragedy, the earliest and perhaps most nearly perfect form of the drama, the dance was not only an essential, but an integral part of the play, and in the most modern drama, it must be remembered, all getting and expressive motion is really a form of the dance. It is therefore of the greatest importance to those seriously interested in dramatic interpretation that they should understand and have experience in at least the rudiments of dancing.

In view of the number of students outside University College who will wish to hear Miss Sternberg's lecture, it has been decided to throw this meeting open to all members of the University. The meeting will be held as usual in the Auditorium of the Women's Union, at 4.20 on Wednesday afternoon.

Diogenes One-Track in Tub But Socrates Didn't Even Wash

Women Debaters' Discoveries MEN ALL ALIKE

Peter the Great Had Paper Boats

(Lois Given)

A perfect example of the benefits of a historical education and the inadequate interwavings that can result from a badly-worded resolution were the high lights of the Debate last night in Trinity College Chapel.

"The man who is famous must be considered. He who invents something is a perfect example of a one-track mind. The rest don't count," said Miss Mac Rouse, speaking for the affirmative.

Miss Rousseau's speech although it gained no material point for her argument, was amusing, and her knowledge of the intimate life of the heroes of antiquity nothing short of amazing. Miss Rhoda Howe probably found the source when she suggested John Erskine as Miss Rousseau's fount of knowledge. Ulysses had such a flare for yachting that he left Penelope home for twenty years—a grass widow. "Beowulf got on the track of slaying dragons all day and couldn't get off." "Alexander followed the age old principles—self-knowledge, self-reverence, but he hadn't a smitch of self-control."

"Poor old Diogenes got so disgusted he lit his little lantern and one-tracked for the rest of his life in a tub."

"Socrates was no Beau Brummell! He didn't wash!"

"Cato followed the idea that there should be no commerce between man and man unless there was profit in-involved. But he left the hope he had used in all his campaigns in Spain, because he didn't want to pay freight to the Roman Government."

The above interesting little personalities which Miss Rousseau brought to light made one wonder if perhaps it was Adam who first used Pears soap in opposition to the Apple Week instigated by Eve and the serpent; and such other trivialities. But they got one to no specific platform.

Miss Margaret Spurr, who proposed the motion, also sought safety in the pages of her history. "There was Peter the Great, the one-trackist of Imperialism and look at Russia!" "Bernard Shaw's and Mr. Ryan's common track is sensationalism, while the modern young male college student dresses, eats and does exactly the same things that his brother does."

A few of Miss Spurr's historical allusions had metaphorical peas shot through them by Miss Winspear, speaking from the floor. She stated that Peter the Great was not one track because he sailed paper boats in his spare time; that Bernard Shaw played ququet; that Socrates developed into a runner of no mean merit to escape the irate broom of his wealthy spouse; and that Mr. Ryan collected epitaphs on tomb stones for a hobby.

All of which goes to prove that universal fame in one particular channel can best be acquired by a co-ordination of child-like playfulness—to offset the weighty effect probably.

Miss Price, when she opened the argument for the negative, put forth a few salient points and contended a last ally that even the ditch digger knew of the Royal York, of the engines of a Ford engine ad infinitum. In short he knew his mind. Miss Rhoda Howe, who filled in for Miss Sylvia Gelber, was the most convincing speaker of the evening. Although Man has a one track mind. So much is certain if the vote at last night's interfaculty debate on the subject that in the opinion of the house "man has a one track mind" is any indication. By a majority of one, the ladies decided that such was the case. The vote was 35-34.

Miss Margaret Spurr, St. Hilda's, led for the affirmative and was supported by Miss Mae Rousseau, the leaders of the negative were Miss Helen Price, Victoria, and Miss Rhoda Howe, U.C. Speakers from the floor of the house were the Misses Louise McMillan, Mary Winspear, Sheila Tull, Helen Radigan, Ev Crew, Norah Doran and Phyllis Oxford.

As a special privilege, three men were permitted also to speak. They were J. C. Clough, L. M. Gelber, and J. R. Wilson.

DR. DAVID Z. T. YUI IS CHINESE LEADER

Will Speak in Convocation
Hall on Sunday
February 10

DECLINED HIGH HONOURS

Dr. David Z. T. Yui, prominent Chinese leader, will be in Toronto next Sunday. He is speaking under the auspices of the Y.M.C.A. and the Student Christian Association in Convocation Hall next Sunday evening.

Dr. Yui, formerly secretary to General Li Yuan Hung, the first Vice-President of China, and editor of the Peking Gazette, then the semi-official organ of the Government, is now the General Secretary of the National Committee of the Chinese Y.M.C.A. Dr. Yui was the leading Chinese figure at the Washington Disarmament Conference, and also at the Institute of Pacific Relations in Honolulu in 1927. He has recently declined the post of Foreign Affairs in the Chinese Government, likewise the Ministry of Education, and the Ambassadorship to Great Britain in order to continue his work among young men. He is Chairman of the National Christian Council and was one of the leaders of the great Jerusalem Conference in 1928. On his present visit to North America he has been commissioned by the Chinese Chamber of Commerce of Shanghai, and of the National Chamber of China.

During the worst period of the revolutionary disturbance, the leading British editor of Shanghai said, "There is only one little scrap of blue in the sky, and that is David Yui and the little group of men he has gathered round him. That is my only hope for China." After the crisis a body of international friends presented Dr. Yui with a Loving Cup inscribed "Patriot, Peace-maker, Prophet."

STUDIES SIXTY YEARS BUT FAILS TO LEARN ALL WORLDLY THINGS

Columbia Student Dies After Amazing Fifteen Degrees

COULD GO LONGER HERE

But Little Desire is Felt On Campus to Emulate
Feat

The University of Toronto presents a wide field for the "marathon student". Assuming complete success in every year, a student might enter the university at the age of sixteen, a freshman in Arts, and still be remote from the end of his labours at the age of eighty, were he to attempt to secure every degree possible of attainment at this university.

Such a situation is called to mind by the case of William C. B. Kemp, who died recently at the age of 78, after a career of sixty years as a student at Columbia University. In 1868 Kemp was a freshman at Columbia. Having been left a legacy of $2,500 a year, so long as he remained in College, he had decided to avail himself of the opportunity. He died, after sixty years of student life, the proud possessor of at least fifteen degrees, included amongst which were degrees in Arts, Medicine, Law, Pharmacy and Engineering.

Questioned as to the desirability of a person dedicating his life to the attainment of degrees, Dean De Lury replied: "I think that it is an undesirable thing. I think it is a mistake for a man to attempt to develop along the lines of omniscience."

Student opinion on the subject seems to side with the view expressed by Dean De Lury. One young fellow from Knox College, however, claimed that, given a liberal allowance to cover the needs of life, he would not be at all opposed to spending his life in the search for knowledge along diverse lines. "Varsity," he said, "is the spice of life."

A University College student claimed that such a course would undoubtedly provide a "liberal education."

Perfect Male Mouths Found in Minnesota

Special to "The Varsity"
Minneapolis, Minn.—Men students have twice as perfect mouths as women students, according to an examination of entering freshmen. Out of 3,345 men and women students examined, 4.7 per cent of the male students had perfect mouths while only 1.8 per cent of the females had perfect mouths. In this group of freshman students there was a total of 2,883 teeth lost from cavities and a total of 27,207 fillings, not counting the 4,294 unfilled cavities. Of those teeth that were filled, 23 per cent of gold, 82 per cent of silicate, and 1.5 per cent of cement fillings.

Co-Eds at Minnesota Make Fortunes in Gum

Co-eds at Minnesota spend more than five hundred dollars weekly on chewing gum, according to campus storekeepers. They state that over ten thousand packages are sold every week, of which half have the flavor of peppermint. As many of the male students in the group of freshmen students are also catching the gum chewing fever and store owners are optimistically watching the growth of their sales.

TIMELY REMARKS

"Better late than never." We suggest to the Students' Administrative Council which seems to be in difficulties about the University crest, that before they put the crest on the market they arrange to have this motto incorporated in it, for it seems to have been adopted unofficially at least, by a great majority of students.

We understand of course the reasons for lateness,—the clock was slow, the car couldn't be persuaded to start, the bus was just disappearing around the corner, etc., etc. From our early youth we have been familiar with these excuses and we know that they are always true and justifiable and that lateness is therefore quite unavoidable. Yet despite our knowledge that late comers have all rights on their side we venture to criticize them.

It is quite customary for people arriving late for lectures to run madly through the halls thereby disturbing, though only slightly it is true, the classes which are already in session. The greatest disturbance however is caused when the door of a lecture room is quickly opened, shut none too gently, and when the late arrival, usually feminine by the way, walks confidently to the front of the room and settles herself comfortably amidst great rustling of papers. This sort of thing happens continually and frequently in opposition to the expressed wishes of the lecturer. Why professors are as tolerant as they are and why they do not lock the doors of their lecture rooms if no gentler method will rid them of such nuisances, we cannot see.

Offences against punctuality, though probably most frequently connected with lectures, are not less annoying in other connections. Concerts, plays, debates, any gatherings where the attention of a number of people is focused on a particular point, make delightful play grounds for the late comer though in their case entrances are usually less ostentatious than at the afore-mentioned lectures. Perhaps this is due to the fact that the women share honours for lateness with the men who are doubtless less anxious for publicity. At all events, affairs which are not worth an extra effort involving five or ten minutes, should be regarded as beneath the notice of the thoughtful student who might better expend his energies in pursuits which do not necessitate the consideration of time.

Correspondents are reminded that all letters must be accompanied by signatures, and they are requested to limit themselves to approximately 300 words.

A Feminist

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:—

If "The Varsity" is going to be a truly representative paper of the student body, I think that it should not reckon without its women. Your editorials have not been very bad, aside from being, let us say, just a trifle sensational. Well, it is pleasing to read your name on the front sheet of the Town's leading papers. What I object to, however, is that the Editor, quite successful in other things, just can't seem to be impartial to sex.

He is a man, therefore, the 'us's' and 'we's' sprinkled through the editorials invariably stand for a dense mass of men in the back-ground. It would be delightful to us, the small, unimportant element here, to see it just once "We, the men and women of this University" taking up a tiny space in one editorial. Who knows what it may lead to. It may even help the cause of the Friday editorial of

Yours very truly,
M. S.

A Fabian

Editor, "The Varsity."

Dear Sir:—

Of all the vapid, silly opinions of University students "The Varsity" has ever printed, those concerning the organization of a Fabian Society here, are by far the worst. Opinions coming from people apparently far advanced in their studies are expected to contain an element, at least, of sense. Those reproduced by "The Varsity" were positively insipid.

So Newman Mallon thinks that labour conditions here are not sufficiently aggravated to warrant intervention? In the first place, I should like to ask Mr. Mallon whether he has ever seen the army of unemployed marching up and down Yonge St., for want of something better to do, and whether he has seen these same
